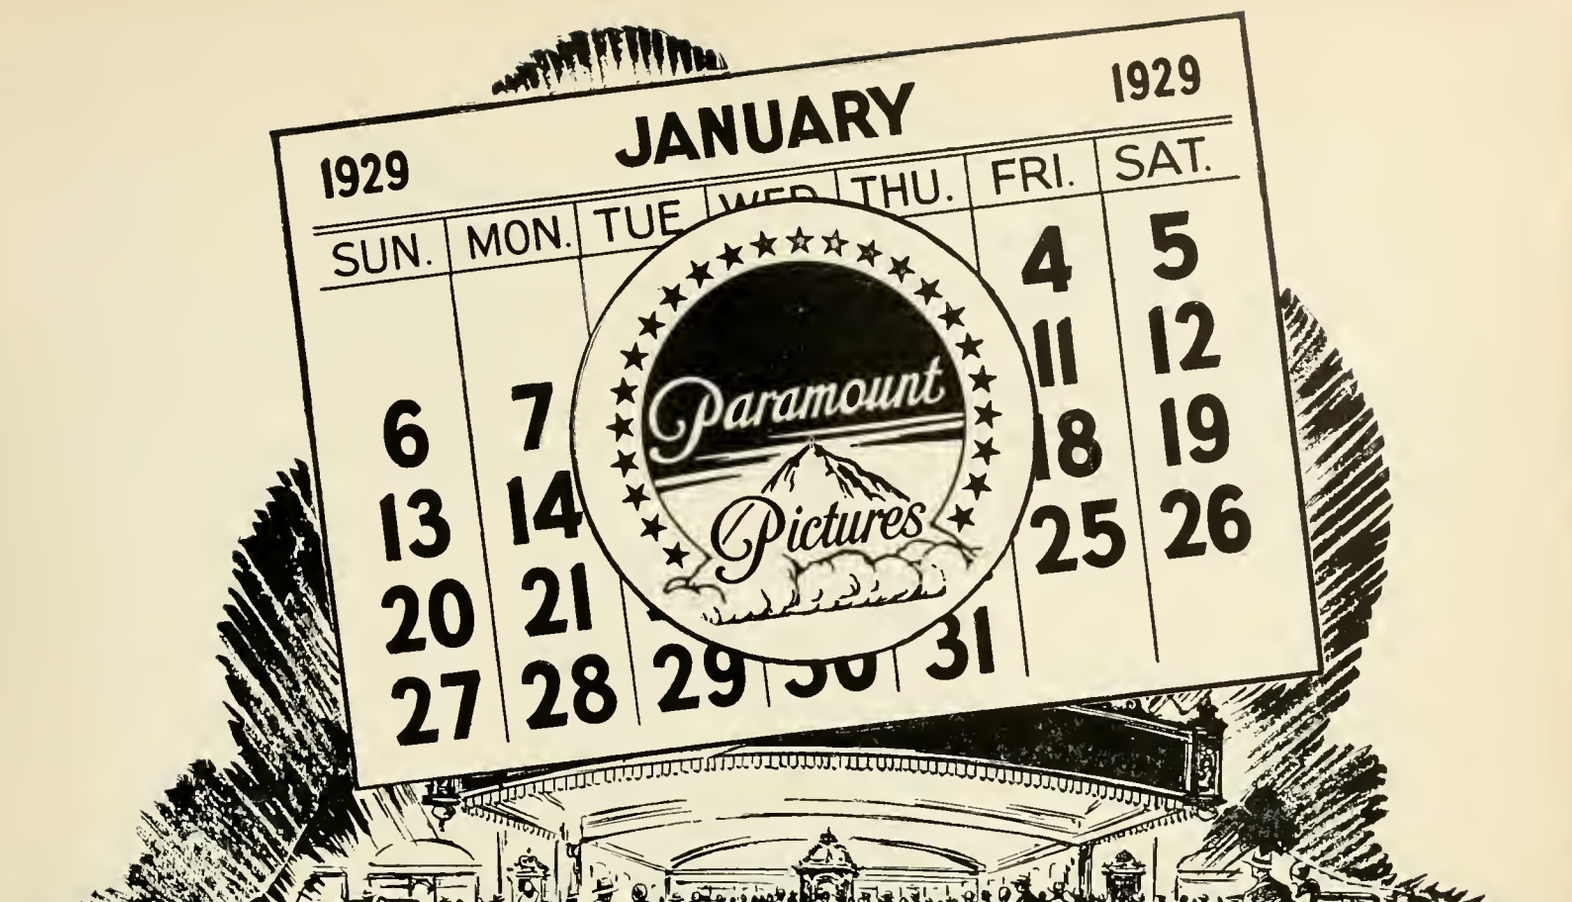
FROM A STATEMENT BY
J. E. OTTERSON, PRES.
ELECTRICAL RESEARCH PROD.



"We have just reached an understanding with the producers licensed by us that they will play their productions on any equipment which in their judgment, gives results of satisfactory quality. If they find, or we demonstrate, that the quality is not up to the standard then they will cease to serve such equipment. To the exhibitors we say:

"'If you can get an equipment as good as ours for less money, buy it, but if it is of lower quality don't buy it at any price. Wait until you can offer your public the best. Our interest is to see you prosperous through talking pictures. The success of talking pictures means more to us than the sale or loss of a sale of equipment.'"

Reprinted from
THE TRADE PRESS, Dec. 30, 1928

WE point with pride to the satisfaction of exhibitors who have played Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Paramount, First National, and United Artists pictures on the Sonora-Bristolphone reproducing system.

Phil Reisman gets the "inside" from Paul Bern on a great Pathe Picture

"unexpectedly great"!

"a box-office bombshell"!

another clicker for the smart showmen who have booked Pathé solid-!

Read what this director-author-showman says:

To Phil Reisman:

"I have seen 'The Office Scandal', with Phyllis Haver, Raymond Hatton and Tully Marshall. It is a Ralph Block production with which I had absolutely nothing to do. I am mentioning this so that you will not think that my enthusiasm comes from a lack of personal perspective, but I want to assure you that in my opinion 'The Office Scandal' is the very best picture our Studio has ever turned out, and speaking conservatively, it is one of the best pictures ever made by anybody anywhere.

"It is gorgeously directed at a tremedous tempo. Not once does the interest stop; it is constantly exciting, amusing and entertaining.

"The picture, I know, will prove to be a bombshell wherever shown. It is one of those unexpected great things that come to us once in a while."

WHAT THE FUTURE HOLDS IN STORE FOR LEO AND YOU

Start the New Year right!
Know what's going to happen

The greatest barometer of the days to come are days passed and passing. That's why it's a cinch to figure out what Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer means to you in 1929!

Here's what happened in 1928

"Our Dancing Daughters" with Joan Crawford started the fun! And what fun! Everybody said: "Watch M-G-M!" And oh baby they watched Bill Haines in "Excess Baggage"; Lon Chaney in "While The City Sleeps"; "White Shadows in the South Seas"; Marion Davies and William Haines in "Show People"; "Dream of Love" with Joan Crawford; Lon Chaney in "West of Zanzibar"; John Gilbert in "Masks of the Devil" and a lot more Big Ones. And that's just the appetizer! Wait!

one hit after another

It's been the greatest hit year in M-G-M history

THE WHITE HORSE RAPIDS
The tiny boats were tossed about like driftwood among the mountainous waves of the rapids that tore along at express train speed

THE SNOWSLIDE
A thunderous roar! Hundreds of men, horses and dogs lost as the avalanche buries them beneath tons of snow

FACTS
about "The Trail of '98"

More than two years in the making at a cost of two million dollars! Clarence Brown is the director. An All-Star cast: Dolores Del Rio, Ralph Forbes, Karl Dane, Tully Marshall, Harry Carey and a host of others. Fifteen thousand extras appear in the picture, more even than "Ben-Hur." Based on Robert W. Service's famous novel, serialized in hundreds of newspapers. Played to capacity for months at $2 at the Astor, N.Y., and at Grauman's Chinese Theatre, Los Angeles. Hailed by critics as the logical successor to "The Big Parade" and "Ben-Hur."

SOUND OR SILENT!

THE BURNING OF DAWSON CITY
It was too wicked to last—the gold-born city is purged of its sins

MORE BIG SCENES THAN EVER BEFORE IN ONE PICTURE!

THE GIGANTIC SNOW SLIDE

THE CHILKOOT PASS
A spectacle to be remembered with the winding march of heroes in "Big Parade."

THE WHITE HORSE RAPIDS
Ranks for thrill and tenseness with the chariot race in "Ben-Hur."

THE BURNING OF DAWSON CITY
Showing the origin of history's great disaster, when the gambler with ignited clothing sets fire to the world's most famous gold camp.

WARNING!

No. 615—Straight from the Shoulder Talk by Carl Laemmle, President of the Universal Pictures Corporation.

DON'T LET THE GREAT BIG PICTURE OF THE YEAR SLIP FROM YOUR grasp!

DON'T SLIP UP ON "THE LAST WARNING"!

IF NO UNIVERSAL SALESMAN HAS CALLED ON YOU, DON'T WAIT FOR one to come. Get in immediate touch with the nearest Universal exchange and make dead sure that "The Last Warning" is yours!

YOU KNOW HOW "THE CAT AND THE CANARY" TOOK EVERYBODY by surprise—and maybe you are one of those unfortunates who missed out on it!

YOU REMEMBER HOW "THE PHANTOM OF THE OPERA" CAUGHT you unaware.

DON'T LET IT HAPPEN IN THE CASE OF "THE LAST WARNING" because this is destined for bigger things than the other two pictures rolled into one.

WHETHER YOU GET "THE LAST WARNING" IN SYNCHRONIZED OR silent form, get it—that's the main point, get it! It is a stunning audience picture in its silent form, but there is no disputing the fact that it is even more so in its sound version.

THIS PRODUCTION IS ONE YOU ARE GOING TO TALK ABOUT FOR A long time to come. You will use it as the basis for comparison for many, many pictures in the future. Your audiences will tell you "That's the kind of stuff we want. Give us more like that."

DR. PAUL LENI, UNDER THE SUPERVISION OF CARL LAEMMLE, JR., and aided and abetted by a magnificent cast, turned out this most remarkable piece of property.

THEY HAVE NOT OVERLOOKED ONE SINGLE ITEM OF THE POSSIBILities of the great stage play of the same title. All the psychology of years of showmanship experience has been brought to bear in the making of "The Last Warning".

EVERY TRICK OF THE CAMERA AND EVERY NEW IDEA OF GROUPING and stage lighting has been employed with the utmost skill. It is a gem of a story, done in the ultra modern manner—and you can take a vast amount of pride in showing it to your public.

THE FIRST AND MOST IMPORTANT THING IS TO BE DEAD SURE THAT you get it. The second and next most important thing is to give it an advertising campaign worthy of such a production.

AFTER THAT, YOUR ONLY JOB WILL BE TO GLOAT OVER YOUR profits in dollars and in prestige!

(Two negatives: one silent; one with dialog)

DRAWS A ROAR of APPLAUSE With His First TALKING COMEDY "THE LION'S ROAR"

Looks like a very happy combination inaugurated by this sound short between Educational and Mack Sennett. —Film Daily

The Educational-Mack Sennett affiliation is an event and this all-talking comedy is an event...The talking comedy means a rebirth of the humor of the screen.

—Exhibitors Herald and M. P. World

As a favor to every exhibitor in the United States who has sound equipment we direct attention to the Mack Sennett-Educational comedy in sound, "The Lion's Roar," as one of the absolute knock 'em over, rock the house, make 'em all laugh type of attractions...We congratulate all concerned and especially the exhibitors who have a chance to clean up on this unusual piece of show property.

—Exhibitors Daily Review

The initial talker on Educational's program was a riot from start to finish.—Motion Pictures Today

It is very cleverly conceived...The subject matter is of the type that can reflect only credit to the screen.

—Motion Picture News

This Mack Sennett production is an excellent opener for Educational's entry in the short subjects sound field.

The Show Spirit

Pictures Not Made In Counting Rooms

By William A. Johnston

THE New Year opens with a whirl in the stock market in the leading amusement stocks, the market index finger pointing upward.

We have been solemnly informed in high places, that large coalitions in the business are in order and inevitable.

So we take it, that the voice of Wall Street is talking in this wise; and that it is telling already the big and vital moves the industry will make this year.

If coalitions are inevitable, why, then, let's have them and get the thing over with as soon and as smoothly as possible.

If they will correct over production and over seating, over cost of production and over cost of theatre presentation, over salaries and under competences—certainly we need them and want them.

But let us breathe one prayer and that is this: let them not take the show spirit out of this show business.

The business of motion pictures, we cheerfully admit, has been wasteful to a degree probably unparalleled in all commercial history. The pampering of relatives and politicians—not at all unlike that of petty dynastic government; the reckless competition in production and theatre building; the blind and eager rush forward all along the line—all have been prodigal to a degree that has perturbed the sober minded world (in which we include Congress and the legislatures).

Even so, however, the industry has furnished, in still more amazing fashion, the amusement today of the civilized world.

That is the point not to be forgotten.

Coalitions are inevitable, we will say; but it is not at all inevitable that entertainment will be forthcoming from the coalitions.

You could take 'most any of our prosperous concerns and by the simple elimination of non-recurring salaries (a term the banker dearly loves)—making them non-recurring because they are, in the great majority, unnecessary, wipe out a big funded debt or pay a dividend.

So much for that.

But, on the other hand, each one of these prosperous companies has, in its history, been yanked out of impending financial disaster, by the production of one great picture.

So we extend a friendly warning to the coalitioners— the bankers, statisticians, accountants and market manipulators, the boys with the balance sheets, budgets and schedules, the experts in black and red figures, don't think for one minute that pictures are made in the counting rooms.

The many millions who buy entertainment care only, as always, for laughter, tears, love, mystery and all that thrills the emotions of young and old.

Stars, stories, songs, variety, novelty and the like are going to count just as much in a year of coalition as in the years of reckless competition.

Some two billion dollars worth of theatre seats have got to be filled with cash customers: and it's a sure fire bet that the show business won't do the job unless there's a lot of spirit in the show business—creative spirit with the joy of creation back of it, and, let us now forget, back also of the finished creation the blare of exploitation trumpets.

The great question facing this business today is not coalition but rather: what mind has the public toward motion pictures?

What Price Prophets?

OUT of some thirty or forty prominent executives who played the role of prophets a year ago, only three had anything to say about sound pictures. Yet the sound picture revolution, which overturned the industry, was 1928's big development.

When the executives were giving out their statements at the end of 1927, "The Jazz Singer" was daily and nightly taxing the capacity of the Warner Theatre in New York. The handwriting was on the wall, but the prophets couldn't see it, a handful excepted.

Likewise, the Warners were busy mapping out their talking picture schedule for 1928, but the bulk of the prophets considered sound, talkies and synchronization of so little importance that they didn't even mention them.

The big topic a year ago was the presentation question, and there was considerable comment about this in the prophecies. There was much argument pro and con about where presentations were leading the industry, a discussion which seems pale by comparison with the fires of revolution lighted by "The Jazz Singer".

The three who were definite, and accurate in their predictions were William Fox, W. R. Sheehan and Harold B. Franklin. And it was Franklin who came closest to the mark when he said:

"The New Year will in all likelihood show great progress in the synchronization of motion pictures and sound, and every important company will probably be engaged in the making of pictures with sound producing devices. Such apparatus will eventually replace questionable music played by orchestras in small theatres where capable instrumentalists are not available".

What price prophets?

Von Herberg Suing Wesco

Asks Receivership for Liberty Theatre, Seattle, Charging Attempt to Evade Lease Payment

WEST COAST THEATRES, INC., with six other allied corporations, were named defendants last week in Seattle, Washington, in a suit for $20,203 damages and the appointment of a receiver for the Liberty Theatre Company, instituted by John G. Von Herberg, former millionaire circuit magnate of the Pacific Northwest and now a suburban exhibitor. The suit presages reentry of Von Herberg into the downtown motion picture field in Seattle, Mr. Von Herberg admitting that he is actually seeking to regain possession of the Liberty Theatre for operation by his company or other interests. The house, which is reported to have shown a net profit of more than $100,000 the last year of its operation as the key house in the circuit of more than thirty theatres operated by Jensen-Von Herberg, is now dark.

The defendants in the action, in addition to West Coast Theatres, are the United Artists Theatre Circuit, Inc., Pacific Northwest Theatres, West Coast Service Corporation, Liberty Theatres Company, Greater Theatres Company and Washington State Theatres Circuit. Mr. Von Herberg charges a combination to defraud his concern of money due under a lease on the theatre, asserting that no rent has been paid since July, 1928, and that the owners have had to pay taxes amounting to $6,453.

Hoover Inauguration May Be Televisioned

EXEMPLIFYING the possibilities of television in the immediate future, it is not unlikely, according to the Associated Press, that there will be projected into the homes scenes surrounding the inauguration of President-elect Herbert Hoover. This is the hope of Virgil A. Schoenberg, chief engineer of WCFL, the Chicago Federation of Labor station which successfully broadcasted by television the first ordinary motion picture films, not silhouettes. Mr. Schoenberg hopes in the near future to broadcast by television other public spectacles, such as football games and prize fights.

Canadian Chain Likely for British-Gaumont

According to a report from London, which has not been verified, British-Gaumont is contemplating an extensive chain of theatres in Canada to add to their already large theatre holdings in Great Britain. Writing from London in a special article in the Wall Street Journal in New York, Herbert N. Casson says that with its chain of 320 theatres and alliances with German producers Gaumont-British Picture Corporation has broken the American control of the best theatres in Great Britain.

Mr. Casson writes that only three big London West End theatres, the Empire, Plaza and Rialto remain in control of the American companies. There are 3,600 theatres in Great Britain, 1,000 of which have been built in the last three years, the article says.

Rosabelle Laemmle Weds Stanley Bergerman

The marriage ceremony of Rosabelle Laemmle, only daughter of Carl Laemmle, and Stanley Bergerman took place last Wednesday evening, January 2, at "Dios Dorados," the Laemmle home at Beverly Hills. Rabbi E. F. Magnin united the couple in wedlock and a small group of relatives of the pair attended. Miss Estelle Cohen was maid of honor and Carl Laemmle, Jr., best man. One of the gifts to the bridal couple was a silver service of 55 pieces from Universal departments all over the world.

3 New Film Firms Are Chartered at Albany

Motion picture companies incorporating in New York State, at Albany, during the past week, included the following: Inca Laboratories, Inc., $20,000, John L. Farrell, Theodore L. Horrison, George T. Barker, New York City; Consolidated Bristolphone Corporation, capitalization not stated, Anne Eichel, Belle Balstow, Serena Klein, New York City; Cheer-Up Productions, Inc., $100,000, J. J. Leventhal, Robert Sterling, Louis Winer, New York City.

Stanley Offices Moving to Warner Bldg.

The offices of the Stanley Company of America in New York are to be moved from the Bond Building at 46th Street and Broadway to the eighth floor of the Warner Bros. Building on West 44th Street. The move will be some time within the next month. This will mean that the booking offices for the Stanley houses will be in the same building with those of the Warners and a joint control of both may be arranged for.

Laemmle to Remain on Coast Until Spring

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, Jan. 3.— Carl Laemmle, president of Universal, returned from New York and expects to remain on the coast until late in the spring. Laemmle will supervise Universal's sound film production activities at the local studios.

Best B. O. Pictures for 1928 As Told by "The Check-Up"

"Jazz Singer" Leads; Ninety-Nine in All Get Percentage Rating of 70 Per Cent or Over and Make Grade

EXHIBITOR reports to MOTION PICTURE NEWS, for 1928, place ninety-nine pictures as entitled to enumeration among the year's best at the box-office. This compilation is made from "The Check-Up," the recognized authority on box office merit, and takes into account pictures which were generally released during the twelve months just passed.

To arrive at the designation "the year's best at the box office," only those pictures which attained a percentage rating of 70 per cent or over for the entire period are included. "The Check-Up," a regular monthly feature of The News and relied on by exhibitors everywhere, charts the real box office fate of features.

It should be understood that some specials which were shown in 1928, but which have not been generally distributed, do not appear in the list. Thus "The Check-Up" gives a true account of box office merit, because it is based on countrywide and general showing.

The leader for 1928 is, of course, "The Jazz Singer" (87 per cent). Also in the 80 per cent or over classification are: "The Fleet's In" (84 per cent); "The King of Kings" (84 per cent); "Ramona" (84 per cent); "Tempest" (84 per cent); "Glorious Betsy" (83 per cent); "Lights of New York" (83 per cent); "The Street Angel" (82 per cent); "Submarine" (82 per cent); "Wings" (82 per cent).

Colleen Moore Leaving First National —May Go Over to Paramount

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 3.—Colleen Moore and First National will part when she completes the two remaining pictures on her contract with that company. It is understood that the Warners do not intend renewing the option held by First National and that Colleen and her husband, John McCormick, are also anxious to make some other affiliation. Her contract calls for more money than the Warners care to pay and Colleen is desirous of having more independence in the making of her pictures than the Warners are rumored willing to grant. When the two pictures are finished, Colleen will have been with First National for six years. Her first was made in 1923 with "Flaming Youth."

There is a strong possibility of John McCormick making a deal with Paramount for the release of Colleen's future productions. When McCormick and Colleen came to break with First National some time ago, Paramount evidenced a willingness to listen to negotiations were started. These were called off when Richard Rowland healed the breach with McCormick.

Hays Members to Discuss Publication Campaign to Public

A MOVE is under way to arouse greater public interest in pictures, through some sort of an institutional campaign. It was learned this week that private conferences have been held in several of the big distributing offices along this line. The general plan, as reported, is that the entire producer-distributor membership of the Hays organization will be asked to join the campaign, which, presumably, would be handled by the Hays office as an organization matter.

Among the ideas now being talked is the publication of a weekly picture supplement in the big dailies throughout the country. The sponsors of this plan feel that it is the most direct way to enlist greater public interest and that it could be tied in, locally for the exhibitor, so as to prove a big aid to the box offices in cities where the supplements would appear.

Others, it is said, are prepared to argue for the publication of a monthly fan magazine, under Hays organization auspices, to have a run of about 5,000,000 and to be distributed through theatres free to the public. It is argued that a considerable amount of national advertising could be attracted to this publication. The exhibitor, according to reports, would be asked to buy copies in bulk for distribution to the public.

Those who do not see the fan magazine plan as feasible point out that big national advertisers do not favor magazines of free circulation.

It is reported that discussion of a plan to be adopted will be taken up shortly at a general meeting in the Hays office.

U. S. Commerce Chamber Myers' Allied Idea

Only Organized Exhibitor Bodies Would Be Eligible; No Comment on Woodhull Attack

EVERY newspaper correspondent in Washington on January 2 received a marked copy of the statement issued last week by R. F. Woodhull, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, attacking the new Allied States Exhibitors Association, of which Abram F. Myers, of the Federal Trade Commission, is to be head. Mr. Myers' day was so taken up with matters in the Federal Trade Commission that he could not be reached to secure his comment on Mr. Woodhull's statement.

While, so far, Mr. Myers has had but little to say regarding his plans for the new organization, he has pointed out that its constitution provides that only organized associations of motion picture exhibitors are eligible for membership. This means that the individual exhibitor will not be able to become a member of Allied States but that the organization will be modeled somewhat along the plan of the United States Chamber of Commerce, the membership of which is composed of trade and business organizations. The constitution also provides that the object of the association shall be to cooperate with and by agreement represent the organization's members and the interests represented by them.

In general, so far as it has been explained by Mr. Myers, the new organization would merely carry out the policies agreed upon by its various member associations, again as does the United States Chamber of Commerce. The latter organization determines upon its course with respect to any given problem only after a questionnaire has been sent out to all member organizations and their vote upon the question presented has been recorded. Each member association decides within its own ranks how it shall vote upon such a question and the returns to the chamber indicate the feeling of the majority, not only of the member associations but of the membership within the association.

Reed and Hobart Associate F B O Producers

Luther Reed and Henry Hobart will be associate producers at the F B O studios. Preparations are now progressing for the filming of the F B O program for the year and they will both have much to do with the conversion into pictures of the material lined up by Joseph I. Schnitzer, president of F B O.

Another personnel appointment at the F B O studio is that of Louis Sarecky as assistant to William Le Baron, vice-president in charge of production and the appointments of Myles Connolly and Harold Schwartz as special production supervisors.

Blames Films for Taking Fun Out of Traveling

The movies have another account to settle with those journalists and writers, who bewail their widespread influence. Now it is a Parisian who speaks out against the films.

"There is no joy left in traveling," says A. de Montgon, who says that the individual costumes of foreign lands are fast disappearing due to the general adoption of styles as they are depicted in Hollywood films. Travel was once considered the equivalent of a college education, but its only equivalent today is a four-reel baby film and a photograph," the Parisian journalist comments.

Van Praag Host at New Year Fete at Club

The numerous Universal executives in New York attending the "Abie-Cohens and Kellys" trial, were entertained at the Motion Picture Club in New York on New Year's Eve by M. Van Praag, general sales manager for Universal. Universal people from the Coast included Mr. and Mrs. Harry Pollard, Al Cohn, Edward Montagne, Curtis Benton, and Mr. and Mrs. Paul Leni. New York members were Mr. and Mrs. Ted Schlanger.

Cowan Becomes Manager of Paramount Plant

James R. Cowan, who has been in charge of the production of shorts at Paramount's Long Island studio, has been appointed production manager and will work under the general supervision of Monta Bell, production executive of the studio. Cowan will be directly in charge of the detail of all productions, both features and shorts, the change allowing Bell greater freedom for questions of policy and new development.

Cleve Adams F B O Sales Manager in N. Y.

Cleve Adams, short subject sales manager for F B O last year, began the new year by filling the chair of F B O sales manager of New York State. He started his career with Universal 14 years ago as film salesman, later becoming branch manager, personal representative to the general manager, and assistant general sales manager. He was FBO district manager for six years.

1928 Pictures Reached High Average, Say Exhibitors

Survey by NEWS Reveals Products For Year Met Required Needs in Opinion of Majority—Praise Silents

FEATURE productions, both sound and silent, maintained a high average of box office standards during 1928, according to the opinions of exhibitors and theatre executives operating houses in cities throughout the country, a survey completed this week by MOTION PICTURE NEWS reveals. Independent and chain theatre managers and executives with theatre interests in territories scattered about the country, from the Atlantic to the Pacific coast and as far South as Florida, were queried for their estimates of the product for the year 1928 and patron reactions to their offerings during the period. The majority endorsed the pictures released in 1928 as fully up to anticipated standards and satisfactory from the standpoint of the people who pay off at the box office.

Silents Not Slighted

Contrary to widespread discussion concerning the "overemphasis" on sound resulting in a neglect of silent picture production standards, the bulk of the theatre men queried by MOTION PICTURE NEWS declared that, judged by the product they have played, they do not believe that the silent pictures have been neglected to the extent that business has been hurt through a lessening of the quality of the silent drama.

Many leading showmen gave optimistic etsimate of the business which lies ahead for theatres. The view of many of these is that the sound picture is bringing new classes of patronage into the picture theatres and that with a realization of the promised quality of entertainment from the studios 1929 will witness a considerable expansion of the numbers upon which the properly conducted picture theatre may draw patronage.

Opinion was unanimous that sound itself is no longer a drawing card. The closing months of 1928 afforded conclusive proof, they declared, that the public will not accept mediocre entertainment just because it has the added feature of dialogue or sound effects and sychronized score. Entertainment is now what it always has been, the one and only dependable attraction in the theatre, where novelty will create a flurry but will not keep a theatre on a paying basis beyond the precise point at which the novelty dies.

Franklin's View

Following are reports from some of the cities canvassed by MOTION PICTURE NEWS for exhibitor estimates of 1928 product and the prospects of 1929.

LOS ANGELES.—Harold B. Franklin, president of West Coast Theatres, Inc., declared that "productions on the whole have met box office requirements during the past year. I honestly believe that the silent product of the past six months was better than that produced in the last six months of the preceding year. Sound has given us more big box office attractions without diminishing the value of established stars in silent pictures. Sound has put producers on their toes, for the silent product must be so much better than it has been to cope with the novelty of talking pictures and the talking pictures have steadily improved in quality. Consequently sound has benefited all branches of the industry. The most important lesson taught the industry by box offices during the year is simply that the public wants good pictures regardless of whether they are silent or sound. The latter part of the year has taught us that the public will not accept a picture merely because it has sound."

Television Attracts Thousands

Flood of Inquiries at G. E. Shows Big Number of Receivers Built; Short Wave Broadcast Continues

(By a Special Correspondent)

SCHENECTADY, N. Y., Jan. 2.—Will television prove to be the big development of 1929? What will be its effect on the picture industry? Prophecies are dangerous, but the fact about what is actually going on are of vital importance, in view of the thousands who have built television receiving sets, and the flood of inquiries coming into the General Electric offices here.

MOTION PICTURE NEWS this week made an investigation at the headquarters of G.E., and the striking point was brought out, through statements of officials, that thousands of television receivers are in actual use. From letters received, it is evident that there are many more who desire information on how such sets may be built.

Many letters have been received from distant points reporting reception. The most remote one was from a listener or observer in Tasmania who reported receiving the television impulses from the short wave station. Gilbert C. Lee of Los Angeles, Calif., has been successful on several occations in picking up WGY's short wave television signals as has Frank Jones, an engineer and experimenter of Tuinucu, Cuba. The NEWS will publish next week the result of a second investigation at another television broadcasting station.

WGY discontinued its weekly television broadcasts on the 379.5 meter channel, January 1, but will continue carrying its visual program through the medium of its short wave stations W2XAF and W2XAD.

On May 10, 1928, the Schenectady station began the operation of a regular television schedule and was the first broadcasting station anywhere to present television on schedule. This schedule included operation afternoons and late evenings; Tuesday, Thursday and Friday in the afternoon and Sunday and Tuesday evenings. All evening television programs are broadcast on the short waves.

The television image is a twenty-four line picture—that is, the disc used at the sending end has twenty-four holes. In reception a disc with a similar number of holes is necessary. The television transmitter is constructed along lines of development made by Dr. E. F. W. Alexanderson, consulting engineer of the General Electric Company and WGY's broadcasting was inaugurated to assist him and his associated engineers in getting all data.

Prior to the inauguration of the schedule, WGY had broadcast television on many occasions In the fall of 1927 WGY broadcast the voice simultaneously with the picture signals carried on short waves. Two receivers, one tuned to the short waves and another to WGY picked up the combination broadcast and observers saw and heard the speakers in WGY's studio, three miles away.

On August 22, WGY broadcast the first outside pick-up of a television program, Governor Smith about to deliver his speech in Albany, accepting the Democratic nomination to the presidency.

On September 21, WGY broadcast the first drama by television. Three cameras, one for each of two characters and a third for props. permitted a pick-up of the two-character play, "The Queen's Messenger," by J. Hartley Manners. In this case the image was broadcast on WGY's long wave and the voice was transmitted on the 31.4 meter wave of W2XAF.

Observation on the television broadcasts are made by Dr. Alexanderson and his assistants in or near Schnectady.

FBO Making Extensive Preparations for Filming "Rio Rita"

FBO is making extensive preparations for the filming of "Rio Rita," which it is said will be made with the original Florenz Ziegfeld cast and music. The production will have the advantage of supervision by William Le Baron, who is in charge of all production for F B O.

Mr. Le Baron has been successful as playwright, editor, author and motion picture producer and is likewise at home in the realm of musical affairs. In addition to writing numerous legitimate plays he was associated with the late Victor Herbert in the authorship of "Her Regiment" and with Victor Jacobi and Fritz Kreisler on "Apple Blossoms."

"Rio Rita" will be scored with all of the original Ziegfeld numbers. It will be the first of F B O's one hundred per cent sound and talking specials for the 1929-30 season. Rehearsals will be held for at least a fortnight before a camera is turned for sound recording on the production. Authentic backgrounds will be photographed on location along the Rio Grande River and in the Mexican border towns.

Weeks Forms Sono-Tone Paramount Tie-in?

Eddie Dowling On Way to Make First Picture at Christie Sound Studios; Prominent Affiliations

A NEW sound picture producing company, Sono-Art, headed by George W. Weeks, Paramount executive and for the past year with Christie in the East, will produce a number of feature length talking pictures with silent versions during 1929. Early in January production will start at the Metropolitan studios in Hollywood, which are under control of the Christie Film Company, when an Eddie Dowling picture will get under way. Interested with Mr. Weeks are O. E. Goebel, associated with this industry, Thomas A. Lynn, a financial executive, and Charles H. Christie, of Christie Brothers. The company will have the backing of the National Diversified Corp. which is said to represent big moneyed interests. Western Electric recording equipment will be used.

In view of the Christie-Paramount affiliation it is not an extravagant thought that the Dowling picture will be released through Paramount channels, or, in other words the same kind of arrangement whereby Christie makes the Douglas McLean pictures for Paramount release.

Christie Brothers have recently filed incorporation papers to the extent of a million and a half dollars for an organization known as Metropolitan Sound Studios, Inc.

It is understood that several large outside interests besides the Christies' are being pooled in the ownership of at least six different producing companies and which will have a combined film program for the coming year of more than $20,000,000.

Officers of the new corporation are Charles H. Christie, president; Al E. Christie, vice president; William S. Hohman, secretary and treasurer; with Phil L. Ryan, general manager in charge of production.

Among the important film producing organizations now making pictures at Metropolitan are the Harold Lloyd Productions, Caddo Productions, Columbia Pictures, British and Dominion Films, Ltd., Sono-Art Corporation; Chesterfield, Liberty and Cliff Broughton Production Companies.

Unfair Publicity Claim by Tom Mix

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 3.—Tom Mix claims the newspapers have taken an unfair attitude toward him regarding his court trouble over the support of his daughter Ruth. It is claimed to be another case of building sensational stories around a picture star.

Mix was cited in the local Superior Court last week to show cause why he should not be held in contempt of court for failure to pay Ruth $225 monthly support. The picture star declares that he arranged with his attorneys for a fund out of which would be paid monthly the amount awarded Ruth. Recently creditors of Ruth Mix, it is said, attached these funds, so tying them up that neither Ruth nor the creditors can collect any of them until judgment is rendered.

The action citing Mix followed and the story broke in the local papers before Mix was aware of the attachment, he declares.

$850,000 Stock Increase in Louisville Company

An increase in the stock of the Fourth Avenue Amusement Company, Louisville, Ky., from $150,000 to $1,000,000, was announced last week by the president of the company, Fred J. Dolle. Of the new issue, $600,000 of stock will be distributed to the stockholders in the ratio of their present holdings and the remaining $400,000 will be placed in the treasury. The distribution amounts to a 300 per cent stock dividend.

D. H. Long is secretary and treasurer of the company, and the board of directors is composed of Mr. Dolle, Mr. Long, George J. Long, J. C. Murphy and Adolph Ruelinger.

Negotiations Finished in Schine-Chekeres Merger

Final negotiations have been completed in the merger of the Schine and Chekeres interests at Springfield, Ohio, the new organization taking the name of the State-Regent Corporation. The Regent and Fairbanks Theatres have been purchased from the Gus Sun interests, while the new company also will control the State and Majestic, formerly owned by Chekeres. The Regent closed a few weeks ago for refurnishing and redecorating, and will reopen around Christmas with a combination policy of pictures and vaudeville. Sound will be installed at the State soon as arrangements can be made. No definite announcement has been issued concerning the future policy of the Fairbanks and Majestic. Chekeres will manage all four houses. The company has under consideration two prominent sites in Springfield for the erection of a 2,500-seat house, a 30-day option having been taken on one of the sites.

T. S. Sales Convention in Chicago, January 28-29

A convention of all the eastern sales managers of Tiffany-Stahl will be held in Chicago at the Hotel Stevens on January 28 and 29. General Sales Manager Oscar Hanson will preside. A convention of the western managers will be held some time after the first of the year in Hollywood. Grant L. Cook, from the New York office, will attend in company with M. H. Hoffman and John M. Stahl, the heads of Tiffany-Stahl.

At the Chicago gathering, plans will be outlined for the sales of sound and synchronized films, of which there will not be less than six or eight.

Other officials who will be present include Rudolph Flothow, in charge of shorts and synchronization supervisor; A. L. Selig, of the advertising and publicity department; S. F. Juergens, comptroller; and Wm. D. Shapiro of Boston.

Police Say Youth Admits Theatre Robbery

Charged with having held up Manager Harry E. Lohmeyer and his assistant, Wayne Birdsell, of the Earle Theatre, Washington, D. C., October 29 and making the latter open the office safe, from which he took some $2,700, Elmo William Williams, 20, arrested in Chicago last week, is said to have confessed to the crime upon his arrival in Washington and implicated his uncle, Thomas Williams, who was brought back to Washington from Tampa, Fla. The elder Williams is said by police to have received from his nephew the proceeds of the robbery.

The young bandit is being held by the police under the technical charge of investigation.

Interchangeability Arbitration Provided in Settlement

Otterson Statement Fails to Cover Point Which Will Now Be Regulated through Hays Organization

INTERCHANGEABILITY is at last a reality—with restrictions. As announced exclusively in last week's issue of MOTION PICTURE NEWS at least twenty-four hours in advance of any other trade publication, J. E. Otterson, president of Electrieal Research Products, conceded the point in a lengthy statement.

The Stumbling Block

Electrical Research Products, subsidiary to Western Electric Company, has been the stumbling block in interchangeability since the development of that company was first put on the market and its licensees signed the company contracts. RCA Photophone has consistently stated that it had no objection to interchangeability provided the equipment used was of a quality suitable for proper reproduction. That is identical with the concession now made by Mr. Otterson.

When it was announced that negotiations were on between Western Electric's licensees and the company in an effort to bring about interchangeability it was also said that the negotiations called for the appointment of a special arbitration committee to handle any discussions that might arise over the problem.

A paragraph in the Otterson statement reads:

"We have reached an understanding with the producers licensed by us that they will play their productions on any equipment which in their judgment gives results of satisfactory quality. If they find or we demonstrate that the quality is not up to standard then they will cease to serve such equipment."

There is no provision made for arbitration in that statement, but Elek J. Ludvigh, general counsel for Paramount and chairman of the committee which represented the licensees in the negotiations with Western Electric, says that any problem arising will be referred to arbitration boards in the same manner as is any other film difference that is otherwise unadjustable. The producing company has the right to bring up to standard any equipment that might be protested by Western Electric and if the latter still protests the quality it may be referred to an arbitration board. With both the Western Electric and RCA now members of the Hays' organization such arbitration will be referred to the exhibitor-distributor arbitration boards.

Ludvigh Discreet

Mr. Ludvigh politely refused to comment to any extent on the statement of Mr. Otterson or to offer any advice to the exhibitor who is still in a quandary as to whether or not he should install one of the cheaper equipments. He expressed the opinion that it would make better business than ever for Western Electric. He compared the equipment business with the automobile business, saying that few persons who first purchased a car bought the most expensive on the market, but a majority of them eventually bought a higher priced car.

Copyright Still Problem

The copyright music problem is still one that is likely to throw a monkey wrench into interchangeability and that is one that cannot be definitely settled until the return of E. C. Mills from Europe. The contract which Mr. Mills has with Western Electric and RCA exclusively, provides that copyright music of the sixty or seventy music publishers he represents as agent and trustee can be played only on equipment of Western Electric and RCA, which have paid upward of $100,000 for the privilege.

Before his departure Mr. Mills said that it would be to the advantage of his publishers to have their music played as extensively as possible, but that they would permit only of its being played on proper equipment and the only proper equipment he had heard was that of Western Electric and RCA.

Mr. Ludvigh expressed the belief that Mr. Mills in all probability would take the

Reciprocity's First Big Test

Foreign Governments Watching Career of World Wide; Initial Attempt to Provide Steady Flow of Imported Pictures

RECIPROCITY between Europe and America is about to get its first real test. Governments abroad will watch closely what happens, particularly the British Government, which is greatly concerned over the film question as related to America.

There has been talk of reciprocity for years, but no organized, commercial effort to put it over on a solid basis was made before the advent of World Wide Pictures, Inc., which will start operations January 15.

Hitherto, pictures from abroad have come in spasmodically. It has been the contention of a good many film interests abroad that the pictures reaching here intermittently from the other side didn't get a fair break in the American market.

This situation, however, will change, it is pointed ont, to this degree at least: that a steady supply of films from abroad, distributed on a regular basis, will be available through World Wide. Further, the company is manned by experts in the American field: J. D. Williams, organizer of First National; Alexander S. Aronson, for five years foreign representative of M-G-M; and Joseph S. Skirboll, former distribution executive in the U. S. and foreign representative for First National. Skirboll is sales manager and Aronson general foreign representative with headquarters in Europe.

The company has contracts with British International Pictnres, Ltd.; UFA in Germany and British Dominions, Ltd., French, Austrian and Italian contracts are pending. The first list of releases contain seven pictures.

The company's announced policy as expressed by Williams, is that pictures from abroad for distribution here will be carefnlly selected. He points out that the flood gates will not be let down for a flow of hit-or-miss pictures from Europe.

This idea, it was pointed out by observers this week, is in line with the situation as it must be faced by World Wide. The actual determination of whether reciprocity is workable will be settled at the box office.

However, foreign governments will watch very closely to see whether any artificial or political monkey wrenches are thrown. If, for example, big producer-owned or affiliated circuits should not book World Wide, always assuming that the pictures are good, there would be a disposition abroad, it is said, to question whether this refusal is in good faith.

Hays Welcomes European Productions

I NOTE with pleasure the announcement of the World Wide Pictures, Inc. Every additional facility for the further production or distribution of worthwhile pictures is good.

Too, this company will aid in still further making certain that good pictures, wherever they are made, are given additional natural and easy methods of distribution in this country.

This industry is ever ready to welcome to the screen of America all motion pictures which meet the standards of entertainment expected by the American motion picture public.

$18,000,000 Reported Outlay for 1929-30; Higher Than in Some Years

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

HOLLYWOOD, January 3. — With First National scheduled to make 35 pictures next year at an outlay of $18,000,000, according to information this week, a rise in cost of production over some previous years is seen by observers here.

It is figured that this may be brought about by increased overhead due to sound, or for other reasons. In any event, comparisons are being made with other years, when the number of pictures was greater and the cost lower.

In a typical year, under the old order of things long before sound cut any figure at all, some 47 pictures were scheduled at a cost of $12,000,000, and these included some big specials.

The 1929-30 pictures will be known as First National-Vitaphone productions. Warner Brothers, controlling First National, recently announced a program of 35 for next season, so the total of the two concerns will be 70.

First National will have full use of Vitaphone talking and sound synchronization facilities and will go in heavily for dialogue. A list announced this week for coming release, all of which will have talk, includes the Corinne Griffith pictures under her new contract, whereby she will make two super-specials a year; also the remaining pictures to be made under her former contract. Productions starring Richard Barthelmess, Billie Dove and Milton Sills also will be with dialogue.

Suggested by a Studio Press Agent

(Hollywood Bureou, Motion Picture News)

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 3.—The unkindest cut of the year was pulled last week by a studio press agent. In speaking to the manager of a Los Angeles theatre, where business has been none too good, he suggested the slogan:

"Avoid the Christmas crowds. Go to the Soandso Theatre."

Daylight Saving Approved and Disapproved

The ratepayers of Ottawa, Ontario, have adopted the 1929 Daylight Saving Referendum by a vote of 15,316 to 9,877, although two of the city wards voted against the proposal. Brockville, Ontario, electors, on the other hand, voted down daylight saving for 1929 while Port Colborne, Ontario has voted to have daylight saving during the next three years.

Toronto voted to continue daylight saving in 1929 but Hamilton and London have refused to accept the measure.

Stage Hands and Publix Settle Difficulties

The labor troubles between the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees and the Publix Theatre Circuit were amicably settled this week at Minneapolis, a conference between representatives of the two organizations arriving at the terms.

Mr. Canavan, president of the Alliance; Theodore L. Hays, of Finkelstein and Ruben, president and the board and director of Public Relations of the North West Theatre Circuit, and Harry Sherman, Publix director of public relations, were present at the conference. Theatres involved in the discussion were the State, Minnesota and Garrick in Minneapolis.

The new terms are: That 28 shows constitute one week, instead of the 23 shows demanded by the stage hands; that there are to be but three stage hands at each theatre instead of the six located now.

The controversy between the stage hands and the Hennepin Orpheum in Minneapolis was also peaceably settled.

Movie "School" Proprietor Indicted in Syracuse

Harry Bennett Farrell, of Syracuse, N. Y., who claimed to be director and producer of Mayo Productions as well as a proprietor of a so-called moving picture school in that city, was turned over to the Federal authorities last week by the Syracuse police, following an indictment in Utica on charges of using the mails to defraud. The charges were the result of a visit to the school by a Syracuse policewoman, who claimed that she had found six students, in make-up, and all of whom had paid Farrell sums ranging up to $500. The visit of the policewoman was prompted by an advertisement inserted by Farrell in one of the local newspapers. It was alleged that Farrell promised to give contracts to the students for engagements in the production of a moving picture in Syracuse.

Sunday Shows Win Favor of Mechanicville Voters

Residents of Mechanicville, N. Y., at a special election recently, declared themselves in no uncertain terms in favor of Sunday movies, the vote being 1,534 to 638. The election was authorized by the common council on November 26. About five years ago, opponents of Sunday movies won out by a large majority in Mechanicville and in 1926 the city council, by a vote of 3 to 2, refused to submit the proposition to a special election. This marks the first time in the history of the city that motion pictures have been allowed. Residents of the city have been forced to travel to Troy or Cohoes for the picture entertainment on Sundays.

Bulgarian Government to Erect Modern Studio

The Bulgarian Government intends to erect a modern studio in the neighborhood of Sofia, in order to develop domestic film production, the Department of Commerce, Washington, D. C., is informed. The technologists, who are to survey the equipment of the new studio, will be mostly German.

Broadway Show Reviews

By Fred Schader

Paramount

IT was a snappy show at the big Publix house for New Year's week. There were two stage units and they were quite as responsible as was the picture for the general excellence of the program. The feature picture is "The Shopworn Angel," with Gary Cooper and Nancy Carroll, one of those in betweeners that it is rather hard to peg. Some of the women seemed to like it but it was more the type of picture for the bigger towns only.

The entire show at the house ran two hours and twenty-two minutes of which the feature consumed an hour and eighteen minutes. The only other screen entertainment being the Paramount News, which was alotted but four minutes.

A special "Happy New Year" prologue to the regular show opened the program, its running time being nine minutes. There were four brief scenes representing the four seasons which were thrown on the scrim from projectors, a chorus singing "Winter" for a snow scene, a soprano solo for Spring, a Venetian scene for Summer with "Night of Love" as the number, and finally a violin solo from the pit by Rubinoff, the guest conductor, for Autumn. A Happy New Year greeting with a "Shake Hands" number was delivered by one of the girls of the unit seated atop of the organ for the final kick. The newsreel followed.

Jesse Crawford's contribution for the week comprised two numbers. The first was Irving Berlin's latest "How About Me?", which seemingly registered heavily with the audience; for a laugh finish he did "I Faw Down and Go Boom," which pulled a strong return. Seven minutes.

"The Perfect Girl," Publix Unit, had the next thirty-nine minutes. Helen McFadden, daughter of the physical culture expert and publisher, is the featured girl. She does a couple of nip-ups and handsprings and looks pretty good from the front, but that lets her out. With her are Joe Penner the comic, Luella Lee a soubret, the Four Cheer Leaders and twelve of the Alan Foster Girls. Penner, except for one number, failed to get anything from the audience. The Four Cheer Leaders doing a couple of numbers in close harmony really carried away the hit of the show. The audience was asking for more when they quit. The Foster girls had two distinct novelty numbers, one devoted to bag punching in time with the music and the other a running race on treadmills. For the opening of the act Luella Lee handled a "Syncopated Cocktail" fairly well.

Bennie Krueger and the Paramount stage band worked throughout the revue. Krueger as master of ceremonies added considerable pep to the show. Rubinoff with his fiddle was also spotted in the revue for a number which got over nicely.

A personage new to the movies but famous on stage and radio—Carlotta King, star of the first Vitaphoned operetta, "The Desert Song."

Capitol

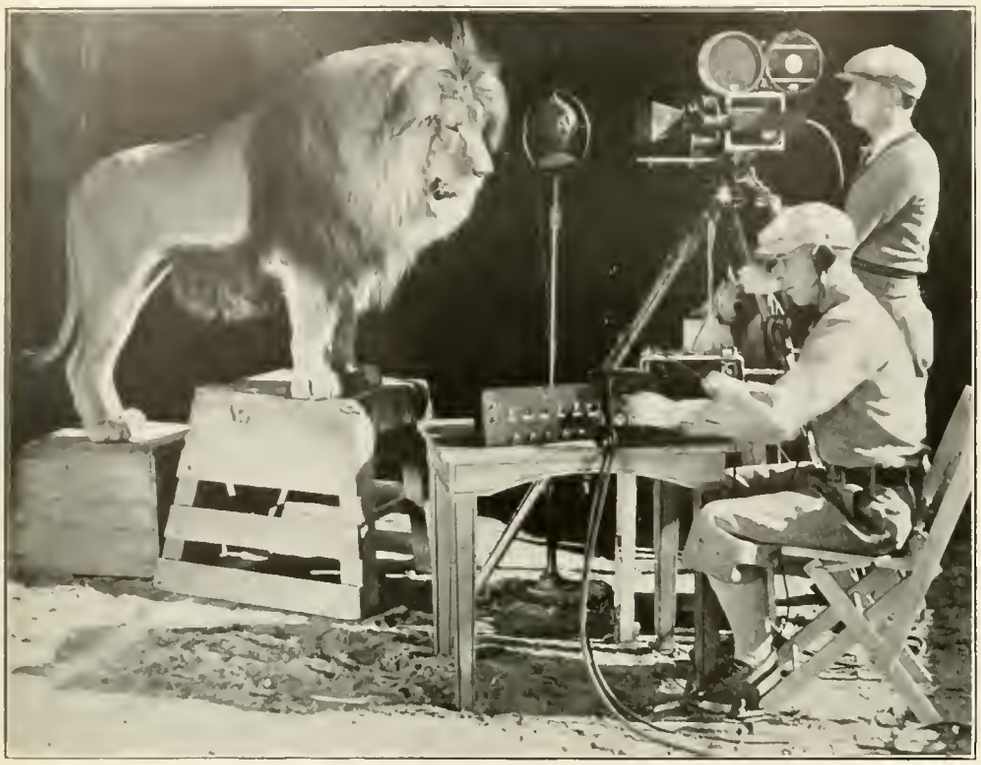
WALKING into the Capitol after having been away from Broadway show reviewing for two years one is compelled to wonder what they are trying to do to that valuable piece of theatrical property. It has been permitted to deteriorate to a tremendous extent. That seemingly is true of all divisions of the running of the house. The theatre itself does not look as fresh and inviting as it was, the service on the part of the staff has gone to pot and the stage shows are the type that they serve on the West Coast. There is the usual stage band with a master of ceremonies and specialty acts.

What a Difference!

It is hard to reconcile the fact that from the stage of the theatre, which two years ago was the leader of the street one today hears a flock of double entendre gags that would not be permitted in any vaudeville house and which would only have been tolerated at the Columbia when it played burlesque. There should be some one at this house that had the right to censor the material of the acts that are booked in. The offender this week in particular is Bob Nelson.

Incidentally, the hit of the week was scored by King and King, a couple of dancing boys whose stepping approximates as nearly as possible the team work that Doyle and Dixon once did. These boys, with a fast routine of dancing, took all that there was to be had from the audience in the way of applause.

The Capitol's show this week runs two hours and eighteen minutes, and is headed with a sure box office draw in Lon Chaney in his latest feature "West of Zanzibar," based on the play "Congo," which was barred from the screen by the Hays organization in its original form. A short talking subject made by M-G-M presenting George Dewey Washington a colored performer in a series of three songs. The three numbers are "Bluebirds," "Rainbow 'Round My Shoulders" and "Sonny Boy." This colored boy has a lot of personality and a corking voice and the picture being shot principally in medium and close-up shots brings him into the laps of the audience. The Magazine, which was the program's only other screen offering, contained four selected shots from the M-G-M weekly and two from Paramount. Three shots from the Fox Movietone news showed Mt. Vesuvius in eruption. This really looked like a shot from the library which had a sound effect added. The two other shots were the Japanese actors in San Francisco and a shot of the race track at Havana.



A family group—Hugh Allen, Dickey Moore and Lois Wilson. They are the principals of "Object—Alimony," new Columbia production.

42 Minute Stage Show

The stage show ran 42 minutes. It is a Mort Harris production and entitled "Mantilla." It is Spanish in flavor being opened with a vocal duet by Gertrude Long and Forrest Yarnell with the Chester Hale girls working in front of the stage band for a couple of numbers including a castenet dance and a tambourine drill. The exit at the finish of the first, a sort of an endless chain idea, with the girls coming right back with the tambos clicked with the audience. Dave Schoolee ran through a medley of Spanish popular tunes on the piano and received a very fair return for his efforts.

Broadway Show Reviews

Manning and White, with burlesque Spanish Dance, fitted nicely in the next spot with the Hale Girls on again immediately following them.

A number that gave the boys in the stage band a chance to contribute something in the way of song followed and lent comedy. Then King and King for the applause wallop, and finally Bob Nelson to finish. Bob went along and managed to get a few laughs until he got into his rough gags.

In all the show was a decided improvement over the one that held the stage here the preceding week.

Roxy

S. L. ROTHAFEL is giving them a whale of a show at the Roxy over the holiday weeks. One of the outstanding features of his bill is the showing of 22 minutes solid of newsreels. Roxy has undoubtedly heard people say "If I could only go to the theatre and see nothing but newsreels I'd be satisfied," and he has taken advantage of it. In the newsreel unit, which comes at the end of the program, he is showing International, Pathe, M-G-M, and Fox silent news subjects. This is given in addition to the regular Magazine and Fox Movietone news at its regular spot in the program. The program with "Prep and Pep" a Fox release running 63 minutes, consumed exactly two hours and 55 minutes. Roxy in laying out this program figured that it would be strong enough to run two weeks and it is exactly that, for it contains the elements that are certain to appeal to the youngsters and New York is just jammed with them at present because their schools are closed down.

Opening the program there is an organ solo of three minutes, followed by a three minute overture of "The Merry Wives of Windsor," which blends into another three minutes of English Christmas Carols with the Roxy ensemble grouped on the stairs and in the boxes at both sides of the proscenium arch, the whole culminating in a very effective scene entitled "The Nativity." The latter opens with the lights dimmed, a soloist appears as an angel for the rendition of "Holy Night" and as the number comes to a close the slow brightening of the lights brings to view Mary, Joseph and the Holy Child. The entire elapsed time to this point was but 13 minutes.

The first of the holiday spectacles came next and was entitled "Christmas Greetings" running 20 minutes. Santa Claus, with two gnomes open before the curtain which parted discloses a toy shop. In this a double quartet of negro singers are employed for the singing. They are effectively dressed as Gingerbread Men, an acrobatic dancer is the Jack-in-the-Box, two boys and a girl as wooden soldiers contribute a routine of hard-shoe dancing, while the Roxyettes do duty as the dolls.

The Magazine and Fox Movietone News had the next nine minutes of the program. Nothing startling here.

"The Sleeping Beauty," in eight scenes, proved the big stage wallop of the bill. It runs 33 minutes. There are 13 principal roles and the entire company of the house is utilized as the background. On the whole the production reminds one of the usual holiday pantomimes that are so popular in England and at the Roxy the production is so elaborate as to bring to mind the spectacular things that were done at the old New York Hippodrome in the days when Arthur Voegtlin was in command there.

The story of the Princess who is bewitched on her eighteenth birthday and doomed to sleep for 100 years when she will be awakened by a handsome prince is charmingly set forth, with musical numbers, chorus ensembles and incidental ballet dances. That alone was worth the price of admission.

The feature on the screen was "Prep and Pep" a Fox release that is of the ordinary run of program productions, but which should prove amusing to the younger element of theatre goers.

Strand

THIS house is the home of the all-talkie shows on Broadway and there are no revues, presentations or other embellishments to distract from the screen entertainment. The show for the current week is one that is entirely satisfactory from an audience standpoint and its running time is exactly two hours and five minutes. Included in the program is a sound feature, a talking short subject, a sound synchronized cartoon and the Movietone News. That's enough for anybody with a couple of hours to kill.

There is a brief orchestral interlude of a minute at the opening of the show and this is followed by the Strand Topical Review, which contained one clip from International, two from Pathe and three from Fox. A complete Fox Movietone News followed, this house being the only one on Broadway showing the reel in its entirety. It contains a New Year's Greeting, a shot of Gene Tunney praying for England's King; the Jap actors in San Francisco; Vesuvius in eruption; New York's sub-debs in a ballet for sweet charity and a shot of the Havana race track. Seven minutes were given over to the silent newsreel and ten to the Movietone.

The cartoon comedy was "The Galloping Gaucho" a Walt Disney production with "Mickey Mouse" as the character. It is a burlesque on Doug Fairbank's "Gaucho" in a way, but gets a lot of laughs. The Powers Cinephone was used for the sound effects.

"Giving In," a Warner Bros.-Vitaphone short ran for 21 minutes and has Harry Delf and Hedda Hopper as the principal characters. It is a comedy that was effective until the finish where it lacked a punch.

Richard Barthelmess in "Scarlet Seas" with Betty Compson and Loretta Young featured was the concluding offering of the program. The feature is synchronized for music and in several spots there are sound effects of a mob battling sailors. But it is only the growls that are heard and no talk.

McCormack Resigns from M. P. News

WILLIAM McCORMACK, long a valued executive of Motion Picture News, has resigned to enter the general advertising field. Mr. McCormack came to the News in 1916 and for eight years was an advertising representative in New York City.

He was then selected to succeed J. C. Jessen as western representative in 1924, and has since filled that office in Hollywood, where he has many friends and is highly respected throughout the film colony and the business circles of the city. The best wishes of the News staff go with him in his new field of work.

standard was set by producers in 1928 and the possibilities for big grosses were greater than ever in the history of the industry. This was especially true of sound films. The general public attended good picture shows in increasing numbers and in all respects it was our greatest year. We heard very little complaint from patrons regarding the quality of pictures offered. While most producers were endeavoring to enter the new sound field I cannot say that they slighted silent pictures for sound. The outlook for 1929 is very promising.

CLEVELAND.—William Haynes, assistant general manager Loew's Theatre; "1928 pictures were better than previous year's output. The public showed marked approval of good talking pictures and good silent pictures, which latter were sufficiently plentiful to disprove that the producers neglected the type of production on which the industry built its popularity. The outlook for 1929 is promising of bigger and better pictures with a combination of silent and talking sequences."

John Royal, general manager, Keith's theatre: "1928 product was fair. During the year the public was more emphatic in its approval of good pictures and disapproval of the pictures which did not suit the popular taste."

A Pessimistic Note

M. B. Horwitz, general manager, Washington circuit: "The product for 1928 was below required standards of the box office, and the public expressed its disapproval of the weaker attractions by staying away from the theatres. The outlook for 1929 is not as promising as it would be if theatres were relieved of the great overhead saddled upon the industry by experimentation in sound and the equipment for the production and exhibition of sound pictures."

SAN FRANCISCO.—Exhibitors generally in this city are of the opinion that the 1928 product from the studios was entirely satisfactory and generally better than expected. The public, according to a consensus, has been 60 per cent satisfied with about 40 per cent expressing disapproval. George Allen, manager of the Golden Gate theatre, was one of many to declare confidence in the prospects for 1929 as a most prosperous year for the picture men.

KANSAS CITY.—Louis Charnisky, manager, Pantages theatre: "It is my conviction that the pictures of 1928 were above the standard of previous years. As a whole, the expressions of patrons were favorable to the pictures, with the exception of sound vaudeville pictures, which don't seem to 'set' so well with the public. I think 1929 will see a predomination of talking pictures and that business will be much better than it was in 1928."

Walter Maloney, manager, Loew's Midland: "Public opinion has been favorable toward 1928 pictures, and I think the product compares favorably with that of other years, if it did not overshadow pictures of the past few years. I think 1929 will see a further increase in the demand for the sound picture and that business will be good."

Sees 1929 Good Year

L. J. Finske, manager, Newman theatre: "In so far as the Newman is concerned, I can say without any fear of contradiction that the 1928 pictures far surpassed pictures of other years. Our box office receipts will prove that. The public in general has expressed approval of the 1928 product. 1929 should see a good business year for exhibitors and an increase in the number and appeal of sound films."

Lawrence Lehman, manager, Mainstreet theatre: "The 1928 product compares favorably with the pictures of other years. Public opinion has been in favor of sound pictures and the 1928 product in general.

Holden Swiger, manager, Royal theatre: "My vote on the 1928 pictures is that they surpassed in quality and drawing power the pictures of other years. Public opinion has been favorable to the offerings. Producers have been busy with sound, but I don't see that the silent product indicated any neglect on the part of producers for that form of production."

ALLIANCE, OHIO.—Theatre men here were unanimous in the opinion that the 1928 run of pictures was as good and even better than the previous years. Crime pictures and comedy-dramas proved the most popular. With the addition of facilities for talkies Alliance operators are looking forward to an even greater business in 1929.

Silent Talkies Prove Trial to National Board Reviewers

THE National Board of Review are said to be up in arms because they have to listen to sound and dialog screen productions without receiving the benefit of the talk or music, the reason being that the projection rooms in which they review the pictures are not equipped with amplifying devices.

Last week the National Board had a two hour program of talking shots to review and half of them left the projection room before the program was 50 per cent over. The reason is simple. They look at the screen and see the players delivering their lines and at the same time they are trying to follow the dialog from a type written sheet that has been provided. It is one of those cases of trying to do two things at once and seemingly it is proving too much of a strain on the reviewers.

Publix District Manager Relates Experiences With Sound

OKLAHOMA CITY.—Chas. E. Sasseen, District Manager for Publix, has gone through the experience of having six theatres under his jurisdiction install Vitaphone-Movietone since last May, namely, Criterion and Capitol, Oklahoma City; Rialto, Chickasha, Okla.; Criterion, Enid, Okla.; Joie, Ft. Smith, Ark., and Royal, Little Rock, Ark.

"In the first place," stated Mr. Sasseen, "we found it invariably necessary to do some remodeling in all of our houses, especially in the booths, which had to be enlarged to accommodate the sound equipment. With Movietone and the Vitaphone, producing different sized pictures, we overcame this by the use of an oversized lens that is wide enough to cover the screen from side to side, cutting off the bottom and top of the picture with a gate. This throws the same sized picture on the screen for both instruments. In some of our houses we found it necessary to cover all metal partitions with cloth or seltex material in order to get the proper acoustical results."

With regard to the increased cost in running synchronized pictures, he stated he considered it necessary to increase his operators from two men to four for the Vitaphone and from two men to three for the Movietone. He also felt justified in increasing the salary of his operators from ten to fifteen per cent over the old silent picture scale.

It was his opinion that much improvement can yet be made in servicing his equipment. Engineers are supplied, at a nominal cost, by the manufacturer, who make regular inspections every week to ten days. Until very recently, when such engineers were located in Oklahoma City, it was necessary to call one from other cities in emergencies.

"Our sound equipment," continued Mr. Sasseen, "makes it necessary for the house manager to be constantly in attendance at each performance, because of the sensitiveness of the equipment to atmospheric conditions, temperature of the theatre and other things. There is a 'fader' device that adjusts the sound when too low or too high. The operator in the booth does not always detect a deflection in sound, even though he has a horn in his booth. Head 'phones connecting with the booth enable the manager to communicate with the operator from the floor and make corrections almost instantly."

1st IN EQUIPMENT ADVERTISING FOR '28

The vote's in—and counted. It's the vote cast by all the equipment advertisers in the theatre field. And it's a vote that permits no vestige of a doubt concerning its sincerity—for every voter paid to cast his ballot.

Here's the result.

Motion Picture News leads all other motion picture trade journals in total number of equipment advertising pages carried during 1928. Motion Picture News also carried advertising from a greater number of equipment manufacturers than any of its competitors. Motion Picture News equipment advertising for 1928 showed a gain over its 1927 volume. Its closest competitor showed a loss in volume of equipment advertising carried for 1928 as compared to 1927.

In the final analysis only results count. Motion Picture News places these plain indisputable facts before every advertiser and lets the advertiser judge.

The leading equipment paper fifteen years ago, the leading equipment paper today—and tomorrow!

MOTION PICTURE

... and HERE'S WHY

For fifteen years, Motion Picture News has covered all the buyers in the theatre field.

Not a forced circulation, but one acquired and retained thru the strength, character and service that theatre owners recognize in the News.

Further, Motion Picture News equipment editions have gained full recognition from theatre architects of consequence. Architects are a mighty important factor in the sale of theatre equipment.

When advertisers buy Motion Picture News circulation, they are not paying for any "waste". They pay only for the placing of their sales messages before readers that actually buy.

It is because manufacturers of theatre equipment are familiar with the complexities of the structure of the theatre field that they recognize that Motion Picture News circulation represents the individuals and organizations they must sell.

The largest as well as the longest established equipment manufacturers in the theatre industry advertise in Motion Picture News—some with campaigns that have extended over fifteen years.

The true test of advertising value of a Motion Picture Trade Paper is the amount of equipment advertising it carries.

Paramount 9-Months' Net Is $5,975,745

NET profit of $2,102,117.57 for the three months' period and $5,975,774.76 for the nine-months' period ended September 29, 1928, after deducting all expenses and taxes, is credited to Paramount-Famous-Lasky Corporation. The figures for the nine months include $142,532.76, representing the company's undistributed share of earnings of Balaban and Katz, at that time a 65 per cent owned subsidiary. Profits for the three months amount to $3.06 per share on stock issued and outstanding prior to recent split-up of three for one, and $1.02 per share after same split-up; for nine-months' period, profits amount to $8.69 per share on old basis, and $2.90 per share on new basis of stock outstanding.

Speaker Hits Proposed Tax On Admissions

Speaking at the meeting of the Monarch Club, H. A. Buchanan, of Sylva, a member of the Theatre Owners' Association of North Carolina, which held its sixteenth annual convention here this week, took occasion to condemn the proposal to assess a tax of 10 per cent on theatre tickets in North Carolina, citing conditions in the theatre industry in South Carolina which have resulted from the imposition of a similar tax.

Mr. Buchanan also criticized the efforts being made to establish censorship of motion pictures, stating that the theatre owners know they cannot hope to succeed unles they give the public worthwhile pictures and that this fact alone obviates the need for censorship.

New M-G-M Contracts

Long term contracts were signed last week by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer with Charles King and Phyllis Haver, featured players, and George Cunningham, stage director. The first is a product of the legit. stage, who is now in pictures, while the latter did his first work for M-G-M in training the chorus for "Broadway Melody." Miss Haver is a recent addition to the M-G-M ranks.

Decline in U. S. Film Exports in September

A HEAVY decline in motion picture exports in September is reported by the Department of Commerce, Washington, D. C., figures compiled showing that shipments during the month totaled only 16,632,985 feet, valued at $410,741, as compared with 21,991,311 feet, valued at $726,036 in August.

With the exception of exports of raw stock, which increased from 4,409,151 feet, valued at $104,113 in August, to 5,712,,300 feet, valued at $131,085 in September, the decline in exports was general, shipments of positive film dropping from 16,541,618 feet, valued at $433,301 to 10,622,207 feet, valued at $248,609, and negatives declining from 1,040,509 feet, valued at $188,622 to 298,478 feet, valued at $31,047.

Navy Relies Principally on Films for Entertainment

Motion pictures are steadily comprising a greater share of the recreation afforded enlisted men in the Navy, according to the annual report of the chief of the Bureau of Navigation, Washington, D. C., which shows that 43 per cent of the funds provided for this purpose are devoted to motion pictures.

"It can be seen that the greatest individual expenditure is devoted to motion pictures," the report states, "the reason therefor being that by this means the idle hours at the end of every working day can best be filled to provide contentment and to furnish contact with life outside the confines of the Navy. The Bureau of Navigation makes acknowledgement to the motion-picture producers of the country for their interest and cooperative efforts in making preeminently successful the Navy motion picture service, which reaches to the furthest limits of the Naval establishment. The Army transport service, as well, benefits from the Navy motion pictures when transporting films to outlying stations."

Will Consider Changes in Film Duties in February

Changes in the duties on moving picture films will be taken up by the House Committee on Ways and Means, Washington, D. C., beginning February 15, when the sundries schedule of the tariff act is reached during the hearings on general revision of the tariff which are to begin January 7, it has been announced.

The hearings are expected to extend for probably two months and in order that the work of the committee in drafting the new bill may be expedited it has been split up into a number of subcommittees, each in charge of one schedule, the subcommittee in charge of the sundries schedule consisting of Representatives Frank Crowther of New York, chairman, Charles C. Kearns of Ohio and Harry A. Estep of Pennsylvania.

Adults Only, Say Censors

One of the first restrictions in Canada on a sound feature was the order from the Alberta Board of Moving Picture Censors that "The Wedding March" should be shown only to adult audiences. The result was that Manager Hazza of the Capitol Theatre, Calgary, had to announce that no children would be admitted when it was presented there as a synchronized attraction during the week of December 10. Another result was that the theatre was packed at every show.

Luckett Becomes Manager

Joseph E. Luckett has been made manager of the company's branch office in Dallas, Texas, by First National. He succeeds Leslie Wilkes, who resigned to become associated with Louis Dent in theatre operation.

"The Spieler" Now Ready

Pathe's special, "The Spieler," a story of the carnivals, is ready for release this month both in sound and silent versions. Renee Adoree and Alan Hale are featured in the production.

Trend of Pictures Is Toward Romance

HEART stories, simple romances and similar stories leavened with modern sophistication, are now being used in pictures, declared Paul Bern last week. "The trend is away from hardness, from the sordid annals of the underworld," said the Pathe producer, who is now in New York.

The new art of talking pictures does not mean the elimination of personalities who have achieved fame in silent dramas, thinks Mr. Bern. Women with screen personalities, who have fine speaking and singing voices, now have the chance to climb higher than they have ever been able to do in the silent drama, he believes.

First National Purchases 4 New Stories

"Rose of Killarney," "When Irish Eyes Are Smiling," "Riviera" and "The Queen of Jazz" are recently acquired stories for which First National purchased both the filming and dialogue rights. It is not certain as to what time they will go into production.

Resonant Floor Material

After consducting tests in an effort to find a floor material resonant enough for the recording of sound films, the acoustic engineers of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio have determined to use varnished plywood, which brings out particularly well the sound of tap dancing, it is said.

Morgan Heads Cameras

Ira Morgan, after several years on the Coast, has been brought east by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer to take charge of camera work at the Cosmopolitan studio in New York, where M-G-M is now concentrating on talkie production.

Winners in F. N. Fall Sales Campaign

THE Albany exchange in the Eastern district, Kansas City in the Southern district, Salt Lake City in the Western district and Winnipeg in the Canadian were announced last week by First National as the winners of the Fall sales drive. Albany and Kansas City were only a fraction of one per cent apart in their ratings. Managers of the winning branches are: R. W. Wehrle, Albany; William Warner, Kansas City; William F. Gordon, Salt Lake City; M. Isman, Winnipeg. They will each be awarded cash prizes and the salesmen and other employees of each winning exchange will also be rewarded.

New Haven and Boston were next to the leaders in the Eastern district; Seattle and Minneapolis were runners up in the Western district; Cleveland and Memphis were second and third respectively in the Southern district; Vancouver and Toronto were close behind in the Canadian district.

Sawnson Unit Moves from FBO to Pathe

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, January 3.—The production of the Gloria Swanson picture "Queen Kelly" had been moved from the FBO studio to Pathe, the reason given being that FBO had only one stage available for the Swanson unit which did not provide the space needed. The picture has been seven weeks in production with four weeks to go for the silent version.

The real reason for moving, it is reported, is probably Joseph P. Kennedy's withdrawal from FBO and the fact that he is financing the Swanson unit and is allied with Pathe only.

Edmund Goulding will direct the dialogue version, it is said.

Spokane Audience Routed When Film Ignites

Several hundred patrons of the Unique Theatre, Spokane, Wash., made a wild dash from the theatre when a film flashed into flames in the operator's booth, burning two reels of film and the clothing of Ralph Hilborn, operator, who had a narrow escape.

Lieut. Jack Lambert, however, was not so fortunate, as while fighting the fire he had a narrow escape from electrocution when the nozzle of the chemical hose he was using came in contact with a metal door that had become charged from a live wire. One of his hands was severely burned.

It is expected that damage will amount to $600 and repairs will be made immediately.

Ontario Begins Classifying Films for Public

The Ontario Board of Moving Picture Censors, Toronto, turned over a new leaf with the beginning of the calendar year in the matter of regulations by putting into effect the arrangement for the classifying of all film subjects for general and adult presentations. Starting January 1, all pictures passed in Ontario are being labelled either "U" for both adult and juvenile absorption or "A" when they are intended for adult audiences only. This is the same rule that has been in force in Alberta, as well as in Great Britain, for some time.

Warner's Pre-releasing 2 Features in January

"The Million Dollar Collar" will be pre-released on January 12 and "Fancy Baggage" on January 26 by the Warner Bros. The pre-release bookings are for houses equipped with Vitaphone, it is announced.

These two pre-releases make a total of five Warner releases for January. The others are "The Little Wildcat," January 5; "My Man," January 12; and "Conquest," January 19.

M. Gluckman Buys Right to Handle Price Feature

The distribution rights to the Oscar A. Price production, "The Bachelors' Club," for Argentine, Chile, Bolivia, Uraguay, Paraguay and Ecquador have been sold to Max Glucksman, New York.

Past Year Was Bad One for Movie Colony, 30 Persons Dying

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 3.—The past year took heavy toll of the film colony. Thirty members of Hollywood's film colony, which means players, directors, or executives allied with the production branch of the industry, died either at home or while traveling. Seventeen of the thirty were players. Four were directors or assistant directors. The remaining nine were executives, writers, cameramen or technicians.

The players were Fred Thomson, Theodore Roberts, Edward Connolly, Larry Semon, Arnold Kent, Einar Hansen, Ted McNamara, Sid Smith, Ward Crane, William H. Crane, George Beban, Hughie Maek, George Nichols, George Seigmann, Georgia Woodthorpe, and Frank Currier. The others were Ralph O. Donoghue, Merle Mitchell, Gerald Duffy, Dr. Bela Rudolph J. Bergquist, John Fairbanks, L. M. Goodstedt, Frank Urson, Mauritz Stiller and J. T. O'Donohue.

7,000 Seater for N. Y.

Fox Reported Negotiating With Shuberts for Great White Way Site; 40-Story Office Bldg. Planned

THE names of William Fox and the Shuberts are linked in a report now current in Broadway film circles that the former is negotiating for properties on the Southwest corner of Broadway and 47th Street, New York City, on which it is said Fox plans to erect the largest motion picture theatre in the city, advance reports placing the seating capacity of the house at 7,000. The proposed structure would be topped by 40 stories of offices and display rooms, according to reports, and would also have a tower above.

The Fox Realty Company, representing the theatre magnate, are sponsoring the project, it is understood, and the properties involved include the Central Theatre, owned by J. J. Shubert. The Hanover Bank, just around the corner of 47th Street, and about four or five other buildings in addition to the Central will be demolished to make way for the new playhouse, reports say. It is further added that tenants occupying the properties involved have been asked to vacate the premises about the middle of the present year and surrender on May 1 leases expiring during September and October. The Hanover Bank, it is said, will move back into the proposed building upon its completion. The other properties involved are small in height and they are said to be owned by the Trebuhs Realty Co., representing the Shuberts. The proposed playhouse would offer a dangerous competitor for the Strand, which is located on the next block north. There are already two theatres on the street, but they are devoted to the legitimate stage presentations.

The Shubert offices have admitted that Fox is negotiating for their properties but no statement was released concerning the stage the negotiations have reached.

New Unit Replaces Northwest M.P.T..O.A.

FOLLOWING the annual convention of exhibitors of Pacific Northwest in Seattle, Washington, the unit of the M. P. T. O. A. formerly known as the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Washington was disbanded, and is now replaced by The Allied Amusements of the Northwest. The move was made in order to include in the exhibitor organization scores of showmen of Alaska, Montana, Oregon, Idaho and Washington who were formerly not in the geographical boundaries of the M. P. T. O. A. The convention, held at the Washington Hotel, was the most successful in the history of the group.

Officers for 1929 were elected as follows: Al Rosenberg, Seattle, president; LeRoy V. Johnson, Seattle, vice-president; F. C. Weskil, Colfax, vice-president; James M. Hone, executive secretary-treasurer; Melvin Winstock, Seattle, chairman finance committee. Trustees for ensuing year: Ray Grombacher, Milton Kenworthy, Charles M. Thall, Benjamin Fey, John McGill, Frank A. Graham, Francis Graham, Ed Dolan, Will Starkey.

Hays Going to Coast on January 8

Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors, leaves for Hollywood on January 8, making his bi-annual pilgrimage to the production center. Maurice McKenzie will accompany him on this trip. A special meeting of the Association of the Motion Picture Producers will be called immediately after the arrival of Mr. Hays on the coast.

Spitt Publicity Director for Paramount Theatre

Ralph Spitt, former foreign publicity director for First National, has been appointed director of publicity for the Paramount Theatre, New York City, and entered on his new duties this week.

Mr. Spitt is one of the best known publicity men in this industry.

Depinet Got Alice White Team "Sponsor" Job

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 3.—To Ned Depinet, sales manager for First National, goes credit for grabbing off the most sought-after publicity stunt on the West Coast each year. Depinet succeeded in getting Alice White, a First National star, to act as "Sponsor" for the Georgia Tech football team during the Rose Bowl Tournament on New Year's Day. Each year the West Coast studios vie with each other to succeed in placing one of their stars in that position. Depinet is a Georgian, and through his connections placed Alice as the hostess and mascot for the Eastern visitors.

Warners Preparing Story for David Lee

David Lee, the three-year-old boy who performs in "The Singing Fool," and who recently acted in a Rin-Tin-Tin vehicle, "Frozen River," will be starred in a special story by the Warner Brothers. The scenario department has been ordered by J. L. Warner to write a story especially for the young player. A title for it has not been definitely chosen but it will go into production early this month, it is said.

The story will have the benefit of Al Jolson's advice and supervision through its production. Jolson has consulted with the scenario department over the details.

A recent report emanating from Hollywood that the boy actor had died was entirely unfounded. The juvenile has completely recovered from a slight attack of the flu which confined him to his home for two days. He showed up at the Warner studio last Tuesday fit for work.

Billy Bevan Among New Pathe Releases

"His New Stenographer," a Mack Sennett comedy, starring Billy Bevan, heads the new Pathe shorts set for release during the week of December 30. The other subjects on the bill are: "The Mail Man," Aesop film fable; Topics of the Day, No. 1; "The Tigers' Mark," chapter two of "The Tiger's Shadow," new Pathe serial; Pathe Review No. 1 and two issues of the Pathe News.

Natalie Joyce, Irving Bacon and Alice Ward are supporters of Bevan in his new vehicle, directed by Phil Whitman. In the Review are pictorial studies of "The Police Gazette," the Mexican farmers troubles as revealed in "Portable Acres," and "A Horseback After Fish on a Mountain," a nature study.

Adaptor

Edward Luddy, Universal contract director, has been loaned to First National to write adaptation of forthcoming production to be directed by Mervyn Le Roy. When finished at First National, Luddy will return to First National to direct Arthur Lake in his next.

Mahlon Hamilton Cast

Mahlon Hamilton will play lead opposite Sophie Tucker in her all-talker for Warner Brothers "Honky Tonk."

Johnny Walker Producer of Talking Pictures

Johnny Walker, motion picture actor, has become a producer of talking pictures. He is the producing head of Talkaphone Pictures Corporation, a new company organized to produce in the De Forest Phonofilm studios of General Talking Pictures Corporation at 318 East 48th Street in New York City.

The first feature to be made and on which work was scheduled to start this week, is titled, "Blackface," an original story by Howard Emmett Rogers. Among the legitimate players in the cast are, Phoebe Foster, late of "Interference;" William Harrigan, Charles Dow Clark, William Frawley and Jack Cherry.

Johnny Walker and Howard Emmett Rogers will co-direct the picture. Walker will direct the picture and supervise the dialogue, while Rogers will direct the dialogue and supervise the picture.

"Old Arizona" Released Nationally January 20

The Fox sales organization has decided on January 20 as the national release date for their production of "In Old Arizona." The picture will open at the Roxy, New York, one day earlier.

This is the all-talk production that was started by Raoul Walsh as director and principal male lead. After he was injured while making the picture, Irving Cummings took over the direction and Warner Baxter was substituted in the lead. A great portion of the picture had to be reshot in order that Baxter might carry the story.

As it now stands there are but few of the original Walsh scenes left in the production.

Eastman Cannot Use Word as Trademark

THE word "cinegraph" is not valid as a trademark for motion picture positive films it has been held by Assistant Commissioner of Patents M. J. Moore in a decision in Washington, D. C., denying registration of the word to the Eastman Kodak Company.

The ground on which registration of the mark was refused is that it is descriptive of the goods, indicating that they are films for motion pictures or cinegraphs; that "cinegraph" is substantially a phonetic spelling of "cineograph" as commonly pronounced. The Eastman Company, however, in appealing from a decision of the examiner of trademarks refusing registration, contended that the words were not identical, that the definition given in dictionaries is not of a film but of the projected image as visible on a screen, that "cineograph" although found in the dictionary, has never been more than a suggested word.

This contention was declared "untenable" by the assistant commissioner, who stated: "Being a recognized descriptive word used in the motion picture art, it should be left to the free use of all who are interested in this art."

Moran, Mack Signed By Paramount

MORAN AND MACK, vaudeville and legitimate stars, have been signed by Paramount to make two feature length talking pictures at the company's Hollywood studios. They will depart for the coast in the near future.

As a team, Moran and Mack are known as "The Two Black Crows." They have been vaudeville headliners for many years, and for several seasons appeared in Earl Carroll's "Vanities" and other Broadway musical shows.

Daylight Saving Loses Out in Kansas City

There will be no daylight saving plan in force in Kansas City next summer, or in a good many years in all probability, as a result of the meeting of representatives of various organizations who attended the Chamber of Commerce hearing on the question last week. Only one person favored daylight saving at the meeting.

Representing the exchange of Kansas City, A. H. Cole argued against the proposition in conjunction with C. H. Burkey, representing the suburban theatre owners. They insisted that one hour of daylight saving would result in a financial loss for both open and housed motion picture shows.

The postal department, the teachers club and all union labor voted against the proposition.

Pathe International Corp. to Handle Color Films

Pathe International Corporation will distribute six one-reel films, produced under the Blattner Keller-Dorian system, in Great Britain. A. George Smith, managing director of P. I. C.'s London office, recently completed negotiations. The British office of Pathe International will also handle the necessary apparatus to enable the films to be projected. It is a simple attachment, it is said, and the cost of the installation will be approximately $25. The first of the color pictures will shortly be trade-shown in England.

Makeup for Colortone

After considerable experiment with various liquids and pastemaking ingredients, it has been discovered by the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio that a specially prepared dry or powder makeup is the most easily photographed and gives the best color tints for the novelty colortone revues.

Adapting

A. P. Younger is writing adaptation of "The Bugle Sounds," Lon Chaney's next starring picture for M-G-M.

"Rosalie"

"Rosalie," the musical comedy hit, will be made by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer as a Marion Davies vehicle. Marilyn Miller starred in the stage version of the Ziegfeld show.

Music May Halt Interchangeability

Mills Contracts Give Permission for Use Only by W. E. and RCA

same attitude as the producers and the electric companies on interchangeability, though he said he had not yet even spoken to Mr. Mills regarding the matter. It is understood, however, that among the Mills publishers are some said to be dissatisfied with the contracts they hold with him and that they would welcome a breach of the conditions so that they might take up free lance work, which it is said, would be much more profitable to many of them.

Among other things, Mr. Ludvigh said there were complications in several phases of interchangeability aside from the music angle and it would doubtless be some time before they were straightened out to the complete satisfaction of all concerned.

E. E. Bucher, vice-president of RCA Photophone was pleased with the Otterson statement, declaring the more the merrier and it must eventually be a survival of the fittest.

"We have never questioned interchangeability," said Mr. Bucher, "and we at no time doubted it would become effective. We have made great progress with our equipment and there will be further improvements. We will also have on the market within the next few months a considerably cheaper disc reproducing device and we are ready for competition with any of them."

New Telefilm Releasing Company Formed

Hollywood, Jan. 3.—Anthony J. Xydias, well known independent producer, has formed Perfect Talking Pictures Company, releasing organization for Telefilm Pictures Corporation which owns sound and talk synchronization via disc method.

It is claimed that Telefilm discs will be interchangeable on any disc apparatus. Production for the present will be confined to one and two reel vaudeville numbers, a series of 12 of which will be state righted.

Commercial Use Made of Movietone Picture

The first commercialized use of sound pictures in Kansas City occurred recently when sound pictures were exhibited to 37 Graham-Page car dealers, the three Graham brothers appearing in a Movietone film to extend an invitation to a national dealers' meeting in Detroit this month.

Canada Showmen See Advantages in Short Talking Pictures

INTERESTING claims and promises are being made for sound pictures by prominent men of the moving picture theatre business in Canada. Important comment has been made by Jack Arthur of Toronto, supervisor of presentations for Famous Players Canadian Corp., and conductor at the Uptown Theatre, Toronto, as follows:

"With the advent of talking pictures, presentations and acts will naturally be reduced in small houses. With the abundance and variety of talking shorts, with many name attractions featured in them and the low cost of these subjects, there can be nothing but favorable comparison in entertainment value against the house using two or three small time vaudeville acts on the apron owing to the lack of stage space—to say nothing of inadequate lighting and settings. I believe, however, that stage presentations will always have a place in the large motion picture theatres."

Ray Tubman, manager of the Regent and Imperial Theatres, Ottawa, Ontario, made the following pronouncement in the Ottawa Journal on December 28:

"A new era is dawning for the motion picture. There is no question that the spoken drama is in demand. Is the new motion picture development, the Movietone, destined to fill this want? We, in Ottawa, will have an opportunity of seeing and hearing famous dramatic, concert and revue stars in some of their best works at a very nominal admission charge. I believe that the Movietone will help the situation in Ottawa considerably."

Paramount to Triple L. I. Studio Sound Equipment

PARAMOUNT has doubled its capacity for the recording of sound pictures at the Long Island studio of the company, and in the near future will be equipped to record through a third sound channel, according to announcement by John W. Butler, executive manager at the studio.

Since the making of all-dialogue feature pictures was begun at the Astoria studios last Fall with "The Letter," featuring Jeanne Eagles, followed by "The Hole in The Wall," it has been possible to make only a single talking scene at once. There has been only one "sound channel." Consequently only one picture was made at a time, in contrast to the old days when as many as six silent pictures were in production simultaneously at the studio. The only possible chance to speed up on the talkies has been doing night work on the short subjects.

The original equipment at the Astoria studios has now been doubled throughout by engineers of the Electrical Research Products Company and in a few weeks a third sound channel to record musical scores will be completed.

Effective sound proofing of the main floor stage is now in progress. Because of its size and the necessity for keeping its space flexible, it was impractical to treat this stage with hollow tile walls like the smaller stages. After experimenting with heavy drapes, it has been decided to equip the stage with huge tent-like hangings, arranged to pull up and down in the manner of Venetian window curtains. The device was worked out by Butler himself, in conference with sound experts of the studio staff.

Du Par, Roth Take Posts at Brooklyn Studios

Edwin Du Par, for the past three years chief Vitaphone camera man at the Warner West Coast Studios, is now at the Vitaphone Brooklyn studios to start camera work on short subjects and to instruct a crew of camera men in the intricacies of operating a Vitaphone camera. He will be in charge of all camera work at the studio.

Murray Roth, assistant to Bryan Foy, production chief at the Brooklyn studios of Warners, is also on hand from the coast. He has assumed his post as director of short subjects.

Sound Picture Reviews

By CHESTER J. SMITH

"Stage Struck"

THIS is one of the Aesop's Fable series animated by Paul Terry and John Foster, with effects by Max Mannie, music by Joseph Zurro and distributed by Pathe. Sound and effects add materially to these cartoons generally and this one is no exception. The one criticism of it is that it has been crammed too full of effects. They are almost continuous and Synchronism is by RCA Photophone.

"Pressing the Suit"

There is little to recommend in this abbreviated talkie. It is an all-dialogue sketch which is entirely without action and the dialogue is of a type that is neither bright nor clever. The cast of three could also be improved upon. They read their lines in a mechanical sort of way that is not very impressive. The story is of the Topics of the Day series released by Pathe and synchronized by the RCA Photophone process.

"The Petters"

This is another of the Topics of the Day series released by Pathe and synchronized by RAC Photophone. It is dull entertainment with a drab line of patter that runs continuously. None of the three principals is convincing in the reading of lines. It is just the tale of a couple of petters who spring an occasional gag or wise crack. They are interrupted by the girl's father who indignantly tells the youth to put the milk inside as he goes out. Other such jibes fail to enliven it any.

George Dewey Washington

Here is a clever entertainer in an act that will be well received wherever sound is reproduced on the screen. It is an M-G-M Movietone subject by a Colored artist who has a voice well adapted for the talkies. His numbers are well chosen and as well rendered with as clear enunciation as is heard on the screen. "Just Like a Melody Out of the Sky" was enthusiastically received by a critical New York audience.

"Music hath charms to soothe the savage beast." But the melodies produced by Vernon Dent have just the opposite effect on Johnny Burke. The spraying scene contributes to the laughter of "The Lion's Roar," the Educational-Sennett talkie comedy.

Walter Huston Heads Cast in Paramount's "News"

At the head of a cast picked from the ranks of Broadway stage actors for the roles of a new Paramount feature-length talkie dealing with the newspaper racket, Paramount has placed Walter Huston. The picture is the screen version of "Gentlemen of the Press," temporarily titled "News."

Huston will play Wick Snell; Charles Ruggles, the drunken reporter; Norman Foster, Snell's son-in-law; Lawrence Leslie, "Red"; Katherine Francis, Myra May; Betty Lawford, Snell's daughter; George Barbier, the mayor; the others will be Charles Slattery, Joseph M. Holicky, Charles M. Seay, Leslie Hunt, Ralph Murphy, Mary Williams. Millard Webb placed "News" into work this week, Ward Morehouse assisting in an advisory capacity, Monta Bell supervising.

Stage Hand Demanded for Ontario Talkies

Somewhat of a crisis has been reached in the Province of Ontario between exhibitors and the union men with the advent of the sound films. The kick has not come from the projectionists nor from the musicians, it is declared, but from the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes.

The demand has been made for the placing of one stage hand in theatres presenting sound pictures exclusively and the union is asking that three stage hands be employed in houses having stage presentations in addition to the sound pictures. In one instance the manager of a theatre which has no stage has been asked to hire a stage hand. This manager had just engaged two more projection machine operators, making four in all, after wiring the house.

Vitaphone Signs Five Variety Headliners

Vitaphone has signed five additional acts from the variety stage, according to announcement from Bryan Foy, production chief at the Brooklyn studios. They are: Frank Whitman, "The Fiddler of Infinite Surprises;" Sol Ginsberg, known as "Violinsky;" McKee and Ardine, headliners for a number of years; Fred Ardath and Co., who have previously been seen in a Vitaphone sketch, and Lerdo's Mexican orchestra.

Production on these five acts is to get under way in the immediate future under direction of Bryan Foy and Murray Roth.

First "Curiosities" With Sound From FBO

Walter Futter's "Curiosities" series, presented by the Van Beuren Company and distributed by FBO, is now making its appearance garbed in sound and music and synchronized vocal explanations of contents.

The first of the modern "Curiosities" contains six subjects, as follows: Japan's method of inserting sand into oysters to develop pearls; "The Mysterious Winchester House," containing 138 rooms and 57 additions; hunting underground for truffles; "Televox," the Mechanical Man; microscopic views of Rotifera, which exists in all liquids; and the Ica Lake in Peru.

RCA Now Expanding Internationally

Vice President Off for Europe to Make Survey of Territory

HAVING now fairly launched its activities in the way of installing sound reproducing equipment in the theatres in the United States, RCA Photophone is about to expand its operations to cover Europe and the Continent. With that end in view E. O. Heyl, one of the vice-presidents of the company, will sail for Europe Saturday night of this week.

Mr. Heyl will make a complete survey of conditions while abroad and upon his findings will depend largely the future activities of the company. He is to exploit Photophone in all of the principal cities and out of it will doubtless come RCA International Photophone. While abroad Mr. Heyl will make his headquarters at the Paris office of the company.

The ultimate object of Mr. Heyl's trip is to launch a manufacturing plant for Photophone somewhere in Europe, but whether or not this will be done will depend upon the results obtained on the trip. In England two installations have already been made of Photophone production and reproduction equipment and reports, according to E. E. Bucher, vice-president of RCA Photophone, are most encouraging. However, the company will not launch any extensive manufacturing operations until Mr. Heyl is satisfied that conditions abroad will warrant it.

Meantime Photophone is going ahead as rapidly with installations in this country as is possible and expects to have over 2,000 houses equipped by the end of the coming year.

In the production of sound pictures too, RCA sees a big year ahead. The new Gramercy studio will be a week delayed in opening, but will get under way on January 15. The company is now planning an extensive production schedule for the coming year. It has not yet been determined how many features will be made during the year, but the program is now being shaped up and will be ready for announcement during the coming week. Five features have been decided upon up to the present time, but the order in which they will be produced has not been determined. It is likely the first will be a grand opera.

According to Mr. Bucher the new studio will have to work on a twenty-four hour schedule to meet the demands being made for it. Not only will RCA produce there, but it will be available for all other companies and the demands are so numerous that they can be accommodated only by working day and night. While not revealing prospective tenants, Mr. Bucher says they have requests from so many companies to produce features and shorts it looks as though it would be impossible to accommodate them all.

Shenandoah Capitol Theatre Springs New Equipment Innovations

INNOVATIONS in connection with the installation of sound devices in the Capitol Theatre, Shenandoah, Pa., which Manager Max Abrams believes are absolutely original in his house, include a microphone attachment connecting the manager's office with the projection room. By use of the apparatus the manager, sitting at his desk, can broadcast announcements through the theatre when any person in the audience is wanted at the box office or at the telephone, or when physicians in the auditorium are summoned on emergency calls. Announcements of coming attractions are also made in this manner. A small loud speaker has been installed in the projection room to enable the operator to learn the exact volume of the music and dialogue being poured through the house. This makes it possible for him to ascertain whether the volume is too soft, too loud or just right. Adjustment can be made efficiently in this manner.

The Capitol is equipped with both Vitaphone and Movietone and gave its premiere sound program on December 17.

Emory Johnson Plans Re-issuing Films With Sound

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, Jan. 3.—Re-issue of three pictures made five years ago, with sound effects added in the new versions, is planned by Emory Johnson. The latter produced and directed "In The Name of the Law," "The Third Alarm" and "Westbound Limited"; police, fire department, and railroad stories, respectively. They were released by F B O several years ago, and got over with heavy exploitation play.

Johnson figures synchronized sound effects can be easily added to each of the productions, and in sound film form run up substantial gross bookings as re-issues.

Corrish Series Will Be Done in Dialogue

The Nat Corrish series of 26 one-reel dramas produced under the group title of "What Would You Do?" are to be done in dialogue, it is rumored. Each subject has the climax ending eliminated and audiences are requested to submit their own finish of the drama to participate in prizes totalling $16,000 to be awarded by the producer.

The sounding of the pictures is reported being made by Telefilm, a disc system. Physical handling of the distribution is being done through Educational exchanges.

Edmund Joseph to Write Vitaphone Dialogue

The eastern studios of Vitaphone in Brooklyn have signed Edmund Joseph to write dialogue for Vitaphone short subjects. He formerly served in the same capacity for Fox.

Joseph has been identified with motion pictures for the past eleven years, after having been a dramatic critic.

Ontario Lost $380,000 Thru Abolition of Tax

The loss in revenue during the past fiscal year to the Ontario Government through the abolishment of the amusement tax on tickets of 25 cents or less was $380,000, it was indicated in the financial statement of the Province for the 12 months ending October 31 last, the report being issued by Hon. Dr. J. D. Monteith, Provincial Treasurer, on December 5, 1928.

This statement shows that the revenue derived from the Amusement Tax during the past year totalled $1,187,000, as compared with $1,567,000 during the previous fiscal year. These totals are of importance because of the claim by Premier G. H. Ferguson of Ontario that the Amusement Tax would drop $600,000 following the wiping out of the levy on tickets up to 25 cents. It is also interesting to note that Ontario has reported a surplus for the year of $237,000. One of the large revenue items was $8,225,000—profit from the sale of liquor.

Exhibitors in Ontario recently organized a movement to ask the Provincial Government to take off the amusement tax on all tickets up to $1. Further steps will now be taken, following the publication of the annual statement.

Surprise Party for Joseph Schenck's Birthday

Sixty of his closest friends honored Joseph M. Schenck at a surprise party in the Roosevelt Hotel, Hollywood, to mark his sixtieth birthday. Arthur W. Stebbins, of New York City, was host. The guests included: Adolph Zukor, Douglas Fairbanks, Charles Chaplin, Milton Sills, Winfield Sheehan, D. W. Griffith, Dr. A. H. Giannini, R. C. Durant, Nathan Burkan, Lou Anger, Fred W. Beetson, Sam Behrendt, Jack Conway, John W. Considine, Jr., Buster Collier, Edwin Carewe, Harry Cohn, Leo Diegel, B. P. Fineman, Robert Fairbanks, I. C. Planning "Minstrel Show"

Whipping into shape plans for "The Minstrel Show," three Universal workers—Director Harry Pollard, Scenarist Edward Montagne and Scriptman Curtis Benton—are now in New York conferring on the story and looking up atmospheric detail. Pollard is scouring Broadway for comedians on the legit. stage and vaudeville and many screen tests have been made. Tom Healy is mentioned as one of the promising prospects.

Raquel Torres Cast

Raquel Torres will have the role of the girl, Pepita, in "The Bridge of San Luis Rey," which M-G-M will make.

In and Out of Town

SOPHIE TUCKER, vaudeville and stage artist, left New York last week for Hollywood to fulfill her contract to star in Warner Bros.' "Honky Tonk." Casting of the principal supporting roles has already begun.

LEE PATRICK, the feminine lead in Pathe's talkie, "The Missing Man," arrived in New York last Monday on the Twentieth Century. She stopped off at Oklahoma City for a couple of days.

PAUL BERN, Pathe producer who has been spending the past two weeks in New York surveying the book and stage play marts, left last Thursday on the Wolverine for the West Coast where he will assume immediate charge over Pathe's all-talkie, "Listen, Baby."

W. E. CALLAWAY, Southern sales manager for First National, has returned from a two weeks' trip into the Southern territory. He visited all of the major Southern cities.

TED SCHLANGER, assistant general sales manager for Universal, left New York recently on a short sales tour; Buffalo and the Pittsburgh exchanges are included in his itinerary.

Johnny Burke Chief Star on New Pathe Bill

Johnny Burke in "Clunked on the Corner," a burlesque detective story, is the chief item of interest on the new program of short subjects billed by Pathe for release during the week of January 6. The other attractions on the schedule were: "Knowing the Ropes," a Grantland Rice Sportlight; "Land o' Cotton," an Aesop cartoon; "The Secret Mission," third chapter of "The Tiger's Shadow"; Topics of the Day No. 2; the regular weekly issues of Pathe News; an issue of the Pathe Sound News, and Pathe Review No 2.

In the last mentioned subject are: "A Drama Without Players," "Cherry Blossoms" and "Bottles."

15 Sound Proof Cameras Ordered for FBO

William Le Baron, vice-president of FBO in charge of production, has ordered fifteen sound-proof cameras to be used in the filming of talking features on the 1929-30 program. The cameras are specially designed to meet the demand for silence in the making of audible films. They eliminate the click of the ordinary motion picture camera. Preparations are actively under way for the installation of sound stages at the FBO studios in Hollywood.

"Eternal Love" New Title for Barrymore Film

John Barrymore's new vehicle for United Artists, made under the direction of Ernst Lubitsch, will in future be known as "Eternal Love," which takes the place of "King of the Mountains," tentative title given Jacob Christopher Heer story, "Der Koenig der Bernina," while it was in production.

Czechoslovak Film Budget; Entertainment Tax Stir

The budget of the Czechoslovakian Government, recently presented, sets aside considerable sums for film production and support, the Department of Commerce in Washington learns. A number of items appear for administration by the Ministry of Public Instruction, with following expenditure estimates: 15,000 Czech Crowns for film records; 40,000 Crowns for educational films; 112,000 crowns for people's education by means of films; 50,000 crowns for traveling cinemas; 500 crowns for film literature. 100,000 crowns are set aside for censors and 66,880 for two theatres. Ministries for National Defense and Foreign Affairs have appropriated 740,000 and 400,000 crowns respectively for cinematographic expenses.

The entertainment tax in Czechoslovakia, which is applied on a progressive scale, has aroused protest from professional organizations. Gearman Exhibitors' Organizations of the Czechoslovak Republic has proposed to the Czechoslovak Exhibitors' Union that a commission be formed to assist the censors in classifying films into three categories, the entertaining films to bear the full brunt of the tax.

Lloyd to Film Talkie at Metropolitan Studio

Extended use of the new sound stages and equipment at the Metropolitan Studio has been obtained by Harold Lloyd for the making of his next Paramount comedy vehicle. He is now preparing to incorporate sound and dialogue into scenes of the picture.

The comedian will not vary his method of production and will spend between five and six months making the silent version of his picture, spending sufficient time in the meanwhile to experiment with sound.

Italian Film Commissioners Study Ufa Production

An Italian Commission, headed by Director Fiore, technical manager of the proposed Italian studio, is now in Berlin, states a report to the Department of Commerce in Washington. The Italians will study the technical and general organization of the Ufa studios at Tempelhof and Neubabelsberg. The experience acquired they will use for the construction of studios in Rome, where, it is said, films are to be made with Ufa's cooperation.

Paramount Buys Story by Sir Philip Gibbs

The screening and dialogue rights to "Darkened Rooms," a dramatic story by Sir Philip Gibbs, the English novelist, have been purchased by Paramount. Evelyn Brent and William Powell will be co-featured in the two stellar roles and Lothar Meades will direct. "Darkened Rooms" has a theme of spiritulistic mysticism. Production starts in February.

"That's a Bad Girl"

Colleen Moore has begun filming on her next First National work, "That's a Bad Girl." William A. Seiter is directing her.

East Losing Out on Sound Features?

Only Specialties Will Remain, Says Director; Others Back Up Idea

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 3.—Sound production in the East is rapidly dwindling to a basis of only short subjects and specialties, with the feature length talkies eventually due for concentration on the West Coast. E. H. Griffith, director, who returned from a visit to New York last week makes this statement, quoting several producers with whom he spoke while East.

"It is mainly the lack of screen personalities and available talent which is responsible," he says. "Producers say quite frankly that most of the stage material and personalities who can be used in talkies have been tried and found wanting as far as feature length production is concerned. Their names mean little or nothing to the film houses. They serve well for shorts and through that medium, a few may be built eventually into attractions for features, but that requires too much time and investment at present.

"The best talent for talking features can be found right in Hollywood among the standard accepted by members of the screen colony. I think it will soon come to the basis of short subject and specialties being made in the East with all features being produced on the West Coast."

Trapeze artists and circus performers, Marie Prevost and Clarence Burton have important parts in "The Sideshow," a new film from Columbia.

A Brilliant Example of Executive "Thinking"

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 3.—A film writer under contract to one of the large coast studios, getting $200 a week salary, recently submitted a story idea for one of the company's leading stars to the producing head. The idea was accepted and the writer assigned to write an original story and scenario. This work was accomplished in four weeks time, which gave the producer an original story and script for only $800. The producing supervisor, however, decided that the scenario was not strong enough, and engaged a high powered "name" scenarist to write the script for a flat sum of $15,000.

After the scenarist had finished his work and was paid off, the producing supervisor decided that the first writer's script was by far the better of the two, and turned it over to the director to make the picture. Even though the producer wasted the $15,000 paid the "name" scenarist, the contract writer got no increase in salary.

Warner Employees Get Bonuses

Warner Brothers set a precedent in studio history last week by being the first and only firm to give every employee a cash bonus for Christmas. The bonus was given to everyone working in both the Warner Brothers and the First National Studios. It consisted of an extra half week's salary for each individual, up to $50. That is, all salaries up to $100 weekly were given an additional 50 per cent. Those of $100 weekly and over were given the $50 bonus.

"Fog" Cast

The complete cast of "The Fog," which Marshall Neilan is directing for British and Dominion Pictures, Ltd., comprises Mary Brian, James Kirkwood, John Loder, Lloyd Hamilton, Robert Ames, Frank Reicher and Hallam Cooley. Dialogue rehearsals are now being held on the stages of Metropolitan Studios where the film will be made.

"Command to Love" Will Be Fox Feature

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, Dec. 20.—"The Command to Love," last season's Broadway legit hit, is reported as scheduled for production by Fox. Inasmuch as the play is on the banned list of the Hays' organization, Fox will be unable to announce it under that title and a new one has not been picked as yet. No reference to the original play title or the character names used in the play are permitted.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer got around this rule in the making of "The Green Hat" by the simple expedient of calling it "A Woman of Affairs" and changed the character names as well.

Talkie Trailer for Silents

George Landy, head of First National's West Coast Publicity department, is making a series of talking trailers for silent productions. Heretofore most talking trailers made by studios have been in advance of pictures containing dialogue. Landy made three trailers last week, for "Weary River," "Seven Footprints to Satan" and "The Divine Lady." The last two are strictly silent productions, the only synchronization being music and sound effects. No talk is used in either.

Balconova Becomes Star

Baclonova has been elevated to stardom by Paramount. Her first vehicle will be "The Woman Who Needed Killing." It is to be 100 per cent talker. John Farrow will do the adaptation from Margaret Lawrence's magazine story, and Louis Gasnier will direct.

May McAvoy Leaving Warners

May McAvoy will leave the Warner Brothers on January 6, when her contract expires. She will embark on a free-lance career. Miss McAvoy rated second in the recent poll of favorite talking picture actresses taken in Los Angeles.

Ethlyn Clair

Pathe signed Ethlyn Clair to be featured with Walter Miller in their next serial, "Queen of the Northwoods." Spencer Bennett is producing with Tom Storey assigned to direct. This will be Walter Miller's 15th successive Pathe serial in which he has been featured.

Voice School Investigation Under Way

District Attorney Will Use Broom on Those Not on the Up and Up

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 3.—A sweeping investigation of the newly created voice and elocution schools is reported on the schedule of the recently elected Buron Fitts, Los Angeles District Attorney. Fitts, like the perennial new broom, has been sweeping clean since his installation in office and at present is tied up with closing cafes and enforcing prohibition. The voice school, a new equation which came in with "talkies," is slated for his attention.

The voice school is the successor to the old form of evil, the "screen test," "make-up" and "institute acting," so many of which of doubtful foundation were established throughout Hollywood before. There are several hundred voice, language, and elocution teachers now established in Hollywood. Many of them, like Thorner and Gerald LaForest, are legitimate and were established for years in New York in conjunction with concert, opera, and the legitimate stage.

There are others, however, who swept into the film colony for a quick clean-up and who have been getting little attention from the authorities. This is mainly because the former district attorney, Asa Keyes, now faces charges which are being prosecuted by Buron Fitts in conjunction with the recent Julian oil scandal. With this case and the holiday "prohibition "bally-hoo" over, Fitts will give his attention to other matters. Voice schools is scheduled to be one of them.

Abandons Talk Version of "5 O'Clock Girl"

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, Jan. 3.—On acount of delays encountered in making dialogue sequences for "The Five O'Clock Girl," M-G-M has abandoned making the talk version of this picture, and has shifted the company to production of the silent film. With limited sound stage space, the studio is forced to adhere to the strict schedule of assignments for sound stage shooting, as undue delays on the part of any unit holds up those slated to follow.

Marion Davies is getting her first film dialogue experience in "The Five O'Clock Girl." The picture is also the first talkfilm to be directed by Al Green.

F. N. Comptroller Passes Away on Coast

ollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

HOLLYWOOD Dec. 27.—Arthur Fresneda, financial comptroller of the First National Studios died at his home in Beverly Hills this morning after a brief illness. He had been with First National for a number of years. He had been comptroller in charge of production finances at both the east and west coast studios of the organization. He was appointed general financial comptroller of the studios about two months ago.

Dotty Jottings

By Jerry Hoffman

HE really didn't want any publicity on it . . . and it wasn't his fault that it leaked out . . . but a man who quietly takes eleven hundred extras each Christmas and gives 'em a big feed and a whale of a good party deserves to get more than a nod from his fellowmen . . . so here's a sweeping bow to a great little guy . . . Jack L. Warner. . . .

WHICH has nothing to do with the crack passed last week . . . that "the only guy sure of his job at First National these days is the one who goes around putting new names on the doors" . . .

SAMUEL GOLDEN held a press preview of "The Rescue" last week in the new sound projection room at United Artists. . . . Sammy also held a nice little reception after the picture. . . . Roland Colman and Lily Damita gave great performances . . . but it may have helped the picture to have held the reception before the preview . . . which reminds me . . . Harrison Carroll in the Los Angeles Evening Herald . . . picked up the press yarn that Goldwyn had signed a contract offering Lily Damita a prize if she would learn to speak English without an accent in six months! . . . so Carroll doubled on Goldwyn and offered him a prize if he'd do likewise! . . . That's sort of cruel . . . considering that Sam Goldwyn can express himself more vividly and emphatically when he wants to than anyone else I've met . . . but a funny crack is a funny crack nevertheless. . . .

NOW that New Year's is over and most of the hundred odd film papers in Hollywood have put their "special" numbers to press . . . all the Hollywood directors and actors are coming out of hiding into the open. . . .

PATSY RUTH MILLER, Edward Everett Horton and Edward Earle play the leads in "The Hottentot," which starts work at the Warners' next week . . . there's one set I'd like to hang around for they make the three cleverest ad lib artists in the business . . . the only one lacking is Glenn Tryon . . . but there'll be plenty of laughs between scenes. . . .

ESTELLE TAYLOR starts work soon on "Jungle" opposite Lon Chaney . . . great gal and trouper. . . Jack Dempsey is showing New York sports writers wild Hollywood. . . . Billie Dove and Irvin Willat are up again after being "flued" down. . . . Shirley O'Hara is going to play in Clara Bow's "The Wild Party." . . . Ruby McCoy . . . famous "Montmartre Cigarette Girl" is a dancer in "Broadway." . . . O. O. McIntyre please note . . . so are Edyth Flynn and Lillian Woods. . . . Betty Morrissey came back to Hollywood with her new husband, James A. Morrissey, and may play a bit in Chaplin's picture. . . . Charlie started actual shooting this week . . . which makes it still another holiday. . . . Lane Chandler got a haircut. . . . Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., hasn't given in yet . . . rumors are that he's only trying to show up the House of David . . . tell me that gag has hair on it. . . . Lily Damita is going to play opposite John Gilbert in "Redemption" and when Garbo sees the way Damita can kiss in "The Rescue" she won't think the idea so grand . . . and let's leave here. . . .

Hollywood Happenings

Walthall in "Speakeasy"

Henry B. Walthall is the only Hollywood resident engaged for "Speakeasy" by Fox. All the others in the cast are from the New York legitimate company. Walthall played it in the Los Angeles legitimate theatres.

Scott Darling with Fox

Scott Darling, scenario writer, signed with Fox to write adaptation of next picture to be directed by Howard Hawks.

Definite Title

Paramount definitely set title of "A Genius Is Born" for "The Genius," which will feature O. P. Heggie.

Paramount Renews Lukas' Contract

Option on contract of Paul Lukas, actor, exercised by Paramount for another six-month period.

"Pagan" Unit Returning Soon

Ramon Novarro and the M-G-M "Pagan" company, under direction of W. S. Van Dyne, which shot exteriors in the South Sea Islands, were back at the studio before Xmas. Interiors will be made on the M-G-M lot.

Fred Kohler Free Lancing

Paramount failed to renew option on contract of Fred Kohler, screen heavy, and the actor is now free lancing. During the past year, Kohler was featured in twelve Paramount releases, a total not equalled by any other player in Hollywood.

Form Stage-Screen Agency

Milton Bren and Al Rosen have formed firm of Bren and Rosen as agents and managers for stage and picture talent. Offices will be opened on Hollywood Blvd. Al Rosen is well known as an agent in both Hollywood and New York. Bren was recently a production supervisor at M-G-M.

M-G-M to Make "Gunga Din"

"Gunga Din" will be produced as a special for next year's program by M-G-M. Jack Neville is now writing the adaptation.

Jetta Goudal in Chaney Film

Jetta Goudal will be Lon Chaney's leading lady in "Where East is East." The story is an original by Tod Browning, who will also direct.

"Redemption" a Gilbert Talkie

Count Leo Tolstoy's "Redemption" will be made by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer as a talker with John Gilbert starring. Fred Niblo will direct.

Denny's New Film

Eddie Cline will direct Reginald Denny's next Universal production. "You've Got to Fight" is the title.

First-Hand Information from News Correspondents

No Broadway Records Fall Xmas Week

Houses Disappointed When Increase Fails; This Week a Little Up

NEW YORK CITY.—The expected box office smashes for Christmas week on Broadway failed to materialize, even though business was what might be termed good for an average week. With the extra holiday prices for Tuesday it was expected that the houses would show a marked increase, especially when the average daily business was also expected to be better. There were a few spots, however, that showed a little stronger than usual and they were the regular two-a-day houses where three shows were in order on the holidays.

S. L. Rothafel with a smashing holiday show on the stage and "Prep and Pep" as the screen feature led the b. o. returns with $114,400 the picture being held over with the show for a second week. The Capitol was the runner-up turning in a return of $85,395 the picture being the M-G-M release "Dream of Love."

The third big house of the street, the Paramount, came through with a little better than $71,000 with "What a Night" with Bebe Daniels as the star proved a weak sister for this house where more was expected. The Strand with its all-talkie program having "Capt. Swagger" as its principal attraction came through to the tune of $36,000 which isn't bad when one takes into consideration the fact that the house is playing to a lower admission scale than any of the others and also has a far more limited seating capacity.

Those theatres playing pictures for a run at a regular admission scale and grinding continuously held up fairly well. At the Colony "Give and Take" a Universal feature finished out the week with a little under $19,000 for its bit, while at the Rialto "Abie's Irish Rose" disappointed in getting $25,400. At the Rivoli "Revenge" with Dolores Del Rio finished out its run with $23,000 to its credit with "The Awakening" coming in on Saturday and getting away to a fair start over the New Year celebration.

"The Viking" at the Embassy dropped down to just a few dollars under $6,600, while the Astor with "Alias Jimmie Valentine" went to $20,041. "Interference" at the Criterion lifted its receipts with an extra performance on Tuesday and the week there finished with $15,130.

At the Gaiety where Fox brought "The River" in on the Saturday of the previous week managed to get $16,875 in the face of bad notices for the picture and more particularly for Mary Duncan.

Extra performances on Christmas day at both the Winter Garden where Al Jolson is still holding forth in "The Singing Fool," and at Warner's, where Fannie Brice in "My Man" is the attraction the business for the week went a little above what they got the week previous.

None of the current week's attractions are outstanding as unusual box office draws, but the New Year's Eve and day following business should help things on the general showing for the week.

On New Year's Eve all of the houses on the street tried to combat the speculators who were hanging around by having their own men on the sidewalks announcing the extra performances and the fact that seats could be obtained at the box offices at regular prices. This is one of the first times that the picture houses have resorted to this, although it has been usual with the weaker sisters of the legitimate stage from time to time.

Three Baltimore First Runs Return Very Good Week Despite Holiday

THREE pictures playing Baltimore's first-run this past week scored exceptionally good box-office returns. Clear, cold weather predominated with the exception of a rainy Thursday. These films were, "Restless Youth" (Col.), showing at the Hippodrome, along with a short subject "Taxi Beauties," Pathe News, the Lewis Mack Players and vaudeville acts; "My Man" (War.), in its first week at the Metropolitan, with a surrounding bill including two sound shorts featuring Irene Stone and Flo Lewis, and Kinograms reel; and "Annapolis" (Pathe) at the Rivoli, with two sound shorts, Pathe sound and Fox Movietone newsreels.

"What a Night" (Para.) in its six-day run at the Publix Century, realized a take of $21,500. The accompanying program here was a Chas. Chase comedy "Ruby Lips," Fox Movietone and M-G-M newsreels, and the Publix stage unit.

The New Garden theatre, playing Fox' "A Thief in the Dark," managed to draw good returns for the week, the show being aided by a comedy, serial, vaudeville and newsreels.

Clara Bow, in Paramount's "Three Week Ends," rang up a $17,500 figure at the Stanley box-office. Added attractions were, sound shorts, Paramount and Movietone newsreels, special overture and organ solo.

The New Theatre, reached the $6,000 mark during its presentation of "Prep and Pep" (Fox), and sound shorts and newreels.

"Show People," shown as second-run at the Parkway grossed $3,000. A good short bill was added to the feature.

Two Ufa productions were served in this past week's fare. "Spies" was offered at the Valencia, with a "Big Boy" comedy and M-G-M newsreel, and the register displayed $3,100. The Little Theatre, a 267-seat house, corralled but $800 for the week with "Loves of Jeanne Ney" (Ufa), a Russian musical film, Harry Langdon comedy and Pathe News.

Pittsburgh Does Well by "Dream of Love;" Enright Opens to S.R.O.

PITTSBURGH.—Loew's Penn had a tremendous week's business with "Dream of Love" on the screen and Singer's Midgets on the stage. It was an excellent holiday week bill.

"The Barker" was the screen attraction at the Stanley, and though slow moving like most of the talkies, it brought a nice week's business. A stage act in the nature of a kiddie Christmas frolic was prettily done.

Dane and Arthur in an average comedy, "Brotherly Love," brought a good week's business to Loew's Aldine.

The Grand has "Waterfront" with Mulhall and Mackaill. A fairly good program and fair business.

"On Trial" drew very well at the Regent for the week.

"Lonesome" went over well at the Camera-phone and seemed to please the audiences immensely.

"White Shadows in the South Seas" did not draw so well at the Alhambra.

Bebe Daniels in "What a Night" played to disappointing business at the Olympic.

The Enright, new 3500-seat Stanley house, opened on Friday with "Adoration." Business, of course, was S.R.O Friday and Saturday. The production will be shown all of the next week.

Rumor of Interstate Sale Denied

THE Interstate Amusement Co., of Texas, which operates Majestic Theatres in Dallas, Ft. Worth, Houston, San Antonio, and controls theatres in Alabama, Louisiana, Arkansas and Oklahoma, is still a Texas company, with ownership remaining where it always was, said Karl Hoblitzelle, president, upon his return to Dallas from New York on last Sunday. Mr. Hoblitzelle's two-months' visit in the East was the cause of a number of rumors that the Interstate circuit would be sold. A trade paper also published the report that the Fox Film Co. was negotiating for the purchase of the theatres. Mr. Hoblitzelle stated that all such rumors were absolutely unfounded.

12 States Threatened With Tax Legislation

ADMISSION tax legislation is threatened in twelve states, according to the latest report received by those who keep posted on adverse legislation to the industry. It is certain that bills will be introduced in both Vermont and Mississippi. The reason in those two states being that their good roads bonds fall due next year and that the states are not in a financial position to meet them.

C. C. Pettijohn of the Hays organization left for Chicago this week to look over the legislation situation in the mid-west.

'Flu Epidemic Hits Cleveland Hard

Children Kept From Theatres and Xmas Crowds Stay Home

CLEVELAND.—It was a disappointing Christmas week in Cleveland. The usual post Christmas crowds did not attend the theatres. This was due to the 'flu epidemic which had gripped the old town. In former years, the children filled the matinees during Christmas week, and they brought their parents with them. This year the children are being kept from public places and from large gatherings, and consequently they are not attending the theatres.

"Alias Jimmy Valentine," which opened a prolonged engagement at the Stillman, made an excellent showing. The picture attracted business, especially in the evening, and was given plenty of person-to-person advertising.

"West of Zanzibar" did well at the Allen. All Chaney pictures go over, and although this one was not considered as fine as previous ones it attracted the usual Chaney clientele.

"Manhattan Cocktail" had a fairly successful week, but not what was expected.

"Someone to Love" did well at Keith's Palace. A good clean picture for the whole family with love interest and comedy intelligently combined.

"Annapolis" enjoyed a moderate success last week at the Hippodrome. Interest was shown in the naval settings more than in the plot, which offered nothing new. It proved interesting, however, and was favorably reviewed.

"Court Martial," a Civil War tale of a soldier's failure to carry out orders, is beautifully staged, and always interesting. Jack Holt, the culprit, carries off the honors of a play which will appeal to the popular mind. It did fairly well the first half of the week at Keith's East 105th St.

"The Circus Kid," apropos holiday entertainment, was well liked at Keith's East 105th St. the last half of the week, but pulled only a modicum of business.

"The Land of the Silver Fox," a good dog picture, starring Rin-Tin-Tin, had a good week at the Cameo. The picture has suspense and the general interest was well sustained. Rin-Tin-Tin had a "talking" sequence in which popular interest was displayed.

"The Dream of Love" and "The Haunted House" divided the week at the Park, and each did just fair business. These were the first-run neighborhood showings of these pictures.

Subsequent run houses all reported that they were greatly disappointed in their holiday business. Too much and too persistent illness killed whatever enthusiasm there was for movies.

Fox Deal for Boston Theatre Site Concluded

AGREEMENTS have been signed for the property at the corner of Boylston, Tremont and LaGrange Streets, Boston, where the William Fox interests propose to erect a 6,000-seat theatre, the plans indicating that it will be the finest in New England.

Papers concluding the deal have been deposited in escrow at the Atlantic National Bank of Boston. Purchase of the properties is said to be dependent upon permission for the closing of Tamworth Street and upon obtaining clear titles to all of the property involved. There is a 90-day clause in the agreement and it is thought details will be worked out before the time has expired.

It is understood that the structure will be of terraced type and will be Boston's first skyscraper, rising to a height of some 30 stories, containing offices and stores as well as the theatre. Cabot, Cabot and Forbes is handling the realty interests involved and Saul E. Rogers, vice-president of the Fox Theatres Co. and its general counsel, is said to have appeared as counsel when the agreements were concluded by Boylston and Tremont Corporation for the purchase of the properties.

Sickness Fails to Halt Oklahoma City Trade

Oklahoma City.—First run theatres averaged very good this past week, considering the prevalence of flu and other sickness.

Clara Bow in "Three Week Ends" helped Pat McGee entertain customers at the Criterion. Clara is rather popular in Oklahoma City, especially with the flappers, and the National Players in repertoire presenting "Here Comes the Bride" enjoyed good business all week.

"The Home Towners," playing at the Capitol, kept all the patrons continually laughing during the performance. It was a great success, and the sound effects were excellent.

Colleen Moore in "Synthetic Sin" pleased 'em all week at the Empress and "Marriage by Contract," featuring Patsy Ruth Miller, also enjoyed good busines at the Liberty.

"Wings," at the Victoria, had good business, and the vaudeville and feature picture "Danger Street" had excellent business at the Orpheum.

Indianapolis Trade Perks Up to "Fair"

Indianapolis.—Indianapolis downtown houses had a "fair" after-Christmas business last week. English's was dark all week, throwing the legit. crowd to the movie houses. The week's business was considerably better than the previous period, due to better weather conditions.

"Some One to Love" at the Indiana and Charlie Davis' band in "Bars and Stripes" did average business for this season.

"Dream of Love" at the Palace and "Synthetic Sin" at Circle shared second best for the week's box office receipts.

The Apollo picture was "Dry Martini" which had fair business.

Christmas Gives Tampa Houses Good Break

Tampa. Christmas gave all Tampa theatres a real break. Every house enjoyed big business. "On Trial," talkie, pulled the big money of the week. The Sunday opening at the Tampa was BIG, as was the holiday, and with the other two days running very good, the house marked up a corking first half. "Adoration" was the feature of the last half and it went over very good.

The Victory split the week, using "Mother Machree" the first half and "The Little Wildcat" the last. They had a good Sunday and Christmas but the rest of the week was a little under the average of this house. For a year now the Victory has been the only talkie house in Tampa, but with the inauguration of the sound films at the Tampa, the talkie fans have two houses to choose from.

"Riley the Cop" didn't seem to appeal and the business was off for the Strand Sunday and Monday. Opening Tuesday, and Christmas, at that, put "Sal From Singapore" over to excellent business. On the bill with Sal was another of those Laurel-Hardy comedies, "From Soup to Nuts," and it helped the draw for the following two days, which ran a little over average. "Good Time Charlie" the last two days to average takings.

Weather Aids Des Moines Holiday Trade

Des Moines.—At the Strand Theatre last week business was good with pleasant weather aiding the holiday trade though it did not bring a check to the 'flu epidemic which is still in progress though seeming to dim'nish slowly. The features at the Strand were Rin Tin Tin in "The Land of the Silver Fox" and a comedy of "Lay On, MacDuff," which did good business for the last half of the week, equalling the business done over the Christmas time.

At the Des Moines Theatre the feature was "On Trial." Pauline Fredericks evidently has a lot of friends for the feature met with good reception, which was credited to her drawing power at least in part. At the Capitol the stage show did well with Ray Harrison, local star, getting the big hand in a special song number. The feature was "The Outcast," not especially strong, but it met with good comment generally

Santa Claus and 'Flu Jinxes Affect Dallas; "Woman of Affairs" Best

DALLAS.—Good business at the Dallas first run theatres the past week has been entirely absent and no theatre was able to overcome the jinx of the season. The unusually low receipts were due to two things—Santa Claus and the Flu. The effect of the present widespread epidemic of Flu is certainly being reflected in present theatre grosses and from present indications will be more so in the near future unless things make a turn the other way.

"Caught in the Fog," featuring Conrad Nagel and May McAvoy, at the Melba, failed to get the business and the gross for the week was low. This picture was a semi-talkie but failed to attract or cause any commendable comment.

At the Majestic, "Blindfold," with George O'Brien and Lois Moran, checked off just fair business for the week, which meant that business was low. The attraction was fairly well received by those who saw it. The Interstate Vaudeville headliners, Jack Davis, Gladys Bell and Jack Bell, in "Pair O' Jacks and a Queen," concluded the program with some very clever skits and songs.

"A Woman of Affairs," featuring John Gilbert and Greta Garbo, at the Palace, proved to be the biggest draw of the week and business was fairly good although far from capacity. The names Gilbert and Garbo are synonymous with good business in Dallas.

At the Capitol, "Red Lips," with Charles Rogers and Marion Nixon, was only a fair box office attraction and receipts for the week were low. The attraction offered seemed to please and was a good picture but Xmas and the Flu kept it low.

Al Jolson in "The Singing Fool" failed to "click" for once in Dallas and receipts at the Ritz, where it was offered for a week, were only average. This was the third time, however, that this attraction has been offered to the Dallas theatregoers at a downtown theatre and not much more could be expected of an attraction. Money was made on the showing, although not as much as was expected.

At the Old Mill, "The Butter and Egg Man," featuring Jack Mulhall and Greta Nissen, accounted for only fair business.

At the Arcadia, "The Wright Idea," with Johnnie Hines, and "Man-Made Women" with Leatrice Joy and H. B. Warner, failed to get more than fair business for the week.

Holidays Boost Philadelphia Grosses

Boyd, Philly's New House, Opens Strong with "Interference"

PHILADELPHIA.—Mild weather all week helped to boost box office receipts and holiday business in Philadelphia on the whole was excellent. Christmas celebrations in Philadelphia were confined chiefly to stage presentations and several novelty short films, such as "Forget Me Not" and "There Is a Santa Claus," where in former years special feature films suited to the occasion were shown.

At the Stanley "Show Girl," with sound and on the stage "Merrie Christmas Frolic," appealing to grown-ups as well as children, drew very good crowds all week. Two large Christmas trees decorated the sides of the stage.

The Boyd, Philadelphia's newest theatre, opened on Christmas Day with the all-talking picture "Interference" as the main attraction. The new theatre represents the most advanced ideas in construction and decoration and attendance all week was highly satisfactory.

"Abie's Irish Rose" at the Aldine in its second week is not doing as big business as was expected. Philadelphia fans seem to be pretty well satisfied with what they have seen of the story in other forms.

The Karlton with Billie Dove in the "Night Watch" reports just average holiday business with nothing especial in the way of patronage.

"The Wind," with sound effects, at the Stanton is pronounced a good picture by all the critics but does not seem to register well with the fans and attendance has been just average.

Entertainment at the Fox with "Prep and Pep" on the screen and a "Joyous Christmas Festival" was just fair but nevertheless played to good business. Christmas decorations, consisting of two large trees at the sides of the stage and an appropriate surrounding bill, with carols, bore out the spirit of the season.

At the Met the talking picture, "The Terror," and a varied program of stage features played to very good business.

"Kriemhild's Revenge" at the Little Theatre has aroused much interest and holiday business was satisfactory.

The Fox-Locust reopened on Christmas Day with "Four Devils," starring Janet Gaynor, and is playing to fairly good business.

The Forum had a big week as usual with William Haines in "Excess Baggage" and Buzzington's Band on the stage.

At the Victoria "Companionate Marriage," taken from Judge Lindsey's famous book, aided by lurid lobby displays, accounted for satisfactory business.

"Jazz Mad" at the Arcadia was not a particularly strong picture but resulted in just average holiday business.

"Masks of the Devil," with John Gilbert, was the attraction at the Palace and business was good.

A Warner Bros. co-starring team: William Collier, Jr., and Betty Bronson. With youthful ardor they portray the leads in "One Stolen Night."

Ottawa Exhibs Have Merry Xmas Week; "Lilac Time" and Bow Film Strong

OTTAWA.—A business landslide was experienced by exhibitors of Ottawa, Ontario, during the wek of December 24 and every manager, doorman, cashier and usher knew that Christmas shopping was over for another year. Mild weather put a crimp in winter sports, such as ski-ing and skating, and this helped to throw the people through the theatre doors.

The piece de resistance was "Lilac Time" (silent) at the Centre Theatre, where crowds were immense. The feature was popular and got the town talk.

There was also a mighty rush to the Regent Theatre, the raison d'etre being "Three Week Ends," Clara Bow and Elinor Glyn. This was the final silent week here and Manager Ray Tubman whetted the patrons' appetite for the "soundes" by presenting "The Hut" and a couple of sound trailers at each show, prior to the opening with "Street Angel" on December 29.

The human torrent also surged into B. F. Keith's Theatre, where the screen attraction was "Varsity," a lively story of young people with an element of pathos. No complaints on this and the vaudeville was also a treat.

The Imperial Theatre caught most of the juveniles with a double-header offering in "Land of the Silver Fox" and a re-issue of Chaplin's "The Rink." We do not know what the former was like because we couldn't get near the entrance.

The neighborhood houses came back with a bang as well, with the exception of the Avalon, where progress is slow. "The Circus" and "The Dove" divided the week at the Rex Theatre and both got capacity crowds. "The Hawk's Nest" and "The Heart of a Follies Girl" did likewise at the Columbia Theatre and the Fern was packed for "Casey Jones" and "Silent Hero." The Avalon registered steady business with "Just Married" and "The Fleet's In," the latter being second run.

Box Offices Give Santa Claus Strong Competition Up Albany Way

ALBANY.—Theatregoers in Albany did not spend all their money for Christmas presents, as was evident from the excellent business done by the motion picture theatres in the city last week. It was far ahead of a year ago, and at least three of the houses played to S. R. O. business night after night, something almost unheard of in Albany for the week between Christmas and New Year's, which has always been regarded as one of the deadest.

The Mark Strand in Albany found the all-talkie "On Trial" a wonderful proposition from the standpoint of the box-office. There was capacity business plus every night throughout the week, with long lines awaiting a chance to reach the box-office. A good part of this was no doubt due to the fact that Bert Lytell, an Albany favorite through having been connected with a stock company here some years ago, was featured in the picture.

The Mark Ritz in Albany also played to more than capacity business last week with "The Midnight Taxi." This house appears to be soundly on its feet these days, and since it has been equipped for sound pictures, it has played to absolute capacity business.

The Leland used "Blindfold" last week to satisfactory business, although it might have been perhaps a trifle better. Clinton Square is still running strong with its first-run double features, and panned out very well last week with "Name the Woman" and "Pretty Clothes."

Proctor's Grand used Zane Grey's "Avalanche" for its picture end of the program of entertainment. Opposition was offered in the legitimate by the Capitol Theatre featuring "The Vagabond King."

Neighborhood houses in Albany report business as about normal for the week.

Troy theatres reported business as being decidedly off last week. At the Troy Theatre "Two Lovers," running for four days, did only a fair business with matinees small. For three days "The Outcast" played to only one-half houses at the Troy, despite the fact that Corinne Griffith is generally regarded as a fairly good drawing card in the Collar City. People simply did not seem to have the money to spend.

The Lincoln used "Uncle Tom's Cabin" for the week, and played to just fair-sized crowds. Proctor's Troy Theatre, with its combination of pictures and vaudeville, appeared to be the only house doing a satisfactory business. This theatre used "Annapolis" for its picture end of the program. The neighborhood houses in Troy report business as being very bad during the past week.

Holiday Shopping Cuts 'Frisco Receipts

San Francisco.—In the main business district of San Francisco, conditions were peculiar in the first run motion picture theatres. This was due to the fact that the Christmas shoppers spent most of their time in the stores.

"Three Week Ends," as played on the screen of the Granada Theatre, did well, especially in the evenings.

"The Awakening" at the California did not do as was contemplated. "White Shadows in the South Seas," shown at the St. Francis Theatre, did fairly well. It was shown for two weeks.

The two theatres that drew the crowds were Loew's Warfield, with "The Lady of Chance" on the screen and 50 "Kiddie's Revue." Other acts were also shown. The other crowded theatre was the Embassy with "The Hometowners." The Golden Gate also did good business with the picture "Good-Bye Kiss" and vaudeville. The Pantages Theatre did but a fair business with "Companionate Marriage" on the screen and special vaudeville acts. The Union Square Theatre reported excellent business with the pictures, "Domestic Meddlers" and "Burning Gold" on the screen with "The Midnight Girls" on the stage. The El Capitan, a Vitaphone Theatre, did excellent with "Glorious Betsy."

Los Angeles Houses Do Heavy Trade

"Old Arizona" at Criterion Breaks All House Records

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 3.—The holiday grosses on the whole were very good. The Criterion, one of the town's weakest houses, came through in a blaze of glory with the first week's showing of "In Old Arizona," which broke all house records by doing business to the tune of $23,500. The previous record was $23,000, established when the house was a new first run in 1921 with Charlie Chaplin in "The Kid." The second week of Fox's "In Old Arizona" promises a still bigger gross the way business has started.

The Metropolitan with Paramount's "The Case of Lena Smith" ran up a gross of $28,000. Loew's State coffers received $28,500 during the week with "A Lady of Chance," starring Norma Shearer. The United Artists, with the second week of "The Trail of '98," took in $12,000. "My Man," in its first three days at the Warner Brothers Theatre, brought in $10,500.

The fourth week of "The Barker," running at the Carthay Circle, resulted in $17,500. The holiday week aided "Noah's Ark" playing at the Grauman's Chinese Theatre as a jump to $22,000 was in evidence, the week being the picture's ninth at the Chinese, too.

It was originally intended to close the run of "Noah's Ark" at the Chinese last week, but the picture was held over for an additional two weeks by the request of Warner Brothers, who promised to underwrite the theatre's weekly overhead. Meanwhile the gross jumped almost $10,000 during the holiday week.

Trade Enjoys Smart Pick Up in Harrisburg

Harrisburg.—Business of the picture theatres picked up sharply immediately after Christmas Day, following a seasonable slump in mid-December. The revival was attributed in part to a natural rebound from the public's work of preparing for the holiday and in part to the splendid quality of pictures shown in most of the important houses.

Exceptionally large business was done by "The Awakening," starring Vilma Banky, at Loew's Regent. Not only did it attract capacity houses every night after the holiday, but the theatre was crowded at practically all the matinees.

At the Colonial the feature picture was "The Haunted House," which also possessed strong popular appeal as reflected in splendid box office receipts.

At the Broad Street the main attraction was William Boyd in "The Night Flyer," while the Rialto's offering was "Companionate Marriage," based on Judge Ben B. Lindsey's theory of wedlock, and this won a big slice of feminine patronage.

Just a Fair Week's Trade for Cincinnati

Cincinnati.—After a careful survey of the Cincinnati theatres, the homely expression of one manager, who described business as "just tol'able," virtually sums up the situation for the week intervening between Christmas and New Year's. Despite the excellent line-up of attractions, and favorable weather, the theatres, in common with other local trades, did not succeed in coaxing the shekels into their respective tills to the extent that they would have liked.

Clara Bow in "Three Week Ends" was the screen feature at the Albee, while Kenneth Harlan, in person, headlined a good array of acts, the house giving four instead of three complete shows daily during the week. Business, although good, could have been better.

There was somewhat of a let-up in attendance at the Lyric, where "Wings" showed for the third and final week at popular prices with sound. Even at that, the engagement as a whole was satisfactory.

"Pep and Prep," at Keith's, with sound, together with special Christmas offerings on the Movietone end, held up fairly well.

The Capitol, with a holdover of "A Woman of Affairs," with Vitaphone, had fair returns, which were overshadowed by the business for the initial week.

"Spies," at the Strand, the last week of silent movies at this house, did a comfortable business, comparatively speaking.

The Palace, with "What a Night," and vaudeville, which house also increases its schedule to four shows a day for the week, was about on a par with the other theatres in the business district.

Fairbanks Up $5,000 on Chaplin

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 3.—Douglas Fairbanks seems to be a much better business man than Charlie Chaplin, and the latter is the target for much kidding in consequence.

Some time ago, it seems, Fairbanks endorsed a certain brand of cigarettes, and sold the manufacturer the right to advertise his endorsement for the sum of $10,000. Later, Chaplin submitted to the blindfold test for another cigarette manufacturer, but only received $5,000 for his permission to allow the result of the test to be advertised.

Xmas Week Slump Hits Seattle Theatres

Seattle.—The traditional week-before-Christmas slump was apparent in the business of the first run houses last week, with box office reports mostly below average in the leading theatres. The winner for the week was "West of Zanzibar," which went over to good business at the Fifth Avenue Theatre, but still was not up to the usual box office mark set by Chaney here. George Dewey Washington's M-G-M Movietone short was exceptionally well liked, and business was acceptable for this week.

At the Seattle Theatre, "Romance of the Underworld" was well liked but was not a strong box office attraction. On the stage, Fanchon-Marco's revue was below par for recent weeks. Business at this house was not much more than fair. The same criticism applies generally to "Beware of Bachelors," which was the attraction at the Blue Mouse Theatre. It did only a fair business, compared to other recent films at this house.

"On Trial" played its fourth week to moderate business at the Music Box Theatre, but showed signs of slipping and was nearing the end of its run. The long waiting lines have disappeared, which is a sign of slumping business for this 950-seat house. One-half more week will see the end of this run. "Just Married" was the attraction at the Coliseum and it failed to arouse much enthusiasm. Much stress is being put on the coming talkies to this house next week, and the present film suffered as a result.

Reviewers were well pleased with "Nothing to Wear" at Pantages, but business was not much better than average, as the vaudeville unit was weak. The Orpheum had a very strong vaudeville program, and "The Crash" on the screen served merely as a time-filler betwen shows, failing to impress the audiences.

Winifred Dunn, scenario writer, was married at Coronado last week to Harold Swartz, sculptor.

Holiday Week Above Normal in Kansas City; All First Runs Do Well

KANSAS CITY.—Individuals and children were not the only ones to whom Christmas week brought cheer in Kansas City. Virtually every exhibitor to the man enjoyed business far above normal, especially on Christmas night, while other nights were better than average nights.

At the Newman, "Buddy" Rogers in "Someone To Love" scored big, Rogers being a Kansas City boy, which probably gave impetus to the attendance. The matinee business found hundreds of women shoppers in attendance.

At Loew's Midland, Joan Crawford in "Dream of Love" played to well-filled houses, as did Billy Dove in "Admiration" at the Main Street, which also offered a strong stage program in addition to the feature picture. "The Power of the Press" drew well all week at the Globe. So did "Conquest" at the Royal, especially at matinees, the afternoon business being better, comparatively, than the night attendance.

At the Pantages "The Apache" played to well-filled houses all week. All theatres had the usual Christmas lobby and stage decorations, but, aside from a slight increase in newspaper advertising on the part of the Newman in exploiting "Buddy" Rogers, there was nothing out of the ordinary in the exploitation of pictures.

"Fool" Averages 32,000 Patrons Weekly in St. Louis; Good Week All Around

ST. LOUIS.—With an average attendance of upwards of 32,000 per week in a comparatively small theatre, "The Singing Fool," now in its seventh week at Skouras Brothers Midtown Theatre, Olive street, west of Grand boulevard, St. Louis, Mo., seems to grow bigger week by week. The end is not yet in sight.

It is truly remarkable how the females and some males pay 75c to $1 per head to cry at and with Sonny Boy. That's what pays dividends on theatre stocks, if and when. At any rate, a dead house has been converted into a big financial winner.

"Uncle Tom's Cabin" as interpreted with sound and accompaniment, opened an engagement at the Grand Central Theatre on Christmas Day and despite the holidays and the prevalence of influenza had an excellent week.

Loew's State Theatre, Eighth street and Washington avenue, offered on its screen "Dream of Love" with Joan Crawford and Nils Asther. Also several short sound subjects. On the whole it was a satisfactory week.

"Submarine" was on the screen at the Missouri Theatre and proved a very popular attraction and the Ambassador's film was "Synthetic Sin."

CLEARING HOUSE FOR BOX OFFICE PROBLEMS and THEATRE OPERATION

By Charles E. Lewis

of the Alfred Gottesman Theatrical Enterprises, New England

Another "Sound" Danger Warning

In a special article two weeks ago I warned exhibitors about the "tin-pan" devices being sold to theatres all over the country. Now I issue another warning, but this time it is meant for theatres already equipped with some form of sound apparatus, either non-synchronous or both.

After hearing about various kinds of phonograph record service for use on non-synchronous plants I made it a point to question several exhibitors regarding same, and also to investigate what these so-called services consisted of. It was not long before I found that just like the "tin-pan" sound plants, some of these services were long on promises but rather short on delivery. So you had better follow the same advice I gave you about non-synchronous plants when it comes to buying a record service to run on it. Investigate every proposition that interests you and make sure that the company offering such service is in a position to give you what you are to pay for.

Better still, if you are in doubt, drop a line to the CLUB and let us get the "dope" for you. A week or two delay will never put you out of business but it may save you a lot of grief and money.

Creating Interest in Your Staff

From the west coast comes a rather novel method of directing attention from theatre patrons to the theatre staff of employees. Announce through your program or on your screen that a pair of passes will be given to any patron who notes some particular good act or service by a theatre employee, and who notifies the management of same by letter.

After a little plugging, and announcement of some of the reports, you will be surprised to see how your patrons are watching every attachee in your theatre, and instead of all those nice little actions and efforts of your staff going to waste for lack of attention or appreciation, you will soon see that they are on their toes every minute that the house is open for business because they will want some observing patrons to see and report what they are doing. They will also be very careful about doing anything wrong for fear that even such an action would be reported.

This strikes us as being another corking way to kick up interest in your theatre staff and in these days when the actions of theatre employees generally reflect the theatre itself, it provides much good food for thought.

We pass this suggestion on for just what it is worth to the average theatre manager who continually cries, "There is nothing new under the Sun."

Did You Answer My Last Letter?

NO doubt that by this time you have received the special letter sent out by the CLUB about silent and sound pictures. NOW, the thing to do is to sit right down and send me the information requested in that letter, but don't delay because we want to broadcast the answers to those questions for the enlightenment of the industry at large. DO IT NOW. THANKS.

Farash Theatres Pioneers Talkies

Now that "talkies" have become more of a reality than a dream it would be timely to say that much credit is due Mr. Wm. M. Shirley, President of the Farash Theatre Corp., in Schenectady, N. Y., operating a string of high class theatres in that part of New York State, for his vision and foresight in seeing the possibilities of this new theatre angle.

According to a story printed in the Schenectady Union-Star a short time ago, Mr. Shirley installed the eighth sound plant built with both Vitaphone and Movietone.

Much interesting information has reached this office about Wm. M. Shirley, and we had hoped to get him to send us one of his pictures so that we could show you what he looks like. But he is a little modest and up to this date we have not been able to get the photo. However, we are glad to come forward and give credit where credit is due. Mr. Shirley was one of the very few who believed in the possibilities and future of "sound" and did not hesitate to place faith and money to prove his theory. We know he has been amply repaid for his venture.

As soon as the CLUB organizes an investigation bureau, we will ferret out some more "dope" about the Farash Theatres and let the rest of the world in on their up-to-the-minute activities.

It is my contention that the less said about the present Flu. epidemic, as far as the public is concerned, the better it is for all concerned. We know that it doesn't help business any, and we also know that if we take a little precaution to safeguard the health of our patrons we are doing all we can. Therefore, I suggest that you let your actions speak louder than words. Keep your theatre well-ventilated, avoid the crowding of patrons in any one spot in the theatre. See that a proper disinfectant is used by your janitors in cleaning the theatre. But avoid all reference to it as far as publicity is concerned, especially the name "Flu."

Introducing A. H. R. Miller

Mr. Miller, manager of the Opera House in Waynesburg, Pa., employed a most interesting letter when he sent me his membership application. He listed his "qualifications" as follows:

1—Messenger for the original Film Trust.

3—Theatrical Usher.

4—10 years, Penn. State licensed operator.

5—3 years in Production of Motion Pictures from pay roll clerk to studio manager.

6—Film Salesman.

7—This is 3rd house (All failures prior to taking over).

8—Annual Trip—from coast to coast or in part studying theatrical conditions.

9—Personal acquaintance with many of the biggest men in the Industry.

10—Original Ideas—Nothing is ever tried in this theatre as a stunt if we know it's been tried elsewhere—Except as a test against our plan.

We thought his list of experiences was very interesting BUT we thought he was ALL wrong on that number 10. Surely, Mr. Miller, all the good ideas in the world couldn't be thought out only in Waynesburg, could they? No, I think you will agree with me. So why not watch what the other fellow is doing and just see if "his" ideas cannot be fitted for your use in your town. But maybe we misunderstood. Perhaps you meant that you never use a stunt that has been used in your town. If so, then it is an entirely different angle to view your letter.

At any rate, we are glad to welcome you into the CLUB and know that we are going to get some interesting and profitable ideas from you, especially since your ideas are all original and that is what we want, Originality. Let's hear from you again soon.

Meet Another New Member

Floyd F. Sinclair, manager of the New Southern Theatre in Minneapolis, Minn., sends us his application blank together with a very novel stunt that he used in conjunction with "The Yellow Cameo" a serial picture. He organized a "Yellow Cameo Club" among the children of his community and enrolled quite a large membership. The entire idea was well planned, but we would rather have you write direct to Mr. Sinclair for details and samples of the membership card he made up. Since we have been great believers in the use of serials we know that this will stimulate attendance of the kiddies and furthermore, it can be used in connection with any serial you run. Write him today, his address is the New Southern Theatre, Washington at Cedar Aves., Minneapolis, Minn.

Let us hear from you again soon, Mr. Sinclair.

Sunday Movies Win Fight in Florida Town

Thanks to the initiative of two enterprising citizens, Tarpon Springs, Fla., now has Sunday movies. The new order of things was launched Sunday, December 9, with the showing at the Royal Theatre of Universal's "The Fourth Commandment."

Elmer Hoadley, a real estate factor, initiated the movement. Another equally enterprising citizen was Frank Morris.

Hollywood Happenings

Opinions on Pictures

West of Zanzibar

A Congo Country Melodrama

(Reviewed by Freddie Schader)

WHILE M-G-M are programming this as "an original story for the screen by Chester Devonde and Kilbourn Gordon" it is in reality a screen version of the stage play "Congo" which was barred by the Hays organization. With Lon Chaney in the principal role the picture is certain to be a box office drawing card, but there is nothing about the film itself that will cause anyone to go out and rave about it. Mary Nolan is a very interesting figure in the cast and Warner Baxter as the drink sodden doctor manages to get some sympathy for himself and the girl.

The opening scenes are laid in a London music hall and the balance of the picture is enacted in the Congo country. There is some colorful stuff in the scenes with the blacks but in the main the story is depressing. Chaney has the role of the stage magician who is deserted by his wife, she eloping with a South African adventurer. When she returns later to die, bringing a child with her the wronged husband believes the youngster is the offspring of the lover. To avenge himself for the wrongs done him he places her in one of the dives in Cape Town while he goes up country. Years later he sends for the girl, having in the meantime managed to virtually become king of the black tribes, and at the same time arranges for the man whom he thinks her father to come into the territory. It is the custom of the blacks upon the death of the male head of the family to burn alive the nearest relative either wife or daughter of the dead person. Chaney plans the death of the father and the burning of the daughter, until he discovers that she in reality is his own child. Then he gives his life so that the girl and the doctor who has been his personal attendant can escape.

Drawing Power: Must depend solely on Lon Chaney, although Lionel Barrymore is also in the cast, but has little to do. Mary Nolan looks good and it is safe to predict a screen future for her.

THEME: Deserted husband decides to revenge himself on offspring of wife who deserted him and the man who betrayed her by planning the death of both by natives in the interior of Africa. The girl's escape with a lover and the death of the two men in the original plot finish up the story, a tale that is rather gruesome in spots.

Produced and distributed by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Length, 6,150 feet. Released, November 24, 1928. Directed by Tod Browning.

"What a Night"

A Snappy Fast Moving Story

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

THERE is a little bit of everything but grand opera in this one. There is burlesque, comedy, drama and various other factors that all go to make for an entertaining picture, if one that has entirely too many ridiculous situations. Bebe Daniels is starred and she is her usual vivacious self. They have given her some good comedy but it loses much of its effect in some poor situations that surround it.

The tale is somewhat of a travesty on newspaper life and will be far from pleasing to members of the trade. One seldom sees a wealthy girl in the role of a reporter traipsing a pet poodle along to the office with her and tieing it to her desk. However, the story was not made for the newspapers and the movie patrons might be able to overlook some of these ridiculous touches. Of course, Miss Daniels, the understudy to the star reporter, reveals the hiding place of the much desired spurious check and her paper succeeds in scooping all rivals, which, of course, is the main thing.

Aside from some of the discrepancies in the story, Miss Daniels does some splendid work puts over the comedy in her usual clever style. She is ably assisted by Neil Hamilton, Wheeler Oakman, William Austin and Charles Sellon.

Drawing Power: It is the type of picture that undoubtedly has box-office appeal and the popularity of the star should make it a good draw. Exploitation Angles: The star is always a good bet. The mystery angles; the newspaper angles, the comedy and the fast action; the fashions.

THEME: Comedy drama in which daughter of wealthy man becomes cub reporter and unearths big scoop for her newspaper.

Produced and distributed by Paramount. Length, 5,476 feet. Released, Dec. 22, 1928. Directed by Edward Sutherland. Story by Lloyd Corrigan and Grover Jones. Scenario by Louis Long.

"Land O'Cotton"

(Fable-Pathe—One Reel)

THERE is some real good humor as well as a well executed story in this Aesop's Fable of Simon Legree and his slave boy and girl. Their purchase, incarceration and getaway from their brutal master provide more than the usual number of laughs found in these animated cartoons.

Simon, after buying the boy and girl on the auction block locks them up in adjoining huts and they are aided in their getaway by a friendly mule. The chase for them is highly exciting and as they are about to be recaptured the mule throws his two hind shoes with deadly accuracy and renders Simon null and void.—CHESTER J. SMITH.

Prep and Pep

Juvenile Story Will Appeal Strongly to Youth

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

A FRAGILE little story, of youthful trials and emotions, of a kid discouraged to the point of quitting who fights his way back to love and happiness, this directorial endeavor of David Butler, erstwhile actor, is best calculated to please Mamie Flapper and the Boy Friend. It's an exceptionally light bit of drama.

The Culver Military Academy supplies the locale. The youngsters are all "kaydets" and are smitten by the Commandant's pretty daughter. So right off the bat one could call this a sort of junior West Point story, you know the type, its plot somewhat like this: a first year man suffering humiliation and disgrace before his comrades and desiring to run away from it all, newly born courage and a sense of filial devotion towards old Alma Mater holding him back; and then the boy conquering all his mental handicaps, triumphantly beating the psychic jinx and marching off with the girl. The plot is familiar, isn't it? "Prep and Pep" follows it pretty faithfully.

Young David Rollins and pretty Nancy Drexel are the young pair. David's rival is a cocky young fellow who finds much pleasure in disgracing him in public. The hero suffers from his jibes, especially when he has a name to uphold: the name of his dad, who was Culver's star athlete. When the Academy boys find out that David is not a chip off the old block they have a grand time kidding him. After awhile the boys patience is exhausted and he gets mad and full of the spirit of "I'll show them." From thence on he scores one success after another, finally ending his feats with the rescue of his girl and rival caught in a prairie fire.

Drawing Power: For the youthful clientele. Sell it from its military angle and tell 'em that it is a realistic portrayal of young love and trials. It will be a sure bet in towns having military schools, high schools, etc., and exhibitors would do well to make a play for such trade.

THEME: Picturing the tribulations of a young chap who goes to Culver Military Academy, and is immediately accepted as a whiz, being the son of a famous athlete. When he proves a bust, he feels like quitting but becomes imbued with a desire to win and goes to victory and the hand of the Commandant's daughter.

The River

Sluggish, Sophisticated, But Packs Punch Here and There

(Reviewed by E. G. Johnston)

THIS latest effort from Frank Borzage, director who gave this industry "Seventh Heaven" and "Street Angel," unwound itself at the New York Gaiety Theatre a few nights ago where it's in for a visit at the two-a-day rate. Here, it has the support of an excellent Movietone comedy, a good show in itself, and a strong Movietone newsreel featuring King Alphonso of Spain. A prologue to the feature, a couple of heavyweights singing the theme song, was a tragic failure—but now to the picture:

Represented as a symbolic affair "The River" has a dangerously thin coating of ice for this kind of trick skating. True it starts out like a sturdy stream, flashes brightly through rapids here and there but dawdles along until all its vigor is spent in broad and sluggish channels.

Charles Farrell has the role of a much-too-innocent fellow from Up The River who floats down-stream on a home-made barge to find out what the Sea, Women and Cities look like. Via picture he never reaches the Sea or City but does meet a Woman and thereby hangs this tale.

Barge tied up he loafs around a worldly-wise girl whose keeper has just been sent up for murder. The affair ripens into a rather tempestuous brand of love for both girl and boy while the other man is away. When the latter reappears he is successfully done away with and the pair resume the journey to the Sea. It is then that you are informed that Women and Rivers are much the same—rifts, rapids, whirlpools, depths and whatnot. So much for a brief theme. Now for whatever highlights there be and a mention of a few sequences which this reviewer thought ridiculously overdrawn:

Charley Farrell and Mary Duncan do wonderfully well with the flimsy material handed them. Next, we compliment Borzage along the same lines. Not many directors would have even attempted to film such a story as this. A minor role, played by Ivan Linow, is also faithfully portrayed. The photography is of the best.

But on the other hand. Let's go back to the beginning where we see the girl clinging frantically to "her man," being led away to serve a murder sentence. She is swearing eternal faithfulness. A few hours later she's making eyes at the young fill billie. Not a sympathetic start for one whom we are later led to believe is redeemed by love. Next, the amorous bed room scene which is pretty hot stuff. This was stretched out 'way too far—and Broadway laughed at the girl's far too obvious attempts to enslave her new boy friend. Then, the climax of this sequence when a jackdaw breaks up the party and a near knifing occurs. Boy friend seizes an axe, goes outside and starts hacking down mature trees. Maybe two or three trees O. K. but so help us he cuts enough lumber to furnish Hollywood sets for months to come. And Broadway guffawed again—and again when she coddles the boy back to life by the warmth of her body.

Drawing Power: Don't pay "Special" money for this because it doesn't rate that high. But if you can get it right do so by all means providing some of it is not too hot for your audience. It's sophisticated fare.

Produced and Distributed by Fox Film Corporation. Length, 7811 feet. Release date undetermined. Directed by Frank Borzage from Tristam Tupper's novel by same name.

The Shopworn Angel

Love Regenerates a Detained Lady

IT is just a question how much your audience will stand for. In the case of this picture the heroine is a backline chorus girl, who gets a heavy sugar poppa who puts her in a flat where she and all the little boy and girl friends make whoopee. Then along comes a buck private in the draft army. He's from Texas and hasn't a friend in the world. He bulls his buddies that he knows Daisy of the chorus and that she's his girl. They make him make good on bragging and as luck would have it the girl goes through for him. Finally she falls in love with him, gives her sugar daddy the air and walks to the alter with the boy just a few minutes before he is to start overseas. But the wedding ceremony is never completed, the girl goes into a dead faint when the minister reaches that part of the ceremony where he says "and foreswear all others." Back to the chorus for Daisy and while rehearsing a new number she has a vision that comes over the empty seats in the orchestra of the death of the boy who almost was her husband. And that ends the tale.

There are two versions of this picture, one is silent and the other talkie. The latter version is the one that was shown at the Paramount. The talking sequence runs for ten minutes at the end of the picture, which makes a difference of a couple of hundred feet in the length of the picture.

Gary Cooper, who plays the role of the buck private, is the only one in the cast who gets the sympathy of the audience, but Gary fails to qualify when it comes to delivering lines. Nancy Carroll, however, with considerable stage experience behind her manages to shine in the moments that she has to deliver dialogue.

There are times when the picture in the silent portion seems to drag considerably, and there seemed to be too much stressing of the fact that the girl was being maintained in an apartment. It was almost constantly on the screen.

Drawing Power: The title seems to be the best bet for the box office. In the spots where they are still strong for war stuff this may do business.

THEME: Chorus girl with a "guardian" falls for a soldier and is about to marry him. At the altar she faints, but love has regenerated her and she goes back to work after the boy goes overseas.

Produced and distributed by Paramount-Famous-Lasky. Length, talkie version, 7,373; silent, 7,112. Released, Jan. 12, 1929. Directed by Richard Wallace. Story by Dana Burnett, screen version by Howard Estabrook and Albert Shelby Levino.

Scarlet Seas

A China Sea Meller with Thrills

(Reviewed by Freddie Schader)

RICHARD BARTHELMESS must have suddenly remembered what a tremendous box office smash "Fury" was for him, and decided to do another sea picture along the same general outline. He has not succeeded in duplicating "Fury" by a long shot, but he has turned out a picture that is fairly interesting. Dick and Betty Compson run away with all the acting honors and carry the story. Betty, incidentally is a fallen woman who is queening over a Shanghai sailor dive who is stolen from the establishment by Dick, carried off on his boat and after the two are purged by fire and water, for the boat catches fire and sinks, they are purified and ready to start life anew. But the tale is told with any number of thrills and while it is hard to reconcile little Dick knocking the big sea-faring huskies right and left with a punch the audiences pretty generally will stand for it. Betty Compson looks the part of the dive girl and manages to give a fairly colorful performance. Loretta Young has very little to do and leaves no lasting impression with what is entrusted to her.

The handling of the sea scenes was commendable, while the burning and sinking of the vessel done in miniature fitted nicely through clever cutting.

Drawing Power: Play up the star and his former sea story. Betty Compson should also be worth something at the b. o. "Shanghied in Shanghai" might be a good catch line for you. It is a sound picture but not a talker.

THEME: A hard drinking, hard hitting sailor man steals a girl and takes her to sea. She's not a good girl, but the experience brings her regeneration. The two passing through hardships of a shipwreck, a mutiny, any number of fights and a couple of murders, finally see the light and turn square.

Produced and distributed by First National Pictures, Inc. Length, 6,237 feet. Released, Dec. 9, 1928. Directed by John Francis Dillon.

"Clunked on the Corner"

(Sennett-Pathe—Two Reels)

JOHNNY BURKE has a fair comedy in this two-reeler, which has plenty of gags and comedy situations, though most of them are of a rather ancient vintage. There is an occasional good laugh, but it seems as though this clever comic would have a better chance to display his talents with a little different brand of material.

Johnny has the role of a dumb newsboy, who runs from one mess of trouble right into another. A female shoplifter finally slips a valuable necklace into his pocket and then vamps him to her home, where he is roughly received by her husband, who is much wanted by the police. When the cops arrive the couple are sneaking out the back door, leaving Johnny in charge with instructions to shoot anyone who tries to enter the house. They are all eventually captured after many of those time-worn shots that find Johnny dangling over a lofty cliff. Vernon Dent and Carmelita Geraghty are the other principals and both do well what is asked of them.—CHESTER J. SMITH.

My Man

A Fannie Brice Triumph

FANNIE BRICE is just as great an artist on the screen as on the speaking stage. In fact one has a better chance to catch her full artistry of expression in the numerous screen closeups than on the vaudeville or musical comedy stage. Her facial expression is as wonderful as is her brand of humor.

If Miss Brice were not just as clever as she is this latest Warner Vitaphoned feature would be anything but a sensation. It is about two-thirds talkie and about three thirds Fannie Brice. She jumps from one specialty to another, all taken from her vaudeville acts and she renders all of her old favorite numbers including, "My Man," "Floradora Baby," "Second Hand Rose," "Spring Song," "I'm An Indian," "I'd Rather Be Blue Thinking of You Than Be Happy With Somebody Else," "If You Want the Rainbow, You Must Have the Rain," and the recitation, "Mrs. Cohn At the Beach."

Working so many numbers and specialties into a film story is a somewhat difficult task and necessarily the story has been sacrificed. It is woefully disjointed and the direction is far from the best. There is an attempt to ring in a bit of the pathos that is so effective in the Jolson pictures, "The Jazz Singer" and "The Singing Fool," but it just does not click in the same way.

Guinn Williams has the leading male role and does well enough in it. He has a lot of personality, but he evidently is not accustomed to reading lines. Edna Murphy is splendid as the ungrateful and erring sister, and Ann Brody scores as Mrs. Schultz, the sympathetic and altogether lovable friend of Fannie. But the success of the picture can be credited almost entirely to Miss Brice.

Drawing Power: It can hardly fail to do big business in any wired house. The popularity of the star and her artistry are just about a guaranty of its success. Exploitation Angles: The star, the numerous popular song hits and the specialties.

THEME: Poor shopgirl with young brother and erring sister suffers many hardships and loses the man she loves on her wedding evening when he falls for the wiles of the sister. She becomes a successful stage star.

Blindfold

THE constant warfare that goes on in our big cities between the blue-coated representatives of law and order and the versatile criminals of today is the theme and backbone of this effective little story. The author, Charles Francis Coe, knows his gunmen having presented them in detail in his "Saturday Evening Post" yarns. The elusive will o' the wisps of crime and the sturdy, upright "cops" play a pretty game of wits here. Told with crisp vigorous direction and sketching of character that does not leave anything to be desired, the story can immediately be credited with that quality of picture goodness: satisfying general appeal.

Lois Moran presents a deft little portrayal of a girl, who temporarily suffers from shock when she sees her lover cut down by a gangster. A master crook sees her condition and because of his knowledge of neurosis, restores her mind sufficiently to make her a most suitable bait for his scheming designs. The girl's lover is suspended from the police force through the connivings of the master crook but he determines to solve the case alone. He sees the girl and through strength of will compels her to remember her real status. So while the crooks are staging a robbery she (with the aid of her lover) leads them into a pretty trap, which results in all of them donning the steel bracelets.

Perhaps the characterization that probes deepest is that of Earle Foxe ('member his work in "Four Sons"?) as the genius of crime. George O'Brien is exceedingly efficient as the young cop who loves Lois Moran. As a crook with a musical bent, Fritz Feld does well in a small part.

The camera work is especially fine in two instances: a scene showing the girl's reaction to the knowledge that her brother has been killed by a bandit; and a sequence showing the girl bending over the fallen body of her lover with the daze temporarily blanketing her memory.

Drawing Power: It is the type of picture that gets by in the Broadway type of house. Exploitation Angles: Publicize O'Brien, Lois Moran, Earle Foxe, the author's stores, the type of film; most any stories appearing in the dailies and dealing with crime will provide suitable "copy"; arrange tie-ups with police department, jewelry stores, etc.

THEME: Drama of girl enmeshed in net spread by gang of crooks lead by a "master mind" of crime and of her escape from their hands through the help of her faithful lover.

Produced and distributed by Fox Films Corp. Released, Dec. 9, 1928. Length, 5,598 feet. Director, Charles Klein. Author, Charles Francis Coe.

"The Yankee Clipper"

(Universal—One Reel)

OSWALD is up to his old tricks in this cartoon creation. As a barber he expands on the beauty of the various animals that come to him. Fairly amusing gags are utilized for the barber shop sequences and a bit of plot that is introduced makes it a compact affair.

Walt Lanz and Tom Palmer are credited with the ingenuity and drawings.—GEORGE J. REDDY.

Dream of Love

Almost a Nightmare in a Mythical Kingdom

THERE is a box office chance for this feature providing the exhibitor can book it in almost on the heels of "Dancing Daughters," in which event it will draw on the strength of the Joan Crawford prestige established in the picture. Otherwise it is slightly below the average of the program type. There is really no role to speak of for Joan Crawford and one has to build the box office appeal on her personality. Co-starred with her is Nils Asther, but the rank and file of fans the country over have not seen enough of him to give his name a b. o. value.

In addition to the co-stars there are a number of names that are worth while. Aileen Pringle and Carmel Myers both look like a million dollars in stunning costumes and Miss Pringle contributes considerable in a role that is wholly unsympathetic, she running the gamut from farce to heavy melodrama when she is "the woman scorned." Warner Oland is the menace as the dictator for the mythical kingdom in which the action takes place, a kingdom that might just as well be Russian, Roumanian, Austrian or what have you. Harry Myers, who has appeared all too infrequently on the screen of late, lends a hand in supplying comedy relief.

In the matter of direction Fred Niblo has handled his story very well indeed, but Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer need not think that even a director as capable as this is going to build Joan Crawford and Nils Asther into a Gilbert-Garbo combination for the box office; it isn't in the cards. Joan Crawford, in roles that are suited to her, is a strong enough box office attraction for anyone, so why go to experimenting with her.

Drawing Power: Joan Crawford should prove your best bet to get them in. I would not dwell too strongly on the idea that here is a "new romantic pair" for the audience will be disappointed if you do. The name of Fred Niblo should have some pulling value. Exploitation Angles: Play up the stunning advance gown fashions worn by Joan Crawford, Aileen Pringle and Carmel Myers. Use the angle of should the heir to the throne renounce it for a woman.

THEME: The love of a Prince for a commoner set forth in a melodramatic setting with a revolution as the background, the intrigue being supplied by a woman with money and ambitions to become a queen.

Produced and distributed by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Length, 7,987 feet. Released December 1st, 1928. Authors, Eugene Scribe and Ernest Legouve. Continuity, Dorothy Farnum. Titles, Marian Ainslee and Ruth Cummings. Director, Fred Niblo. Film Editor, James McKay.

:: "The Check-Up" ::

"The Check-Up" is a presentation in the briefest and most convenient form of reports received from exhibitors in every part of the country on current features, which makes it possible for the exhibitor to see what the picture has done for other theatre managers.

The first column following the name of the feature represents the number of managers that have reported the picture as "Poor." The second column gives the number who consider it "Fair"; the third, the number who consider it "Good"; and the fourth column, those who consider it "Big."

The fifth column is a percentage figure giving the average rating on that feature, obtained by the following method: A report of "Poor" is rated at 20%; one of "Fair," 40%; "Good," 70%; and "Big," 100%. The percentage ratings of all of these reports on one picture are then added together, and divided by the number of reports, giving the average percentage—a figure which represents the consensus of opinion on that picture. In this way exceptional cases, reports which might be misleading taken alone, and such individual differences of opinion are averaged up and eliminated.

No picture is included in the list which has not received at least ten reports.

3 Fires in 8 Days at Quebec House

CONSIDERABLE excitement was caused at Quebec City, Quebec, when the Princess Theatre, a neighborhood house, suffered three fires within a period of eight days. The third blaze, which broke out after the last show on Christmas night, was more or less complete, the interior of the structure being gutted with heavy loss. A big holiday crowd had just left the theatre when flames were discovered. An investigation is being held to determine the cause.

The Quebec Provincial Government carried out its threat to press the Sunday show issue when it entered an appeal from the judgment of Mr. Justice Desaulniers in the Superior Court, Montreal, in the Court of Appeals at Montreal on December 27.

In this test case, United Amusements, Limited, Montreal, owning 13 local houses, won the decision in the lower court when the presiding judge decided that a motion picture show did not constitute a theatrical performance within the meaning of the Lord's Day Act. As a result, the moving picture houses of cities and towns in Quebec continued to give Sunday shows as they had done for a score of years. If the judgment is reversed, they will be forced to close.

The Capitol Theatre, one of Montreal's greatest film palaces, introduced sound programs starting December 29 with "Abie's Irish Rose." This is the second Montreal theatre to be wired, the first being the Palace, which opened with sound programs on September 1. Manager Harry Dahn continued the use of the big Capitol house orchestra and operatic stage presentations. Prices were raised slightly, ranging up to 99c.

Announcement has been made of the appointment of James Travers of Toronto as general manager of Canadian Educational Films, Limited, with headquarters at Toronto. Mr. Travers succeeds Oscar Hanson, now in New York City, general sales manager of Tiffany-Stahl Productions, Inc. Mr. Travers has had long experience in the Canadian film exchange field. There are six Educational offices in the Dominion.

Phil. Hazza, formerly for years with Candian Universal at Montreal, has become Canadian representative of Tiffany-Stahl. His headquarters are now at Toronto.

Sound pictures made their auspicious bow at the Regent Theatre, Ottawa, Ontario, at a special midnight show on December 28, this having been arranged by Manager Ray Tubman as a curtain raiser for the regular sound opening on December 29. The program comprised "Street Angel," a Fox Movietone news reel, comedy, "The Family Picnic," and special short, "The Hut." Prices were raised 10 cents for the sound regime.

Special combination pages appeared in both local newspapers in which local merchants and others extended congratulations to the Regent on the arrival of the Movietone Baby.

Word from Ottawa, the Canadian capital, announces the incorporation of two moving picture companies in the Dominion as follows: Fidelity Films of Canada, Limited, with a capitalization of $300,000, headquarters at St. John, N. B., to carry on the business of a film exchange.

Also the Fisher Theatres, Limited, at Winnipeg, Manitoba, with $125,000 in preferred shares and 4,500 no par common shares, to erect and operate one or more theatres.

Moving pictures have been introduced at Queen's University, Kingston, one of the leading colleges of Canada, for regular instructional purposes. Dean J. C. Connell is using moving pictures in the medical college for auxiliary teaching of anatomy and surgery.

Schine O. Houses Get Policy Change

PICTURES will be discontinued at the Fairbanks, Springfield, Ohio, which house was recently acquired by the Schine-Chakeres interests. After extensive remodeling, the house will play legitimate attractions. The Regent Theatre, another house in the newly-formed chain, after being remodeled and redecorated, has opened with a policy of pictures and vaudeville, with Movietone to be installed later. Willard Osborne, who has been director of the State Theatre orchestra, is managing the Regent, which is the only house in Springfield playing vaudeville.

The State Theatre, Springfield, Ohio, has discontinued its orchestra, and will hereafter feature only organ music. The policy of talkies will be continued at this house as also the Majestic, both of which theatres are a part of the Schine organization.

Organ accompaniment for sound pictures is the latest innovation to be presented at the Orpheum Theatre, a Cincinnati neighborhood house. Herschel Luecke, organist, conceived the idea of an accompaniment for a Vitaphone act introducing the Trinity Choir in choral numbers. The experiment found such favor with the Orpheum audiences that Manager Chester Martin will continue the plan.

John Gregory, owner of the Liberty Theatre, Springfield, Ohio, plans to install an entire new front to the house and completely redecorate the interior.

A lone bandit pushing a pistol through the box office window of the Northern Theatre, Columbus, Ohio, demanded that he be accommodated with paper money only. Mrs. Ilone Wright, cashier, who was checking up for the night, gave him $50 in bills. The bandit escaped.

A syndicate, headed by C. Wittekind, is being formed to erect a $100,000 theatre at Mt. Healthy, Ohio, adjacent to Cincinnati.

The Ogeden Theatre has been incorporated at Columbus, Ohio, for $16,000, with James A. Jackson, Ruby R. Williams, M. A. Moore and W. C. Chesbrough.

The Granada, St. Francis and California Theatres, Dayton, Ohio, will hereafter start their "bargain" performances at 11 A. M., one hour earlier than their previous schedule.

G. W. Briggs, formerly a theatre owner at Marietto, Ohio, and an associate, a new comer to the game, have purchased the Royal Theatre, Salem, Ohio, from Mrs. A. M. Weiberg.

New Plan Permits Kan. Sunday Shows

THE Liberty Theatre, Horton, Kans., is the latest Kansas house to successfully operate on Sundays under the "contribution" plan. Sunday shows legally may be prohibited in Kansas, so, on Sundays, patrons at the Liberty Theatre merely have been requested to leave their contributions, if they so desire, as they file out of the theatre. Ministers and other blue law advocates have protested against the theatre's plan and requested that the county attorney investigate the case. He did—and found no violation of the law, no more than the operation of any church on Sunday. The contributions thus far have not equalled the week-day receipts.

Along movie row the exchanges were decorated with Christmas accessories and a typical Yuletide spirit prevailed. At the Paramount exchange there was a Christmas tree and it is reported that a thoroughly good time was enjoyed by all.

Christmas meant more than a mere holiday to Rev. Miller of the National Screen Service and Miss Alyce Hartung of the First National exchange, who were married the Saturday previous and left to spend their honeymoon in St. Louis and Chicago.

An organ has been installed in the Rockhill Theatre, suburban house of Kansas City, for the purpose of broadcasting organ recitals, by remote control, over station WHB of Kansas City. Morrill Moore is the organist.

Among the out-of-town exhibitors in the Kansas City market this week were: Hugh Gardner, Orpheum, Neosho, Mo.; George Skilkett, Joplin; Mo.; O. W. Williams, Rialto and Gem Theatres, Monett, Mo.; Ensley Barbour, Joplin, Mo.; H. H. Harriss, Springfield, Mo.; L. Bingaman, Waverly, Mo.; C. M. Pattee, Pattee Theatre, Lawrence, Kans.; and J. C. Staple, Victor Theatre, Rockport, Mo.

The Derrick Theatre of Virgil, Kans., was destroyed in a $30,000 fire in that town, several business houses also being burned. Fire departments from Yates Center, Kans., and Hamilton, Kans., were called before the fire was extinguished.

Calm Ind. Showman Averts Fire Panic

CALMNESS of Philip Merrill, owner of a Laurel, Ind., picture house, avoided loss of more than 200 lives in threatened panic Dec. 24, when flames swept through the ceiling while a crowd watched a wild west thriller. Merrill, assisted by cool headed assistants, managed to get everyone out without injury.

A correction has been made to the list of newly elected officers of the Indianapolis Screen Club, published recently in this column. The authentic lineup is as follows: W. W. Willman, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer manager, President; Louis B. Goulden, President of Goulden Theatres Corp., Vice-President; Duff Newman, Paramount salesman, Treasurer; A. H. Kaufman, Manager Big Feature Rights Corp., Secretary.

The Board of directors includes: W. W. Willman, Louis B. Goulden, Duff Newman, A. H. Kaufman and John W. Friday.

Skouras-Publix interests were host at a dinner for newspaper men last Friday night at the Columbia Club. A. L. Block was toastmaster. Cullen Espy, manager for Skouras-Publix interests in Indiana, and George D. Tyson, State advertising manager, spoke. An Indiana ballroom orchestra provided music.

Matinees were held in neighborhood houses by Indiana Indorsers of Photoplays to raise Christmas money for needy families. Mrs. H. C. Bertrand was chairman of the event.

Ace Berry, former Circle manager, has now been transferred to Washington to take over managerial duties.

Mary Downes, one of the Gould dancers at the Indiana last week, is a former Indianapolis girl.

The Fourth Avenue Amusement Company, owning a string of theatres in Indiana, has announced the appointment of Don L. Hammer, of Lafayette, as managing director of the company's four theatres in Lafayette, the Mars, Luna, Family and Lyric. He succeeds Herbert H. Johnson, general manager of the Luna Amusement Company, former operators of the theatres.

At all four theatres new projection booth equipment is being installed and work on the installation of sound equipment at the Mars will start immediately.

Officials of the Skouras-Publix interest in this city, entertained local newspaper men recently at a dinner at the Columbia Club in Indianapolis.

Fire, thought to have originated from a discarded cigarette, damaged the Little Grand motion picture and vaudeville house at Madison, Ind., to the extent of $15,000 recently. Only the front walls of the building escaped damage.

The fact that on several occasions small boys have been caught stealing in the rear of the building and smoking cigarettes was given as a possible cause for the fire's origin.

Albany Territory Film Reports

ABOUT 100 employees of the Proctor Theatre and the Griswold in Troy were guests of the company at a dinner last week at Jack's restaurant in the Collar City. Jake Golden was major domo of the occasion. Incidentally, Mr. Golden was presented with a gold wrist watch by the employees of the Fourth Street Theatre.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Stombaugh, the former being manager of the Pathe exchange in Albany, were among those who attended the inauguration of Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt at the State Capitol on New Year's Day.

Harry Brooks, president of the projectionists union in Troy for the past sixteen years or more, and who has been in the booth at the Lincoln Theatre, has gone to Proctor's Fourth Street House, which has just been equipped for sound. James Kelly, operator at the Palace, succeeds Mr. Brooks at the Lincoln.

Ed. Urschel is now booking for Pathe in Boston.

The Stanley Company remembered its employes in its theatres in Albany and Troy with crisp bills for Christmas. No one was forgotten.

The Troy Theatre will use split weeks throughout January. In all probability the policy will be continued throughout the winter.

The Orpheum in Utica is to be wired not later than February 15 for Movietone. William Benton, of Saratoga Springs, is wiring four out of his five theatres for sound.

Uly S. Hill, general manager of the Stanley houses in Albany and Troy, is sporting a brand new traveling bag these days, a gift from the managers and assistants in this territory.

R. W. Sykes, who owns the King Theatre in Troy, has changed his policy and now opens at 2 p. m. rather than at 10 o'clock in the morning. He is using musical comedy and pictures.

All of the first run houses, as well as a few of the subsequent run ones in Albany and Troy, staged midnight shows on New Year's Eve.

Ed. Hochstim, salesman for First National in Albany, had an automobile accident in Hudson last week, and received a broken axle.

A Supreme Court action to foreclose a $33,000 third mortgage on the Liberty Theatre in Watertown was started last week by Carl A. Phillips against the Miraiste Theatre Corporation. Failure of the theatre corporation, controlled by Charles Sesonske, to pay the fall school taxes, imposed by the city, and amounting to about $1,000, provided the basis of the action.

Harry Ross, connected with the Schine house in Oneonta, was in Troy last week as guest of his parents.

There is a rumor to the effect that the Rose and Griswold Theatres in Troy are to be equipped for the Photophone.

Walter M. Powers and Lawrence J. Carkey, managers of the Avon and Olympic Theatres in Watertown, were presented with gifts from their employes last week at parties held in the respective theatres.

The theatrical bowling league in Troy will hold a banquet at Jack's Restaurant on the night of January 12.

Lew Fischer, owner of a theatre in Hoosick Falls, is facing rather stiff opposition these days in the way of a roller skating rink that has started up in the same block.

Irving Goldsmith, part owner of one of the motion picture theatres in Saratoga Springs, will devote more attention to his theatre as his term of office as Justice of the Supreme Court expired on New Year's Day.

Publix Gives Big Texas Promotions

JAMES O. CHERRY, managing director of the Publix Melba theatre, has been promoted to the position of district manager of Publix theatres in Texas and will have charge of the Palace and Melba theatres at Dallas, the Metropolitan and Kirby in Houston and Publix' four theatres in San Antonio. Two years ago Mr. Cherry was house manager of the Palace theatre here in Dallas and since that time he has advanced rapidly, due to his ability as a real showman. Mr. Cherry succeeded in putting the Melba theatre on a paying basis for the first time since it was constructed which was more than just good luck as former owners will testify. Mr. Cherry's office will be in the Palace theatre at Dallas, from which place he will direct the other theatres.

Barry Burke, former manager of the Palace theatre, Dallas and the Palace at Forth Worth and lately district manager for Publix theatres in Colorado, has been appointed divisional manager over Publix theatres in Colorado, Texas, Kansas City, and will supervise Publix' interest in the Saenger theatre at New Orleans. John J. Friedl, who up until this time has been divisional manager in this section for Publix, has been appointed manager of Publix' entire eastern division, and will assist in the operation of the Publix New York theatres.

Jean Finley, director of publicity for the Palace theatre, Dallas, has been transferred to the publicity department of the home office at New York. Mr. Finley is well versed in the technique of theatrical advertising and is backed by sound experience. Jack Williams, director of publicity for the Metropolitan theatre at Houston, will succeed Mr. Finley.

William McIlheran, father of Robert McIlheran, manager of the Universal Dallas Exchange, died at his home in Wichita Falls on last Tuesday. Mr. McIlheran, who was 78 years of age at the time of his death, was said to be one of the oldest motion picture theatre owners in Texas.

J. H. Landers, formerly with the Stanley-Crandall Circuit, at Washington, D. C., has been appointed manager of the Palace theatre Dallas, succeeding Emil Bernstecker, who has been transferred to the Metropolitan theatre at Houston. Mr. Landers entered the theatre profession as doorman of the Hawaii theatre at Honolulu in 1924. Later he became assistant manager and after returning to the states he entered the services of Balaban & Katz.

Four More Ohio Sound Theatres

THE DeForest Phonofilm had its first Cleveland demonstration on Christmas day at M. B. Horwitz' Plaza theatre. The Astor, another Horwitz house, opened with Phonofilm on New Year's day, and the Haltnorth follows with an early January installation.

Jess Fishman, authorized distributor of DeForest Phonofilm in this territory, announces that a DeForest installation has been ordered by Abe and Jules Schwartz for the Utopia theatre, Painesville.

M. C. Howard, special representative for Gotham, has left for a two weeks' trip to St. Louis, Kansas City, and Omaha, in the interest of Gotham pictures.

Fred Bartow has resigned as manager of Loew's State theatre. He is succeeded by Jack McBride.

Schine interests have purchased the Colonial theatre, Akron. This has always been a Feiber and Shea house, and the sale was unexpected. It is reported that L. B. Cool will continue as manager. Vitaphone is now being installed in the Colonial.

The local M-G-M exchange was crippled last week by six cases of the flu. None of them were serious, however.

Chester Loewe, manager of the Independent Pictures exchange in Cincinnati, spent Christmas in Cleveland with his folks.

Max Young is redecorating his McKinley theatre, Canton. New paint is being generously used both inside and outside, and new decorations have been ordered.

Mark Goldman, manager of the Cleveland Tiffany-Stahl exchange, has been very ill with a severe attack of influenza.

Warner Brothers are extending their offices in Cleveland. Additional space has been leased on the third floor of the Film Exchange Bldg. where discs and sound equipment will be handled.

Howard M. Mercy and Kenneth Dick, operating the Merick Amusement Company, have purchased the Opera House at Mineral City, formerly owned by J. Markley. Mercy and Dick have also taken over the Grand theatre, West LaFayette, which has been closed since last June.

Rev. Robert Cotton, of Minneapolis, father of Robert Cotton, former film exchange manager of Cleveland, died last week at the home of his daughter.

Postpone Opening New Fox St. Louis

THE formal opening of the new Fox Theatre, Grand and Washington Boulevards, St. Louis, Mo., originally set for Christmas Day, has been postponed indefinitely. It is probable a date in February will see the opening of the new house.

The postponement was made necessary because of the delay in the shipment of materials and also to the decision to revamp the big organ in the theatre auditorium.

Harry Greenman, who formerly managed Loew's State here, has been named manager of the new house.

James P. Brennan, for the past five years manager of the Grand Opera House, on December 24 relinquished that job. R. F. Quinby of Chicago is his successor.

Mr. Brennan is leaving the Radio-Keith-Orpheum Circuit. His resignation follows closely upon that of Everett Hayes, until recently manager of the St. Louis Theatre, rand and Delmar Boulevards, another of the Radio-Keith-Orpheum chain. Irvin J. Scully, publicity man for the Grand Opera House and the St. Louis, is also leaving the employ of the R-K-O chain.

St. Louis films stock closed December 22 as follows: Skouras A, $51 bid and $55 asked, and St. Louis Amusement A, $24 bid. A year ago Skouras A was $41 and St. Louis Amusement A $35.

Construction will be started soon on the theatre to be erected at 2141 North Market street, Wichita, Kans., by the Stockman-Hartman Theatre Company, 3700 East Douglas street, Wichita. The building will have a main floor and balcony and be 50 x 140 feet.

The Bird Construction Company has started the remodeling of the Grand Theatre, in Searcy, Ork. The front will be changed and the entire interior redecorated, new seats will be added and new dressing rooms installed.

The Olympia Theatre, 1420 Market street, St. Louis, Mo., where Spyros and Charley Skouras got their motion picture start back in 1914, must give way to modern progress and early next year the house will be torn down to make way for the municipal auditorium for which the people of St. Louis voted bonds a few years ago.

The Olympia Theatre is now the property of John Karzin. Originally the Skouras boys invested $6,000 for a half interest in the Olympia Theatre. Their partners were George and Gus Galanis, both of whom have passed on to the Great Beyond.

Barney Rosenthal, president of Columbia Pictures, spent the greater part of last week out in the territory.

Harry Hynes, of Universal Pictures, visited a number of towns along Illinois Highway No. 4.

Atlanta

ACCORDING to news reaching film row this past week, George Stonaras is taking over the Royal Theatre at Wauchula, Fla., which has been operated by N. W. Remond, who will continue to operate his Scenic Theatre at Lake Wales, Fla.

Mr. Stonaras had a house at Wauchula at one time, but disposed of his holdings about three years ago and went to Europe. Recently he took over the Franklin Theatre at Fort Valley, Ga., which, it is understood, he is giving up to operate the house at Wauchula.

M. G. Lee, who operates the Lee Theatre at Cuthbert, Ga., and the Lee Theatre at Eufaula, Ala., while in Atlanta, announced that, beginning December 31, he will take over the Royal Theatre at Dawson, Ga., the house which has been operated for some time by Byron Cooper.

Mr. Lee's new theatre at Cuthbert, which has a seating capacity of approximately 1,000, was opened October 25, last, and his new theatre at Eufaula, Ala., was opened some months ago.

H. P. Rhodes of the Vitaphone office in Atlanta, has returned to his desk after having been confined home on account of illness.

W. B. Fulton, division sales manager of Vitaphone Corporation, was in Atlanta after a visit to the company's branches at New Orleans and Dallas.

John W. Mangham, Jr., manager of Liberty - Specialty's Atlanta branch, left last Thursday for a trip in the Alabama territory.

Tom Colby, head of the Tiffany-Stahl branch in Atlanta, attended a convention in Chicago of the company's Eastern branch managers, which will take place December 28 and 29 at the Hotel Stevens.

Paul C. Bryan, head of Fox's Atlanta exchange, left early this week for New York for a sales conference at the home office.

W. W. Anderson, head of the Pathe exchange in Atlanta, visited Nashville, Tenn., recently.

Ben Y. Cammack, head of Universal's Atlanta branch, has been in New York.

Kentucky

The Fort Thomas Theatre at Fort Thomas, Ky.; the Wheelright at Wheelright, Ky., and the Weeksbury at Weeksbury, Ky., are closing as a result of the prevalence of flu at those places.

There is a new theatre at Prestonbury, Ky., the Princess, which is operating under management of Scott and Smiley.

Fred J. Dolle, president of the Fourth Avenue Amusement Company of Louisville, and Dennis Long, treasurer of the company, have just returned from New York, where they arranged for sound equipment for their three Indiana theatres at Lafayette, Marion and Logansport.

Roy Hargan, of the Masonic Theatre, Hodgenville, Ky., was a visitor to the local exchange last week.

A series of moving pictures were arranged for orphanages and other institutions in Louisville and Jefferson County during the Christmas holiday season. A. B. McCoy, manager of Keith's Majestic Theatre, arranged to furnish films, operators and other essentials for the presentation. Inmates of many of the homes were invited to Keith's Rialto on December 19, 20 and 29 by David E. Dow, manager of the theatre.

Tennessee

Through a new change of policy just announced by Publix Theatres Corporation, Keith vaudeville will make its bow in Chattanooga and Knoxville, Tenn., January 10. The Tennessee Theatre, Knoxville, and the Tivoli Theatre, Chattanooga, will become combination pictures - and - vaudeville houses, playing a straight picture program the first three days of each week and shifting to vaudeville and pictures the last three days.

Heretofore both houses have adhered to a picture policy supplemented by stage band shows. Under the new policy the stage bands will be eliminated but adequate pit orchestras will be retained.

When the new combination policy is inaugurated simultaneously in the two towns on January 10 four acts of Keith vaudeville will go into the Tennessee for a three-day run, and four other acts will be booked into the Tivoli for the same period.

Friends of H. M. Williams, salesman for Universal in the Tennessee territory, are sympathizing with him in the loss of his young son, Harold, who died this week after an illness covering several months. Interment was at Bristol, Tenn.

Florida

Yeggs, who have been active in Tampa during the holidays, and who succeeded in blowing several safes, made an attempt on the Victory strong box Christmas night. They first attempted to break into the stage entrance, but the heavy doors withstood their efforts. Then they tried the front doors leading into the auditorium, but were only successful in breaking off the moulding and scarring up the doors. Then they went after the iron grill in front of the box office door, bending some of the heavy metal bars, but failed to loosen the lock. As a final effort they started to saw away the bars around the lock and had cut one of the bars when they were either scared away or gave it up as a bad job.

The new Polk Theatre, Lakeland, opened last Saturday. As a Christmas gift to the children of the city, the management staged a free morning matinee at 10 A. M. The formal opening at night was a brilliant affair. Congressman Drane, City Manager Council and several other citizens appeared and delivered addresses. The Polk is equipped for Vitaphone and Movietone productions and is operated by the Publix Company.

The new Park theatre, at Westfield, one of Abe Spitz' theatres, has opened with William Harding as resident manager. It is equipped with Movietone and Vitaphone.

A theatre is to be erected at Hayes and Central streets, Natick, for the Harris Theatre Corp., N. G. Harris, president. Plans have been revised by Architect John E. Kelley, 38 Chauncey street, Boston.

Seattle Territory Sees Busy Trading

SEVERAL changes in ownership and management in this territory announced last week include sale of the Edgar Theatre, Edgar, Montana, to N. Jensen by Lawrence Byrd; purchase of the Rose Theatre at Glendive, Montana, by Jack Suckstorff, who in turn sold his Aristo Theatre at Winnett to W. F. Griebel; purchase of the Plains Theatre at Hot Springs, Montana, by the Simon Taylor circuit, and purchase of the Paradise Theatre at Kamas Prairie by Floyd Carter.

William Cutts, former manager of the Columbia Theatre here, is now entering the theatre field in Oregon. Under the name of William Cutts, Inc., he is planning a $150,000 theatre in The Dalles, Oregon.

B. Wallace Rucker, manager of the Educational Film Exchange, last week was reelected president of the Seattle Film Board of Trade, in appreciation of his good work for the organization during 1928. L. O. Lukan, manager of First National, will serve with Mr. Rucker as vice-president.

Sam Berkowitz, home office representative of Sonora-Bristolphone, has arrived in Seattle and has opened temporary quarters at 2330½ Second avenue.

Another "sound" office has been established at 2419½ Second avenue above the American Film Exchange. This is the Melophone Corporation's new address, where Bill Drummond and George Endert make their headquarters.

Jack Galt, advertising and publicity man from California, has arrived here to accept new duties with West Coast's Fifth Avenue and Coliseum Theatres. At the first-named house he succeeds Herb Polan, who left for Los Angeles last week.

Prominent figures in the film and theatre industry visited Seattle last week, conferring with Charles M. Thall of West Coast Theatres and Robert Blair of Publix. The visitors were Sam Dembow, president of the Paramount corporation; John Balaban of Chicago, vice-president of Publix; Herman Wobber, western division manager for Paramount, and Ralph E. Crabill, Pacific Coast manager for Publix Theatres.

House managers, cashiers, ushers, operators and maintenance men of each of the eleven theatres owned and operated by Universal in Seattle were guests at a midnight banquet staged last week by Karl L. Burk, general manager for "U" theatres in the Northwest. Ted Gamble, assistant to Mr. Burk, was chairman of the evening.

Mitchell Sutherland, former publicity and advertising man with West Coast Theatres in Seattle and Los Angeles, is now achieving new laurels by writing special continuities for radio broadcasting. He is associated with the American Broadcasting Company of this city, operating KJR in Seattle and affiliated with a chain of Coast stations.

John Hamrick, general manager of the Blue Mouse and Music Box circuits in the Northwest, has just moved into handsome new offices in his local Blue Mouse Theatre.

Change in Wesco Northwest Staff

RICHARD SPIER, for the past year in charge of the Portland division for West Coast Theatres, Inc., will leave shortly for an executive position in the William Fox organization in Los Angeles.

J. E. Mansfield, who has been in charge of the theatre operation department in the home office, will become Portland division manager for West Coast Theatres with headquarters in Portland.

The Portland Theatre was robbed of $491 at a late hour Christmas Eve. As the cashier was about to leave the cage with the heavy day's receipts she was confronted with a ruddy-faced young robber who demanded the sack of money. In his haste to get away the robber dropped a $100 bill and also overlooked another sack containing $4,000. This is the second robbery of this house in a year.

The Circle Theatre will augment its famous spinning "Globe of Light" with an additional monster electric sign with radial rays seven feet beyond the circumference of the present ball.

Joseph Sampietro, for several years director of the Columbia Theatre orchestra, has been named as musical director for radio station KFEC, Portland.

Mrs. Myrtle Buckmiller has purchased the interests of the Haselton Theatres, Inc., of Baker, Ore., consisting of the Clarick, Orpheum and Empire Theatres. She will be president of the company and also assume active management of the houses.

Stanley Opens New Enright in Pitts.

STANLEY COMPANY opened a new 3500-seat theatre, the Enright, in East Liberty, Pittsburgh, on December 28th. The theatre was named in honor of Thos. F. Enright, a citizen of Pittsburgh and the first Pennsylvanian to fall in the World War. As a consequence of this honor, the American Legion members assisted in the inaugural ceremonies at the theatre. James Balmer, formerly of the Stanley Grand, is manager of the Enright. Among the Stanley officials at the opening were: S. H. Fabian, M. A. Silver, A. Sablosky and Joseph Bernhardt.

A huge steel truss, weighing approximately 40 tons and calculated to support 600 tons, has been placed in the Harris Memorial Theatre being erected by the Harris Amusement Company at McKeesport. It is 90 feet long and 12 feet high.

James B. Clark, pioneer film and theatre man of Pittsburgh, was married in this city on December 27th to the former Alice Leech. The couple are now in New York preparatory to taking a wedding trip to Bermuda.

Our sympathies are extended to A. R. Cherry, city salesman for Columbia Film Service, in the loss of his mother, whose death occurred recently.

Pete Alderman, of the Pastime Theatre, Herron avenue, is once again a proud daddy. This time the newcomer is a girl, and there are now two boys and two girls in the Alderman household. Congratulations!

William Davis, manager of the Triangle, has recovered from a siege of the grip. Other sufferers who have recovered are: James H. Alexander, manager of Columbia Film Service; Ike Browarsky, manager, Hippodrome and Variety Theatres; Eddie Moriarity, M-G-M; Miss Catherine Bohn, Columbia Film Service.

Among the out-of-town exhibitors seen on film row last week were Carl Becker, Butler; Mike Manos, Greensburg; J. B. Kane, Pitcairn, and George Zeppos, Wheeling.

The various theatres owned by the Harris Amusement Company will celebrate their thirty-first anniversary of the company's founding by offering special bills during the month of January.

Harry Fry, shipper at Columbia Film Service, has our sympathy, having lost two members of his family the past week. Both his foster-father and his grandmother were called by death within a few hours of another.

Ira Cohen is the new Fox manager in Pittsburgh. Comes here from Cincinnati Fox office which he also managed. He succeeds William J. Kupper, who goes to New York for a promotion, the nature of which is not yet announced.

Two 'Frisco Film Promotions

FOUR and one-half years ago Allen Usher joined Paramount's forces as shipping clerk, and during that time was advanced from clerk to booker and from booker to salesman. In 1927 he was initiated to the Paramount "One Hundred Per Cent Club." Just recently he was transferred to the Salt Lake branch, where he will act as Paramount's Exchange manager for that territory.

A. J. Sullivan, formerly a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer salesman has now taken over the management of the Columbia office in Seattle, succeeding C. Beale.

The Lyceum theatre, at Fresno, for several years operated by Joe Kinnester, has been disposed of by him to J. M. Roka and associates, who will continue the picture policy as established by Kinnester.

George Chamberlain, who has been ill for some time, is back on the job again.

Newt Levy, who has been ill from an operation for appendicitis, is on the road to recovery and is expected back at work very soon.

A. Moussa has finished auditing books of the local Warner Brothers office.

Russell Enger and Jack Flannery, of United Artists, attended convention in Chicago.

Some of the out-of-town exhibitors seen along the row were Joe Rosenberg, of the Principal Theatres; Wm. Allen, of Tracy; and Everett Howell, of Porterville.

Lewis Cohn, of FBO's Advertising Department, has announced his engagement of Miss Yvonne Cohn.

Manager Fred Voight made a trip through the San Joaquin Valley recently.

Blaine Walker, Pacific Coast Editor of Fox News, visited the Fox Exchange after having made a trip North in the company of James Darst, who is National Editor of Fox News.

Lloyd Strehl, who is in charge of Kemp's Laboratory, has a new son. This is the second baby in the Strehl family.

W. J. Heineman is back on the job at Universal after having spent some time in a local hospital, following an operation for appendicitis.

E. E. Fulton Co. are installing all stage and booth equipment in the new Ellis J. Arkush theatre at Redwood City.

Rumored Warners Want Philly House

UNCONFIRMED rumors are current to the effect that Warner Brothers have offered Alexander R. Boyd, former vice-president of the Stanley Company of America, a quarter of a million profit for the new Boyd theatre opened on Christmas Day at 19th and Chestnut Sts., Philadelphia, only a few doors from the Stanley Company's Aldine Theatre. The Boyd has a seating capacity of 3,000, and is one of the finest theatres in the city. Interesting developments are expected within a very short time.

Jay Emanuel's Forum theatre at Frankford Ave. and Bridge St., Philadelphia, will be enlarged and beautified by the addition of a balcony to seat 750 persons, and two broad marble stairways leading from the lobby. Plans for the additions have been prepared by W. H. Lee, architect. The seating capacity will be increased to approximately 2,500 by the addition of the balcony.

According to present plans, the Stanley Company's new 5,000 seat Mastbaum theatre, at 20th and Market Sts., Philadelphia, will be opened early in February.

Edwin N. Johnson, owner of the $500,000 Keswick Theatre opened last week in Glenside, Pa., is adopting some good publicity methods to promote the interests of his new theatre. Mr. Johnson announced that his house was to be a community theatre and his first move was to turn the theatre over to the Glenside Kiwanis Club for two evenings. A community celebration known as the Kiwanis' Follies in which 100 prominent business men and residents of the community participated was given and resulted in a great deal of favorable publicity for the new house. Mr. Johnson has also launched a newspaper, the Greater Glenside Gazette, issued monthly, which will aid in promoting the interests of the Keswick. Another feature which it is believed will add materially to the success of the undertaking is the fact that there is free parking space for several hundred cars in the rear of the theatre.

Central Penn. Has Active Week

IT is reported in banking circles of Harrisburg that the Fox interests again are seeking a site for a theatre in the business center of the city. Owners of property near the northern end of Market Square, including the Bolton House, an old hotel covering a large plot, and adjoining properties, are said to have been asked to put prices on their holdings with a view to selling them to the theatrical concern. Prices have been given in a number of instances and the Fox people are said to have taken them under advisement. It is reported that the Bolton House is held at $700,000. Rumors of the intention of the Fox interests to erect a large theatre in the capital city of Pennsylvania have been rife for a number of years.

A number of theatres in the Central Pennsylvania district are reported recently to have contracted for the installation of Synchrophones. Among them are the Strand and Wilbur of Easton. A new sound device has been installed in the McTague Theatre, Coaldale. It was first used in connection with the presentation of "The Street Angel."

The Grand theatre, Norristown, owned by the Stanley Company of America, was menaced by flames which broke out near the heating apparatus in the basement early one morning recently. Judson Horner, an employee, was badly burned when he attempted to conquor the blaze single-handed, and received treatment in the Norristown Hospital. The local fire department saved the building from serious damage.

Announcement is made that the new theatre the Al Boyd interests will erect at Queen and Chestnut streets, Lancaster, will seat 3,000. Construction work will start in April. The theatre is being designed by the Hoffman-Henon Co., Philadelphia architects, and will cost $500,000.

Donald W. Ross, who, on December 24, succeeded John P. McCarthy as manager of Loew's Regent theatre, Harrisburg, when Mr. McCarthy was sent to manage a big Loew theatre in Syracuse, N. Y., came to Harrisburg direct from Loew's Midland, in Kansas City, Mo., where he was assistant manager.

Paul C. Bailey, formerly organist at the Hollywood theatre, Pottsville, is now director of the Wurlitzer School for Theatre Organists in Philadelphia.

Mrs. Dietrich Petrey has been selected to succeed Mrs. Marie Dietrich Leaser as treasurer of the Rialto theatre, Allentown.

The Victor Theatre, Pottstown, formerly known as the Grand Opera House, was recently reopened after an expenditure of $30,000 on improvements. The house is controlled by the Pottstown Theatres, Inc., of which John H. Snyder, of Reading, is president. New seats, lighting fixtures, stage scenery and switchboards have been installed and auditorium has been revamped.

New Keith-Albee Palace Theatre, Rochester, Has Gala Opening

THE Palace, new Keith-Albee 3,000-seat theatre in Rochester, N. Y., began functioning for the first time on Christmas Day before a capacity audience. The theatre is luxuriously equipped for the comfort of patrons.

The Grand foyer is shaped like an "L" with the shorter end adjoining the ticket lobby and the longer end leading to the street. The design is 18th Century. Gold satin brocade panels are outlined and low-relief decorations in ivory, gold and silver bedeck the walls and heavy gold draperies are suspended over the lounge rooms. From the ceiling hang four large crystal chandeliers with smaller torchiers along the walls. A feature of interest in the foyer are paintings from the collection of Edward F. Albee and the Japanese and French ceramic vases which are placed in positions calculated to catch and please the eye.

The women's lounge is done in French 18th Century period. The walls are of blue and gold satin and are equipped with gilt chairs. A fireplace and a piano lend an added charm to the room. Mirrored walls, panels of lavender and gray brocade, and French chairs are to be found in the cosmetic rooms. The French style has also been adopted for the appearance of the smoking room and the women's room on the mezzanine promenade.

The men's lounge is paneled in walnut and has furniture of overstuffed brown leather. An Italian marble fireplace decorates the room.

Across the stage of the theatre swings a cerese curtain which is reflected by the hangings draping the entrances to the boxes, the rail curtains and the wall brocade panels. Two draped arches on either side of the auditorium and a recessed arch above the stage relieve the wall lines also broken by the boxes. The orchestra pit can be raised or lowered at will. The stage is 100 feet wide and 30 feet deep.

Netoco Reopens Revamped Globe Theatre in Boston

THE Globe Theatre, on Washington above Beach Streets, Boston, was reopened last week to the public. The Netoco house was entirely renovated both within and without; its new fixtures, hangings and lighting effects and sound film equipment were a matter of intense interest to the throngs of fans who entered the playhouse.

Crimson, blue and gold predominate in the color scheme of the house. A striking effect is achieved with the wall covering which runs throughout the orchestra, along the stairways and corridors and which presents a mingling of colors: figured damask in crimson, blue and gold. The main lobby, done over in white and gold, has the same wall covering as the orchestra and is lit by elaborate crystal chandeliers, many of which are scattered throughout the theatre's interior. A huge ball of lights forms the main chandelier.

The auditorium section consists of an orchestra, mezzanine and balcony. The wall covering above the orchestra consists of a rough gray plaster, interspersed with white lines simulating the mortar of masonry and producing an effect of great walls of stone. A glow of mulberry lights soften the walls. The perpendicular section of the auditorium carries out the same effect, with crimson draperies hanging down from the sides. Forest scenes are depicted high on the walls.

The ceiling, also included in the renovation, now has gold predominating in the color scheme. The tiers of boxes, the lower part of the mezzanine, have also been gone over.

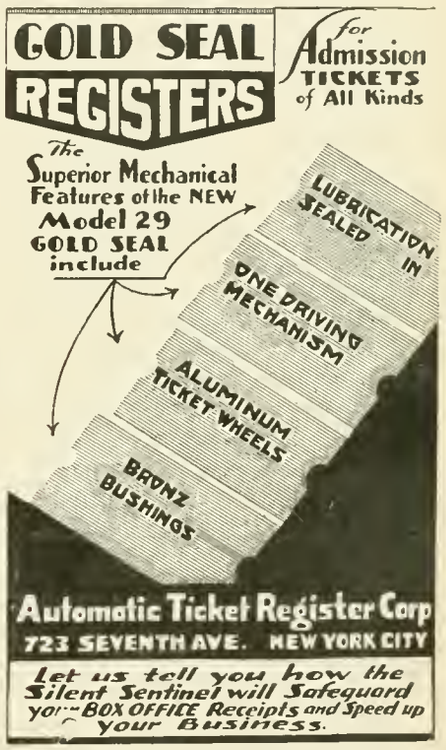
Outside the building, a new sign in yellow, red and green lights, has been erected, as well as a newly lighted canopy. The retiring rooms have been elaborately refitted. The staff of the house has also been equipped with new uniforms.

Stanley to Erect Theatre On Site of Pa. Church

A $1,500,000 theatre with a seating capacity of 4,000 will be constructed by the Stanley Company of America on the site of the Reformed Episcopal Church of the Atonement, a landmark in Germantown, Pa. The church property is located at Wayne and Chelton Avenues and has a frontage of 158 and 166 feet on the respective avenues. The Stanley Company acquired the property through Mastbaum Brothers and Fleischer, as well as the adjoining property at 165 West Chelton Avenue, frontage 30 feet and depth 158 feet.

Plans for the theatre will be prepared by a New York architect and work on the construction of the house will be begun soon.

$125,000 Theatre Building for Oregon Town



Plans for a $125,000 two-story theatre building, which will be leased to G. E. Mathews, manager and part owner of the Empress Theatre in the town, have been made public in The Dallas, Oregon. The new theatre, it is reported, will be equipped with the latest sound pictures equipment. The Moorish type of architecture is to be followed. The theatre will seat 800. A large marquee will encircle the main entrance.

Universal Finishes Coast Building Program

The first stage of extensive building program, inaugurated during the beginning of 1928, has finally reached conclusion at Universal City and the large Universal picture plant there has undergone complete renovation. As a result, the studio is much larger in properties.

Innovations at the studio include: three new sound proof stages; a new automobile entrance; an enlarged electrical department; a new lumber mill; newly macadamized roads; a drainage channel; three newly rebuilt office buildings; six new projection rooms; newly erected bill-boards equipped with colored lights; new coat of paint for the entire studio; sprinkler systems for the nine stages; a central oil burning heating plant; additional wardrobe space; increased laboratory space.

Building and improving activities will be continued during 1929, Walter Stern, business manager, stated.

The Authoritative Who's Who of Filmdom

In the "Talkies" too

The fidelity of sound reproduction with motion pictures is affected by every variation in the film — be it ever so slight.

That is why, in the "Talkies" too, Eastman film excels. The great quantities in which it is produced, the strict supervision constantly exercised — the resulting uniformity from roll to roll, day to day, year to year — these factors of Eastman film manufacture are of first importance to the newest development of the art.

"THE SHOPWORN ANGEL"

smashes records in same week at Paramount, New York* and Paramount, Brooklyn!

Former record $81,000* Former record $59,000*

When the tough New York critics rave like this, it means plenty!

"'The Shopworn Angel' is thoroughly charming and engaging. So delightful in story, action, direction and titling that it is assuredly THE MOST LIKABLE AND GENUINELY HEART-WARMING PHOTOPLAY TO ARRIVE HERE IN MANY WEEKS. Nancy Carroll has never been as good as she is in the role of the chorus girl. Gary Cooper is engaging, ingenuous. Paul Lukas is, as ever, exceptionally good."—New York Herald Tribune

"Delightful, convincing, human, beautifully acted. Nancy Carroll plays her role magnificently. Gary Cooper will amaze fans. He gives a great performance."—New York Daily Mirror

"THEY DON'T COME MUCH MORE ENTERTAINING THAN 'THE SHOPWORN ANGEL.' Has every ingredient necessary to success."—New York Daily News

"Nancy Carroll looks pretty enough to be in the front row of any show, in fact right out in front. 'The Shopworn Angel' is ably done and wonderfully free of hokum."—New York World.

"Neat, ingratiating. Charming Nancy Carroll is excellent. ONE OF THE BEST THINGS I HAVE SEEN AT THE PARAMOUNT THIS SEASON."—New York Telegram.

"An amusing film handled well. Paul Lukas is excellent. Nancy Carroll again proves she has make-up of a real comedienne. Gary Cooper puts over a convincing characterization."—New York Evening Journal.

"Nancy Carroll and Gary Cooper give expert and charming performances in 'The Shopworn Angel.' Richard Wallace has turned out a thoroughly fresh and fascinating film."—New York Sun.

"Entertaining, packed with audience appeal. SO WELL HANDLED THAT IT GOES DOWN AS ADDITION TO SEASON'S GOOD PICTURES."—New York Daily Graphic.

The Greatest Era

But the Difficulties Ahead Equal the Possibilities

By William A. Johnston

GEORGE M. COHAN, after viewing a dialogue picture, said in his terse way; "What are they trying to do? Bring the picture back to the four walls of the stage? I thought that was what they were trying to get away from."

And after seeing a rounded number of the Broadway talkies he said: "Well, maybe it's the thing. I'm open to argument. But they've got a long way to go."

In view of the fact that the Broadway legitimate season this year is about the worst in history and that, generally speaking, Broadway legitimate producers have proven anything but clever forecasters of the popular trend of amusement, still most anyone will listen cannily to George Cohan's views in the show business.

We might add that Mr. Cohan paid a very high compliment to the development of motion picture technique.

So much, at any rate, for a Broadway opinion, and from the best source obtainable.

Here is another from the sticks, from an exhibitor, Allen Johnson, operating a string of Michigan theatres. He says:

"A Solution At Last!

"Your editorial in the December 29th issue of the Motion Picture News offers, in my humble opinion, the nucleus of a solution to the talker, sound, synchronized picture problem.

"In their hectic efforts to supply the public with 'all talkers,' the producers apparently have thrown to the four winds all the advantage which the picture had over the stage. The public came, they saw, and were thrilled by the novelty, but will not be satisfied with the all dialogue picture as regular fare.

"The time may come, and I predict that it will come, when sweep of action, color, realism, etc., can be had with dialogue and all the naturalness of reality. I predict further the enlargement of the screen to the size of the proscenium with figures entering lifelike upon the screen with sound and dialogue following the character to the various positions on the screen. But can we hope to accomplish all this overnight? No. Nor is the public so impatient as to expect it. But they will take it to their hearts when it comes, if their interest is not dispelled by rank imitations and cheap attempts.

"The sensible course to pursue is that laid down in one paragraph of your editorial referred to which amounts to more and rings more nearly true than all the reams and reams of predictions, advice and admonitions I have read on the subject. The nucleus of a solution to the problem is in that paragraph reading as follows:

" 'Obviously, the thing to do is to build sound (and eventually dialogue) into pictures, not pictures into sound (and dialogue). Then we will hold fast to all the picture has accomplished and add to its expression and its audience.' "

We agree with Mr. Johnson that the possible future of the motion picture screen—with animation, sound, color, third dimension, television, screen magnification, transcends the imagination today.

The motion picture is just entering its greatest era of entertainment.

But the difficulties ahead are quite as great as the possibilities.

Surefootedness is the one slogan of true progress.

Let the laboratories flank the studios but not overwhelm them.

Whatever the form of the show you have got to have a story.

And the motion picture, let us never forget, more than sound, color, or any other contribution to realism and dramatic effect, remains, in its universal and understandable language, its sweep and vividness of appeal, the world's greatest medium of expression.

Speaking Editorially

Something for American Producers and Exhibitors to Watch

JANUARY 15 brings an event of real significance and one that may explode several ideas.

An organized, well-planned entry into the American distributing market by European producers begins then through World Wide Pictures, Inc.

The advance work is being capably done with an adroit blending of showmanship and dignity by J. D. Williams and A. S. Aronson, and their able lieutenants, Joseph Skirboll and C. L. Yearsley.

The campaign is impressive. The series of postcards being mailed to exhibitors throughout the country, the calendar with its practical encouragement to daily usage, the trade paper inserts, the personnel of the field force, all combine to give a definite impression that there will be quality entertainment to support World Wide's claims to American exhibitors.

With that support forthcoming from World Wide's producers, it will be an epochal event for American exhibitors and for American producers.

The American box-office needs more—many more—productions that compel the S.R.O. sign. Where "money pictures" are made, so long as they are made, is of no consequence to exhibitors or the public.

If some—or many—are made abroad, that fact will sharpen wits and creative faculties in Hollywood and New York.

The best contest always is between two opponents equal in skill.

World Wide's advance campaign promises much of great interest and significance to every American exhibitor, whether he is the head of a great chain of theatres or an independent trying daily to fill 300 seats with patrons seeking entertainment.

If World Wide's producers are creating real entertainment, they deserve and will get a generous revenue from American theatres.

American exhibitors cannot be kept away from a "hit." Block booking commitments are evaded in the rush for early dates on a "sell out."

This has been as true of imported pictures as it has been of American product.

It will continue to be true just as often as a production of real entertainment content is marketed.

You can't keep a good picture down. Nationality, parentage, mean nothing. Its character of entertainment is all that matters.

Every American exhibitor should investigate the box-office value to him of the imported pictures World Wide is offering. Every American producer should see them.

These pictures may offer much for the box-office in unusual entertainment values, new exterior settings, new faces, new technique and, we sincerely hope, new record grosses.

It remains for the producers abroad who are releasing in America through World Wide Pictures to make good the quality of entertainment and promise of box-office performance so clearly implied in the selling and advertising campaign now at its height.

That is the only real question and problem between World Wide Pictures and an eminent success.

The Industry's Robots

ROBOTS, machine-made humans, are too numerous in the business of exhibiting motion pictures.

They are the managers of certain of the chain theatres.

They were born as human beings, with more than a normal amount of initiative, creative ability and resourcefulness. Theatre management appealed to them as an outlet for these abilities known in the vernacular as Showmanship.

But the guiding minds of some chains have tried to improve on nature.

They have substituted rubber stamps for initiative, multigraphed forms for creative ability, numerous standardized rules for independent thinking, and disciplinary measures equal to army regulations in their severity for violations.

This standardized direction of chain theatres is murderous to the thing that formerly meant so much to first class houses—the right of a manager to think and act for himself to a reasonable degree.

There will be surprising increases in the gross business of many chain theatres when the house managers are permitted to reasonably exercise their natural abilities without fear of dismissal for violating some of the long list of "don'ts" that now make them Robots.

Pathe Fights Dialogue Censorship; Big Newspapers Aroused to Menace

FREE SPEECH THE ISSUE

Temporary Injunction Against N. Y. Board Secured, As Film World Awaits Final Outcome

PATHE'S fight to preserve the constitutional right of free speech was this week presented to America's most prominent publishers and editors by MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

A telegram was sent to newspaper and magazine owners in which MOTION PICTURE NEWS explained the great issue involved by Pathe's aggressive defense of free speech on the screen, sharply and dangerously challenged by the New York State Censorship Board in attempting to censor the dialogue in the picture "Sal of Singapore."

Pathe has launched the fight on behalf of the whole industry. It carries far greater significance than is immediately apparent. It concerns the whole question of constitutional free speech, and the danger has been immediately recognized by a number of leading publishers and editors in wires and letters to MOTION PICTURE NEWS, These appear elsewhere on this page

Other publishers have thus far failed to respond, probably feeling that they might be drawn into a publicity stunt. Publicity is the least consideration in this serious situation, and this will become alarmingly apparent as other publishers and editors realize that the issue may finally threaten their rights of free speech.

Pathe's fight is on against the New York State Censor Board as applied to talking pictures and all picturedom is awaiting the result. The film company has been granted a temporary injunction restraining the board from invalidating or revoking licenses for the picture "Sal of Singapore," released January 4, and which in its silent version was passed by the board without deletion.

Pathe has applied to make the injunction permanent and upon the result of this action or decisions by the Court of Appeals hinges censorship of the talkies in this state. The hearing was to have been held on January 7th, but on application of the Attorney General's office a postponement was had until January 16th.

Vigorous denunciation of censorship of talking pictures is expressed in the following letter from H. L. Mencken, Editor of The American Mercury:

"Dear Mr. Johnston:—I hope you are able to head off the censorship of talkies. If it is tolerated it will be followed soon or late by a complete censorship, carried out by fools and dominated by fanatics. It seems to me to be clearly unconstitutional. The State has a plain right to prosecute anyone guilty of public indecency, but if the Bill of Rights means anything it certainly has no right to punish before the act.

Sincerely yours,"

(Signed) H. L. Mencken.

Chandler Says Screen Entitled To Free Speech

Pulitzer Agrees Censorship Involves Bureaucratic Power

Telegraphing to MOTION PICTURE NEWS on January 8, Harry Chandler, publisher of The Los Angeles Times, made the following comment on the freedom of screen speech:

"If the authors of the Constitution of the United States had foreseen the day of the motion picture or its newer outgrowth, the talking picture, they would have granted to them the same freedom of expression that they did to the orator and the press.

"Freedom of speech is one of our highest ideals and every farseeing, patriotic American and lover of liberty should be constantly on guard. The screen and the newly acquired Voice of the Screen are entitled to the same privileges and should have the same guarantees."

Joseph Pulitzer, publisher of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, commenting on the Pathe fight on the New York State Censor Board, made the following comment exclusively to MOTION PICTURE NEWS:

"I am opposed to censorship on the ground that it involves bureaucratic power that is likely even with the best intentions to be misapplied and abused and thus lead to a greater evil—the suppression of freedom of thought—than the evil, usually obscure, that censorship is intended to destroy."

Calvert Flays Censorship As Not American

Oregonian Editor Declares It Expansion of Odious Bureaucracy System

At the request of MOTION PICTURE NEWS, R. G. Calvert, Editor of the Portland Oregonian, has given expression to his views on the attempted censorship of screen speech. He condemns it in vigorous language.

"Censorship of talking pictures bodes no good for the constitutional rights of free speech and constitutes another attempt to expand an odious system of bureaucracy. Every needful purpose is adequately served by existing legal machinery.

"Censorship is essentially un-American in petty annoyances, official nagging and eliminations on trifling and unsatisfactory grounds of features necessary to the continuity on which the public ought to be permitted to pass judgment itself.

"If this movement is designed to uplift motion picturedom it goes at the task the wrong way and will defeat its own purpose. A better and more far-reaching way is accessible under present statutes to achieve permanent reform. If it can be shown dialogue is vulgar suppress the film in its entirety.

"Censorship is essentially un-American in principle, obnoxious in practice and capable of abuses which public opinion will not perpetually tolerate because it embodies a denial of a fundamental right."

Roy W. Howard, Scripps-Howard Newspapers

Following is a statement by Mr. Howard to Motion Picture News, which later appeared as an editorial in The New York Evening Telegram: "In a recent editorial we spoke of 'legislative momentum' as demonstrated by prohibition; legislative momentum being the unforeseen by-product that develops from law—as prohibition, designed to stop drinking, didn't do it, but did a lot of other things; or as the dole system in England, designed to decrease poverty, made paupers.

"Another most interesting example is now parading itself in the public prints—censorship as it applies to the talkies.

"Censorship of motion pictures was established by statute.

"But the statute didn't include any spoken version that might go along with the pictured story.

"Then came an invention, and with the movie was synchronized the human voice, mechanically reproduced.

"Bureaucracy's inevitable tendency is to expand its authority. So it is no more than natural that the censors are now fighting to make their supervision include the voice as well as the picture.

"Which raises the old constitutional issue of free speech in a new way, mechanically relayed speech in this case—and also shows another striking demonstration of legislative momentum."

Arthur Brisbane, Hearst Newspapers

In a telegram to William A. Johnston, Mr. Brisbane said: "I see no difference between talking actors and talking pictures. One should have the same rights as the other. Both should have freedom of speech, being held responsible, however, for any violation of law or decency."

Battle for Free Speech on Screen

The injunction against James Wingate, Director of the Motion Picture Division of the New York State Education Department, and the Commissioner of Education, was secured on Thursday, January 3rd, by Coudert Brothers, Attorneys for Pathe Exchange, Inc., in the Supreme Court, Special Term, Part II.

Pathe states that on October 11th application was made to the Director of the Motion Picture Division for Licenses to exhibit one original and four duplicate prints of "Sal of Singapore." This silent version was reviewed and upon receiving a rating of 100 per cent, was licensed by the Censor Board. Subsequently, dialogue sequences and musical synchronization were recorded. The making of the sound recordings did not involve any change of the pictorial matter embraced in the film, as licensed by the New York Censor Board.

Turn Down Sound Version

On November 2nd, Pathe made application for additional licenses for six duplicates of "Sal of Singapore." The sounds, music and words recorded were not submitted, as there is nothing in the law, by inference or suggestion as to the censorship of speech. The requested licenses were issued with the following words stamped upon their face: "This license is invalid when the film or any part thereof is used in conjunction with mechanical devices for the reproduction of sound or by the use of persons for the utterance of language."

Pathe directed the attention of James Wingate, on December 12th, to the fact that there is nothing in the law empowering him, or the Motion Picture Division of the State Education Department, to issue limited or restricted licenses for the exhibition of any films; that the obligation to issue unrestricted licenses for all films except those found to be obscene, indecent, immoral, inhuman, sacriligious or of a character tending to corrupt morals or incite to crime was mandatory.

It is Pathe's contention that the issuance of a license that will become invalid, not because of any pictorial matter contained in the motion picture film itself, but because the film or a part of it is used in conjunction with mechanical devices for the reproduction of sound, is unsound in law and is an arbitrary assumption of power by the Director of the Motion Picture Division of the State Education Department which is utterly invalid.

In the application for the injunction Pathe further calls attention to the fact that the Director of the Motion Picture Division has no legislative powers and cannot change the law and that he has no powers other than those expressly given to him under the law.

The Director of the Motion Picture Division of the State Education Department has advised Pathe that if it exhibits "Sal of Singapore" under the licenses issued, with mechanical devices for the reproduction of sound and by the use of persons for the utterance of language, it will become his duty to set in motion actions for the enforcement of the law which will include the revocation of the licenses and the persecution of the offenders in the Criminal Courts.

Absurdity of Ruling

Lewis Innerarity, Secretary of Pathe, emphasized the absurdity of this latest New York Censor Board ruling by showing that under the restricted and limited licenses being issued by the Motion Picture Division, State Education Department, in violation of law, it would not be possible for Mr. Martin Johnson, the celebrated explorer, or Mr. Burton Holmes, the celebrated lecturer, or Commander Richard E. Byrd, to appear before an audience in the State of New York in conjunction with pictures of their travels and utter any words or language in conjunction with the exhibition of the films without invalidating the licenses issued for the exhibition of such films."

Warners Deny Interest in New Disc Equipment

Say They Know Nothing of Disc Device to Be Made by Placent Company

The Placent Electrical Corporation is the latest in the field to manufacture a synchronous disc reproducer. According to stories printed in the daily trade press the project was reported being financed by Warner Bros., but this statement was denied without reservations by Albert Warner, who declared that his company had not even heard of the device.

It is said that the Placent company will market the device for $3,000 or even as low as $2,500. The equipment is to be manufactured by Seymour Products Company at Seymour, Conn. The latter is a subsidiary to the Placent Electrical Corporation, manufacturers of radios.

H. W. Davis is sales manager for Seymour Products. He admits the facts concerning the price and the equipment, but refused to verify the report that Warners were involved in the manufacturing deal.

George Quigley, vice-president of Vitaphone, added his denial to that of Warners that they were not directly nor indirectly interested in the new equipment. Mr. Quigley said that his company might service the new equipment when it reaches the market providing it comes up to the standard of quality demanded under the conditions of the contract with Western Electric Company.

Continued rumors persist of a cheaper disc device to be projected by Warners but each in turn is emphatically denied by the company. At the same time those supposed to be in the know insist that Warners are preparing to announce such equipment and that it will be ready for marketing within the next few months.

Irving Goldsmith Joins New York Law Firm

Irving I. Goldsmith, part owner of the Palace Theatre at Saratoga Springs, and a former Justice of the Supreme Court, has become associated with the law firm of Harden, Hess, Eder and Freschi in New York City. His term as Justice ended January 1st.

Mr. Goldsmith will retain his interest in the Palace at Saratoga Springs and will devote a portion of his practice to the affairs of the motion picture industry.

New Companies Chartered for Film Business

Newly incorporated N. Y. film companies receiving charters from the Department of State during the past week, included the following: Craftsmen Studios, Inc., $10,000, Marion Block, Celia Rubin, Samuel Rosenblatt, New York City; Good Amusement Corporation, capitalization not specified, M. J. Siegel, S. Cantor, H. Greenhouse, New York City; Cinesonore Company, Inc., $50,000, Herman S. Heller, Irene Heller, S. M. Livingston, New York City.

Wall Street Ban on Publicity For Big Film Corp. Executives

Bank Interests Now Guarding Against Stock Reaction In Event Personalities Meet Mishap

Wall Street has decreed that personal publicity of film company executives is all wrong. Institutions and not personalities are the points on which publicity should be focused and to that end they have laid down the law in several directions regarding the printing of personal photographs of the heads of various organizations. The reason behind this move is that the banking interests figure that with the public holding the stock of the various big picture producing companies and theatre operating chains, the status of these securities should not be endangered by their being linked with any one personality who might at any minute become ill or pass away and thus affect the market value of the shares.

This policy has been in vogue for more than a year in at least two of the larger companies. They are Paramount Famous Lasky and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Within the last few months the same attitude has also become true in the case of the Fox organization.

A Retiring Attitude

Those who keep in constant touch with the activities in film circles have noted that Adolph Zukor, president of Paramount-Famous-Lasky, who at no time in his film career was any too anxious to be quoted or to have his likeness blazoned forth in the trade, fan and daily papers, assumed even a more retiring attitude. The same is likewise true of S. R. Kent, general manager of the corporation. In fact, the only name that occasionally crops up in connection with Paramount is that of Jesse L. Lasky, vice president of the company in charge of production. The reason for this is that Mr. Lasky has to deal largely with personalities and therefore it is necessary for him to be a personality in himself so that he can dominate a situation when that becomes a necessity.

Since the death of the late Marcus Loew there has been considerable curtailment in the amount of publicity that has been given to both Louis B. Mayer and Irving Thalberg who are the production executives for the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer organization. Heretofore hardly a day passed without the publicity representative for one or the other of these men not issuing some sort of a statement.

Several months ago, the Fox organization also started in on a campaign to stress

Publix Denies Report of Huge Expansion

THE report printed this week in one of the trade publications to the effect that Publix was to invade 40 cities in the Middle West and South in a wholesale theatre building campaign was denied in toto by Sam Dembow, vice-president of the corporation. He stated that the South was well covered at this time with theatres either owned by Publix or operated by them in conjunction with their associates. As to the Middle West, there was no concerted plan laid out by the organization to invade that territory.

Within the next few weeks Publix will open a theatre in Toledo and a number of executives will go West to attend that event. From time to time Publix will expand, building a theatre here and there in various locations all over the country.

Victor Merger Ratified, Adds Strength to RCA

Powerful Organization Gains Noted Artists for Sound Films and Vaudeville

The long awaited and recently announced merger of Victor Talking Machine Company and Radio Corporation of America was ratified last Friday when the directors of RCA voted to absorb the talking machine company through an exchange of stock.

The move is of tremendous importance in the entertainment field and adds materially to the strength of the already powerful Radio-Keith-Orpheum and the RCA Photophone. It will make all Victor artists available for service to Photophone and will be a tremendous factor in strengthening the popularity of vaudeville houses controlled by RCA.

By the terms of the merger one share of new common and one share of new preferred stock of RCA and $5 in cash will be exchanged for each share of Victor common. RCA stock will be split five for one and a new issue of five per cent preferred will be floated. At the present time RCA has 1,155,400 shares of common.

A joint statement issued by the two companies said that both classes of preferred stock of Victor Talking Machine Company are to be retired. The outstanding $19,561,000 of seven per cent prior preference shares, according to the statement, will be called for redemption at $115 a share.

Nearly all of the $6 convertible preferred already have been retired through exchange into common, it was stated, and it is planned that the remainder will be converted prior to the operation of the plan of consolidation. If this stock is not converted it will be called for redemption at $110 a share.

G. E. Official On Coast for New Merger?

It's All a Mystery, But Bank President Sees Possible Gigantic Deal

Hollywood, Jan. 10.—Is there a big deal on involving millions, which would result in some sort of a General Motors plan for the picture industry. Hollywood is wondering, but so far it's all a mystery.

The "General Motors" story got new impetus this week, however, with the report that a vice-president of General Electric has been out here for a week working on arrangements for a big picture deal in which his company would be a part.

A bank president in Los Angeles commented on the presence of the vice president and remarked that the deal must be of huge proportions, as the regular General Electric representatives on the Coast have put over many deals in Southern California, likewise involving millions, without the necessity of a vice president making the trip.

The presence of the vice president, as reported, started talk that General Electric may be concerned in "the big deal." as Hollywood calls it. Which might mean, observers said, that RCA would be in it on some basis.

The mystery is heightened by the angle that any such gigantic merger could just as well, or better, be consummated in New York, where the film executives are. Unless, of course, as Hollywood wiseacres say, the vice president is out here on a survey of studio properties as preliminary to final negotiations in New York.

It's all a mystery but this much is a fact: the report that the industry is to be "generalmotored" is persistent and crops out from some new angle every few days.

Paramount Buys "Woman Who Needed Killing"

Paramount has purchased the motion picture rights to "A Woman Who Needed Killing," by Margery H. Lawrence. The story will be filmed at the west coast studios of the company as a 100 per cent dialogue picture.

Baclanova, the Russian artist will have the title role, with Clive Brook playing opposite her. Neil Hamilton will also be seen in an important role. Rowland V. Lee will direct. John Farrow of the studio writing staff has started work on the adaptation and preparation of the dialogue.

Montreal's Amusement Toll Jumped $138,000 in 1928

The amusement tax collected in the City of Montreal, Quebec, Canada, during 1928 totaled $1,000,827, or $138,000 more than the previous year, according to the report of the tax collection department. As the tax is 10 per cent, total amount expended on amusement during the year in Montreal was approximatel $10,000,000.

Fox May Launch Tex. Theatre Program

TEXAS will very likely be a battle ground between the theatre interests of William Fox, Publix and others. Publix and its allied circuits are planning to construct theatres in the state while the Fox invasion of the same territory is said to rely on the result of a survey made recently in the southern portion of the state by Eddie Grainger. The report he submitted to Fox was that the field was a fertile one for theatre expansion, it is said.

International Remaining with U. to End of 1929

Contract for Distribution of Hearst News Reel Runs for This Entire Year

The Hearst International News Reel will be distributed by Universal until the end of this year, all other reports to the contrary notwithstanding. The existing contract between the Hearst interests and Universal calls for the latter organization to handle the distribution of International News until December, 1929. In the meantime it is said that Universal is preparing an organization which will place its own news reel in the field when the Hearst contract expires.

E. B. Hatrick, the executive in charge of the Hearst news reel activities and other motion picture ventures, stated this week that as far as he knew Universal would continue to distribute the International News for the duration of the existing contract. No changes of any kind were contemplated either by his organization or by Universal as far as he knew.

At Universal's home offices in New York no information could be obtained relative to a proposal on the part of that organization to issue its own news reel.

The fact, however, that the Hearst organization is the one that is furnishing the pictorial material for the M-G-M News and virtually is a competitor to its own International News which Universal distributes may be responsible for Universal deciding that when the contract is fulfilled they will enter the news reel field on their own.

INTERCHANGEABILITY became known to exhibitors as a fact exclusively through Motion Picture News. It was first to point out the actual meaning to exhibitors of the statement made by J. E. Otterson of Electrical Research Products, Inc.

Report Universal Seeks to Be Rid of Colony Lease

Said to Have Approached Moss But Latter Refused to Take House Back

Universal would like to unload their lease on the Colony theatre which they are operating at present. They have had the house for a little more than two years and have been utilizing it to exploit their own pictures on Broadway. In all the operation has not been a successful one and the Universal executives would be just as pleased if B. S. Moss, who originally built the house and from whom they have it under lease would take back the property.

It is understood that they have approached Moss with a proposal that he relieve them of their lease before he sailed for Europe recently. Moss, however, said that he was perfectly satisfied with the manner in which the deal was working from his view point and refused to take the house back.

At present U. is utilizing the house for the presentation of their talking features and thus far have presented there "Lonesome," "Give and Take" and "The Last Warning." But they do not want to use the house for the screen version of "The Show Boat" as they feel that that picture would fare better if it were placed in a house further down on Broadway.

Roadshowing of Talkfilms Out of St. Louis Planned

The roadshowing of motion pictures with sound and dialogue out of St. Louis is now being planned by several Illinois business men and those interested in the project are completing their financial arrangements. It is not certain as yet how many shows will travel out of the city, but their number will depend entirely on the success of the initial ventures.

Ziegfeld Tries to Purchase Barthelmess' Contract

New York's dailies this week all carried stories to the effect that Florenz Ziegfeld had endeavored to purchase the release of Richard Barthelmess from the contract First National has with the star. The theatrical producer, it was said, was desirous of procuring Barthelmess to co-star him in his musical stage version of "East Is West."

Fitzmaurice to Make 5 Films for U. A. in Two Years

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, Jan. 10.—George Fitzmaurice has signed with United Artists on a two-year contract. It is understood that he will get $75,000 per production and will make five pictures during his term. Fitzmaurice is still at First National winding up production on "The Man and the Moment."

Franklin Says Action on Liberty Lease Is Unfair

Theatre Chief Declares Suit Is Flareback Against Plaintiffs

Harold B. Franklin, president of Pacific Northwest Theatres and West Coast Theatres, has issued a statement regarding legislation now pending and also threatened by Jensen and von Herberg against the companies Franklin represents. He charges that an action now pending for rent against the Liberty Theatre Company for a lease on the Liberty Theatre in Seattle is in no way justified against Pacific Northwest Theatres as the latter company owns no part of it. He further alleges that the Liberty Theatre Company was originally organized by Jensen and von Herberg and not furnished with sufficient assets, as a result of which the present trouble arose.

The Franklin statement follows:

"This is a pieayunish attempt upon the part of Jensen & von Herberg interests to foree a settlement of an action now pending against the Liberty Theatre Company for rent, based upon a lease of the Liberty Theatre in Seattle.

"It is interesting to note that the Liberty Theatre Company was organized by the Jensen & von Herberg interests. They find themselves in the position of being limited to redress under a lease of the theatre to a eorporation which they themselves organized and controlled. It is this company that they are suing and because the company never was furnished with sufficient assets, they are endeavoring to bring into litigation Pacific Northwest Theatres and other companies under the claim that that company or some other company under some alleged arrangement assumes the obligation of the lease.

"The fact is that no company ever assumed any obligation of the Liberty Theatre Company. They themselves organized the Liberty Theatre Company. The Pacific Northwest Theatre does not own any of the stock of the Liberty Theatre Company."

Ben Lyon Signs Contract with Columbia

Columbia Pietures Corporation has added Ben Lyon to the array of stars that will appear in the company's talkie and silent productions. This Columbia contract marks Lyon's first appearance for an independent company. He has had considerable experience on the speaking stage and Columbia figures this will add materially to his value in talking pictures.

Hanson Makes Changes in Tiffany-Stahl Staff

Harry I. Goldman has been appointed manager of the Boston exchange of Tiffany-Stahl and Henry Ellman has been named supervisor of the central division. The latter replaces A. H. McLaughlin, who has resigned. The changes were announced by Oscar Hanson, general sales manager of the company.

Jack Warner Charges Rivals With Maligning Talking Films

Jack L. Warner

Says Inability to Make Them Prompts Propaganda Appearing in Papers

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 9. — Jack L. Warner, production chief at Warner Bros. studios, has come out with an attack against those producers who have decried the talking picture as a failure that would not last the year out. He declares there is a well planned movement afoot among these certain producers maligning the talkies because they have been unable to demonstrate their ability to produce them.

In bitterly rebuking these "propagandists" Mr. Warner said they were in a movement to flood the press with unfavorable comment in regard to talking pictures. He branded their efforts as highly unethical, prejudiced, entirely untruthful and wilfully misleading.

In part Mr. Warner said:

"This propaganda appearing repeatedly in certain publications is being projected for the sole purpose of misleading the public for the financial advantage of a certain group of film producers. These interests have not yet demonstrated their ability to produce talking pictures successfully, nor in sufficient number to capitalize on the public's enthusiasm for talking pictures.

"By damaging the talking picture these interests hope to sell their silent product, the only product they have for sale. I consider this movement the most flagrant breach of ethics and good business taste ever to crop up in the motion picture industry."

According to Mr. Warner the propaganda in question is to the effect that the talking picture is a failure, that the public does not care for talking pictures, that theatres playing talking pictures are showing less patronage than they were when playing silent films, and that talking pictures will not live the year through.

Continuing his statement Mr. Warner says:

"These statements are absolutely ridiculous. They have nevertheless crept into public prints repeatedly as authoritative and reflecting the thought of the best brains in the industry. It is needless for me to cite figures and facts on box-office receipts to bear up my contention that talking pictures are sensationally successful. I do feel impelled, however, to refer to the fact that certain of the offending studios are reaching out in every direction in search of talent, which they know to be peculiarly fitted for speaking parts."

Pinanski Plans More Expansion Of Netoco Chain

Head of New England Theatres Operating Company Spikes Rumor of Sale

Though the Netoco circuit operated throughout New England by the New England Theatres Operating Company, Inc., has expanded in the past year from twelve houses to close to fifty, considerable more expansion is planned for the current year, according to an announcement made by Samuel Pinanski, president of the operating company. As rapidly as suitable sites can be acquired additional houses will be erected.

Various rumors have been circulated from time to time to the effect that Netoco holdings would be disposed of to Fox and to Warners, but vigorous denials have been made as additional houses have been acquired. New England Theatres Operating Company, Inc., was organized only a year ago with an authorized capital of $25,000,000 and a chain of twelve houses. These houses have been quadrupled during the year until the circuit is now the largest in New England.

President Pinanski has acquired the choicest locations for his new houses, and is erecting for Netoco the latest types of atmospheric theatres. Four of these are now nearing completion. The New Netoco State, housed in a $1,000,000 office building, is in the heart of Portland, Maine's business district. It is Spanish in architecture and appointment.

The Seville, Boston, is in Spanish design. The Egyptian, Brighton, is patterned after the Temple of Karnak.

Positive Film Output Takes Big Jump on W. Coast

200,000,000 Feet Disposed of in Six Months Due to Talking Pictures

The introduction of sound pictures has added tremendously to the distribution of Eastman positive film, according to a statement by the Eastman Kodak Company. On the Pacific Coast alone, upwards of 200,000,000 feet of positive film were distributed for the six months period ending December 31.

This big jump in film footage is charged almost entirely to the talking pictures, as most of the companies are now making the talkies in addition to the silent version of their features. Not only does this add materially to the film consumption, but most of the studios have been working through an experimental period, which has required the usage of considerably more material than in the past.

These figures given by Eastman apply only to the Pacific Coast and represent a larger increase than for any corresponding period in the history of the company. The figures are the more remarkable because aside from the activities in the sound production field the year was not a particularly lively one.

Judges Render Opposite Views On Sunday Laws

Conflicting decisions have been handed down in Montreal, Quebec, within the last few days under the Lord's Day Act. A few days ago Justice Desaulniers dismissed the action against United Amusements, Ltd., Montreal for conducting Sunday shows. He held that moving pictures did not constitute a performance under the law, and therefor, a Sunday picture show was legal.

The latest decision by Justice Choquette finds the Victoria and Cartier Theatres guilty of infractions of the Sunday law and levies a fine of $25 and costs. Justice Choquette gives the opinion that a cinema where an admission is charged "is certainly a theatre."

7 U. S. Films Listed By German Paper Among 10 Best

In a poll of film critics of 36 countries conducted by Der Deutsche, the German trade paper, seven American films are ranked among those considered the ten best for the year 1928. "The Patriot" is first on the list. Ranking next is "Jeanne D'Arc," the French production, while next comes "The Circus." The remaining seven films are "Underworld," "White Shadows in the South Seas," "The Last Command," "Seventh Heaven," "The End of St. Petersburg," "The Crowd," and "Heimkehr," a German film.

Kansas Board Will Censor Screen Talk

THE Kansas State Censor Board would become censors of the spoken word as well as the silent movie, now that the board has moved into its new headquarters at 714 North Sixth Street, Kansas City, Kansas, Miss Emma Viets, chairman of the board, announced.

The Kansas board has assumed the attitude that its functions include the words as well as the scenes and more than 50 per cent of the eliminations made are those of alleged objectionable titles. A problem that has not yet been met adequately is the trouble encountered in synchronized pictures when eliminations are made in the scenes. When the film is cut the accompanying sound fails to synchronize unless a blank piece of film the exact length of the eliminated piece is inserted.

Oklahoma Unit Injunction Order Made Permanent

Conspiracy Charge Settled by Consent Decree in Federal Court

Alleged activities of the Oklahoma M. P. T. O. against non-theatricals are at an end. The injunction secured by the Department of Justice in the consent decree in the Federal Court at Oklahoma City has been made permanent. It restrains the Oklahoma exhibitor from coercing distributors to refuse to deal with or cease to deal with non-theatrical accounts and from sending or threatening to send to members names of exchanges serving such accounts.

Conspiracy was charged by the Government against the Oklahoma unit in which it was alleged that the exhibitors and a certain group of others had combined to shut out competition from the non-theatricals by refusing them service.

"WHY the hell did we get scooped?" reads a wire to the Coast representative of another trade paper, referring to the story of the producer swing back to silent pictures—published exclusively in Motion Picture News—and of great importance to small town exhibitors who cannot get sound equipment for months to come.

Industry Loss From Illness Is $2,000,000

Slowing Production Activity, Absence of Personnel Boost Figures

Loss to the industry due to illness of personnel from the flu, for the past few weeks, was figured this week at about $2,000,000.

At the Coast studios, production activities have been slowed down, from time to time, during the flu period, with the loss there mounting up considerably, due to holding up of films in the making.

In the distribution field, while no detailed statement could be obtained of the number of employees who have been hit by the flu, it was believed that a large number have been affected, with considerable time lost. Salaries, of course, are paid during illness.

Likewise, a good many theatre managers in the circuits have been away, necessarily, from their duties, due to the flu. And theatre owners themselves, including some prominent executives, have been ill.

It is noted, however, that the loss to the industry is nothing like so heavy as it was in 1918, so far as personnel is concerned. Neither has there been any big box office loss on account of closing of theatres, though in some sections houses have been dark for a few days at a time, or even longer.

Leishman Wins European Post With Universal

E. D. Leishman, Universal supervisor of exchanges and assistant to the general sales manager, has been selected by Carl Laemmle, Universal chief, to go to Europe shortly and bring the Universal exchanges in Continental Europe to the same high state of efficiency as the company's American exchanges. Leishman, who will leave New York within several weeks, will be an assistant to Joe Friedman, who is in charge of Universal operations on the continent.

Leishman has been with Universal seven years, joining in 1922 as travelling auditor. The following year he was appointed assistant to the general manager at the Universal home office, and a year later was sent to England on a special assignment for Mr. Laemmle. He became chief auditor of exchanges for Universal late in 1924 and was appointed to his present position in 1926. He is an expert on the physical operations of an exchange.

Veteran Spokane Exhibitor Buys Rex Theatre

Purchase of the Rex Theatre, Spokane, from the Will Starkey Theatres has been made by J. W. Allender, owner of the Ritz Theatre. The house was formerly known as the Empire. Mr. Allender is one of the veteran Spokane exhibitors, having owned houses there continuously since 1915, and has been in the business for 26 years.

Exhibitors of N. W. in Protest On Arbitration

Threaten to Withdraw From Hearings If Reforms Are Not Made

Arbitration as it is now conducted may run against a snag in Washington State unless the exhibitors can institute a reform they are insisting upon, according to Ray A. Grombacher, former president of the unit, who is at present in New York.

At the convention of the body held in December it was decided that if the secretary of the Film Board of Trade was to be present when the findings of the Arbitration Board were made, the secretary of the exhibitor body must also be present. In the event that this concession is not made the three exhibitors on the Arbitration Board will withdraw from the hearings.

It has been customary for the secretary of the Film Board to remain for the findings when all others are eliminated except the members of the Arbitration Board. It is not charged that the secretary of the Film Board participates in the findings, but the exhibitors see no reason why they too should not be represented by a secretary.

According to Mr. Grombacher, the Washington exhibitors have changed their name to Allied Amusements of the Northwest. They expect to include in their membership amusement representatives of all types and to take into the membership also a part of Northern Idaho and Western Montana where those exhibitors are not affiliated with their own state bodies. The organization has been enlarged to take in all forms of amusement in order to present a stronger front to fight adverse legislation or anything else detrimental to the amusement field.

Stage Players Support Dix in "Nothing But the Truth"

Paramount has assembled a cast of stage players to support Richard Dix in his first talking picture, "Nothing But the Truth," which got under way this week at the Long Island studios of the company under the direction of Victor Schertzinger.

In the cast are Elvia Enders, Helen Kane, Nancy Ryan, Wynne Gibson, Edna May Oliver, Berton Churchill, John Louis Bartels and Ned A. Sparks. All have been prominently identified with Broadway shows.

William Collier, who starred in the original play of "Nothing But the Truth," has charge of the dialogue in the picture version and will be closely associated with Director Schertzinger throughout the entire production.

Another Aviation Series Will Be Issued by Educational

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, Jan. 10.—Educational will release another series of two reel airplane dramas starring Reed Howes. The first series of six has just been completed, and production on the new group will start immediately. The pictures are produced by Charles R. Rogers and Harry Joe Brown.

Western Electric Announces Lower Priced Theatre Device

New Machine to Cost $5,500 for Film or Disc, $7,000 If Used for Both Reproductions

THE Western Electric Company has perfected a cheaper sound reproducing device primarily for smaller theatres that cannot afford the more expensive equipment. It is to cost $5,500 when used either for disc or film reproduction and $7,000 if used for both. These prices include the cost of installation.

The equipment costing $5,500 is applicable only for the use of disc or of film, but cannot be used for reproduction of both without the extra attachment which brings the price up to $7,000.

The company is prepared to accept orders now for this new equipment, but is not prepared to make installations until after June 1, 1929.

Otterson's Statement

Commenting on the announcement, J. E. Otterson, President of Electrical Research Products, Inc., had the following to say:

"The information that Western Electric has perfected a new model sound equipment for small theatres will, I daresay, be good news to the thousands of small theatre owners who have been awaiting a dependable sound system within reach of their pocketbook.

"As I have previously pointed out, we have all along been mindful of the needs of the small theatre owners, and while our engineering and installing staffs have been at work on existing systems they have been gaining valuable experience in relation to the design and operation of the units adapted to the smaller house. This new equipment has now passed the acid test and has been placed in the factory for production.

"Orders already on our books for present types of apparatus, even at our increased 1929 manufacturing schedule of 250 installations per month, will keep our factory and installation department working at top speed until the late Spring, but we are now able to secure installations of the new equipments beginning June 1st, and the trade may be sure that the Western Electric has a full sense of meeting its responsibilities on the new models. They are, of course, made with the same care and in the same factory as the equipments now in use and the same nation-wide servicing organization will insure their being kept at maximum operating efficiency.

"I need hardly comment upon the great significance of today's announcement to the motion picture industry and the millions of people who depend upon the small the-

Await Negotiations for Disbanding Circuit

NEGOTIATIONS are pending for a separation of the houses operated by Universal-Variety circuit in Cleveland. The deal arranged for Universal to take over the Cedar-Lee, Broadway, Oriental, Hilliard Square and Detroit, and for Variety to take the Variety, Kinsman, Imperial, Homestead and Moreland. The new million dollar Uptown Theatre is not included in the transaction as it was not operated jointly by the circuit, but was built and is operated by Messrs. Stecher, Fine and Kramer. The Universal-Variety circuit was formed when Dr. B. I. Brody sold his interest in the U-B circuit to Meyer Fine and Abe Kramer. Charles Lowenberg, who has been representing the Universal interests in Cleveland, has left town, and in his stead Stanley Siegelbaum has been appointed.

Speculation Is On Over Hoover Appointments

Wiseacres Wonder if Industry Will Be Recognized In New Regime

Speculation was rampant in several quarters this week as to whether or not the industry would figure in appointments to be made by Herbert Hoover, after he takes office as President on March 4.

It is the usual custom for the alleged political sharps to try to pick a new President's Cabinet for him, and make up a slate of ambassadors and other choice offices, but the new Executive frequently pulls surprises when he gets ready to make announcements.

In the industry, there are those who seem inclined to believe that if any official positions are to be filled wherein a knowledge of motion picture affairs here or abroad is essential, Mr. Hoover may seek the advice of two outstanding supporters of his in the recent campaign—Joseph M. Schenck and Louis B. Mayer.

All this is, of course, speculative, but it is recalled that both film executives were delegates to the Republican National Convention at Kansas City.

For this reason, as well as the prominence of both in the industry, observers are inclined to believe that their advice, would be sought, should Mr. Hoover decide to make appointments effecting the picture world.

John Miljan Signs for Role in "Innocents of Paris"

The supporting cast of Maurice Chevalier's in his Paramount talkie, "The Innocents of Paris," was added to last week by the addition of John Miljan.

Fox Closes Deal with N. Y. Independents for 184 Houses

$45,000,000 Sum Involved With Another $12,000,000 For Additional Acquisitions

WILLIAM FOX on Thursday announced that they day announced that he whereby the local independent exhibitor in Greater New York virtually became a thing of the past. According to the statement issued by the Fox organization they have acquired 184 houses with a total seating capacity in excess of 285,000. While the actual figures involved in the transaction were not available from Fox it is understood that the amount that is to pass hands in this first phase of the acquisitions is $45,000,000 and that an additional expenditure of $12,000,000 will be made in the near future in the taking over of additional theatres.

This latter sum is to be largely expended in acquiring theatres in the New England territory. When all the deals are completed it will mean that Fox has added more than 200 theatres to his present holdings, which include the Poli houses in New England, the Fox Circuit in and about Greater New York and the West Coast Circuit of theatres in the territory from California to the Canadian line, and the Midwesco theatres in the middle west territory.

These new houses secured by purchase and merger will be operated by the Fox Metropolitan Playhouses, Inc., a wholly own subsidiary for Fox Theatres. The stock for the Metropolitan Playhouses, Inc., it is understood is shortly to be placed on the Boston Curb and a drive made in the New England territory to get the public to invest in the venture.

Theatres included in the deals for the most part, have all been erected during the past three to five years. Their annual profits are estimated at $5,000,000. They have been acquired under leases having an average life of over 20 years and did an average gross business, in the last three years, of approximately $25,000,000. An indication of the combined magnitude of this new company may be gained by the fact that paid admission figures for the year ended Oct. 31, 1928 totaled over $72,000,000. Fox Metropolitan Playhouses, Inc., will form one of the most strategic links in the Fox Theatre Corp. chain of houses and will constitute by far the largest group of theatres under one management in the Metropolitan area.

Centralized Management

Under Fox management an organization will be effected by which several exhibitors thus bought out will be made division managers and, under one head, will be added as one unit to the organization of Fox Theatres.

Fox has ambitious plans for his new chain and among other things has issued orders to immediately equip each theatre with the latest in sound equipment.

Under centralized management, it is esti-

No Changes Likely in Censor Board

CHANGES in the New York State Board of Motion Picture Censorship during the year are regarded as unlikely, the general opinion in Albany being that Governor Roosevelt will not seek any changes as the power for selecting members of the censorship board now lies with the State Board of Regents in the Department of Education.

The Board is now solely composed of James Wingate, director, of whom it is anticipated that he will serve out his term.

New Chief for W. E. Educational Talking Pictures

F. L. Devereaux, vice-president of the Bell Telephone Securities Company, has been made general manager of the Department of Educational Talking Pictures in the Electrical Research Products organization, according to an announcement made by the Western Electric Company. Mr. Devereaux's work will relate to the development of sound pictures in fields other than those of amusement.

Except for the period of the World War, during which he rose to the rank of Lieutenant-Colonel, Mr. Devereaux has been continuously associated with the Bell Telephone System since 1903. For a number of years he has held executive positions in the Bell System in Washington, D. C., of which city he is a native, in Philadelphia, Omaha, Neb., and finally in New York, where for the past seven years he has been associated with the Bell Telephone Securities Co.

Dave Warner Operated On; Condition Low

Dave Warner, one of the remaining Warner Bros. who has been ill for upwards of a year underwent an operation this week at the hands of a specialist for the removal of one of his glands. The specialist was brought from the middle west at a cost of $10,000 for the operation.

On Thursday it was stated that the operation was a grave one and the result was still in the balance.

Indianapolis Elects Officers for Film Board

Indianapolis has elected new officers of the Film Board. Harry D. Graham, of Pathe, is the new president, with Claude E. Penrod, of FBO, vice-president, and Lester Rosenthal, of Universal, secretary-treasurer. Miss Marian McCullough was named as executive secretary.

Jimmie Grainger Ill

Jimmie Grainger, general sales manager for Fox Films organization, was taken down with the flu this week. He was not able to be present at the announcement of the closing of the deal for the New York independent houses and will be confined at his home for several days.

The Brooklyn Paramount

Publix Theatres made its entry in another eastern city with the opening of the new Paramount in Brooklyn, N. Y. This gorgeous motion picture house embodies many unique features of design and equipment. The main lobby, shown aobve is a spacious hall with a high vaulted ceiling supported by marble columns. A marble floor, wrought iron grilles of exceptional design, and rich draperies present an imposing scene.

A RECENT ADDITION TO THE CHAIN OF STANLEY HOUSES

FROM an architectural standpoint, the Stanley Theatre in Utica, N. Y., is one of the most striking playhouses in the large chain of houses built and operated by the Stanley Company. This elaborate theatre has a seating capacity of over 3,000, and was built from plans by Thomas W. Lamb, Architect. The decoration was planned and executed by the Robert E. Power Studios.

The theatre is housed in a building which also provides office and store space and is located on Genessee Street. The front elevation has two distinct and attractive motives — the upper portion a rich, high, double arch window feature, embracing the main entrance, and the lower portion flanking this and containing the stores and offices.

A large vestibule gives access to the theatre proper. The main lobby has a high marble base with an ornate Mexican order on top. This order forms the frame for huge murals on the one side and an open promenade and an ornamental mirror from the other two sides of the lobby. The ceiling has a barrel vault with a dome centered.

The grand foyer has a novel treatment built around bays, with draped openings off the mezzanine promenade which encircles the foyer.

The main auditorium has as its main decoration the Mexican Baroque treatment found in the lobby and foyer. A series of draped arches form the side walls.

The public rooms include a ladies' retiring room and cosmetic in the modern Spanish style with colored tile base, rough walls and rich iron fixtures.

NEW HEIGHTS FOR THE RESIDENCE DISTRICT THEATRE

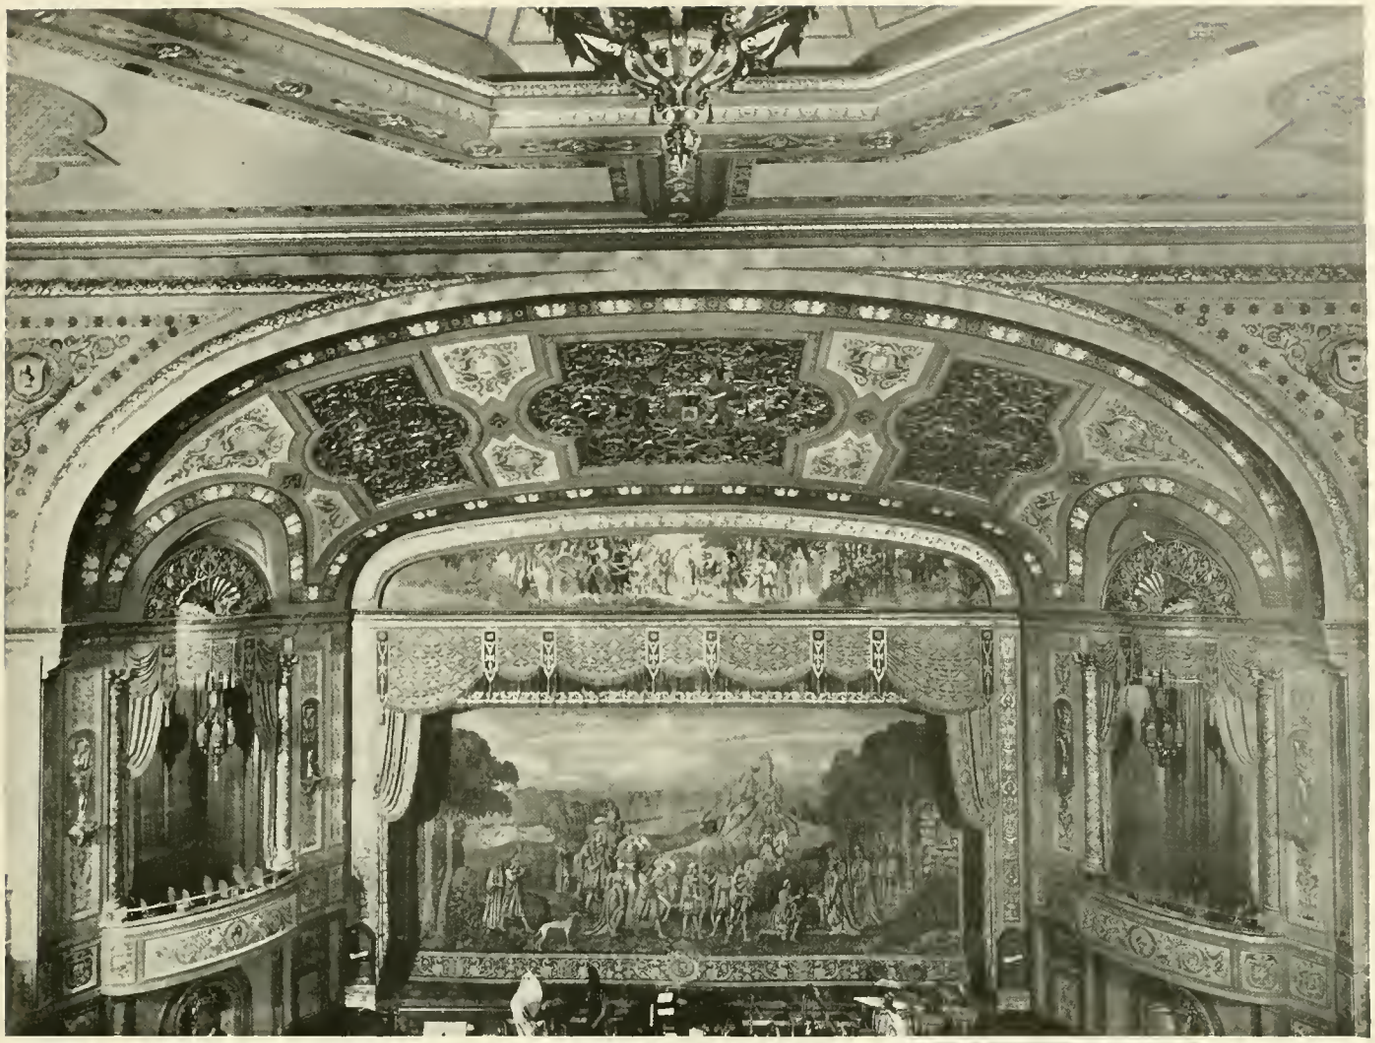
Patio Theatre, Brooklyn, Emphasizes Extension of De Luxe Standards

ILLUSTRATIONS on this and the following two pages offer convincing testimony in support of the statement made at the time of the opening of the Patio Theatre in the Prospect Park section of Brooklyn, N. Y., that A. H. Schwartz, head of the Century Circuit, with the launching of this beautiful playhouse added to the formidable array of fine theatres in this country an outstanding example of the modern motion picture palace.

The Patio in its exterior, foyer and auditorium treatment is faithful to the Spanish motif in design and decoration. A colorful and graceful architectural scheme has been adapted to the requirements of a romantic atmosphere achieved in a structure efficiently designed to serve as the amusement resort of devotees of motion picture presentations.

The theatre asserts the character of its setting to the prospective patron before entrance is made to the outer lobby, for the facade presents a spectacle of marked old-world beauty. The exterior is executed in terra cotta with typical Spanish ornamentation. The theatre, fronting on Flatbush Avenue, has a large main entrance, flanked by two store rooms at either side. These store fronts are nicely calculated to afford advantageous display to the merchant occupying them while fitting perfectly into the architectural scheme.

The entrance lobby is roomy and handsomely decorated. It leads directly to a rotunda replete with interesting detail. This is strictly in the Spanish mood, with tiled floor, arches supported by round columns and set off with delicately wrought grilles, and grilled windows high up on the walls, finished in rough cast plaster. The main feature of this inner foyer is a fountain centered in a pool on the rim of which are tropical plants. A clever lighting arrangement greatly enhance the effectiveness of this attractive centerpiece.



The fountain, an important feature of the Patio's beautiful inner foyer.

The auditorium, with a seating capacity of nearly 3,000 perons, is as impressive for the fine proportions which distinguish it as for its interesting and colorful detail of decoration. The proscenium arch is beautifully decorated. The stage is set in a narrow frame, arched at top and featuring a mural. The stage curtain is a tapistry of antique flavor. The arch over the stage features grilles set off with painted panels. The proscenium walls have upper stage boxes, with the wall space on the lower floor broken by arched niches, in which are garden urns.

The main ceiling features an octagonal dome, in which a handsome chandelier is hung. There is a single balcony with a loge section. The rear walls are surmounted by arches, supported by twisted columns and hung with colorful drapes. Leaded glass windows, which are illuminated from behind are centered in the wall space under this balcony effect.

A Main lounge done in the Spanish style and furnished to afford patrons the utmost in cozy comfort, a ladies' room executed in the modernistic style and a mens' smoking room are among the service features which the Patio provides.

The theatre was designed by R. Thomas Short, Architect. William Rau, designer and decorative artist, designed and executed the decorations, and Teresa Jackson had charge of the interior furnishings.

The Patio is the twenty-fourth theatre in the Century Circuit. It is located in the section of Brooklyn where Mr. A. H. Schwartz and Mr. H. Clay Miner, heads of the circuit, built the first of their now extensive chain of theatres.

Above—The proscenium and stage treatment effects a striking example of the rich and colorful in theatre decoration. Old ivory, blue and gold are the predominating colors used in the ornamentation.

SERVICE FEATURES
Provide Ultimate in Comfort

On the left is a photograph showing the unusual treatment carried out in the furnishing and decoration of the ladies' room at the Patio. The modernistic touch is handled with restraint and a marked feeling of good taste. This room is one of several of the service feature which stamp the Patio as a splendid example of the newest type of motion picture theatre.

The Spanish motif is strongly stressed in the decoration of the main lounge, shown below. Furniture has been selected with a view to providing comfort as well as the decorative note in harmony with the atmosphere of the Patio. Handsome art objects are tastefully arranged and the cozy and homelike feeling is encountered instantly one enters this luxurious lounge.

MANUFACTURED WEATHER in the MASTBAUM

HERE is another great theatre which will provide for its patrons not only good entertainment but, with Manufactured Weather, the utmost in health and comfort.

Those progressive theatres which provide Manufactured Weather, as produced only through the Carrier System for Air Conditioning, assure their patrons an ideally comfortable and a scientifically healthful atmosphere every day in the year, regardless of outside weather conditions or the size of the crowd.

The Mastbaum

This installation in the Mastbaum, made in the closest cooperation with the Architects, Hoffman & Henon, is the fifth in the Stanley Company of America's de luxe houses. Similar installations provide Manufactured Weather in a rapidly growing and impressive list of progressive theatres in the United States and abroad.

We shall be pleased to have theatre owners, architects and engineers investigate the results accomplished by the Carrier System for Air Conditioning, and ask for a visit from one of our Engineers. Write, too, for the Book, "Theatre Cooling and Conditioning," and the list of Carrier Conditioned Theatres.

Checking Over Exhibitor Exploitation Ideas Used on 1928 Film Crop

Shows the "This Is No Bull" School of Ballyhoo Is Disappearing; Theme Song Outstanding Feature of Year's Advertising Developments

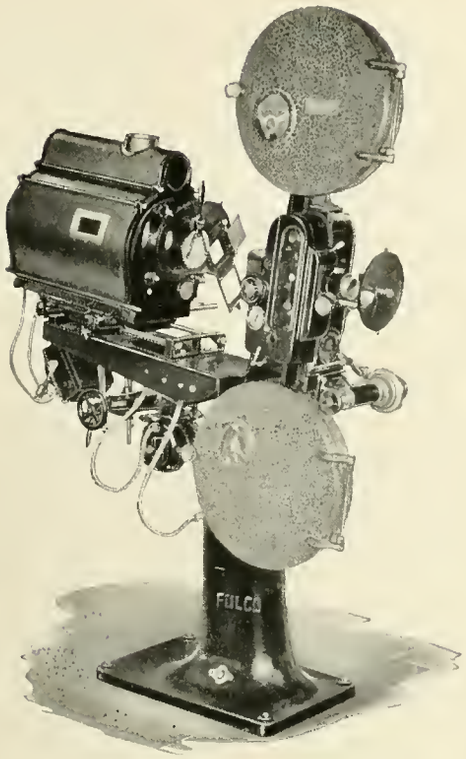
A GLANCE back over the exploitation ideas employed by theatre men during 1928 reveals one fact that is bound to be considered striking by those acquainted with exploitation methods used in the past—particularly in connection with picture theatre promotion work—and that is the increasing importance of the theatre-merchant form of advertising. Also, a comparison of last year's exploitation with that of several years ago emphasizes the growing tendency to restrict campaign efforts to the more direct forms of publicity and advertising—such as paid space in newspapers, tie-up stunts in connection with newspaper promotion of merchandising, direct mail campaigning, etc., with only isolated instances of the "This is No Bull" type of ballyhoo.

Motion pictures and picture theatres have developed far beyond the "no bull" class of ballyhoo, and certain standards of good taste figure as importantly in the results obtained as the novelty of the basic idea on which the stunt or the campaign is built. The theatres themselves are so far removed from the circus wagon idea of flash that yokel ideas of what constitutes news or spectacle fail utterly to increase the immediate returns of a picture theatre resorting to them in an effort to drum up trade.

The sensational idea, which in many instances looks better on paper than it figures in the box office records, is bound to be more conspicuous by its absence than its presence under conditions such as now prevail. Instead of running the police ragged in an uncertain effort to stir up a sensation, which might and oftener does not tie-in with the show in any discernable way so far as the public can figure out, the theatre men now have the police, when they want them, form a parade and behind a brass band and under flying banners, which everybody can read, march to the playhouse as a demonstration to attract the attention of the public to that show.

The records of the exploitation executed during 1928 draw particular attention to the advance which has been made by the "theme song" as an angle of publicity for a particular motion picture.

Motion picture exploitation men have played with the song tie-up idea for years, and upon occasion in the past some notable results have been obtained. But it remained for the past year to bring the pictures to the fore as the one great hope of the song publisher to put over a new tune quickly, emphatically and profitably. The sensational success of "Charmaine" and "Diane," both composed by Erno Rapee as theme songs for pictures and one following the other in comparatively short time, focussed the attention of the song publisher and the song writer on the motion picture as the greatest publicity medium in sight. The tie-up of publicity for the picture theme song through the theatre orchestra or the sound reproducing apparatus, and the radio broadcasters form an unbeatable combination for popularizing a tune. Indeed, pictures have made so much money for songs that the big line producers of the films have decided to cut in on some of the profits—as well as assure themselves of an adequate supply of musical material—and have bought into song publishing firms or are now busily engaged in starting their own music publishing subsidiary.



The Theatre Itself Featured in Window Display. Above is a good example of co-operative Advertising in Which a New Theatre Is Exploited. Wurlitzer Organ and Heywood-Wakefield Chairs, Equipment in the New Boyd Theatre, Richmond, Va., Are on Display in the Window of a Prominent Local Store. The Boyd Is the Newest House in the Chain Operated in Virginia by W. J. Coulton.

The picture "Ramona" benefitted immeasurably through the song of that title which was used as its principal theme in theatre scores. "Ramona" was extensively exploited through merchant tie-ups, music stores, and radio renditions of the song. Indeed the tie-up worked so well for the music dealers as well as the theatre men that both got together again at the first opportunity for another co-operative drive. "Angela Mia," the song written for "Street Angel," "Jeannine I Dream of Lilac Time," "I Loved You Then as I Love You Now," theme songs for "Lilac Time" and "Dancing Daughters" respectively, were important factors in all the key city campaigning for those films. It remained for Al Jolson to come along with "Sonny Boy" and "Rainbow Round My Shoulder" as original airs for his picture "The Singing Fool" and prove that there are millions in writing a song hit for a synchronized picture.

The character of the pictures themselves set the style for exploitation. Witness, as you run your eye back over the 1928 exploitation, the extensive use of aviation as a valuable asset of the theatre seeking to publicize a special show. "Wings," which gained general release last year "Legion of the Condemned," "Air Circus," "Lilac Time," and the other aviation pictures set a style which the exhibitors found no little fun in following and a good deal of profit in adopting. The theatre men in the key cities have

The map of the United States shown here is divided into seven territories, with colored shading indicating the division of new proposed theatre building as represented for the period from November 15th to December 15th. This new construction is represented in valuation of dollars and cents rather than number of projects.

The shading is in four densities; solid, which represents the greatest value of proposed theatres; heavy stipple, which is second in valuation of new construction; medium, which areas represent conservative building; and the very light areas, where the investment in new theatre projects is very light. The information used in compiling the statistics visualized by the map was obtained through several reliable sources, and the map is to be considered as very nearly accurate in representing comparative theatre building activities in various sections of the country.

THE 1929 Building Forecast as presented by the Architectural Forum in its eighth annual building survey lists theatres with a program of $163,559,000. In the 1928 forecast the total theatre building was placed at $161,938,000, which shows a slight increase for theatre building for the 1929 program.

As shown on the accompanying map, the greater part of this building will be carried on in the North Atlantic and the Middle States while the Western, South Western and New England States will share a lighter volume of new building, practically in equal proportion. The South Eastern territory is given but a light theatre building forecast.

It will be noted upon examination of the accompanying map that the North Atlantic States are to receive by far the heaviest building per unit of territory, as the total building in the territory almost equals that of the Middle States where the total area exceeds that of the North Atlantic States several times.

Also, in New England, the building per unit of area will greatly exceed that of the Western and South Western States, even though the investment of totals shown are practically the same for the three territories.

In this forecast by the Architectural Forum, no allowance is made for the cost of site nor for the cost of equipment. As it is customary in this industry to take into account the cost of site and equipment when speaking of the cost of a theatre, the totals given by the Architectural Forum represent only approximately three-quarters the figures necessary for correct interpretation by the motion picture industry. Making allowances for the cost of equipment and sites, the total theatre constructions for the United States for 1929 will equal approximately $240,000,000. In order that a comparison can be made of the building for the various territorial divisions of the United States for the past two years and for 1929, the following table has been prepared:

Section	1929	1928	1927
New England	$6,366,800	$21,920,000	$18,637,500
North Alantic	62,891,400	43,114,000	54,747,500
South Eastern	3,746,600	4,167,000	6,995,000
South Western	7,812,200	3,777,000	11,012,500
Middle	74,032,200	71,620,000	93,367,500
Western	8,773,600	17,340,000	14,892,500

It will be seen from this tabulation that the North Atlantic States show an increase for 1928 over 1927 of approximately 50 per cent while the Middle States are scheduled for a slight increase. Also, in the South Western division, the prediction holds for more than 100 per cent increase in theatre building activities. New England and the Western States suffer a large retrenchment in theatre building activities.

The figures given in this tabulation are for the cost of construction and do not include cost of site and equipment.

1928 differed from 1927 in theatre building particularly in the average cost per theatre. The theatre of 1928 represented a considerably less investment than the 1927 house. This same condition is expected to prevail for 1929, where the average cost per house will remain approximately the same as for 1928.

UPON analysis of the monthly theatre building reports which have been published by "The Showman," it was found that the average cost per theatre for the entire country for 1928 was $271,600, with a seating capacity of 1,300 and cost per seat of $208.00. There were relatively few houses costing over $500,000 built last year as compared with this class of house constructed in 1927. It is predicted that there will be relatively few theatres built which will cost over a half million dollars during 1929 as the theatre industry has entered upon a period of building which is centering on the better class neighborhood theatres and houses in the smaller centers of population. The theory has been advanced by this department that the motion picture industry has experienced an enormous expansion in theatre building during the past four years and that this rate of building has reached a point of stability which is accommodating the steadily increase in population of this country and also the natural replacement of obsolete theatres.

The records for theatre building for the past four years have borne out our theory and we feel justified in predicting that the theatre building programs for the next several years will be maintained at relatively the same volume as has been enjoyed for the past four years. The Architectural Forum in speaking of building in general in the United States tends to confirm our prediction:

"—The theory was advanced that we have practically arrived at a new, normal, annual volume of building construction from which deviations might occur only in direct occurrence with the variations in general prosperity and business activity.

"—We predict therefore that building activities during the year 1929 will be maintained on approximately the same general level which has been established during the last three years with a definite possibility of the total exceeding any previous year."

While the above statements made by the Architectural Forum refer directly to all building in the United States, yet they must refer indirectly to theatre building as the various factors mentioned exert an equal influence on amusements as upon any other division of our national activities.

Our report is in direct refutation of the many statements that are continually appearing in print to the effect that theatre building will or has become stagnated. These predictions frequently have been for the past four years though in every instance failed to materialize.

The sale of theatre equipment has enjoyed an increase during 1928 over any year in the history of the theatre industry. This increased sale has been due primarily to the greater appreciation which theatre owners today give to the importance of fine equipment in popularizing theatres with the public. It is now fully recognized that any theatre which is not completely eqiupped cannot expect to compete efficiently with other houses in its neighborhood, nor expect to increase the percentage of patrons in any given territory.

Renovating and remodelling have played an important part in the record sales of equipment for 1928 and will also play an equal part for equipment sales for 1929. With the exception of an unforseen depression in business, it's practically a foregone conclusion that equipment sales for 1929 will exceed those for 1928.

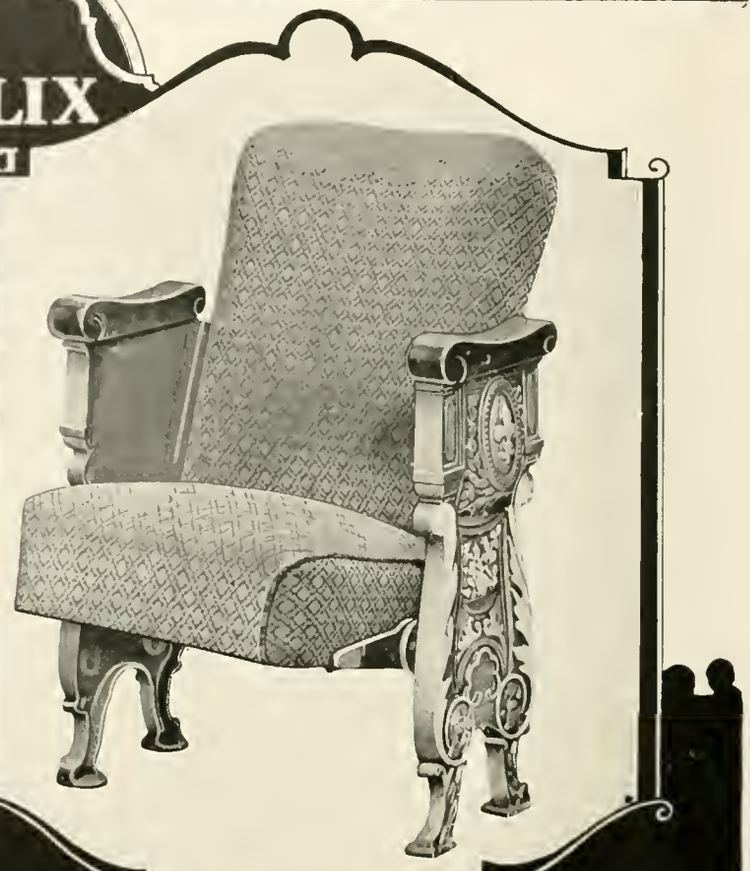
1929 Theatre Building Forecast by Districts

In actual figures the 1929 theatre building forecast for each territorial division of the United States is as follows:

Middle States	$74,032,200
North Atlantic States	62,891,400
Western States	8,773,600
South Western States	7,812,200
New England States	6,366,800
South Eastern States	3,746,600
Total for U. S.	$163,622,800

THEATRE attendance during the period November 15 to December 15 held up particularly well in the face of many adverse conditions. The latter part of that period came within the usual pre-Christmas slump and many of the key cities, particularly in the West, during the entire period, were in the throes of flu epidemics, which, of course, hit the box offices a severe blow. It is not many years since an epidemic as severe as that which recently swept over many localities would have paralized theatre business. With improved conditions and more intelligent handling of the situation, as well as the fact that a majority of the theatres in the big cities are scientifically ventilated and properly cared for, shutdowns as a probable outcome of flu epidemics are becoming increasingly rare.

A comparison of the map for the current period with that of last month shows 13 key cities at average as against 18 at average last month; 6 cities with above average ratings this month, while only 4 cities reached that peak last month; while on the current map there are 7 uuder averages as compared with 6 under average last month.



The Thanksgiving holiday was marked by especially good business at a majority of the key city theatres, an important factor in holding up averages in a period marked by decided slumps of a seasonal and local character.

The picture which rated highest as attractions at key city first run theatres during the period of this report cover a wide variety of entertainment styles. The top of the list is occupied by a silent film, though close on its heels as the attraction with the greatest number of above average and average runs was "The Singing Fool," which led the list last month. This is unusual, because the comparatively limited number of key city first runs are played out by any one picture before the second month rolls around—unless of course there is something extraordinary like "Singing Fool" to score extended runs in sufficient numbers to hold it on equal terms with the number of first runs which naturally fall to a newer release.

The ten pictures, which, according to the reports to this department from key city first runs, ran up the greatest number of profitable showings at the "big houses" are:

1. "Show People"
2. "The Singing Fool"
3. "Masks of the Devil"
4. "Show Girl"
5. "Submarine"
6. "West of Zanzibar"
7. "The Woman Disputed"
8. "Abie's Irish Rose" (sound version)
10. "White Shadows in the South Seas"

Picture Theatre Men Face New Problems with the Advent of Audible Screen Programs—Not the Least of Which is Need to Educate Old Patrons to the New Habit of Letting the Pictures Provide All the "Sound Effects"

By
H. M. Addison

Managing Director Great Lakes Theatre, Buffalo

ADVENT of the talking picture, upsetting the whole industry as has nothing since the first film was made, brings new problems—and many of them—to the manager of a theatre which specializes in all-audible programs —that is, programs in which all the features are either 100 per cent talking, synchronized to sound, music and dialogue or with only sound effects.

At the Great Lakes theatre, the first house in Buffalo to inaugurate this sort of program and the third theatre in the country to be wired for so-called "talking pictures," we have been pioneering in the matter of handling audiences under the new regime. Like many other pioneers, we have had our troubles—troubles aplenty of one sort or another.

What to do is the question. Educating the public to a new manner or means of entertainment is difficult; it takes much time, and the manager who tries it, as many of us have learned in the past, is a target for bitter objection from many patrons who, once used to silent films, find it almost impossible not to do those things which are impossible in a house which programs sound and talking features.

The manager, for instance, who tries to impress upon patrons the necessity for silence, both at entering and leaving the house, so that other patrons may find pleasure in the synchronized music or spoken word, is often misunderstood. In fact, as will be seen by the most critical, if only they will consider for a moment, his only thought is for the convenience, comfort and enjoyment of the patron. After all it's a matter of business with him and under different circumstances he would not care if the patron did laugh and talk. In fact, he would rather a patron would by this means indicate his or her enjoyment—but it is NOT THE THING when so much of the other patron's enjoyment depends upon hearing the music or spoken word.

Silence, or at least a quietness, which is so essential to other folk's enjoyment of the picture, is suggested in many ways. Few of us have gone as far as has Roxy in his New York theatre, where great signs carry the message in bold letters at every turn. If the patron would only take the manager's suggestions as suggestions and realize the request for silence is for the greatest good for the greatest number, it would be a wonderful help.

Silent film audiences were accustomed to coming into the show at any time, going out at their convenience, squeezing by others in the same row of seats and shutting off the view of the screen, for the moment, on their way to the aisles. It didn't matter so much, as the thread of the plot of the picture being shown could be picked up easily.

But now that the talkies are with us, so much depending upon the spoken word or the synchronized music, it is at times difficult for a spectator to pick up the story when he enters half-way through the picture and thus the whole show is spoiled. Those already in the theatre, too, are beginning to voice their objection to the late-comer and thus the manager is confronted with a dual problem.

To help out, the Great Lakes theatre, together with scores of other places of amusement, is stressing heavily the time the feature opens. For instance, on all lobby cards and in advertisements, the message is carried that the feature picture is shown six times a day, opening at a certain definite time. In the advertising a few minutes leeway is given, so that patrons have no excuse for being late.

THERE is even being considered right now the plan of having a two-minute intermission between sections of talking pictures, no one to be seated during the screening of the picture. This works well where short subjects are being shown, as we have demonstrated at the Great Lakes by temporary arrangement, but with feature length subjects it is not possible. It would work well in neighborhood houses, and is in fact now in vogue at many of these places, but in a downtown theatre with six shows a day it is impossible.

At various times, too, the manager uses the public speaker system in the house to personally announce to audiences coming attractions, incorporating each time the request that audiences do their best to remain silent, particularly during all-talking features, stress being laid on the necessity for close following of dialogue in the picture to assure the patron's clear understanding of the thread of the picture, often carried completely via the Vitaphone or Movietone sound. The audiences are also requested, as far as possible, not to leave the theatre during the showing of the feature picture, at least, but to remain until the end and then leave in the general move toward the exits.

As it stands, it is up to the patrons to make talking pictures a success—for the other fellow. The golden rule must be the yardstick by which enjoyment of this new means of entertainment may be best enjoyed. If all work together, it will benefit all.

IN the meantime, do not let anyone tell you that "talking pictures" are not the picture of the future. "Talking pictures" are here to stay. They will be improved continually. Next season's product will make this year's look like last week's news reel.

If you think that good production has now been reached in these pictures, wait until you see, hear and enjoy next year's product. As succeeding efforts come from the studio mills, the tremendous possibilities of "talking pictures" becomes apparent. In the past, few stage plays have made good screen material. In the future, they should make some of the best features the screen will produce and also the greatest money makers.

Think of hearing and seeing "The Desert Song," "Rio Rita," "The Green Hat," "The Trial of Mary Dugan," "Animal Crackers" and productions of that kind on the screen. At this time the producers are bending every effort to turn out bigger pictures and better pictures and all with dialogue, musical or sound synchronization. They will do it, beyond a doubt.

The new era is here. It will not be manifest over night and there will be many disappointments and many discouragements, but remember this, the the success or failure of the greatest development the motion picture industry has ever seen, to a great extent is up to the theatre men themselves, who form the point of contact between the producers and the patrons of this new entertainment.

The establishment of a "do unto others as you would have them do unto you" policy on the part of the theatre goers will spell success for the "talkies."

Survey by National Society Includes Roxy Hospital

The Roxy Theatre gained national recognition for one of its unusual features, in being the only institution of its kind to be included in the survey of the National Organization for Public Health Nursing in Commerce and Industry.

The Organization selected the Roxy Theatre as a representative institution because of its complete hospital and nursing equipment, as an important adjunct of the service rendered to patrons and employees.

In the twenty months that it has been operating, the Roxy Hospital has taken care of more than 5000 cases ranging from sore throat to epileptic strokes. There are two trained nurses constantly in attendance, with 12 physicians on call.

NOW OVER 200 PER MONTH!

That's the way theaters all over the country are installing Phototone Sight-Sound Policy

THE seven hundred theaters now using Phototone are getting the crowds with "sight-sound" programs. And they didn't pay $11,000 for the equipment. It'll pay you to get on the "sight-sound" bandwagon with them—especially since you can do it for only $500.

That's all Phototone costs with baffle board and dynamic cone speaker. It is $575 with two baffle board speakers and with cue cabinet containing fifty records and fifty filing devices. All the sound effects and themes you can use for all the situations in your bookings. Music by the world's greatest orchestras.

Now's your chance to start packing the crowds in for real honest-to-goodness "sight-sound" programs. Beat your competitor to it.

Be sure and hear the new Phototone cone sound board speaker

FOR small annual cost you can equip your theater with Phototone's new cue and record service. This gives you a circulating library of sound records made exclusively for Phototone—also standard records for incidental use, and special noise records such as mob sounds, growls, shrieks, sirens, etc.

By means of this new sound service your Phototone disc library will be replenished with cue service made up by the Thematic Music Cue Service of New York, which is also writing original scores for Phototone.

CUE YOUR PICTURES WITH THE WORLD'S GREATEST MUSIC

The owners of the Plaza Theatre in Kansas City spent $25,000 for the purchase of property and its improvement as a parking space for cars of patrons attending the theatre. The park shown above is opposite the theatre and accomodates 350 cars.

This Car Park is Paying the Theatre Dividends on the Investment of $25,000 Involved

THE old and accepted theory that the cost of a theatre should be spent in the theatre building itself seems to have been somewhat altered in Kansas City.

What now appears to have been one of the smartest moves in suburban theatre building was made by the J. C. Nichols Companies, which recently completed the $1,000,000 Plaza theatre, which seats 2,200. Much money was spent on antique Spanish fixtures, it is true, but the most dividend-paying expenditure appears to have been $25,000 spent on a free parking station, which resembles a beautiful park more than it does a parking station, having a capacity of about 350 automobiles.

"An exhibitor may spend much money for handsome fixtures or a beautiful lobby, or even super-feature pictures, but after a patron has parked his car four blocks away and has to walk to the theatre the beauty of those fixtures fade somewhat," Jack F. Truitt, managing director of the Plaza, said. "There is only one way a large suburban theatre can hope to retain the patronage in its neighborhood. That is offering equally as good a show as can be seen downtown under more convenient circumstances. A moviegoer in any large city naturally expects to do some walkinig to the theatre after he has parked his car. If a large suburban theatre in his neighborhood can offer him the same show and free parking station within a stone's throw of the theatre, what is the result? The answer is obvious.

> Exhibitors may spend much money on ornate lobbies and even for super-films but after the patron has parked his car 4 blocks away and walked back to the theatre the beauty of those attractions has faded somewhat!

"I can say truthfully that the Plaza has attracted patrons from the most remote sections of Kansas City, not to see a larger house than could be found downtown, as such is not the case; not to see a more beautiful theatre or a better picture, but simply because the average theatre patron who drives a motor car is reluctant about parking a distance from his destination—and walking back—so the large parking station—free—right next to the Plaza appeals to him.

"The motor car and the theatres are most closely linked than many persons realize. They are becoming more closely linked each year, too. As a general rule, the slightest factor can change the decision of a man or a woman concerning the subject: 'What shall we do this evening?' A bridge party with friends, the radio at a friend's house, a theatre downtown—all of those are possibilities, along with the usual alternative of taking a motor car ride out on some highway. A theatre might be showing a picture which the persons in question might like to see, but the thought of having to bother with parking worries changes the decision to something else in the way of entertainment for the evening.

"Frankly, I am firmly convinced that the money invested in the Plaza's free parking station will pay dividends as quickly and surely as government bonds."

It's Easy to Handle Sound Pictures if You Avoid These Common Mistakes

MANY exhibitors who are having their first experience in the various details of sound presentation have encountered various difficulties in the handling and use of wax records and Movietone (sound track) subjects.

A great many of the common mistakes involved in unpacking and preparing these sound pictures for showing may be quite easily avoided, according to William D. Kelly, head of the film department of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, who has prepared the following summary of suggestions for the convenience of exhibitors and exchanges.

Sound films, as most exhibitors know, are produced by the Vitaphone or disc method and the Movietone or film method.

Records are of a standard size, sixteen inches in diameter. One disc carries synchronization for one reel of film. Each disc weighs approximately one and three-quarters pounds. Packed for shipment, the weight is very close to two pounds.

Each disc is represented by the makers to have an average life of from fifteen to twenty reproductions. That is, it is contended that good service can be obtained up to fifteenth or twentieth time that the record is run through the theatre's reproducing machine. In actual practice, however, motion picture distributors are counting a disc's life to be much more limited than this. Four sets of records are usually being provided to week-run theatres. If four shows are given on week days and five on Saturday and Sunday, the four sets of records will average seven and one-half shows per set. That is, each disc will be run seven or eight times. Proportionate figuring is done for theatres which change two, three and four or more times weekly. The real consideration, of course, is the number of shows, rather than the number of days. While there is no hard-and-fast rule, the average here indicated seems to be pretty well maintained.

Utility of discs, incidentally, is also affected by the sort of recording which they contain. Two of them in the same set will not necessarily have the same life. Records of high notes or shrill sounds will not last as long as those of low register. Thus, one disc of a set may be rendered useless for reproducing purposes before the others are. Unless this one is replaced, the others obviously will be of little value.

The number of discs provided with a synchronized picture is equal to the number of reels, plus one. The extra disc carries the overture. Thus, with a six-reel picture, there would be seven discs; with a nine-reel picture, ten discs, and so on.

One of the M-G-M exchanges had been receiving persistent complaints from a certain account of the warping of discs. Investigation revealed that the theatre operator had regularly been storing the discs when not in use by standing them on edge.

This theatre is one of a large chain and it developed that its house managers and projectionists never had been instructed by the theatre organization regarding the proper handling of discs. Only recently, since we directed attention to the matter, has this chain organization explained to its employees that discs are fragile, easily warped and damaged by heat.

Attention should be called both to the necessity for flat storage and for avoidance of heat, such as that from rheostats, lamps, radiators, and so forth.

Discs may warp if they are laid on an uneven surface. Great care, therefore, should be exercised in setting them down, even temporarily. They should not be lifted or carried in stacks, nor be placed on any surface which does not equal in length and breadth the circumference of the disc. Overlapping the edge of a flat table or shelf may cause bending. So also may the horizontal lifting of discs by the edge, so that the weight is not supported over the disc's entire surface.

LONG experience of the Victor Company in packing discs for shipment has enabled them largely to overcome warping in transit. It is not probable, therefore, that many discs will be found to be warped at the time the shipping case is opened. Should such warping be discovered, or should it develop subsequently in the exchange, the difficulty can usually be overcome by placing the discs temporarily on a true flat surface. Their tendency under this treatment will be to straighten themselves.

As little time as possible should elapse between unpacking and the storage of discs in racks.

As previously has been stated, the discs are affected both by dampness and heat. They must not be stored near a radiator and should be kept always in a place which is both dry and reasonably cool. Unless this is done, warping is very likely to result, even though the disc may be properly stored in the racks which have been provided for that purpose.

It is very easy to scratch discs in the process of handling in the exchange. Such scratching may occur in a great variety of ways—by the disc striking a ring, a button on clothing, the edge of another disc, the corner of a table, the edge of a rack, or by coming in contact, even lightly, with any other hard or sharp object.

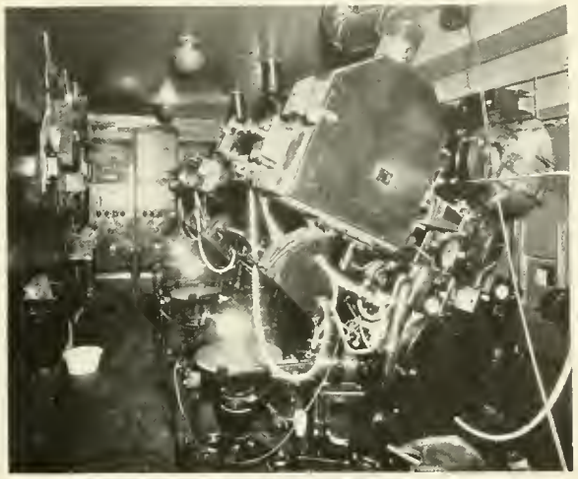
Discs, in spite of the impression which may prevail to the contrary, are comparatively soft. The channels or grooves containing the sound record are really very gragile shells and may easily be broken down. A pin is much more than sufficiently strong for this purpose.

In general, our suggestion is that discs be handled much as very thin and fragile glassware would be.

THE sound track of synchronized film is processed with a very thin protective coating. The purpose of this coating is to prevent the absorption of oil by the film and damaging from dirt.

In cleaning the sound track of film which is thus processed, do not use Carbona or Carbon Tetracloride, as this removes the coating. Wipe carefully with a dry chamois. This will remove the surface oil and dust and keep the sound track in proper condition.

Vitaphone film has 16 frames per foot, and each foot is numbered. Beginning with "0" at the starting mark, the 16th frame after the starting mark is marked No. 1. The 16th frame after No. 1 is marked No. 2, and so throughout the print. There are, therefore, 15 frames without numbers between each pair of numbers. By this system, the position of every single frame in the reel is indicated. In synchronized features there are in addition other numbers on the margin of the picture, which indicates the scene numbers of the picture. These numbers can be the film which indicate the scene numbers distinguished from the footage numbers, because they have a dash at each side, as for instance "—286—," the footage numbers themselves being simply "286," without the dash at either end. In cases where the scene and footage numbers conflict, the footage number is omitted, but is counted, and reference will have to be made to the next footage number in sequence.



If a footage number does not appear at each 16th frame, continue counting until you reach the next number, when you should then have 31 frames between the two footage numbers.

With the numbering system described, it is easy to ascertain whether or not a print has the proper number of frames by simply examining each splice and counting the footage numbers on each side. The two numbers should be consecutive and there should be 15 frames without numbers between them.

In case of a break in a film, make a patch by inserting black leader. Be sure that the number of frames of black leader inserted is exactly the same as the number of frames you take out of the film, plus the frames used for the patches. After putting in the black leader, be sure to check up and see that the numbers follow in sequence and that there are exactly 15 frames without numbers between each pair of footage numbers.

If any numbered frames are missing, or if the missing portion is more than one foot, you will have to check both sides of the break to the next number, and after making the splice, see that you do not forget the intervening numbered frames.

Prints for use with disc records (Vitaphone system) differ in several respects from those which exhibitors are accustomed to handle. The most important differences are as follows: The prints have greater footage than those of non-sound subjects, this difference being at the beginning and end of reels.

At the beginning of each reel there is a title reading: "This reel is properly marked for sound effects." This title is followed by one frame marked "Start," which is the starting point of the reel and corresponds to the starting point of the disc, which is also clearly marked. Footages of prints must be constantly maintained at their original length from the point marked "Start" to the end, if proper sound reproduction is to be had.

The entire reel is printed on one continuous piece of raw stock and without splices. The reel is assembled so that it ends with a sub-title which has a minimum length of 20 feet. The reel which follows has a duplicate of the foregoing title at the beginning and this duplicate title measures 16 feet.

THESE duplicates are placed at the end and beginning of reels to assist in making switches from one projection machine to another. Experience has shown that it is more suitable to switch reels on a sub-title than on a scene. There may be exceptions where change-overs take place after a fade-out and before a fade-in. In such cases, additional footage is provided at the fade-outs and the fade-ins.

There are two reasons why duplicate footage is required for switching reels and discs. The additional footage is needed at the end of the reel which is being run so that the screen will not be dark in event of delay in starting the following reel.

This duplication of material applies to the sound record on the disc as well as to the photographic image (title or fade) on the film. In musical scoring, the orchestra leader marks the note which is being played at the moment the last title of each reel appears on the scene.

The orchestra then plays on as long as the title holds the screen. In scoring the next reel, the orchestra turns back to the marked note and repeats the music which was played at the end of the preceding reel. How this affects actual operation will be seen from the following explanation:

Changing Reels and Records: The method to be used by the theatre when changing over reels and discs is as follows

(A) The operator starts the next machine and the next disc, the moment the first frame of the last title in the reel then running appears on the screen. (However, the picture is not yet turned on, nor is the record yet playing.)

(B) Five seconds after the second machines have been started, and while both are running, the operator turns the second projection machine on the screen and cuts off the first projection machine. (The second reel is now being shown to the audience, but it is running to the sound record of the first disc).

(C) Four seconds after the second of the above operations has been completed, fifteen years

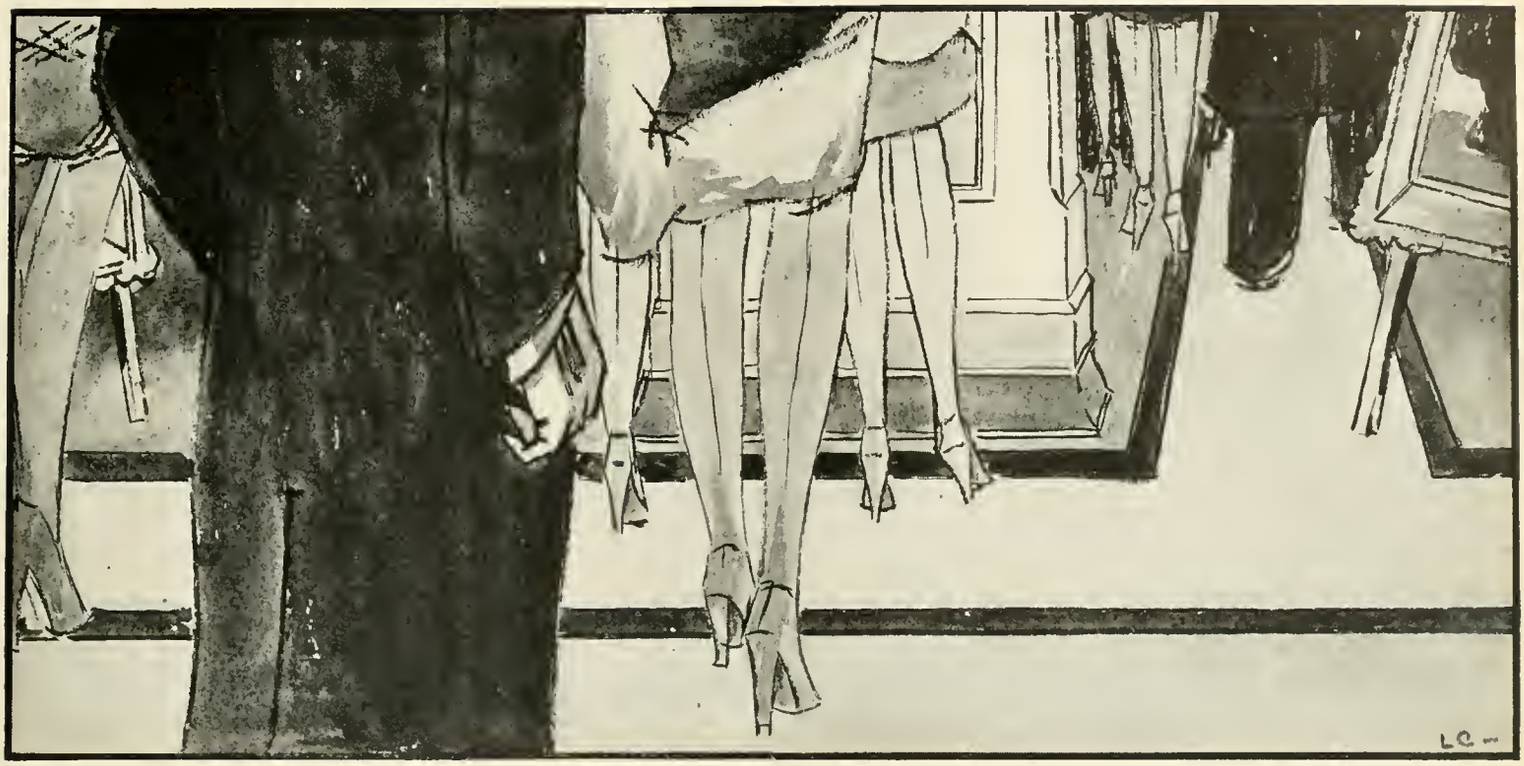
FOR fifteen years, Motion Picture News has covered all the buyers in the theatre field.

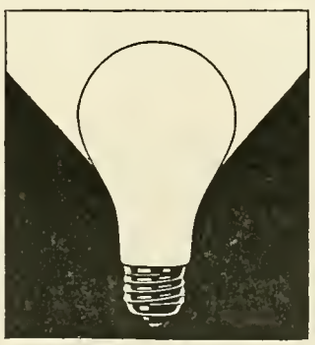


Not a forced circulation, but one acquired and retained thru the strength, character and service that theatre owners recognize in the News.

Further, Motion Picture News equipment editions have gained full recognition from theatre architects of consequence. Architects are a mighty important factor in the sale of theatre equipment.

When advertisers buy Motion Picture News circulation, they are not paying for any "waste." They pay only for the placing of their sales messages before readers that actually buy.

It is because manufacturers of theatre equipment are familiar with the complexities of the structure of the theatre field that they recognize that Motion Picture News circulation represents the individuals and organizations they must sell.



The largest as well as the longest established equipment manufacturers in the theatre industry advertise in Motion Picture News—some with campaigns that have extended over fifteen years.

They're Buying Comfort, Too!

WHEN the feature picture is finished, and the lights go up, what is the effect? Glare? Harsh shadows? Depressing gloom? It makes a big difference. To your patrons. And to the box-office. Good lighting is only good business!

Good lighting depends upon the quality of the lamps you burn. When you use Edison MAZDA* Lamps you get lamps that are of a known standard of lamp quality the result of years of constant research. In addition, you receive through reliable theater supply organizations the engineering services of the Edison Lamp Works of General Electric Company.

Sound Arrives at Skookum Hollow

And Reproduced Music Seems to Fit Better There Than in the Metropolis

RECENTLY, a correspondent to this department, wishing to impress upon us the enduring nature of his regard, closed his letter with the words, "Yours till the Skookum Hollow Theatre installs sound pictures."

Until very recently this expression aptly served to indicate the general feeling of futility which existed in regard to the practical availability of sound devices to the small theatre. The type of theatre, that is to say, in which the choice of such equipment rests solely upon financial—or rather, a lack of financial—considerations which, ordinarily, do not confront the larger houses situated in more prosperous localities.

At the time of their first general appearance, sound pictures, like the playing of golf, were the sport of the rich and the seemingly unobtainable goal of the poor. Today, sound pictures, so-called, even as golf, are within the reach of all, including even the village theatre of the Opera House type with its single nightly showings.

Sound pictures, in truth, have come to the Skookum Hollow Theatre. And—what mockery—they appear to offer more advantage to this class of theatre than to any other. Indeed, sound pictures appear to be the very salvation of those theatres which, heretofore, have had to rely upon nothing better than a piano or an organ accompaniment to provide a musical background for their picture presentations.

The considerations which surround the installation of sound pictures are, for the small theatre, entirely different from those which apply in the case of the large city theatres.

Increased operating economy is of no import to the small theatre because for an annual cost which is little or no greater than its present schedule it can obtain far superior musical accompaniments. In the large theatre, however, which uses sound equipment to displace high priced orchestras, the offering of "canned" music represents a positive retrogression in the matter of musical quality; a retrogression which is deliberately incurred for the sake of obtaining increased operating economies.

Of course, the ultimate summation of all advantages in both cases is not so simple as expressed above because the installation of relatively high-priced equipment by the large theatre makes it possible for this class to present features which are beyond the kent of the village house. Chief among these features is that of talking pictures. Another is the synchronization of music with film by the hands of experts.

ASIDE from the purely musical advantages which non-synchronous apparatus holds forth to the small theatre of limited financial means, there are additional advantages in the form of realistic sound effects which can be cued to suitable pictures and which further tend to level off the differences that exist between the deluxe house and the small theatre.

Sound effects of every conceivable nature are now available to all theatres at a very moderate price as respects both equipment and accessories (sound records). As a practical example of the interest which these sound effects hold for the small town theatre we present herewith a letter by William G. Walker, Manager of the Pastime Theatre, Coplay, Penna.:

> I am a reader of the columns in your Projection Department in the News. I would like to have some information on how to produce sound effects such as airplane motors, gun shots, etc. We are using non-synchronized phonographic music records with the picture.
> Our outfit is similar to the Orchestraphone, using Western Electric amplification and cone type speakers.
> For your convenience I am enclosing stamped and addressed envelope for reply.

This letter is but one of many received, all with the same thought in the minds of the writers.

A complete library of sound effect records are now available to all theatres which have the apparatus required to reproduce them. In this connection we wish to bring to the atention of exhibitors who are in a position to make use of this service a typical library which offers 12 double faced sound effect records containing over 30 different sound effects with which any exhibitor can actually cue his pictures.

These records are electrically recorded and are manufactured of high grade materials and offer to the theatre realistic sounds of every nature.

A specific list of the sound effects offered are as follows:

Sleigh bells, steamboat whistle, cheering of carnival crowds, gun shots (singly or in volleys), auto horn, crash of falling

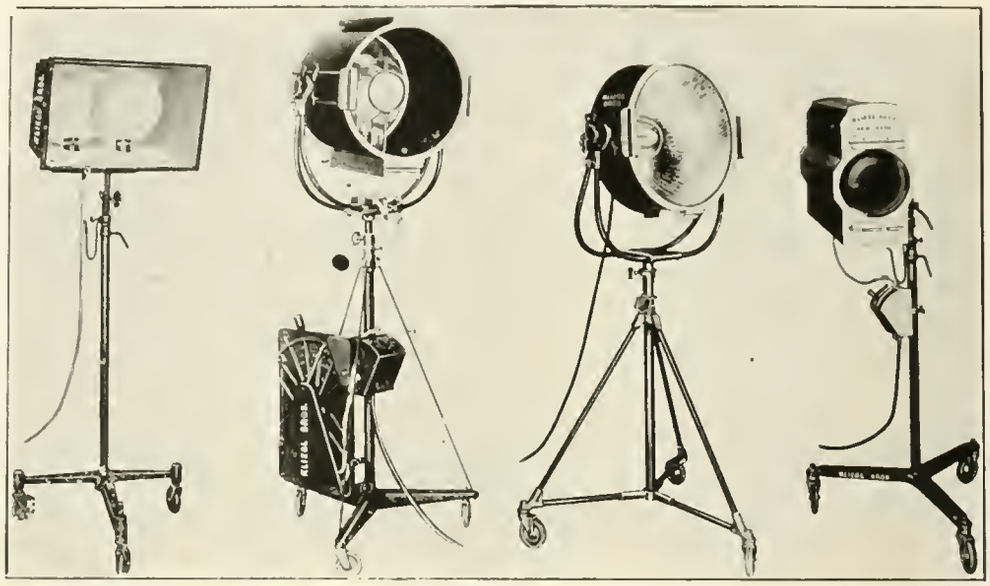
New and Improved Equipment

A Review of the Latest Developments in Theatre Engineering

Kliegl Offers New Type Mazda Unit for Studio Work

THE advent of the talking movie, with its sensitive sound-recording instruments, imposing a restriction for absolute silence in the studio, and the demand for greater economy in the lighting of studio sets, has resulted in the development of a new form of "Klieglights" for motion picture photography, in which high-candle-power incandescent lamps are used for the light source.



The new Kliegs, it is asserted, furnish brilliant, evenly diffused light high in actinic qualities, permitting photography with clearness of detail, full color values, sharp definition, and freedom from sound interference.

Incandescent studio lighting was brought into almost general vogue at the bigger studios during the past year. Factors which give the incandescent preference over the arc as a studio light source—as exhaustive experimentation at various coast studios developed—are reduced labor requirements in operation, the lightness of the equipment, making transportation less costly, economies in current consumption, production time and the ease and speed with which they are handled. With the introduction of sound recording, particularly with the "light track on film" system, difficulties arose from the extraneous sounds or noises which incandescent lamps caused. Thus, the accomplishment of a noiseless lamp of this type represents an important step in improvement.

The Klieglights of the incandescent type operate on the service line, whether A.C. or D.C., and the makers claim absolute freedom from sound interference.

There are four types of units, for general illumination, long-range spotlighting over a restricted area, floodlight for evenly-diffused brilliant light, spotlight for long-range concentrated beam. The units are described as follows:

KLIEG-SUN (No. 1144B) is a long beam, high intensity floodlight for projecting a strong, well-defined, evenly-diffused beam of light a considerable distance—covering a restricted area; used especially for general lighting of deep sets, producing sunlight effects, spotting-out, modelling, and for accentuating main points of interest; accommodates 2,000-, 5,000-, and 10,000-watt G type Mazda lamps. Projector consists of a cylindrical lamp housing containing a receptacle, reflecting mirror and adjustable lens; mounted on a telescopic standard; set on a base fitted with ball-bearing rubber-tired casters; constructed as to minimize weight; designed to allow free and easy insure comparatively cool operation—thus prolonging the life of the lamps; and slide grooves on the front permit the use of a diffusing screen.

Receptacle for the lamp is mounted on a traveling base, controlled by a small lever at the rear of the housing. It moves along the reflector axis, which allows focusing the lens and regulating its beam spread from eight to approximately thirty degrees.

An adapter is furnished to fit the lamp receptacle, permitting the use of the smaller-sized lamps than that for which the unit is designed. The adapter serves to correctly position the lamp filament in the optical axis of the reflector.

A heat-resisting mirrored-glass parabolic reflector, in the rear of the housing, back of the lamp, reflects the light.

KLIEG SIDE-FLOODLIGHT (No. 1153) is a high-intensity variable-range floodlight giving an evently-diffused light for general illumination; projecting the beam usually in a horizontal direction or at a slight angle above or below the horizontal; used as a side lamp for general lighting of deep studio sets and close-up photography; accommodates a 1,000- or 1,500-watt P. S. 52 Mazda lamp.

Projector consists of a deep glass-lined reflector fitted with a mogul-screw-base receptacle, assembled in a sheet-metal housing, supported by a yoke; mounted on a telescopic pedestal, and set on a base equipped with ball-bearing, rubber-tired casters so that it may be easily rolled about.

Reflector is of parabolic contour made of spirally-rifled heat-resisting glass, giving directional control and diffusion of the light beam. A mogul-screw-base receptacle is set back of the reflector to accommodate the lamp, and a sheet-metal housing affords protection for the glass reflector and the lamp.

KLIEG TWIN-FLOODLIGHT (No. 1150) is a wide-spread high-intensity floodlight for general illumination, projecting an evenly-diffused light over a large area; used for lighting foregrounds, close-ups, and general lighting of studio sets; accommodates two 1,000-watt or two 1,500-watt PS 52 Mazda lamps.

Projector consists of an all metal box reflector fitted with two screw-base receptacles; mounted on a telescopic pedestal, set on a base equipped with ball-bearing rubber-tired casters, and so designed as to allow variations in the projection of the light in every direction, adjustments in height, and to roll easily over the floor.

Reflector is a spun aluminum set in a deep open-front sheet-metal box. The contour of the reflector is parabolic, giving directional control of the light, and its surface has been chemically treated to produce controlled diffusion of the light. The receptacles are placed well toward the rear, with the lamps close to the reflector.

KLIEG SPOTLIGHT (No. 8 N 22) is a high-intensity long-range spotlight for use with incandescent lamps; projects a concentrated beam of light any distance up to 100 ft., gives a 3-ft spot, or a wide spread; and is used in the studio for: back lighting—to give depth to the picture; cross lighting—to eliminate facial shadows; spotlighting, follow-up floodlighting, modelling, and for special lighting effects; accommodates a 2,000-watt concentrated filament G 48 Mazda lamp.

Spotlight is flexibly mounted on a telescopic pedestal stand, can be set at any angle, raised, lowered, or turned in any direction, and the base is fitted with casters permitting it to be rolled easily over the floor.

Lamp housing, 22 inches in length, is light-tight, thoroughly ventilated, and equipped with: an 8-inch condensing lens—so supported as to allow unrestricted expansion of the glass to avoid breakage.

New Theatre for St. Petersburg

St. Petersburg, Florida, is to have a new neighborhood house. During the boom a theatre was built on Tangerine Avenue, between 17th and 18th streets, but it was never opened as the company that had leased it went under with the collapse of the boom. It has remained vacant for two years. Now the owner, T. L. Heard, believing conditions are right again, is equipping the house and will open with film programs at popular prices in December.

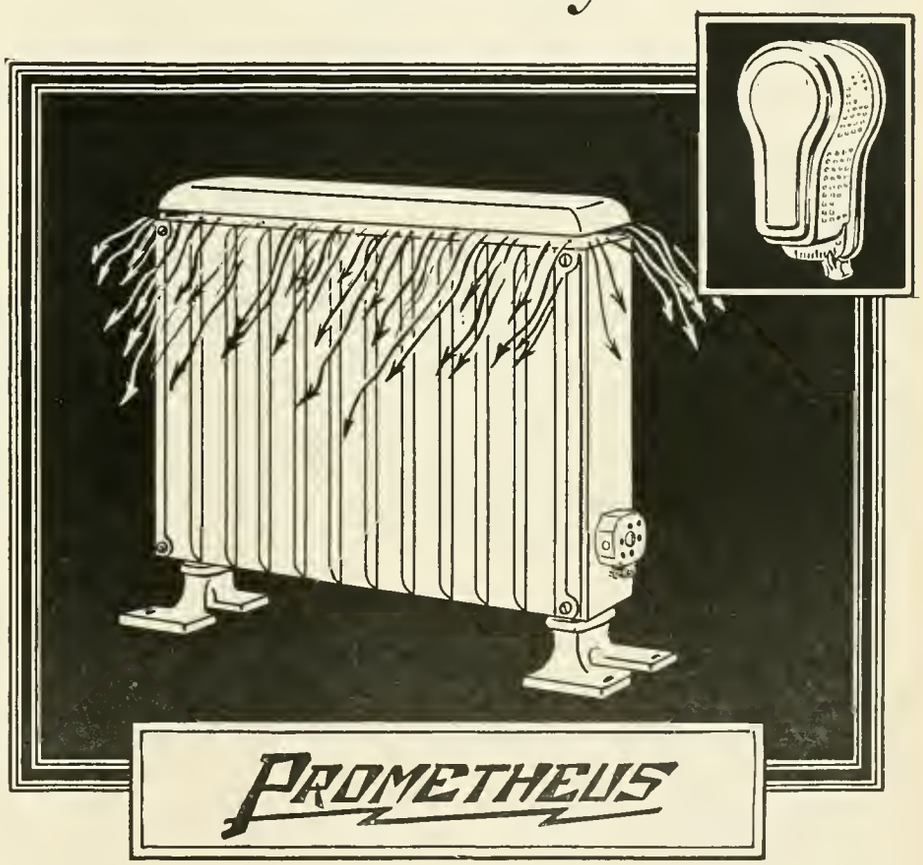
been flying high in planes either hired or obtained through some reciprocal arrangement to scatter programs, hand bills and some "comps" to the men on the street, who since Lindburgh made good is ever on the alert to lend his eyes and attention to a plane soaring or stunting overhead. The large number of airports opened in American cities during the year also served to enhance the exploitation value of the aviation pictures, and many of them were capitalized into big money through this form of advertising. The air mail authorities also have been very responsive to overtures for a publicity hook-up with the picture theatres and that angle has been played widely and profitably for both principals to the arrangement during the year.

Radio is becoming more accessible to the rank and file of the picture theatres through the increasing number of stations and the difficulty they have in getting good "sustaining features." Broadcasts of dialog sequences and complete musical scores of photoplays and Movietone News features started as "stunts" are now on their way to an established place as a standard form of radio entertainment.

Exploitation events at various types which stood out during the course of last year's theatre events include the following items:

A. C. Raleigh, manager of a theatre in Olympia, Wash., during the latter part of the year promoted a local campaign, in which merchants, town officials and the newspapers took a most active part, to boost home town buying in a determined and effective drive to off-set the flow of trade attracted to nearby large cities.

A state-wide harmonica contest, based on the tie-up between Educational and the Hohner company, which it may be noted in passing is perhaps the longest-lived exploitation tie-ups ever developed for the films, was held in Texas. A "leap year stage wedding" put on early in 1928 at the Fond du Lac Theatre, Fond du Lac, Wisconsin, must be credited, or held responsible, according to how you look at it, for a flurry of stage weddings which swept across the country during the year. The stage wedding had a prosperous year in 1928, even though William Allen White did write a bitter editorial denouncing them.



Exploitation also got closer to another rival of the movies among popular pastimes when exhibitors played up the golf angle of such pictures as "Spring Fever" and "Sporting Goods." In Los Angeles all hole-in-one golfers were awarded prizes by the theatre exploiting "Spring Fever" in that city. A golf-driving contest held at a local course was a popular event and attracted attention to the showing of "Sporting Goods" at the Worth Theatre, Fort Worth, Texas.

Probably one of the most extensive exploitation stunts was that which Milton Korach developed for his showing of "The Jazz Singer" at the Rialto theatre in Omaha. The Rialto inaugurated its sound installation with this presentation, and the officials of the U. P. arranged special excursions from 120 neighboring towns into Omaha during the run of the picture. This stunt was used later in other cities where suitable facilities were available. The U. P. executives who agreed to the stunt must have been favorably impressed, because several months later that company listed the showing of "Wings" at the Omaha theatre as one of several inducements stressed in literature selling week-end excursions from nearby towns.

Kansas City was the scene of an unusual tie-up between a theatre and a local traction company. An advertising campaign conducted by the Kansas City Public Service Company gave special emphasis to selling people the "Ride the Street Car to the Theatre" idea, which

The Promethens Organ Heater protects the delicate mechanism of the organ by heating the lower part of the chamber in a scientific way. Unlike other devices which send heat upward, thus neglecting the equally important base, Prometheus deflects the warm air downward. The heat naturally rises throughout the organ chamber giving a constant, unvarying degree of temperature. Proper heating avoids expensive repairs and maintenance costs due to destructive cold, moisture and climatic changes. It also keeps pitch accurate.

Automatic Thermostat regulates heat to the proper degree required. Furnished in Aluminum. Occupies only 14¼ x 4 inches. Sturdy. Durable.

the operator switches the discs by use of the fader. (Both the second reel and the second disc are now in operation for the audience and the first reel and first disc have been cut out. The switching, therefore is complete.)

The foregoing method will no doubt be improved from time to time. We are all trying to work out some means of providing for switching which will not require the amount of footage on the screen that this system involves. More will be written to you later regarding this.

Exceptional care must be used when inspecting or otherwise handling synchronized prints to avoid breaking the film. As there are no splices in a new synchronized print and as it must be run at normal speed when used in connection with sound, the chance of breakage in operation is reduced to a minimum.

When a break occurs in a synchronized print, it is repaired by inserting "back film" corresponding in length to the number of frames that were taken out.

The process of reproducing sound from film is comparatively simple. After the picture has been projected, the film leaves the projector head and enters what might be called a sound reproducing magazine. A narrow beam of bright light is here focused through a split upon the "sound track." This light, varying in intensity according to the density of the lines through which it passes on the sound track, falls on a photo-electric cell. And this produces an electric current whose variations correspond to the light and therefore to the sound which was originally recorded. The current passes to amplifiers and finally is converted into sound by means of receivers and horns located at the screen.

It is thus apparent that the sound channel on a Movietone film is not, as you may perhaps have previously supposed, a grooved record. It has no resemblance in this respect to disc records. A needle is not used in reproduction. The sound is reproduced (as just described above) wholly by the use of light, electric current, receivers and horns.

Neither, as many people presume, is the sound record on the same frame as the photographic image with which synchronization is to be provided.

Splicing Movietone film: When the film carrying a sound track becomes broken, as few frames as possible should be cut out for the splice. A break in the sound track is even more noticeable to the audience than a break in the picture. However, it is not advisable to go to the extreme of saving weak film which may be the cause of trouble later on.

Why some splices cause clicks: A plain splice, no matter how carefully made, will cause a click to be heard from the sound projectors as the splice passes through the sound reproducing attachment. This is because the two edges and the overlap disturb the uniformity of the sound track and produce the same effect as though noises had actually been recorded.

How to make non-click splices: In dealing with this class of film, first make a splice in the usual manner, then paint over the sound track portion of this splice in black. The painted mark on the sound track should be roughly triangular in shape. It should have a blunted apex and should be roughly triangular in shape. It should have a blunted apex and should be between ⅜ of an inch and ½ an inch wide at the base. If the splice is painted in this manner it will be almost unnoticed when passing through the reproducing attachment. The reason for this is that the change in the light intensity which the splice causes will be at a frequency below the audible range. (It will actually cause sound, but such sound will be so low the human ear will not register it.)

Manufacturers of sound producing apparatus recommend the use of Zapon Concentrated Black Lacquer No. 2002-2 for opaquing splices. When a thinner is necessary, Zapon Thinner No. 20 is recommended. The lacquer should be applied to the shining or celluloid side of the film and not to the emulsion side. It is represented that the preparation dries almost instantly, adheres tightly and is much more satisfactory than India ink or other substitutes that originally were used.

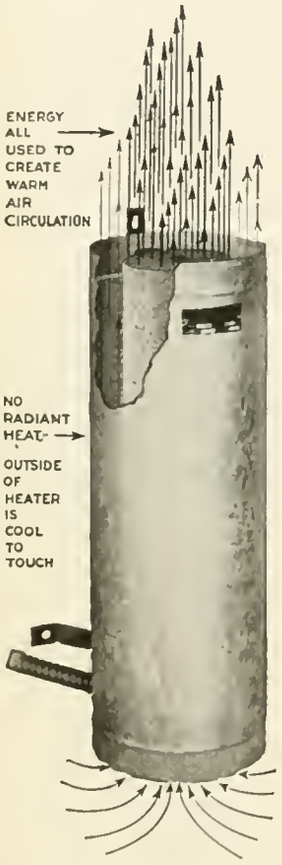
There is no basis of figuring from which even an approximate idea may be obtained of the additional space required for storing discs. We have no idea how many theatres eventually will be equipped for sound projection. And there is such variation in reports of the life of sound records and in the reports of the number of sets required for proper service that we are unable to predict what our own experience will show.



The question of storage space for the first few sound releases should not bother any exchange. But when sound feature releases increase in number, and when they are augmented by short features, the space required for disc storage may exceed what is available.

There is nothing in such a condition which justifies alarm or worry. Possibly a little inconvenience—that's all. But if your exchange has none too much storage room at present, then it certainly would be wise to give thought now to what you will do later. If you think you are not going to be able to cope with the storage situation, make a survey of the immediate neighborhood and ascertain what storage space is available that can be rented on a month-to-month basis, or on a short term lease (from three to six months). Bear in mind that discs are not inflammable and, therefore, expensive fireproof quarters are not required for their storage. A basement—a store—a loft—almost any place convenient to the exchange will suffice. Therefore, the rental should be nominal.

Dampness, according to Victor engineers, is not likely to be harmful, but it might affect labels and envelopes, causing mold or spotting or other bad appearance. Experimentally, Victor engineers have played discs across which water was running. The same is true of oil. Playing was not affected, although the records were somewhat marked. Neither was the efficiency of the discs subsequently found to have been in the least impaired.

There is, however, another matter which needs careful consideration. A cool storage place is essential. Discs are made of iron ore and shellac, which are blended under pressure. The material will actually melt at comparatively low tempearture—200 degrees. But it will soften and bend long before it melts. Discs which have been displayed in store windows—with Southern exposure—have taken most unusual shapes. Direct sun light may cause bending or warping.

Fire apparatus (taken from actual big city fire department and containing siren, bells, etc.), hand clapping and applause, crowds cheering as at a football game, gong, cuckoo, horse hoofs on pavement, two realistic airplane records (with orchestral background and without), drone of airplane motor, machine gun, and shriek of falling plane, crash of falling airplane, church bells with orchestral background.

The entire set of records, as listed above, are priced at $21.50 and can be played on all types of record reproducing equipment for non-synchronous service.

Not all manufacturers of apparatus of this kind are prepared, or are in a position, to offer this cueing service and unless the exhibitor feels himself thoroughly competent to do the skillful work of cueing himself he should be careful to purchase his non-synchronous equipment only from such companies that offer the cueing service along with the equipment.

All Uniforms for Mammoth Theatre Made in 10 Days

The complete uniform wardrobe, consisting of more than 150 afternoon and evening uniforms worn by the ushers, doormen, musicians, etc., at the Fox Theatre in Detroit, was produced in ten days' time in accordance with rush order arrangements between the theatre company executives and Browning, King & Co., manufacturers of uniforms.

In addition to specifying special cut and fabrics, the order which the uniform maker completed in ten days called for special gold plated buttons featuring a unique microphone insignia.

Other items prominent were the use of stage drops as advance trailers, and stage settings or acts to announce some special future booking; local reels produced in cooperation with newspapers—though in this line the headlines went to the tie-up of the Hal Roach "Our Gang" comedians with the Loew theatres and the production at the latter of local "Our Gang" comedies; "Usher Endorsement Cards" distributed by the staff of theatres and giving the usher's personal endorsement of some special show the following week; Serial Attendance Cards, provided with numbers to be punched as each child to whom such were issued entered the theatre, those cards having 11 numbers punched entitling the bearer to free admission to the final chapter of the serial picture; Reproduction in store windows of photoplay scenes in which wax dummies and naturalistic settings were used; Extensive use of phonograph records bearing a specially made "sales talk and vocal rendition of theme song" for "Lilac Time"; Presentation of 48 burros to the Democratic Convention in Houston by the Will Horowitz theatres, a stunt which gained national publicity; Extensive newspaper cooperation for theatres playing "Telling the World" through the M-G-M tieup with the United Press; Bridge tournament held on afternoons for week at Pueblo, Col., worked out on the elimination basis with a prize for the finalist; "Gaucho" gym tournaments conducted by Y.M.C.A.'s and newspapers as originally introduced in Cleveland by the Stillman theatre management.

New theatres opened last year afforded theatre publicity men opportunity to display the advanced technic which has been developed for theatre exploitation. Several notable drives of this kind came to light during the year. The United Artists theatre in Los Angeles, which was exploited from every angle employed in putting over some special feature picture, and the new Fox theatre in Detroit campaigns were among the most striking.

Architecture is now being very intensively exploited in new theatre campaigns. The preliminary newspaper campaign for the Paradise theatre in Chicago was based wholly on the unusual architectural features of that novel atmospheric house. The illustrations for the displays for two weeks after opening and for the weeks in advance all showed fragments of the decorative treatment of various parts of the Paradise.

Selling Importance of Good Projection is Job of New Advisory Council

By LESTER B. ISAAC

Supervisor of Projection, Loew's Incorporated

THE Projection Advisory Council has been organized to "Develop a better realization of the importance of good projection and to assist all activities seeking to improve projection conditions." This is a broad and comprehensive declaration requiring much detailed explanation, but the plans which are quite simple and workable have received the strong endorsement of Government and Municipal Departments, large industrial and commercial organizations, engineering and projection societies and many of America's best known projectionists.

The motto of the Projection Advisory Council, "Progress Through Understanding," is not a mere slogan but a sudied attempt to combine in these three words all the plans and purposes of this new organization. "Understanding," in its varied meanings, conveys a comprehensive explanation of what the Projection Advisory Council will seek to accomplish for the advancement of projection and the motion picture industry.

The chief purpose of the Projection Advisory Council is to conduct a campaign of constructive propaganda and there will be no conflict with the work of any other organization, no duplication of effort. Ignorance and indifference are costly and can only be dispelled through education. A clearer realization of just what good projection means will be of inestimable value to the public and the motion picture industry.

Various agencies and individuals have worked in the past to improve projection conditions, but the efforts of the Projection Advisory Council will be more collective and concentrated. We feel sure that this unified influence is highly necessary in the Projection Department, which has attained a greater importance and become more complex with the tremendous expansion of the motion picture industry.

No attempt will be made to have the Projection Advisory Council comprehensively function at once and each committee will be given one simple, workable but important task before starting any other activity for the Council. Elaboration of the plans of the Projection Advisory Council will be postponed until, by the successful performance of certain practical but highly essential work, we can gain the confidence of the industry. The Projection Advisory Council is international in its membership and all possible care is being taken in the selection of the directors and chairmen of committees.

Ideas similar to those upon which the Projection Advisory Council has been founded have been put into successful operation in many other industries and we see no reason why equally satisfactory results cannot be secured by the Projection Advisory Council for the benefit of the motion picture industry.

The work of a number of the committee will be the routine activities of any organization and some of the committees will develop certain ideas which eventually can be put into successful operation. It is not practicable at this time to give details of the work of all committees, but several will be taken to indicate how the Projection Advisory Council expects to put into practical operation the ideas and ideals upon which the council has been founded.

As has already been explained, each committee for the present will take one simple, workable idea and carry it to a successful conclusion before taking up other work. We fully realize that there are many ideas which deserve the consideration of an organization such as the Projection Advisory Council, but if too much is attempted at the start more harm than good will be done. In the simplest manner and with the fewest possible words the work of several of the committees will be outlined.

Committee on Projection Room Planning: The work of this committee will be to have a pamphlet prepared on the "Fundamentals of projection room planning." These fundamentals are size, location, ventilation, freedom from drafts, general working conditions, toilet facilities, etc. Only those matters will be considered which the owner and architect should allow for when the plans of the theatre are still on paper. For more exact technical information the Projection Advisory Council will recommend that the architect and owner consult experts in the various departments connected with the construction and equipping of the projection room. The Projection Advisory Council, however, will see that this pamphlet on the "Fundamentals of projection room planning" is placed in the hands of architects and owners as soon as plans are filed. This is the time to consider the fundamentals and not when the theatre is approaching completion.

Safety Committee: The first work of this committee will be to secure the fullest possible information regarding rules and laws on safety in projection rooms, condition of equipment, etc. When we have this information and conclusions can be reached, recommendations will be made by the Projection Advisory Council and presented to the industry. The work of this and the preceding committee is based upon ideas now in general practice in all large commercial and industrial organizations, that anything which affects the health of the employee reduces his efficiency. It is a part of wise, modern humanitarianism to free employees from handicaps which affect their health and safety. It is, also, a matter of plain, common sense and good judgment to provide all conditions which enable projectionists to do their work in the best possible way.

Equipment Specifications: The work of this committee will be to draw up standard specification sheets to enable owners and projectionists to give adequate information when placing orders for equipment.

Committee of Awards: The work of this committee will be "to suitably recognize any work for the advancement of projection or an act of meritorious nature performed by a projectionist." In many instances projectionists have risked their lives to protect patrons and the Projection Advisory Council believes that such men should receive recognition.

Committee on Resolutions: Will give

"Progress Through Understanding" Slogan of Council

"Understanding" signifying knowledge will receive the attention of the Projection Advisory Council and the projectionist aided in every way to secure all possible theoretical and practical information regarding his work.

"Understanding" of the activities of all societies working for the advancement of projection is essential and such organizations will receive the approval and co-operation of the Projection Advisory Council.

The Projection Advisory Council will promote "understanding" which will enable the public to more fully realize that poor projection develops physical handicaps which greatly detract from the full enjoyment of motion pictures. The public as well as the industry should have a better "Understanding" of the artistic possibilities of good projection.

The Projection Advisory Council will create a clearer "understanding" of the value of good working conditions in the projection room and show the tremendous financial loss created by defective equipment.

Most of all the Projection Advisory Council hopes to give encouragement to "understanding" that dispels "misunderstanding." All suffer by the ill-will created through the failure to properly realize the responsibility and problems of others.

recognition to owners, executives and managers who promote better projection standards by providing better working conditions and establishing pleasant relations with projectionists. Executives who encourage skill and conscientious effort are a more potent influence for the advancement of better projection than has been generally realized.

THE activities briefly outlined may not necessarily be the most important for the new organization to consider, but they are unquestionably the most advisable to take up at this time. "Nothing would ever be attempted if all possible objection must first be overcome," and we ask every department of this great industry to send the new organization off with "best wishes" even though no more tangible assistance can be given until the Projection Advisory Council has put its plans into practical operation.

Board of Directors: Lester B. Isaac, President, Supervisor of Projection, Loew's, Incorporated; Laurence Jones, Secretary and Treasurer, Albee Theatre, Brooklyn, formerly editor of American Projectionist; J. Mogler's Bill for Coins to Kids $2,823.60 for Year

Joseph Mogler, owner of the Mogler, Bremen and Excello theatres in North St. Louis, president of the St. Louis Motion Picture Exhibitors' League and State Senator on December 22 acted as Santa Claus for 1700 children in the vicinity of his theatres by passing out about $600 in new quarters in front of the Bremen Bank.

The innovation started as more or less of a joke last year, when one of two youngsters asked him for a nickel. He gave both a nice new 5-cent piece.

The following Saturday the same two kids and a dozen or so more were on hand and once more Joe passed out coins. And every Saturday since that the crowds grew steadily.

During the fifty weeks Mogler gave away $2,823.60.

Combine Organ and Sound System for Musical Feature

IN its ability to hold the place it has maintained as an important feature of picture presentations despite changing styles in entertainment and the very mechanics of projection and stagecraft, nothing in the theatre matches the resources and versatility of the pipe organ. For years the organ has held on as new ideas supplanted the old. And when the new became standard it was discovered that importantly associated with it was the theatre pipe organ.

At the Plymouth Theatre in Worcester, Mass., several novelties employing the sound reproducer and the organ in combination are finding great popular success. Prominent among these are the offerings of a "singing organist," whose vocal renditions are made into a microphone connected with the sound amplifier while he accompanies himself on the two-manual Robert Morton organ which is one of the featured attractions of the Plymouth.

This, one of many similar stunts, is becoming vogue at many theatres equipped with sound apparatus. The microphone is placed on the console within convenient speaking distance of the organist. The organ music, of course, issues from the pipes behind the proscenium grilles while the voice is amplified from the horns located back of the screen.

Another practice is to use the microphone as a means of making announcements urging the audience to join in the chorus of some song played on the organ and illustrated with slides which flash the words on the screen.

Much experimentation has been carried on at the Plymouth with the result that the Robert Morton organ installed there is becoming one of the leading standard attractions of that beautiful playhouse.

Considerable showmanship has gone into the appearance which the builders have given the visible features of the instrument. The console, which is located on a raised platform, is handsomely finished with a stipple effect done in gold bronze polychromed to match the interior ornamentation of the Plymouth.

Publix Plans Active Battle On West Coast

Changing Metropolitan to Paramount in L. A.; Will Sell Million Dollar

Publix has decided that they will inaugurate the stiffest type of competition on the west coast. This step was decided on immediately on their breaking relations with the West Coast Theatres, which organization had been operating their houses along the Pacific Coast. Publix turned over the operation of these theatres to West Coast about 18 months ago when Harold B. Franklin became president of the Pacific Coast Chain. At the beginning of this year Publix decided that for the best interests of their holdings they would again operate the theatres and broke with West Coast.

One of the first moves will be to remodel the front of the Metropolitan Theatre in Los Angeles and give it a new marquee that will be the same as the Paramount in New York and at the same time rename the house The Paramount. An extensive advertising campaign has been laid out for the theatre and the strongest type of attractions will be played there. This will be true of both screen and stage entertainment.

New Policy Plans

At the same time they will dispose of the Million Dollar Theatre which is now under lease to a producer of stock burlesque, but as the site is extremely for commercial purposes it is believed that the purchasers will put a business building on the property. Third and Broadway, where the Million Dollar is located, is no longer the center of things theatrical as it was when Sid Grauman built the house, the trend being to the south from that point.

In San Francisco the Granada is also to undergo extensive alterations and here also will a policy of the best for the stage and screen be followed

Other Publix houses in San Francisco will also undergo a change of policy from what has been pursued by West Coast during the year and a half that they have ben operating. The only house that West Coast will continue to operate in the northern California city will be Loew's Warfield, as was the case prior to their arrangement with Publix, until the new house which the William Fox organization has under construction there will be completed.

Of course in Los Angeles the reverse of this situation will exist for Publix will have only the Paramount there, unless there is some deal with Joseph M. Schenck whereby the operation of that house and the new United Artists might be pooled.

"Prisoners" Griffith's First Under F. N.-Vita Contract

Under her new contract which covers a period of two years at a considerable increase in salary, Corinne Griffith will appear exclusively in First National-Vitaphone pictures, her first to be Franz Molnar's play, "Prisoners." The production will be directed by William A. Seiter.

Exhibitor Unit Urges More Advertising in Trade Papers

E. Penn., S. Jersey, Delaware Petition Distributors Against Practice of Curtailment

At the regular monthly meeting of the M. P. T. O. of Eastern Pennsylvania, Southern New Jersey and Delaware held in Philadelphia, a resolution was passed urging that national producing and distributing organizations do not curtail trade paper advertising. It was felt that a curtailment of such information on the part of distributors and producers would have a detrimental reaction on the picture business itself. Copies of the following resolution, which was passed, will be mailed to all local and national distributors.

Text of Resolution

"WHEREAS, it has been quite noticeable during the past twelve months that producing and distributing companies have advertised less and less information concerning pictures in the various trade papers, and

WHEREAS, trade papers are one of the mediums to which exhibitors may turn for information concerning forthcoming attractions, and

WHEREAS, the lack of proper information to the exhibitors concerning forthcoming productions seriously affects the business of the exhibitors, it is therefore

RESOLVED—'At open meeting of Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Eastern Penna., Southern New Jersey and Delaware, held on December 27, 1928, in the City of Philadelphia, that producers and national distributors be advised that it is the consensus of this meeting that it is absolutely essential and necessary that more information be advertised in trade papers as to forthcoming productions, in order that exhibitors may be properly advised as to such forthcoming productions, and further, that a copy of this resolution be sent to all local and national distributors.'"

Attest: Geo. P. Aarons
Secretary.
M. P. T. O. E. Pa., S. N. J. & DEL.

Officers of the organization in expressing themselves on the resolution were of the unanimous opinion that trade paper advertising is one of the big assets of the industry.

Al Rosen Brings Suit Against Baclanova

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 10—Olga Baclanova, Russian actress under term contract to Paramount, was made defendant in suit filed in Superior Court by Al Rosen, agent and manager. Rosen asks for $1,460 due him as commissions on the term contract he secured the actress with Paramount.

Baclanova signed a five-year contract with Rosen several months ago, whereby the latter was authorized to act as her agent in securing picture engagements. He sold her for one of the featured parts in Universal's "The Man Who Laughs" even after another actress had been selected for the role. Later, he placed her in two pictures at Paramount, and then negotiated a long-term contract for her with the latter company. The actress paid Rosen commission on the free-lance engagements.

Upon signing the term contract with Paramount, Baclanova assumed the attitude that she had no further use for an agent, and was not obligated to pay him commissions on her salary as called for in their agreement. She informed Rosen he would not receive further commissions, and then filed suit in court, asking that her contract with the agent be set aside.

the Corporation and a ban was issued on the reproduction of the likeness of William Fox, the president of that company. Within the last week information has been received from the west coast that all of the theatres that are owned 100 per cent by William Fox or the West Coast Circuit which is the same, are to have the name of William Fox blazoned forth in electric lights. This is all part of the plan to build up the organization as an institution in the minds of the public. Shortly the public is going to be let in on the Fox stock. Fox, it is understood, is going to start campaigns on the securities of that organization in New England on the strength of the Poli holdings in that territory which were purchased by them a short time ago; in New York and vicinity on the taking over of the independent theatres to the value of some $45,000,000 in Greater New York alone and on the Coast where the organization controls the West Coast chain.

In a great many instances right now the film executives are leaning backwards in the matter of publicity. Instead, of rushing into print as they have been wont to do in the past, now when they are approached and asked for a statement they, in nine out of ten instances, refuse to talk.

Jannings Replaces Menjou as Star of "The Concert"

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, Jan. 10.—Adolphe Menjou has won out in his argument against Paramount executives when he refused to portray the star role in "The Concert," Leo Deitrichstein's play, for his last picture under contract. This is revealed in the assignment of Emil Jannings to use it for his next vehicle, with Florence Vidor co-featured.

N. Y. Theatre Receipts Slip As Sound Novelty Wears Off

Chain Executive Declares Sound Features Prove Only a "Flash in Pan"

IN the Greater New York territory a survey of the box office returns on neighborhood houses made during the last few weeks by chain executives, based on box office returns, shows that the district theatres which have had sound amplification devices installed have by this time again assumed the normal in receipts. During the first weeks after the sound pictures were presented the receipts leaped so that the theatres showed tremendous profits on the operation, providing that the sound installation was not charged too heavily against the current receipts, but the profits did not pay off what the cost of installation was. Now the receipts are right back to where they were with silent pictures before the sound craze struck the theatres.

One of the executives of a circuit covering the Greater City stated openly that he believed that after all was said and done that the sound features were to be only a flash in the pan. His houses with sound installations were right back in receipts to where they were before sound was given to the audiences. In addition he found that sound was keeping a number of patrons from the theatres. This conclusion was reached through a circuit-wide canvass of the patrons that was made by the managers of the patrons leaving the theatre after they had witnessed sound or talking productions.

The circuit in question has been the largest in the neighborhoods during the last 15 years and is also in the producing and distributing end of the picture business. The executive who made the statement is in complete control of all of the various branches of the affairs of the organization and his resume of the box office and managerial reports will guide that organization's production plans either for or against sound or talking features. There is one thing certain that the survey will do and that is that this particular company will not at this time spend millions of dollars in the building of sound stages for their productions. They will utilize what they have devised as makeshifts on their lot on the Coast and continue to do so until the public opinion as actually expressed at the box office shall be definitely for or against sound pictures.

mated expenses of the new circuit should be decreased by about 20 per cent with the unification of purchasing power and the ability to show better and newer productions. Box-office receipts are expected to increase in the same amount, so that with this increase in gross and the saving, it is hoped the net return of $5,000,000 will be increased at least 50 per cent; therefore, this circuit, which shows earnings of $5,000,000, ought to make between $7,000,000 and $7,500,000 per year, the company believes.

Acquisition of almost 200 Greater New York Theatres by Fox Metropolitan Playhouses, Inc., will practically eliminate all the so-called independent theatres in the territory and at the same time, give Fox Theatres Corp. a buying power for film estimated at $7,000,000 per year. This purchasing power, it is held, can immeasurably better the quality of neighborhood shows.

Deals Started Last May

Banding together of practically every chain of independent theatres in the Greater New York territory under the banner of William Fox is the result of long deliberations which had their beginnings months ago.

For the last two years independent theatres in the metropolitan district tried to form an organization that would function as one cohesive unit to deal with the various problems that confronted the independent theatre operator, the most important of which was the buying of film and other outside entertainment such as vaudeville. The sound situation in later months added to their problems.

A number of cooperative organizations were attempted at various times. The last attempt was made by Aaron Sapiro. The organization was formed, but it was unable to successfully handle the problems that each circuit, had to deal with and thus disbanded on Dec. 1.

About this time Fox had a conference with the leaders of these various groups and determined the only way to meet the problem would be to actually purchase the theatres, thus combining under one ownership all of the houses in the so-called independent group.

The problems confronting such an acquisition made it a difficult task. To actually accomplish the acquisition Fox solicited the services of A. C. Blumenthal, who had been actively engaged in all the larger activities on behalf of the Fox organization for the last two or three years. After several months of negotiation, contracts have now been signed by which practically every important circuit of independent theatre operators in Manhattan, Brooklyn, Queens, Kings and Westchester county, and a number in New Jersey and Connecticut have agreed to sell their holdings to the Fox Metropolitan Playhouses, Inc.

Legislation Threatened In 12 States

ADMISSION tax legislation is threatened in twelve states, according to the latest report received by those who keep posted on adverse legislation to the industry. It is certain that bills will be introduced in both Vermont and Mississippi. The reason in those two states being that their good roads bonds fall due next year and that the states are not in a financial position to meet them.

C. C. Pettijohn of the Hays organization left for Chicago last week to look over the legislation situation in the mid-west.

F and R-Publix Northwest Rumor of Deal Denied

Another rumor has gone amiss with a denial of a reported new deal between Publix and Finkelstein and Ruben's Northwest Theatre circuit. The report came from Minneapolis as the result of the transfer of G. Ralph Branton to the general management of all Finkelstein and Ruben-Publix houses in the Twin Cities.

Branton has been in charge of the F and R houses except the nine in which Publix is also interested. He was loaned to manage the nine houses as well as those he already had in charge. In denying the story it is announced that F & R continues the booking and management of its own houses.

atre for their entertainment. When sound pictures were first conceived it was recognized that they would bring the greatest transformation in entertainment standards to the small town patrons of the motion picture unaccustomed to the large scale presentations of first-run theatres in the large cities. But, if, in the unprecedented rush for theatre equipments for sound pictures, the small theatres, as a group, have had to await the development of apparatus specially designed for their needs, it is, I think, fortunate that for the most part they have heeded the advice of leaders in the industry not to experiment with untried systems. Western Electric offers its new model with full assurance that it will maintain in the small theatre field the same high standard of quality which has brought to it in the industry its present position of recognized leadership."

Paramount Retains Title of "Gentlemen of the Press"

"Gentlemen of the Press," the name of Ward Morehouse's stage play which just closed a run on Broadway and which Paramount is making into a talking picture at the Astoria studio, will reach the screen with no change in title. At first it was expected the film version would be called "News."

Skouras Joins Warners in Berth as Theatre Head

Reported Salary is $100,000 Yearly to Handle Big Chain of Houses

On January 2, Spyros Skouras, president of Skouras Brothers Enterprises and the St. Louis Amusement Company, went to New York City to assume his $100,000 a year position with the large string of motion picture theatres owned and controlled by Warner Brothers.

In order to secure the services of Skouras and his brothers, Charley and George, Warner Brothers purchased the Ambasador, Missouri, Grand Central and Midtown Theatres and also the chain of thirty neighborhood houses operated by the St. Louis Amusement, and also took over the Skouras holdings in theatres at Indianapolis, Ind. The St. Louis and Indianapolis houses are now part of the Warner circuit.

The actual transfer of the Skouras holdings to Warner Brothers did not even make a ripple on the surface of amusement circles in St. Louis. It was accomplished without an official announcement from either firm and so far as the theatregoers of the city were concerned nothing had happened apparently.

The motive power behind the big deal, it is said, was the desire of Warner Brothers to obtain the services of the Brothers Skouras. The acquirement of the St. Louis theatres was merely incidental. But to get Spyros, Charley and George they were forced to buy everything and they did.

The sale to Warner Brothers has not accelerated the Skouras and St. Louis stocks to any great extent. On January 5 Skouras A closed on the St. Louis Stock Exchange at $47.50 bid and $50 asked, a decline of $3 a share on the week, while St. Louis Amasement A remained at $28 a share asked. During the week 105 shares of Skouras A changed hands on the exchange and but ten shares of St. Louis Amusement A. The latter stock sluffed off $1 a share in the week.

Sunday Movies Victorious in Florida Town

The citizens of Tarpon Springs, Florida, want Sunday movies. Recently agitation for film entertainment on the Sabbath became so widespread that a petition succeeded in obtaining enough names to intluence the mayor and the city commissioners to repeal the blue ordinance. The winning petition showed 441 in favor of Sunday films and the defeated petition showed 281 against them. The commissioners later extracted several names from the petitions which brought the totals to 349 for and 234 against.

Amkino Sets Release Date for "Ten Days"

"The Ten Days That Shook the World" was released by Amkino early this month. The picture had a five week run in New York City. "The Yellow Pass," another Amkino film, opened at the Cameo in New York on December 8.

1928 Silent Features Were Not Neglected, Exhibitors Declare

Survey of Motion Picture News Brings Opinions Commending Product for Past Season

DESPITE the furore created by sound pictures during the past year, the silent features have been neglected neither by the producers nor the patrons of motion picture houses. The quality of silents has been fully as good as in past years, and while the talkies have drawn extensive patronage, attendance has not fallen off to any noticeable extent in the houses not yet equipped with sound reproducing devices.

These facts are brought out in the nation-wide survey conducted by Motion Picture News among leading exhibitors of the country. First expressions of opinion of these exhibitors were revealed in last week's issue of Motion Picture News. Additional opinions are submitted herewith.

Silents Have Perked Up

A concensus of opinion of leading exhibitors in Cincinnati says: "Exhibitors do not feel that the silent pictures have been in any way slighted or neglected by the producer in favor of sound pictures. On the contrary, many exhibitors give it as their opinion that appearances indicate some of the producers are paying even more attention to details of the silent pictures, apparently in an effort to help the silent pictures to successfully cope with the opposition created by the talkies."

Picture interest has picked up considerably in Oklahoma City. Where previously a week was the longest duration of a run, features now are frequently carried over for two and three weeks. Here is the verdict of Oklahoma City exhibitors:

"Up to the present time the silent picture has not suffered greatly at the hands of the sound picture. However, the tendency at this time seems to stress more and more the sound pictures."

Hoxie Farley, general manager of the Strand and Empire, Publix houses at Montgomery, Alabama, believes that the general run of cinema productions during 1928 was quite up to the highest average. Talkie pictures have not materially cut into the business of houses not equipped. This is demonstrated particularly at smaller houses showing second run production. The outlook at Montgomery is so good, according to Mr. Farley, that the Empire and Strand have taken up with the talkies.

Negro Casts Called O. K. for South

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 10—The increasing vogue of motion pictures with all-colored casts has led several independent producers to inquire of the Motion Picture News office here as to just what the reaction of Southern exhibitors will be to such productions. A check-up of Fox, who is making "Hearts in Dixie"; Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, making "Hallelujah"; Christie with its Octavus Roy Cohen stories; and FBO where another series of all-colored shorts is being planned; reveals that this territory is in no way opposed to such features.

Southern fans hold no objection to all-colored casts It is the mixing of races which brings about such objections and as long as the rosters of productions are one hundred per cent colored, the pictures will be played. Christies point to the fact that the Octavus Roy Cohen stories are most widely read in the South. Other producers point to the reception secured by minstrel shows throughout that territory.

Were objections raised to all-colored productions, it is estimated that thirty-five to forty per cent of exhibitor territory would be lost.

Albert Warner Denies Deal for Equity Circuit

Declares Warner Bros. Have Not Even Considered Matter; Gottesman Rumor Off

Albert Warner brands as absolutely without truth a rumor printed in the daily trade press that Warner Bros. were involved in a deal for the acquirement of the Equity Circuit of thirty-five theatres located in Pennsylvania and New Jersey. He declared that the rumor had not yet reached him and that he had never heard of such a contemplated deal.

According to the printed story Warner officials from the home office of the company were in Philadelphia last Friday, at which time all details regarding the taking over of the chain were agreed upon. It was also said that the Equity plans for expanding the chain would be carried out by Warners except where it conflicted with the Stanley houses which have already passed to the Warners.

Another recent rumor denied by Mr. Warner was that his company would acquire the Gottesman chain operating in the New England territory. Substantiating this denial is the fact that Gottesman is rapidly acquiring new houses in different parts of the territory. He has taken over the Palace, Norwich and the Capitol, Middletown, increasing the circuit to eleven houses.

Theatre Screen Can Aid Local Authorities in Flu Situation

Precedents Established in 1918 Epidemic Can Be Used to Advantage in All Communities

WITH the scattered closing of theatres in some sections due to the mild flu epidemic, exhibitors who may have to deal with the health authorities on this subject will find useful the experience of New York City in 1918, when flu conditions were far worse than they are now.

At that time pressure was brought to bear on Dr. Royal S. Copeland, then Health Comissioner of the city, to close the theatres and other places of public assembly. Exhibitors, headed by Sydney S. Cohen, urged Dr. Copeland that, instead of closing the houses, he use the screens, programs and rostrums, if necessary, to carry a message to the public.

The result was that Dr. Copeland made a public announcement "that theatres would remain open as usual and the public would be educated in fighting the disease through slides, placards and announcements reading:

"To prevent the spread of influenza, please cough or expectorate, if you must, into your handkerchief. There is no danger if you heed this warning.

"By Order of the Board of Health Royal S. Copeland, President."

The New York theatres remained open all during the 1918 epidemic, and after it subsided it was found that New York, despite its congested living conditions, had the lowest death and sickness rate of any city in the country.

Exhibitors in the present situation are advised also to call the attention of their health authorities to the wholesale conditions surrounding the operation of their theatres, regarding cleanliness, ventilation, etc., and the invaluable aid they can give in carrying health messages from the authorities, as well as providing needed recreation for the public in time of stress.

Walter Eberhardt Goes to Electrical Research Products

Phil Thomson, director of public relations for Western Electric Co., has announced the appointment of Walter F. Eberhardt to an executive position in the Information Department of Erpi. This is the department that specializes in the publicity, advertising and dissemination of public information of Electrical R search Products, Inc., the subsidiary of Western Electric in which all of the activities of that corporation in the recording and amplification in sound pictures are concentrated.

Until a few weeks ago Walter Eberhardt was one of the executives in charge of publicity for First National, he severing his connection with that organization shortly after its direction was taken over by the Warner Bros.

G. P. Morgan Joins U. A. as Special Foreign Agent

Columbia Names Morgan to Sales Executive Post

William J. Morgan, long identified with the distribution of motion pictures, has been appointed to an executive sales post by Columbia Pictures. The announcement was made by Joe Brandt, President of Columbia.

Mr. Morgan was with First National for eight years in charge of the home office sales and contract department. Later he was with P. D. C. and when that company merged with Pathe he returned to First National as European general manager. He severed this connection to join Columbia.

Ben Hecht and MacArthur Signed For F B O Stories

Ben Hecht and Charles Mac Arthur, well known playwrights and novelists have been signed to contracts by Joseph I. Schnitzer, president of F B O. Each will write an original story. Mr. Hecht is already at work on "Upperworld," while Mr. Mac Arthur will start on an untitled story within the next few days.

Both Hecht and Mac Arthur have gained fame as playwrights. They collaborated on "The Front Page," one of the most successful plays of the current Broadway season. Work on their new stories will be started at the F B O studios as soon as they have completed their scripts.

British Film Producer Here for World Wide Meeting

Victor Saville, managing director of Burlington Films, arrived in New York last Friday to consult with J. D. Williams, president of World Wide Pictures, concerning Burlington films to be released in America and to study sound. He is going to Hollywood, where he will be joined by John Maxwell, chairman of British International. Mr. Saville is director of "A Woman of the Night," which World Wide is releasing.

Light Support for Colony Film Presentation

Stage Entertainment Weakens Appeal of Feature and Good Short

There is little or no show surrounding "The Last Warning," at the Colony theatre. The feature runs an hour and 25 minutes. Then there are 25 minutes given over to Jimmy Carr and his orchestra, nine minutes to one of the Walter Futter "Curiosities" and seven minutes to a Castle short, "Down Hawaii Way," in color that was most effective.

In addition to the Jimmy Carr orchestra there were the Earle Bros., a team of dancing boys who showed little, and a girl by the name of Maud Linde with a contortionistic offering. The latter was decidedly out of place for a Broadway picture house and smacked decidedly of burlesque. Miss Linde is a statuesque girl with a beautiful figure, but it is a mistake to bring her on the stage.

Whoever is managing the Colony should keep a closer tab on the ushers handling the loge seats. These boys are taking it right and left from those who have paid the regular price of admission and who want to sit down in front. This would work out all right if it weren't for the fact that patrons paying the extra toll at the box office for loge seats arrive to find that they are all occupied. There is one way to put a curse on a theatre and that is to charge the patron for something and then not deliver it. For exact information, the reviewer witnessed a situation as above described at a little after nine o'clock on Sunday night on the 53rd Street side of the balcony.

Rialto and Rivoli Have Fair Bills

At the Rialto with "Abie's Irish Rose" the feature the outstanding entertainment feature was a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer sound short with George Dewey Washington. Here for the first time is a voice that is capable of singing from the screen over a live orchestra accompaniment. A Kinogram News reel was the only other attraction.

At the Rivoli in addition to "The Awakening" there was a selected news reel and a Vitaphone talking short "Men Among Men" with Fred Ardath as the star. It was fair hokum comedy without any great punch at finish.

Roxy Bill Offers Good Blending Of Stage, Screen Entertainment

Worth While Underworld Picture Tops Diversified Show, Which Includes Elaborate Ballet Drill and Splendid Overture

A PERFECT blending of stage and screen entertainment is what may be said of the first bill of 1929 at the Roxy. Surprisingly, the Roxy has a picture that is worth while, even though it is an underworld story; two very elaborate and imposing stage divertissements; a ballet drill, a silhouette number and these are topped by a corking overture in the selections from "La Boheme." A remarkable thing too that this entire program should have been run through at the initial performance of the week in exactly two hours and seven minutes, which was right on schedule.

The Roxy Kimball organ opened the show at exactly 1.30 P. M., the selection lasting but a couple of minutes, after which the orchestra platform arose showing Ernie Rapee in the conductor's stand and the 100 men in the pit began the opening strains of Puccini's delightful "La Boheme" and how they played it, fully deserving the terrific applause which rewarded their efforts. The elapsed time for the organ and overture was 15 minutes.

"The Clown," a musical-pantomime, next occupied the stage. The setting showed the interior of a huge dressing tent of a circus with a huge group of clowns making ready for the show. Harold Van Duzee as the clown first opened with a song "Poor Punchinello" by Pollock, Lewis and Young that scored. Then the pantomimic action began. It was the old story of the clown in love with the lovely maid and she in turn loving another. It ended by the clown slaying the lover and the girl dying of a broken heart. Picturesquely told including a Dying Swan dance by the girl. The whole 14 minutes that the scene required held the audience.

The 32 Roxyettes in a flash number were next and scored a heavy applause as did also a silhouette dance with four characters entitled "The Flirtation" which followed. Roxy instead of the usual black and white worked this out in red and black and it proved effective. The two numbers needed but eight minutes.

The next 18 minutes were given over to the news reel which contained two clips from the silent Fox News and the balance Movietone. Several effective shots but in general there was room for improvement.

"In Holland" was the big stage offering of the program. It is a classic for a picture theatre. The entire set done in Dutch Blue with all of the costumes glazed. This would have been an ideal prolog to the next Janet Gaynor picture "Christine." There is no particular story but just a corking Holland scene and a series of songs and dances.

"A Romance of the Underworld" is the feature and it proves that it wasn't a fluke when Irving Cummings directed "Dressed To Kill" for he repeats in this one.

Paramount Entertainment Fair With Outstanding Feature Lacking

WHILE it is fair entertainment, there is nothing outstanding in the program that is presented for the current week at the Paramount. The only highlight to the bill is the Movietone short subject "The Spellbinder," in which Robert Benchley is the bright and shining star. At that, Benchley simply does his "Treasurer's Report" characterization as a political speaker. The Publix Revue "Cheerio" held no big hit other than Helen Young, a coloratura prima dona, who virtually stopped the show. The feature picture, Colleen Moore in "Synthetic Sin," fell far short of giving the audience a real kick. The whole show ran just nine minutes over two hours with the feature taking an hour and eight minutes.

Seemingly, the Paramount is trying to force Dave Rubinoff, the guest conductor, with the result that they are overdoing matters and audiences seemingly get a little too much of him. He hasn't a personality that is particularly ingratiating and he should be held down to his work in the pit only and not permitted to do the additional two numbers as part of the revue.

The program is opened by Rubinoff and the house orchestra presenting the "Musical Comedy Hits of 1928," a popular medley, and in this Rubinoff takes the spotlight and stars himself for a couple of violin numbers, all the while smirking at the audience. That prop smile of his is so apparent that he doesn't fool anyone. Eight minutes are alotted to the orchestra. This is followed by a showing of the straight Paramount News shots for five minutes.

Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Crawford in a double organ recital next held the stage. Mrs. Crawford taking the stage console for the final selection of a group of eight excerpts from grand operas. Seemingly, the Paramount audiences favor the lighter and popular tunes from the organ.

"Cheerio," the Publix Unit, runs 32 minutes and has Gene Rodemich as director of the Paramount stage orchestra and master of ceremonies. The title of the opening ensemble is "Cheerio" with Martha Jackson singing the number and the 12 Gamby-Hale Girls assisting her. Gene Rodemich makes his appearance directly after and puts the boys through their paces with "Don't Be Like That." Wally Jackson, an eccentric dancer, next steps and managed to get a little return on his contortionistic exhibition. Helen McFarland proved to be the first bright spot of the revue. This little miss is of the soubrette type and she sings, dances and plays xylophone. Her handling of the latter put her over.

The Gamby-Hale Girls were next on with a fast dance routine to "You're the Cream in My Coffee," which was followed by Helen Young with her two numbers that scored, after which Wally Jackson returned for a burlesque bit of leading the band, pulling a decidedly aged and very smalltime number of gags.

Then the audience was "treated" to its second load of Rubinoff. First, he played "The Dance of the Russian Peasants" and this was followed by his own arrangement of a jazz number, great stress being placed on the fact that this great artist was condescending to play jazz. That would have been in order had it not been for the fact that he had already done so in the pit at the opening of the show.

The finale followed this number, with the try for a whoopee finish going rather flat.

From 30,000 to 36,000 New Seats Planned by Fox

During 1929, new Fox theatres, each from 5,000 to 6,000 seating capacity, will go up in Chicago, Los Angeles, Pittsburgh, Baltimore, Boston and Cleveland, according to a statement credited to William Fox.

Tabloid Broadcasting Helps "Awakening"

A NEW and effective exploitation stunt was pulled at Bloomington, Ill., in connection with the showing of United Artists' picture, "The Awakening," when a telephone line was leased covering several downtown city blocks and tabloid broadcasting was resorted to.

The hook-up was made with a half dozen music and phonograph record stores. A record of the theme song of the picture, "Marie," was played at the theatre, carried along the telephone line to the cooperating stores and to the power dynamic speakers located above the entrance doors. Then after the theme song was played a switch cut off the electrical pickup and cut in a standard broadcasting studio microphone for a sales talk by the theatre for both the picture and the stores.

Texas Theatre Owner Sued By Music Society

Cases alleging L. L. Dunbar, proprietor of both Cliff Queen and Rialto Theatres in Oak Cliff, a suburb of Dallas, Texas, with infringement of copyright were filed in Federal court by Judge Felix R. Silent Films Not Being Slighted features produced last year, with six possible exceptions, and the public has expressed its disapproval by remaining away from the theatres. The feeling is that silent pictures are being neglected with the future quality very uncertain, but in the future of sound pictures more optimism is expressed.

Salt Lake City agrees with Boston, that silent pictures have been below standard, with sound features being exceptionally well received. The outlook for the coming year is considered splendid.

It is generally agreed among the exhibitors of Portland, Oregon, that the bulk of the 1928 features were up to the standard, but only a half dozen of the silent pictures made money. The houses equipped for sound reproduction got most of the business.

Charles M. Thall, Pacific Northwest division manager of West Coast Theatres in Seattle, says the 1928 features were fully up to the standard of previous years, judging by box-office reports and favorable comment of the public. He believes producers have slighted silent pictures to a very small extent, as is natural when a new development such as the talkie is being fostered, but points out that much attention is still being paid silent films by the producers.

Guy A. Kenimer, manager of Consolidated Amusements in Tampa, says last year's crop of pictures was not only up to, but above the usual standard, and that generally, the producers are not slighting the silents.

Lee Levy, manager of the Victoria and Colonial Theatres, Wilmer and Vincent houses in Harrisburg, Pa., says:

"The picture output of 1928 was fully up to previous standards, and, in fact, averaged a shade better than any other year. The chief criticism that I have heard from the public is not of the quality of the pictures, but of a lack of diversity of themes. In my opinion the producers have not in any sense neglected the silent pictures."

J. Louis Rome, general manager of Associated Theatres Corporation in Baltimore says:

"The pictures offered by the producers in 1928 have not been up to the standard. While there have been some, there have been very few outstanding productions offered during the season."

Five leading exhibitors of Richmond, Va., prophesy a bright year for 1929, although they do not feel that productions were quite up to standard during the past year.

Canadian Government Ban is Denied On Non-Synchronous Disc Devices

CANADIAN exhibitors were surprised to read in a New York trade publication of January 5 that the Canadian Government had placed a ban on the use of non-synchronous disc devices with film features. As a matter of fact the Canadian Government knows nothing of the moving picture business other than the collection of duty on film imports and theatre equipment and the releasing of the Government's one-reel subjects for propaganda purposes.

What has happened, as reported by your correspondent some weeks ago, was that the Canadian film distributors decided to bar the use of auxiliary equipment for phonographic music when a theatre was not wired for Movietone, Vitaphone or other similar sound film presentations. This was done because the distributors did not want faked synchronization which might be of an inferior quality to real sound projection.

During the past week silent film theatres in Canada have been receiving a memorandum with reel shipments from exchanges which sets forth that the film feature is not to be presented with sound devices. In other words, the feature has been sold on a silent basis and anything but orchestra, organ or piano accompaniment is forbidden.

Lasky Enthuses Over Stage Stars' Successes in Talking Pictures

JESSE L. LASKY, first vice-president in charge of Paramount production, is enthusiastic over the appearance of Broadway legitimate actors in the talking pictures of the company that are being made at the Long Island studios. He feels completely justified in recruiting them for the talkies and is making elaborate preparations for productions in which they will appear in the future.

Results from "The Letter," which has Jeanne Eagles as the star, and "The Hole In the Wall," with Claudette Colbert in the leading role, prompted the Lasky remarks.

"These two pictures," said Mr. Lasky, "have completely justified the policy of drawing upon the Broadway stage for casts that can talk. Following the successful completion of these pictures the studio has now embarked upon the production of two big features that will see Richard Dix in 'Nothing But the Truth' and Walter Huston, stage star of 'The Barker' and 'Elmer the Great,' in the successful newspaper drama, 'Gentlemen of the Press.' The supporting cast in the Dix picture includes some of our leading stage personalities.

"In all of these productions we are following the policy of having a trained director from the stage assist with the dialogue and bring to the films the technique of making the most out of spoken lines.

"On the first of February we expect to begin our first big musical comedy in talking films, 'The Cocoanuts,' starring the four Marx brothers. George S. Kaufman, author of the book for the stage production, is advising us. Irving Berlin, composer of the original music, is writing a new score. In March we propose to start another big starring drama for Jeanne Eagles."

Seven First National Stages Ready This Month

First National studios at Burbank, California, will have at least seven stages ready for the filming of sound and talking pictures before the end of the present month. It will then be possible to use twelve stages for Vitaphone pictures.

Fred Newmeyer Will Direct First Sono-Art Talkie

Fred Newmeyer, film director who handled a number of Harold Lloyd's comedies, has been signed by Sono-Art Productions, to direct "Broadway Bound."

Powers Denies Any Contemplated Cinephone Merger with Biophone

P. A. POWERS, president of Powers Cinephone, says there is no contemplated merger with Biophone, but that the latter has merely contracted for the Cinephone sound-on-film attachment to the Biophone disc reproducing device. Biophone announced the arrangement and it was mistaken in some quarters for a merger of the two companies, according to Mr. Powers.

It is said that a number of other manufacturers of sound producing equipment on disc are planning to contract for the Cinephone sound-on-film attachment. This fact has resulted in a number of rumors of mergers with independent companies, all of which are denied by Mr. Powers. The latter says that his company has no intention either of merging with any other company or of granting exclusive selling rights for the sound-on-film attachment as a unit or an accessory.

In this respect Mr. Powers points out that the contract between Powers Cinephone and Biophone is a non-exclusive agreement whereby the Biophone company is assured the Powers Cinephone attachment for their equipments without prejudice to any similar arrangements that may be made with other manufacturers of disc sound reproducers.

Mr. Powers further states that the Biophone agreement and the other similar agreements pending will in no way effect the selling plans nor the sales of Powers Cinephone complete equipments. These will be handled both direct from the Powers Cinephone office in New York and through territorial sales agencies.

Dulcetone to Produce Own Films If Regular Service Is Refused

FRANK R. WILSON, who organized Dulcetone, Inc., is prepared to go into the sound picture production field if sound picture distributors refuse to extend service to houses equipped with the Dulcetone reproducing device. This is a disc synchronization system based on Cortellaphone patents.

Dulcetone was organized by Mr. Wilson and he will become president of the company or chairman of the board when the organization meeting is held in the near future. Incorporation papers of the company have been filed in Delaware with an elastic capitalization, the original amount being $500,000.

With the statement from Western Electric Company permitting its licensees to service equipment that comes up to the proper standard of quality, Mr. Wilson does not anticipate any trouble on the question of interchangeability, which he considers settled for all time. He is completely satisfied that the quality of Dulcetone equipment will readily meet with all requirements, but if for any reason service should be refused he stands ready to provide the funds to go into the sound picture producing field.

The first of the Dulcetone machines are to be ready by January 22, when fifteen units will be completed. Five of these will be immediately installed. The prices of the equipment range from $3,500 to $7,500. It is the aim of the company to produce 100 machines weekly with four factories making different parts.

Christie Busily Engaged With Production of Talkies

Al Christie is in the midst of a heavy production schedule of talking pictures. He has just finished two subjects, while others are in various stages of production. Those completed are "A Bird In the Hand," featuring Lois Wilson, and "The Melancholy Dame," first of the Octavus Roy Cohen "Darktown" series.

Raymond Griffith will be seen in "Post Mortems," which is now in production. Two others will get under way soon.

Sonora-Bristolphone Acquires New Sound-On-Film Attachment

CHARLES R. ROGERS, general manager of Sonora-Bristolphone announces that his company will have available by February 1st a sound-on-film attachment that can be easily applied to its present sound-on-disc reproducing device and thus make Sonora-Bristolphone interchangeable with every type of system by which talking pictures are reproduced.

Commenting on the acquisition Mr. Rogers said:

"With the addition of this sound-on-film attachment, Sonora Bristolphone will be physically interchangeable with every type of system now being used by the outstanding producers of the industry. This new auxiliary service will be marketed along the same lines that have won quick support for Sonora-Bristolphone, which is in the position of having all the patents necessary to its operation under its own roof. It will be a distinct benefit to exhibitors who cannot afford the higher priced instruments."

Wm. M. Brown

Brown Launches New Laboratories For Sound Discs

William M. Brown has entered the sound picture field as president and treasurer of Recording Laboratories of America, which has secured a long-term lease on studios and offices in East 38th Street, New York City.

Engineers of the company have perfected a synchronous and non-synchronous device, using the disc method. The synchronous apparatus is known as Phonoscope and the non-synchronous as Audiotone. Production will get under way shortly on a series of short novelty pictures.

Mr. Brown for a number of years has been associated with large industrial concerns in Canada. He was connected with Canadian Industries, Ltd., for seventeen years. He heads the William M. Brown and Company, Inc., this being the parent company of Recording Laboratories of America. Officers of the latter concern, in addition to Mr. Brown are, Jess Smith, vice-president and studio production manager, and Jordan M. Cohan, secretary.

Sono-Art Establishes Quarters at Metropolitan Studio

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, January 10.—The Sono-Art Productions, which is to produce "Broadway Bound," starring Eddie Dowling, arrived in Hollywood this week and established headquarters in the Metropolitan Studios. O. E. Goebel is president of the new firm, and George Weeks, former distribution manager for Paramount, is vice-president.

Fred Newmeyer is to direct "Broadway Bound" as a screen musical comedy. It was written by Dowling. James Hanley wrote the music. Ray Dooley, musical comedy star, arrived with the company and in private life is Mrs. Dowling. She will not appear in this production.

2 Different Treatments in "Coquette" Versions

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, Jan. 10.—Mary Pickford is making two separate and distinct versions of "Coquette" for United Artists. One will be a talkie and the other a silent; both will have the same plot but with entirely different treatment.

"Bad Girl" Films Get Big B'Way Money

Public Paid Out $560,236 for Movie Shows Last Week

NEW YORK CITY.—There were four "bad girl" films on Broadway last week portraying "fallen women" and when the week was ended it was discovered that the four had run up a total gross in receipts of $225,236. The four pictures were Mary Nolan in "West of Zanzibar" at the Capitol, Nancy Carroll in "Shopworn Angel" at the Paramount, Vilma Banky in "The Awakening" at the Rivoli and Betty Compson in "Scarlet Seas" at the Strand. In the fifteen theatres in the Times Square district playing film attractions the receipts for the first week of 1929 went to $560,236. Of this the eight grind houses got $417,161, while the seven remaining theatres where picture are in for a run, and a two-a-day policy is in effect, turned in $143,075. It was really a big whoopee week for the Broadway box offices.

The biggest money on the street naturally went to the good little girl Nancy Drexel in "Prep and Pep" which was a hold over at the Roxy, where the big capacity and a strong stage show made it possible to draw $114,000 on the week. The Capitol was next in the point of receipts with Lon Chaney in "West of Zanzibar" getting $88,869 with the result that the picture and show were held over for the current week.

At the Paramount Nancy Carroll and Gary Cooper came within an ace of breaking the house record there, which is held by "Underworld." The receipts for the week were $82,670, which included an extra New Year's Eve show. The Rivoli, with "The Awakening," got $43,585, running just ahead of the Strand where Richard Barthelmess in "Scarlet Seas" played to $40,097.

"Give and Take," which came into the Colony managed to pull down $21,370, while "Abie's Irish Rose," at the Rialto, pulled an out and out nose dive showing $20,570 for the week. This was another distinct disappointment to the house operators. It was figured that the controversy in the $3,000,000 plagiarism suit by the author of "Abie" against Universal now being fought in the local courts and getting a lot of newspaper space would help the box office but seemingly it didn't.

The little Cameo, on 42nd Street, with "Ten Days That Shook the World," managed to get $6,200 after the picture had been shown in other houses along the street.

Of the pictures that are in for a run the top money went to "The Singing Fool," with Al. Jolson at the Winter Garden. Here the receipts were $44,427 with New Year's contributing largely to this, as was also the case at the Warner Bros., where Fanny Brice in "My Man" pulled $29,047, the second biggest money for the run shows.

"Alias Jimmie Valentine," at the Astor, was next in line with $19,333, while "The Barker," at the Central, finished the week with $16,121. "The River," at the Gaiety, managed to hold up due to the holiday crowds spending their money wherever they could get in and the statement here showed $14,294, while "Interference," at the Criterion, played to $14,127.

The low on the street went to "The Viking," at the Embassy, where the figures showed $5,726.

This week the business along the street is generally reported as normal, with no outstanding smashes outside of the possibility of "Romance of the Underworld," at the Roxy showing up.

Garbo Film Tops L. A. Grosses; Near Mark for "Daughters" at Loew's State

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 9.—Motion pictnre theatres in general witnessed good attendance in Los Angeles this past week. High honors were tendered Loew's State, where "A Woman of Affairs" topped the city's grosses with a box office take of over $35,000, almost crashing the record previously established by "Our Dancing Daughters" at this house.

Warner's Hollywood theatre playing "My Man" came next in the big earning line-up, with the register showing $30,000 for the week from Thurs- to Wednesday.

"Sins of the Fathers," starring Emil Jannings, held up at the Metropolitan theatre with $26,500. "The Rescue," showing in its first week at the United Artists, boosted the house receipts to the figure of $17,500. In the midst of its third week presentation "In Old Arizona" scored to the tune of $21,500.

"The Barker," in its fifth week at the Carthay Circle, slipped a bit, managing to corral a week's return of $13,000.

Having been held over for two additional weeks at Grauman's Chinese theatre at the request of Warner Brothers, "Noah,'s Ark" playing for its tenth consecutive week, hit the $13,500 mark.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "A Broadway Melody" will have its world premiere at Granman's and will follow "Noah's Ark" into that house on January 25.

"Singing Fool" Draws Big Crowds to St. Louis House

St. Louis.—"The Singing Fool" playing at the Midtown Theatre, Olive street, just west of Grand boulevard, continued to pull in approximately 30,000 patrons per week at 75 cents and $1 per head. Rather remarkable for the size of the theatre.

"Interference," the Paramount talking picture at the Ambassador Theatre, had the novel experience of playing St. Louis just a few weeks behind the stage show of the same title. The Ambassador had a good week,

At the Grand Central the screen version of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" had an average week for this house, which was the first of the de luxe talking palaces.

The Missouri Theatre, Grand and Lucas avenues, offered "The Little Wild Cat," a talkie, while Eddie Cantor was also on the screen in a talking short.

At Loew's State Theatre Lon Chaney in "West of Zanzibar" proved a very popular attraction. Ukulele Ike, a big favorite in St. Louis, was on the Movietone bill.

Midnight Shows Help Good Week in Albany Houses

Albany.—The best money-getter among the motion picture theatres of Albany, N. Y., last week was the "Woman of Affairs" at the Mark Strand, synchronized to sound and music. While there were no record-breaking crowds, the midnight show on New Year's Eve helped make the opening day a big one, while the snow and rain that fell on New Year's sent thousands to the theatres and the Mark Strand got its full share. There were crowds standing in front of the box office for the second show each night throughout the week.

The Mark Ritz in Albany also had a big week with Richard Barthelmess in "Scarlet Seas," with sound. The Leland did what might be termed a good business with Dolores Del Rio in "The Red Dance." The Clinton Square used "Shadows of the Night" and "The Girl He Didn't Buy" to consistent business throughout the week.

Neighborhood houses in Albany report business as being fairly good, although there is no question but that the presence of flu kept down the crowds in many instances.

In the neighboring city of Troy business does not seem to pick up as it should. The Troy Theatre used "A Woman of Affairs" for the first part of the week and "The Haunted House" the latter part of the week, both doing just normal business. The Lincoln used "Scarlet Seas" to fairly good business, although there might be some improvement.

Proctor's used "Craig's Wife" along with a program of vaudeville and the picture is reported to have more than held its own

Victor to Sound 2 - Reeler

"Ruby Lips," a new Hal Roach comedy, sarring Charley Chase, has been synchronized at the Victor recording plant in New York east of 5th avenue; it is expected that subsequent Roach comedies will be synchronized with musical scores and sound effects at the same laboratory.

Cincinnati Off To Flying Start

Heavy Business Done by Special New Year Shows

CINCINNATI.—The first week of the new year showed up very well for a majority of the Cincinnati houses, many of which got off to a flying start with their special shows given on New Year's eve. The Albee, which advertised their special performances heavily, was sold out long before the time for the event.

Van and Schenck, headlining the vaudeville portion of the Albee bill, which, incidentally, was considerably above the general run, and "Dream of Love," on the screen, succeeded in attracting a big lot of customers for the week.

The Capitol, with its second all-talking picture, "On Trial," did a splendid business, notwithstanding the fact that some of the local critics made rather odious comparisons when commenting on the voice of Pauline Frederick, who was seen here earlier in the season in the stage play of the same name.

"White Shadows in the South Seas" pleased the customers of the Lyric mightily; in fact, so much so, that the booking has been extended to include an additional seven days. Business was very good.

Keith's, with "Beware of Bachelors" (sound), had a very satisfactory attendance for the week.

"The Singing Fool," in its second week at the Strand, showed some signs of having worn out its welcome, although when considering the fact that the picture played a solid four weeks at another Cincinnati house just a short time ago, and at the same prices, business was really good.

The Palace with "Marked Money" on the screen and a good vaudeville bill did nicely.

The influenza epidemic is undoubtedly keeping a number of regulars away from the theatres, but so far this has not been felt to any appreciable extent.

Yes, that's just what Lee Patrick, leading woman in Pathe's all-talkie, "Strange Cargo," intends doing. Having made a name for herself on the stage, she plans to climb just as high in the new medium, the talking film

Oklahoma City Slump Continues Due to Illness

Oklahoma City.—The pre-holiday slump was apparent at all the theatres and they are undoubtedly feeling the results of a siege of illness which has been fairly general.

The Orpheum Theatre, in conjunction with five acts of vaudeville, offered on the screen "The Singapore Mutiny," featuring Estelle Taylor and Ralph Ince. Business was good.

Alice White and Jack Mulhall in "Naughty Baby" at the Empress and "Prep and Pep," with David Rollins and Nancy Drexel, at the Liberty, enjoyed good business. Fannie Brice, starring in "My Man," at the Capitol, also brought good business.

Salt Lake Ends Week With Fairly Good Attendance

Salt Lake City.—Theatre patronage at downtown houses started quietly the forepart of the holiday week but it ended with fairly good attendance.

The Capitol Theatre presented Bebe Daniels in "What a Night," and also the stage act "Up in the Air," a Fanchon and Marco production, with fairly satisfactory results.

The Pantages Theatre, in addition to the vaudeville and picture program, featuring the comedy drama, "A Single Man," offered a local attraction in the form of a male chorus of fifty voices, known as "The Swanee Singers," which proved to be a good drawing card.

Emil Jannings in "Sins of the Fathers," with sound effects, played to moderately crowded houses during the week. "Shop Worn Angel," starring Gary Cooper and Nancy Carroll, played to attendance which was somewhat under par.

Record Holiday Crowds Patronize Good Film Offerings in Portland

PORTLAND, ORE.—The final week of 1928 was enhanced by a wonderful array of film offerings which were shown by experts at all first run houses, and brought out a record holiday crowd, which taxed the capacity of all houses and which reached unheard of proportions at all of the MidNight matinees.

The MidNight matinee marked the opening of the remodeled Hippodrome Theatre, and Manager Ely presented five snappy acts of vaudeville in addition to the screen offering, "Nothing to Wear."

With extra performances daily, and waiting lines the rule, big business predominated at The Broadway to see William Fox's audible "In Old Arizona," which will go into extra weeks by popular demand.

"Someone to Love," starring Buddy Rogers, was also well received at The Portland. Fanchon & Marco's "Stairway of Dreams" idea fitted in nicely on the stage.

Multnomah Theatre Circuit reports an exceptionally high attendance week at their half dozen suburban theatres, doing good business with return showing of "King of Kings" and adding headline vaudeville for the midnight shows.

Exceptionally large crowds were handled at Pantages, their outstanding offering being "Mother Machree" on the screen, accompanied by five novelty acts.

Crowds revelled at The Rivoli for the Night Club Revue, headed by an old favorite, Don Smith, as master of ceremonies. The regular week's bill also drew well, with "Lady Be Good," featuring Dorothy Mackaill and Jack Mulhall, and for the latter half of the week Norma Talmadge in "Woman Disputed."

United Artists also made a much better showing at the box office with Pola Negri's "Loves of an Actress," an Our Gang comedy, Leo Beers via Metro Movietone and Fox Talking News.

Audrey Ferris and William Collier, Jr., continued big drawing cards at The Blue Mouse for the third week in "Beware of Bachelors" with supplementary Vitaphone offerings, including a Max Davidson comedy, "Red" Corcoran banjoist and a Movietone news reel.

In order to accommodate his many steady customers Manager Peterson at The Music Box was obliged to run an extra show starting at 11:30 P. M. New Year's Eve of "On Trial," and throughout the week business was heavy, with prospects of long run.

Dolores Del Rio in "Revenge" brought good business to Tebbett's Oriental, at its second showing of the year, and culminated in a monster vaudeville revue with seats at a premium. Capitol Theatre brought back a popular Reginald Denny film "That's My Daddy," which swelled box office receipts, culminating with a big girl revue to the usual hour, 4 A. M.

Hoodlums Cause New Year's Trouble in Ottawa Houses

Disturbances occurred in connection with New Year's Eve performances in two Canadian theatres, one being at B. F. Keith's Theatre, Ottawa, and the other at the Tivoli Theatre, Toronto police being called.

At Keith's Ottawa, hoodlums in the big audience became strenuous in aiming numerous articles at the stage and orchestra, and the show was called off by Manager J. M. Franklin when efforts to secure order proved fruitless. There was further trouble when rowdies demanded their money back. All patrons presenting seat stubs were given exchange tickets.

At the Toronto Tivoli the crowd saw the special show but then demanded the presentation of "The Terror," which was the sound attraction on the bill for the week's regular performances. Manager Thomas Daley announced that this feature had never been advertised.

Midnight Shows Help in Cleveland

New Year's Eve Performances Put Grosses Over Top

CLEVELAND.—The extra New Year's eve midnight performances which were presented at all the leading theatres in town, helped to increase the average business for the week and turn what would have been just a fair week into a very profitable one.

"The Barker" at the Hippodrome with Milton Sills was the outstanding attraction of the week, and did the outstanding business. Presented with a carnival lobby display with regular circus concessions in the lobby, sawdust on the floor, and canvas covering the walls and ceiling, the play went over big, and is establishing a precedent by being held for a second week—the first picture to be held over in the Hippodrome under its present operating policy.

"Alias Jimmy Valentine," playing its second week at the Stillman, went over very well. The picture is liked by young and old, both for its theme and its presentation. It is being held a third week.

"A Woman of Affairs" proved splendid adult entertainment at the Allen, where it received popular approval. Business was pretty good during the week, and very good on New Year's Eve.

"The Outcast" did fairly well at the State. It made good with the adult patrons. "Naughty Baby" made a good showing last week at Keith's Palace. "The Michigan Kid" appealed to the vast audiences who like action. Consequently the picture did satisfactory business the first half of the week at Keith's East 105th St. "Riley the Cop" made a fair showing the last half of the week.

"Three Week Ends" and "The Water Hole" divided honors of the week at the Park, where both pictures played their first subsequent run engagements. Business for the Clara Bow picture was pretty good, and "The Water Hole" made a good showing, too.

Stormy Weather Fails to Halt K. C. Business

Kansas City.—Cold and stormy weather failed to halt the enthusiasm for motion pictures here last week and grosses generally took a jump over Christmas week. The Mainstreet topped all other houses with a gross for the week of $23,000. The seating capacity is 3,067 and the house is scaled from 35 to 60 cents. The feature film was "Power," Pathe, with an Aesop's Fable, Mack Sennett's "The Lion's Roar," and Pathe News to round out the program.

Loew's Midland with a seating capacity of 4,000 and prices ranging from 25 to 65 cents did a gross business of $22,500 with M-G-M's "A Woman of Affairs" as the screen feature. Fox Movietone News and M-G-M News and two Movietone acts rounded out the film program.

"Interference" did $14,600 for the week at the Newman, a house of 2,000 capacity and prices from 25 to 60 cents. Fox News and two Paramount shorts completed the program.

At the Royal "Sins of the Fathers" played to $8,400. It is a house with only 900 seating capacity and the prices are 25 and 50 cents. "Going Places," a short subject, and Paramount News made up the balance of the picture program.

At Pantages business was not up to the standard of some of the other houses. They grossed only $11,500 on the week, with a seating capacity of 2,166 and prices ranging from 25, 50 and 75 cents. "Sinners In Love" was the feature picture, with the balance of the program made up of an Aesop's Fable and International News.

Good Week for Pittsburgh's Picture Theatres; Loew's Penn Leads List

PITTSBURGH.—Loew's Penn had a tremendous week's business with Gilbert-Garbo in "A Woman of Affairs," which proved to be rather an interesting picture. Teddy Joyce, master of ceremonies, and Publix unit "Bubbles" went over big.

"Conquest" fared well at the Stanley. Many pleasing comments on the novelty of this one. Stanley's new Enright Theatre (in fashionable East Liberty, five miles from the heart of the town), opened with "Adoration" and played to S.R.O. at most performances. Also used three vaudeville acts of very average quality.

"Varsity" did a fair week's business at the Grand, and didn't seem to cause much interest. "The Woman Disputed" played to disappointing business at the Regent." "Blindfold" at the Olympic played to but fair business."

Liberty—First half: "Docks of New York"; last half: "Avalanche." But fair business. Admission prices cut from forty to thirty cents. Only recently had been cut from fifty to forty.

"Mother Machree" got a nice week's business for the Aldine.

"Brotherly Love" did very little for the Cameraphone, while "Submarine" did not fare much better at the Alhambra.

New Orleans Business Excellent Despite Warning to Avoid Crowds

New Orleans.—Despite warnings of the local health authorities to avoid crowded places during the influenza epidemic crowds attended the downtown first run theatres during the past week. All the houses played strong pictures and while business was not up to the previous week was excellent nevertheless.

The cash register of the Saenger Theatre clicked more often at this house than any other during the week. The 100 per cent Warner Brothers production, "On Trial," with Pauline Frederick, Bert Lytell and Lois Wilson was featured and was lauded not only by the four local newspapers but by everyone that saw it.

Running its across the street neighbor a close race for first honors was Loew's State Theatre where "A Woman of Affairs" was the attraction in conjunction with five acts of vaudeville. The vaudeville was above average but the picture was sufficient to pull 'em in.

"Manhattan Cocktail" was presented with sound accompaniment at the Tudor and business at this house was slightly above average. Four acts of Vitaphone vaudeville were offered in conjunction.

The Strand did well with Norma Shearer and Johnny Mack Brown in "A Lady of Chance."

Although "Wings" had its premiere at another house sometime ago business at the Liberty Theatre was good enough to justify its retention for an extra week.

"Masks of the Devil" had its local premiere at Loew's State a short time ago but this did not hurt the Globe's business the past week.

The Orpheum offered "The Spieler" with Renee Adoree, Alan Hale and Clyde Cook, along with five acts of vaudeville. The picture was well liked and the business of the house was good.

Midweek Holiday, Ideal Weather Make Banner Week in Milwaukee

Milwaukee.—Downtown theatres have just finished one of the finest weeks in several months. The weather has been ideal for theatre going and the mid-week holiday seems to have added impetus to patronage. Matinee business was especially good.

At practically all first run theatres capacity was reached by the middle of the afternoon. "The Awakening of Love" at the Alhambra started its ten-day run on Tuesday and in this short time has manifested a strong pulling power. Business very good.

"Three Week Ends" at the Wisconsin with a presentation headed by Dave Apollon, combine to make an unusually popular bill. "The Air Circus" at the Strand is doing good business.

"My Man" finishes its second wek at the Garden this week. The second week's business continued very satisfactory. "Mother Machree" featured at the Merrill brought better business to that theatre than the past few features. It has been well attended throughout the week.

"Woman of Affairs" did fair business at the Majestic. "Adoration" was featured on the Orpheum bill. The theatre drew very good results throughout the week. Matinee business was unusually good at the Riverside, where "The Air Legion" was the photoplay feature.

Neighborhood theatres were not as well attended as the down town houses, yet business at practically all was above average. The Oriental and Tower did fair business with "Mother Knows Best." The Fleet's In" at the Uptown. Modjeska and Garfield was well attended. "The Woman Disputed" at the Milwaukee and National drew fairly well. "Uncle Tom's Cabin" played to good houses at the Egyptian and Venetian.

Baltimore Reports Business Fair

New Year Week Grosses Are Good and Bad in Spots

BALTIMORE.—Motion picture houses reported some good and some bad business for the week starting off the New Year. All were helped considerably by New Year's Eve and the holiday shows. The weather was clear and cold for the most part, with rain on Tuesday and Saturday.

The best gross for the week was that reported by the Century, a Publix house with a seating capacity of 3,221, the prices being 25 cents to 65 cents. The gross for the week was $23,500. "A Lady of Chance" was the feature picture on display.

The Stanley was another house that did a good average week of business with a gross of $18,000 and a seating capacity of 3,654, the scale of prices also running from 25 cents to 65 cents. The feature attraction was "A Woman of Affairs."

Excellent business was reported from the 1,981 seat house, the Rivoli, whose prices run from 25 cents to 50 cents. The feature picture was "The Red Dance" and there was also a good supporting program of short subjects.

The New Garden, another of the larger houses with 3,016 seats, was another that reported very good business with "Man Made Woman" as the feature attraction. A quite elaborate presentation was offered.

At the Metropolitan, "My Man" reported very good business with prices running from 15 cents to 50 cents. Two short subjects and a Kinogram newsreel rounded out the program.

The Hippodrome was reported to have taken a jump of $3,000 over the previous week, but with an estimated gross of $8,500 business was far from good as the house has 2,500 seats. The attraction was "The Floating College."

The smaller houses had only fair business and in some cases poor. The New Theatre with "Uncle Tom's Cabin" played to $8,700 at prices from 25 cents to 50 cents. The Parkway with "West of Zanzibar" had a gross of $3,800. The Valencia with "A Single Man" as the feature attraction grossed $2,950.

A most unseemly place for May McAvoy. However, the popular Warner Bros. star is seen to better advantage in "Caught in the Fog," "Stolen Kisses," No Defense" and other of her new vehicles

Midnight Shows Launch New Year To Strong Start in Harrisburg

HARRISBURG.—The New Year hopped off with a fanfare that augured well for the business of the Harrisburg picture houses. Five leading theatres put on special midnight shows running from late Monday until well into the early hours of Tuesday to welcome the youngster, 1929. These additional performances were so overwhelmingly popular that they, in themselves, brought up the weekly average of box office receipts to a quite material extent, particularly as attendance was well maintained at all the regular performances.

Loew's Regent opened the year very successfully with John Gilbert and Greta Garbo in "A Woman of Affairs," a play that had a strong appeal from the first, particularly among feminine patrons. Local newspaper critics had only the most flattering things to say about it. Instant popularity was gained also by "The Sins of the Fathers," starring Emil Jannings, which featured the bill at the Victoria all week. The crowds were very satisfactory, particularly in view of the flu scare which, by the way, is rapidly dwindling in Harrisburg.

"Mother Machree," with sound and effects, and featuring Victor McLaglen and Belle Bennett, was greeted by uniformally good-sized crowds at the Victoria all week and was generally pronounced excellent entertainment. At the State Theatre the film feature the last three days was Irene Rich in "Women They Talk About," while the first half of the week there, including the New Year's midnight show, the picture part of the program was "Tenth Avenue," featuring Phyllis Haver.

Another John Gilbert picture shown in Harrisburg the same week was "Masks of the Devil," which headed the bill at the Rialto. Milton Sills in "The Hawk's Nest" was popular at the Capitol. Joan Crawford in "Our Dancing Daughters" came to Harrisburg for a second run, this time doing nice business at the Russell. Al. Hoxie thrilled 'em in "Battling Burke" at the Royal.

First of Talking Pictures Heard in Ottawa James Regent Theatre

Ottawa.—The one big stir in Ottawa, Ontario, amusement circles during week of December 31 was films introduction of sound at the Regent Theatre, the first for the Canadian Capital. The theatre was jammed all afternoon and evening and it was necessary to repeat the show after 11 P. M. to satisfy the late comers. It was significant that the Regent probably had its greatest jam on the night of a big professional hockey game, whereas, previously, the Regent as well as all other local theatres felt a drop in attendance because of hockey attractiveness.

The program at the Regent comprised "Street Angel," Fox Movietone News, "The Family Picnic" and "The Hut," with the house orchestra continuing its regular presentations.

The Centre Theatre had its second week of "Lilac Time" in silent version but business did not hold up to the previous week's standard. Generally speaking, the crowd was not enthusiastic over it.

A scintillating piece was "Manhattan Cocktail" at B. F. Keith's and this was the mainstay of the week's bill, being much better than the vaudeville, relatively speaking. New Year's crowds were immense and business during the rest of the week was fairly strong.

Satisfactory crowds turned to the Imperial Theatre for "Someone to Love" with Buddy Rogers and Mary Brian. The feature was light in texture but it pleased the young folks who were in the majority.

Second run of "Show People" gave the Avalon Theatre its best crowds so far, while "The First Kiss" registered fairly good results as well. The Fern Theatre got its fill of people for "Gay Retreat" and there was another fair turnout for "Cruise of the Hellion."

The Columbia got back into its stride with "The Racket" and "Hello Cheyenne," while the Rex enjoyed big business with final episodes of "Yellow Cameo" and "Haunted Island," the features being "My Best Girl" and "Garden of Eden." Serials are great at the Rex always.

Holiday Helps Tampa Houses to Average Business

Tampa.—The New Year opened up very satisfactory New Year's Day was fine in all houses and rest of week went over nicely. "Sunrise" at the Tampa the first half pulled a good Sunday and a big Tuesday. The other two days were just average. Gilbert and Garbo, both well liked here, in "A Woman of Affairs," drew very well for the last half.

The Victory had a good week all through. "Annapolis" the first half and "The Sins of the Fathers" the last half. Outside of the big Tuesday business, the latter picture showed up best at the box office and was well liked.

"Silks and Saddles" failed to pull the average business for the Strand the first two days. "Me Gangster" opened up big on Tuesday and hit the Tribune critic to the tune of a half column, which pulled another good day on Wednesday, but Thursday dropped a little. "Blindfold," the last two days, didn't start anything, with business hardly up to average.

The six change program still continues at the Franklin and the house is enjoying good patronage. The three second runs this week were better cards than the three first runs, which was natural, as they had Chaney in "London After Midnight," Clara Bow in "Get Your Man," and Billie Dove in "The Night Watch."

Capitol Heads Des Moines Houses With "Submarine"

Des Moines.—The Capitol with the Columbia picture, "Submarine," topped all houses here for last week by virtue of the fact that it has the largest seating capacity and also that its prices exceed other houses. Grosses from there are reported as $9,006 for the week with the seating capacity 1,700 and the prices 25, 35 and 60 cents.

The real leader in point of attendance was the Des Moines with a gross of $8,975 in a 1,600-seat house with prices of 25 and 50 cents. The attraction was Warner Bros. "My Man." Supplementing the program at these two houses were, at the Capitol, a fashion news reel, a talking trailer on "Interference," Paramount News and a Publix presentation, "Babes of Broadway," and the Des Moines, a short, titled "Sorry Sally"; a song slide number, Fox Movietone News and the Red Spice orchestra.

The Strand, a 1,200-seat house with prices of 20 and 30 cents, did only $1,092 on the half week with "Fazil" as the feature, a short, titled "Calford in the Movies," and a Fox Newsreel. On the other half week with "State Street Sadie" the gross was $1,400.

Bern Sees Talkie Novelty Waning

Quality Is Fan's Concern Now Says Pathe Producer

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 10.—That the mere words "talking pictures" no longer draw audiences alone, and the public now wants to know the quality of the sound pictures advertised by theatres before paying good money at the box office, are the opinions expressed by Paul Bern, Pathe producer, who recently returned from New York. During his eastern trip, Bern made a survey of theatre conditions, especially in relation to showing of sound and dialogue pictures.

"Until recently it was only necessary for the exhibitor to emblazon the words "with sound" in his advertising to assure big business, but now the situation has resolved itself to a condition where competition among talking pictures is as keen as was the competition in silent pictures before the sudden success of Vitaphone so upset the industry," Bern declared.

"Box office reports collected by trade journals prove most convincingly that the power of the talking picture as a box office magnet is rapidly being lessened, and good silent films with the old favorite screen personalities are proving even greater drawing cards than most of the current talkfilm subjects.

"Now that the novelty of hearing people speak on the screen has worn off, it will be necessary for all producers to pay more attention to the entertainment qualities of their film productions whether they be silent or with sound. The fundamental requirements of the two mediums, from the box office standpoint, are identically the same, but the talking pictures will have to reach as high a standard of entertainment as the silent drama has achieved before it can have as permanent an appeal. In fact, stupid, inane dialogue is worse than poor titles, and the mere effort of people talking to each other will never supplant in interest the action and varied background of the silent drama."

In This Argument, Who Was Right?

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 10—When the Brothers Studio telephones the First National plant, the girl on the Warner end has been in the habit of saying, "Main studio calling."

Last week some one at the First National studio, believed to be an office boy, resented this. When the girl said, "Main studio calling," he returned, "What?" She repeated and he again said "What." The same query and answer went back and forth until the girl finally said, "Warner Brothers Studio calling."

Supporting Clara Bow

In "The Wild Party" are: Phillips R. Holmes, Jack Oakie, Shirley O'Hara.

Joins Pathe

Erle Hampton, former Fox Coast publicist, has joined the Pathe studio staff in California.

Learns Lines by Heart

Norma Shearer learned the entire dialogue of "Trial of Mary Dugan" before work got under way.

Eddie Baker

Eddie Baker turns from acting in Christie comedies to directing them. His first is "His Angel Child." Neal Burns, another actor turned director, is making "Papa Spank," Jimmy Elroy leading man.

Subtitle—From "All At Sea" for M-G-M, titles by Robert Hopkins:

Newspaper Contest Winners Will Tour Hollywood

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, Jan. 10.—Arthur Zellner, Pickford-Fairbanks press agent, left for New York last Wednesday to begin picking up winners of the "Most Deserving Girl" contest held in 25 cities by as many different newspapers. Prize consists of a special visit to the movie studios and environs for the 25 lucky girls and a woman writer for each paper conducting the contest. The strict conditions for the winners include that none shall try to break into pictures in any form or manner and unless they agree to take the special train home at the conclusion of the tour they cannot be included among the winning troupe. The contest started January 10.

New Contract

Jack Oakie has gotten a new contract from Paramount.

Stage Engagement

Edward Everett Horton is taking a fling at the stage while vacationing away from Warner studio.

Adam Hull Shirk

He has been signed by Columbia to direct studio publicity, replacing Leroy Johnston, resigned.

Added

Add to "Object—Alimony" cast: Ethel Grey Terry, Roscoe Karns, Carmelita Geraghty, Jane Keckley.

With Mix

Kathryn McGuire will be the girl lead in new FBO western starring Tom Mix. Walter McGrail to be heavy and Ethan Laidlaw, Barney Fuery and Wynn Mace in other roles.

Will Talk

Lilyan Tashman will talk in Paramount's "A Genius Is Born."

W. B. Studio Promotions

Anthony Coldeway, former western scenario editor, has been made assistant associate executive at Warner Coast studio. Graham Baker will succeed him.

Eve Southern to Star

Eve Southern will star in T.-S.'s "The Miracle," George Archainbaud to direct. Frances Hyland doing the continuity. Walter Pidgeon is also seen.

Wampas Choose New Baby Stars

All, Except One, Correspond with News Prediction

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, Jan. 10.—The Wampas held its annual election of the 13 baby stars last Monday. They will be presented to the public at the frolic February 12 at the Shrine Auditorium.

The new crop of stars contains the following names:

Anita Page and Josephine Dunn, M-G-M stars; Jean Arthur and Doris Hill, Paramount stars; Loretta Young, First National star; Doris Dawson, Warner Bros. star; Helen Foster, Cliff Broughton Productions star; Caryl Lincoln and Helen Twelvetrees, Fox stars; Betty Boyd, Educational star; Sally Blane, FBO star; Ethyln Clair, Pathe star; and Mona Rica, United Artists star.

Although Miss Dawson has been a First National player, arrangements were made for her to be the Warners baby star.

Speculation as to the winners was rife in Hollywood following the election, the local office of the News predicting the winners and only guessing wrong in one instance.

Levine Serial Begins

"The Fatal Warning," a ten episode serial, was placed in production this week by Mascot Productions. The cast includes Ralph Graves, Helene Costello, Martha Maddox, and Phillip Smalley. Dick Thorpe is directing.

Eddy's New Job

Don H. Eddy, is now installed as the new publicity director for the FBO studios. Lance Heath, who has been handling the studio in addition to Gloria Swanson, will concentrate on Swanson in the future. Eddy was press agent for Rudolph Valentino at the height of his career and later for Harry Langdon. He was also at a later period, general manager for the Langdon productions.

Rod La Rocque

M-G-M engaged Rod La Rocque for one of the featured parts in "Our Modern Maidens," planned as a sequel to "Our Dancing Daughters." The film will be dialogued.

Leatrice Joy in Vaude

Leatrice Joy has left pictures temporarily for vaudeville. She opens a tour of the Orpheum Circuit in San Francisco, next week.

"Trial Marriage"

The next Columbia to go into work is "Trial Marriage," Sat. Evening Post story by Elizabeth Alexander. Erle Kenton to direct, Sonya Levien to do adaption, Norman Kerry and Sally Eilers to be leads.

Ted Wilde, Ill, Resigns

Ted Wilde resigned recently as director for Lloyd, rather than hold up production on "T.N.T." for a longer period, because of his illness. Wilde became seriously ill and Lloyd was willing to wait. Meanwhile Wilde showed little signs of improving rapidly, so he has asked Lloyd to get some one else rather than delay production further.

Filming His Own Play

William De Mille is directing a two-reel talking version of his own play, "The Men Higher Up," for M-G-M. Hobart Bosworth and Robert Edeson have the two featured parts.

Dinner for Dialogue Writers

Recently imported eastern "dialogue writers" for sound pictures will be guests at a dinner February 2nd to be tendered them by the executive committee of the Writers' Branch of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences.

"Five O'Clock Girl"

Charles King is the male lead in M-G-M's "Five O'Clock Girl." Cast includes: Aileen Pringle, Carmelita Geraghty, Polly Moran.

"Dear Vivian"

"Dear Vivian" is new talkie sketch by Waldemar Young, filmed by Christie with Sam Hardy and Raymond Hatton. Lorraine Eddy and Mabel Forrest in cast.

Child Makes Debut

Marcia Kagno, four-and-a-half years, makes her bow in Paramount's "Hole in Wall."

Harry Gribbon to Direct Talkie

Harry Gribbon will direct an all-talking short comedy for Mack Sennett, besides playing one of the featured parts. Gribbon was one of Sennett's featured players back in 1915.

MANAGERS ROUND TABLE CLUB

CLEARING HOUSE FOR BOX OFFICE PROBLEMS and THEATRE OPERATION

By Charles E. Lewis

of the Alfred Gottesman Theatrical Enterprises, New England

Working a Public Angle

Among every line up of pictures you are sure to find one or two that could be box office bets by running a private showing for the civic and educational authorities of your town or city. Arrange such a private showing a few weeks in advance of your play dates and advise your invited guests that the picture will only be shown if they vote that it is worthy for public exhibition. At the showing, slips of paper can be passed out to all attending on which they can vote "Yes" or "No."

This idea was successfully worked on quite a few occasions and resulted in much increased business for what might have been an ordinary program picture.

The best angle, of course, is that the story deals with growing boys and girls, then sell the idea that it preaches a moral and should be seen by "every parent and child in the community." Many other good angles present themselves for such a tie-up and if you think your bookings are getting you into a rut look through your availability list and see if you can't select some picture that lends itself to this kind of exploitation.

Fire Department Co-operation

Mr. Callahan, manager of the Cameo Theatre in Bridgeport, Conn., found his theatre on the front page of the papers after he had arranged with the Bridgeport Fire Department to instruct his staff on fire drills. Aside from the value of such training it is bound to stir up a lot of favorable comment from your patrons and we are certain that every local fire department would willingly listen to such a suggestion.

Callahan, a former publicity man on the Famous Players staff, recently became affiliated with the Cameo Theatre and is rapidly getting his stride in the famous "All Sound" theatre.

The New Year's Resolutions

With the arrival of the new year we received some good suggestions regarding some resolutions that all real theatres could well afford to heed. The best resolution was that theatre managers should resolve NOT to fool their patrons with promises they don't perform. Another was to keep their theatres spic and span for the new year. Still another was that they would present their shows in a more showmanlike manner.

We could utilize this entire issue with others we have received but if one was to boil them all together in a big pot the result would read: "Resolved, that we would run our theatres as theatres and make 1929 a banner year from every viewpoint.

Who was it that said "No matter how you slice it, it's still bologna?

We Thank You

THE answers to our recent letter are beginning to come in faster than the previous request and for this reason we must express our thanks to the various members who responded with such fine spirit.

The question of "Sound" continues to be of first importance to every phase of the industry and when light on this subject is shed by the men who are actually running these pictures then the entire industry can benefit by reading of their opinion and reactions.

The publication and editing of these letters are now being worked into shape and will, no doubt, create a lot of interest.

C. E. L.

Correspondence Is the Thing

A printed list of all Round Table Club members is now being prepared, and any member who would like a copy for the purpose of writing to the other members should drop me a line and I will forward one of these lists. The interchanging of ideas is the foundation upon which the CLUB was originally organized, and the mighty strides made in this direction are one of the many reasons why the CLUB is today a great success. But, like all the other good resolution makers, we are determined to make it a still greater success.

Any CLUB member addressing a letter to a brother member will soon learn that such communications are answered immediately. The reason for this is that we have created a sort of brotherhood, and regardless of where you are located you are all together through the medium of the trade's leading publication, the MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

The Maintenance Subject Again

The very important subject of theatre equipment maintenance pops up again. I rehash it because in the past few months I was rather surprised to note how many large, fine theatres were permitting their equipment to get into a deplorable condition. Most particularly important is the booth equipment. Here is, perhaps, the most vital part of your business and yet 90 per cent of the exhibitors in this country depend solely upon their operators to keep their equipment in proper shape.

Don't take such chances. We all know that there are a certain element of projectionists who really take a personal interest in the booth placed in their charge, but unfortunately, there are but a few like this. The larger majority are more inclined to let the equipment alone until such time as some portion of it becomes out of order or shows signs of going out of use.

There are various remedies for this condition. The first, and most important, is a personal inspection by the manager of his entire booth and every article in it. Arrange to meet your operators some set morning each week and go through the booth thoroughly. Look into the lamp houses, see if the reflector or condensers are being kept clean. Look at the bottom of the lamps to see if they are being cleaned out regularly, especially the carbon dust which eventually gets into the movable parts of the lamp and hinders their efficiency. Make it a point to see that the mechanisms are being lubricated properly and that this part of your projectors are not in need of overhauling, and if you find they are, DON'T delay. Postponing such attention will cost you many times more than what it should cost if you were to attend to it promptly, and besides it may cause a breakdown of your show at a time when you can't afford it.

We don't like to "tell the world" about the other guy's faults, but we could fill half a page telling of "so-called" good managers whose equipment we found to be badly neglected.

Wake up, boys, don't show poor managing ability by letting the property in your care suffer for want of attention, and don't depend on paid help to worry over things that rightly belong to your sole attention. And, incidentally, the booth is not the only place that requires your constant attention. It implies to every part of your house and every bit of equipment in it.

About Drives for Membership

Texas comes forward with the suggestion that the CLUB should stage a membership drive during the winter months, but our only reply is that such a drive is unnecessary, because the membership is constantly increasing, as day by day more exhibitors are learning of the great value that the CLUB is to its members. We say with all modesty, that the MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB is the largest organization of its kind in the whole world. And we don't mean maybe. The spirit of cooperation, a leaning toward aggressive tactics of showmanship are evident in the splendid work its members are doing. And that work is realizing an influx of new members into the CLUB.

Hollywood Notes

"Climax" Players Lined Up

Antonio Moreno was signed by Universal this week for the fourth principal role in "The Climax," which Renaud Hoffman is making. Jean Hersholt, John Reinhardt and Kathryn Crawford have the other roles.

M-G-M Seeks Roberts Story

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is negotiating for the rights to "The Man Higher Up" with the intention of making it into a feature-length film. It is the property of the Theodore Roberts' estate, having been used by the late Roberts as a vaudeville sketch. Roberts, prior to his death, intended making it as a motion picture and had started arrangements with William De Mille, who wrote it as a playlet. M-G-M intends using Robert Edeson and Hobart Bosworth in the leading roles with William De Mille directing.

Bradley King With F. N.

Bradley King, scenarist for past two years with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, has left that firm and is now at First National writing dialogue for "The Squall." Al Rockett arranged with M-G-M to secure her for Miss King's contract had another month to run. When she finishes work on "The Squall" she intends taking a European trip for a vacation.

"White Collars"

"White Collars," play produced by Anne Nichols, will be made into talkie by William C. De Mille for M-G-M.

Story Bought

First National has purchased screen rights to "Queen of Jazz," by Charles Beahan, Frances Kanes.

"Our Gang"

Julia Swayne supports "Our Gang" in new M-G-M comedy.

New Lead

Nina May McKenny has girl lead in M-G-M's "Hallelujah."

Laurel and Hardy

Laurel and Hardy are making new comedy; cast includes a white horse.

Burbank Writers

First National's writers are extremely busy. Louis Stevens is adapting "Hot Stuff;" Bradley King is preparing "Squall;" Agnes C. Johnston is doing continuity for "Man and Moment;" Forrest Halsey is adapting "Prisoners;" Joseph Poland is adapting and writing continuity for "Two Weeks Off."

New Title

United Artists "Love Song" becomes "Lady of Pavements."

Gets Role

Frederic March is leading male in Clara Bow's "Wild Party."

Sport Headliners

Two former sport headliners, Mike Donlin, ex-baseball star, and Robert Perry, former boxer, play mountaineer roles in Pathe's "Noisy Neighbors."

Russell Gleason

Russell Gleason, son of James Gleason, has been cast for one of the roles in Pathe's talkie, "The Missing Man," following his appearance in "Shady Lady."

Anita Louise's Debut

Anita Louise made her debut in the films under the name of Anita Fremault in "Mary's Little Lamb," a James A. Fitzpatrick production. She is now playing in "Square Shoulders" for Pathe.

Borzage to Make "Blue Skies"

Frank Borzage will direct "Blue Skies" for Fox. Janet Gaynor and Charles Farrell will be featured.

1929

A year that will go down in history as a banner year for the Manager's Round Table Club.

Every "Live Wire" Manager and Exhibitor, not already enrolled, should sign the application and jump aboard for a happy and prosperous cruise.

APPLICATION FOR MEMBERSHIP IN "MANAGER'S ROUND TABLE CLUB"

Opinions on Pictures

The Last Warning

A Modernized "Phantom of the Opera"

(Reviewed by Freddie Schader)

CARL LAEMMLE turned out a box office knock-out in "The Phantom of the Opera." Because of that they undoubtedly argued that "The Last Warning," which is nothing more than "The Phantom" in a little different dressing, should be another knockout. It will hardly be as great as the former, but it will provide your audience with a number of thrills. There are about two reels of talking, one at the opening and the other at the finish of the picture, that hold up fairly well. Between these there are some sound effects and screams that have been added to the score portion and they assist materially in driving home the thrill moments. It is highly possible that this particular picture would be more effective in the silent version.

Outstanding in this picture is Laura La Plante, a screen comedienne of long experience in a dramatic role. There isn't much to the role but Laura takes what there is to it and delivers a very talented performance. The chances are that after this Universal will keep her in this type of role for they will be able to get bigger prices for this star as a dramatic actress than they could possibly obtain for her should she continue as a comedienne.

Surrounding Miss La Plante there is a cast that has a galaxy of names. Montagu Love as the producer contributes a corking performance, while John Boles, as the lead, and Roy D'Arcy in a minor role both stand out. Two other women in the cast are Margaret Livingston and Flora Finch, the former looking very nifty and the latter aiding materially in the laugh producing. Then among the men are Burr McIntosh, "Slim" Summerville, Mack Swain, Fred Kelsey and Tom O'Brien. Fred Kelsey stands out with a catch phrase in the dialog. He is a copper and is going to "take charge personal." By stressing this time and again he gets laughs with it.

Paul Leni, the German director, handled this production with fine discrimination. He has utilized the German angle and dissolves shots to advantage in a number of spots and his opening shots showing the fantasy of Broadway were very good indeed.

Drawing Power: This is another mystery play as strong as "The Phantom of the Opera" and with its talking sequences should manage to pull business. There are 100 thrills in the picture and still sufficient comedy relief so that the tension on the audience isn't too great. The cast is a strong one and you can go after the names.

Sal of Singapore

An Improbable and Unconvincing Story

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

THERE is so much that is improbable in this story and so little attention has been given to directorial details that it is all very unconvincing. Here is Singapore Sal, a very, very hard-boiled dance hall girl plying her living in the lowest type of sailors' dive in a gown so beautiful that it might be worn by a queen. She is shanghaied from this dive wearing the gown and is thrown in with a crew of the lowest type sailors, where it seems other raiment is readily available.

And Singapore Sal immediately upon being carried aboard the ship waxes enthusiastic over a foundling baby that in some manner had been planted in a ship's lifeboat. And eventually she becomes sentimental and falls into love with the very hard-boiled captain of the craft who has made the threat that she would not be alive by the time they reached Frisco.

There is a more or less interesting atmosphere surrounding the story and the roles are well played by Phyllis Haver, as Singapore Sal, and Alan Hale as the captain of the ship. But the story is too slow in getting anywhere and there is too much of a sameness to it between the end of the first reel and the climax, which comes with a poorly directed fight at sea between the captains and crews of two ships that are made fast to each other for the occasion. The picture has an RCA Photophone synchronized score, a theme song and a little dialogue.

Drawing Power: It is the type of story that has a more or less popular appeal, and though it is all very improbable it figures to do fairly well at the box-office.

THEME: Sea Captain finding foundling baby on ship shanghaies dance hall girl to mother it. The baby becomes desperately ill on the voyage, is nursed through the crisis by the girl and the captain, who find their love for each other.

Synthetic Sin

Colleen Moore in a Weak Sister

(Reviewed by Freddie Schader)

"SYNTHETIC SIN" proves nothing more or less than synthetic entertainment. The best thing about this feature from a box office standpoint is the title. It is a highly improbable story that was played for laughs that failed to materialize. If it is true that Colleen's drawing power is waning then this type of picture is going to make it certain that she is going to fail at the box office. Give her a couple like this one and you'll have to have another "Flaming Youth" to bring her to life again.

In the earlier portions of the story Colleen as a little southern girl is the Cinderella of her family. There is an older sister that mother is trying to marry off, but Colleen, the "patsy," manages to turn the tables on sister and step into the affections of the Broadway playwright who has returned to the home town to try out one of his plays. Because he is in love with her he gives her the opportunity to play the leading role, that of a fallen woman. She fails miserably because of her lack of experience and when she is told that is the reason for her failure she is determined to "sin and suffer" so that she can be an actress. She runs away with her negro mammy as chaperon, to seek adventure, sin and suffering in New York and makes her way to a combination theatrical-bootlegger hotel in the Flaming Fifties. Here she finds excitement enough, but not the sin and suffering that she is looking for. In the end she marries the playwright and becomes his leading lady at home for life.

Supporting Miss Moore is Antonio Moreno who is still a great screen bet and one that the girls all like. Kathryn McGuire as the sister contributes a nice performance while Gertrude Astor as an actress with a gang-leader hotel proprietor as a sweetie delivers all that is asked for. Montagu Love is the hotel man and his performance stands out as one of the worth while things in the picture.

William Seiter, who direct, handled the earlier scenes skil'fully but the finish showed considerable let-down.

Drawing Power: Play up Colleen Moore and the title for that is all that you have in this instance. There is a theme song "Betty" written by Harold Christy and Nat Shilkret that is tuneful and pretty and fits admirably in the synchronized score.

Produced by John McCormick and distributed by First National. Length, 6,730 feet. Released Jan. 6, 1929. From the play by Frederick and Fanny Hatton, adapted by Tom J. Geraghty. Titles by Tom Reed. Directed by William A. Seiter.

Abie's Irish Rose

Second Review-Sound Version

(Reviewed by Freddie Schader)

THE sound version of "Abie's Irish Rose" is seemingly proving as much of a disappointment at the box-office at the Rialto as did the silent version when it was shown at the 44th Street at $2 top. The new version of "Abie" has but two real sound sequences, and on both occasions it is Jean Hersholt chanting the Hebrew Prayer for the dead. Other than that there is a synchronized score in which in a few spots the ringing of door-bells, the knocking on doors and a touch of a man whistling constitute the sound. However, the picture in its present form, it has been cut down considerably, is a genuine tear-jerker with any number of lighter comedy moments.

Casting about for a reason as to the failure of this picture to click overwhelmingly at the box-office, there is but one conclusion that one comes to, and that is that the screen production followed too closely on the heels of the stage play. If there ever was within the last decade a play that covered this country like a blanket, playing every little way station and water tank, it was "Abie." The tremendous length of the runs that it had in smaller cities and towns makes it fairly reasonable to assume that almost everyone has seen it, and because of that they are not interested in the screen production of the play.

"Abie" on the screen is a better play than it was on the stage. There may not be as many laughs in screen form, but there is more pathos and there is a real kick or two in the war prolog that has been added, but that about lets it out.

One thing certain, that in this day when the sound features are coming along with anywhere from one to two reels of talking sequences included, the exhibitor wants to be careful how he advertises this as a talking feature, for if he does the chances are that his audiences will be sorely disappointed.

Drawing Power: Just play it up as the record-breaking play of plays. The one that there was a $3,000,000 suit over, which is another record, and let it go at that, trusting that you will do business.

Lucky Boy

A Real Tear Jerking Melodrama

(Reviewed by Freddie Schader)

TIFFANY-STAHL have turned out a box office bet in "Lucky Boy" which has Georgie Jessel as the star. Now don't fly off the handle and say that Georgie Jessel didn't mean a thing to you when he was in Warner Bros. pictures. This one is different, and, Georgie, who was to have made "The Jazz Singer," for he played it originally on the stage, has finally obtained a chance to redeem himself. He certainly does shine to advantage in this picture and while it hasn't got all the wallop of "The Singin' Fool," it has a lot on the ball and is certain to get money in any house. There are six talking sequences in the picture and the star puts over five songs. The songs are "My Mother's Eyes," the theme of the picture. "Old Man Sunshine," "My Blackbirds Are Bluebirds Now," "My Real Sweetheart" and "Bouquet of Memories." If your house is wired you can't afford to overlook this one.

In the cast there aren't any names that will mean very much to your audience outside of Jessel, but the company surrounding him is adequate. Gwen Lee and Margaret Quimby in the principal women roles look pretty enough, although neither will make a spot for herself as far as talking pictures are concerned. Rosa Rosanova and William K. Strauss playing Georgie's mother and father respectively, manage to score nicely.

The tale takes Georgie from the Atlantic to the Pacific. His dad wants him to be a jeweler but the boy has his heart set on the stage. He tries to make good in the Bronx but proves a flop, so he hikes for San Francisco where he makes good on an amateur night and next is seen as a cafe entertainer. Here he meets the girl of the story. She's from New York on a visit. Back in the Bronx Georgie's folks listening in on the radio hear their boy way out on the coast doing his broadcasting and they wire him that his mother is ill. He hops a train, which is also carrying the girl friend back home. Once back in town the social barriers between the cafe singer and the society girl are broken down and Georgie becomes a Broadway star.

Drawing Power: Play up Georgie Jessel as the "original 'Jazz Singer'" and the fact that this is a tale of a singing waiter who marries a society girl, ala Irving Berlin and the daughter of Clarence Mackay. The talk and singing should pull audiences anywhere for you. Right now this is a hot bet with Jessel as the runner-up for Jolson.

Produced and distributed by Tiffany-Stahl. Length, sound version 8,500 feet. Released Jan. 10, 1929. Dialog and title by Georgie Jessel. From a story by Viola Brothers Shore. Directed by Norman Taurog and Charles C. Wilson.

"Giving In"

(Vitaphone—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Freddie Schader)

THIS is a Vitaphone short subject talker that runs exactly 20 minutes. The fact that the talkers are run at a speed of 90 would make this approximately 1,800 feet. It has as its theme the mother-in-law visit with Hedda Hopper as the visitor, Harry Delf playing the young son-in-law. Elmira Lane is the third member of the cast while Walter Rogers has a bit. The dialog by Hugh Herbert is brisk and there are any number of laughs in the early portion of the picture but it falls with a thud at the finish. The picture should have been cut at the end of Delf's final telephone conversation instead of giving him the added footage which gives him the final fade-out alone.

The Awakening

Another Romance of the War

(Reviewed by Freddie Schader)

IT would be unfair to say that Frances Marion took the barred "Marie Odile" as her pattern for this picture, but one must say that it is rather reminiscent of that stage play as far as the two principal characters are concerned. But irregardless of the story Vilma Banky with the assistance of Walter Byron and Louis Wolheim should bring money to the box office. "The Awakening" isn't a special in the fullest sense of the word, but it is better than the average run of program pictures of this period. Victor Fleming directed the production and supplied many deft touches. Incidentally the score and the synchronization devised for the picture by Hugo Reisenfeld play no small part in its effectiveness with the audience. The portions of the score in song were especially well fitted to the picture.

The story opens in Alsace Lorraine sometime prior to 1914, the heroine living in a small village that is visited by a squadron of huzzars. The Lieutenant in command has a reputation as a lady's man and he immediately starts to win the little village queen. It's all in fun at first, but, when the villagers take it seriously and brand the girl as a wanton, because she has visited the officer's rooms in the inn, the officer has a change of heart, and realizes he loves the girl. Her grandfather dies of shame and the girl is believed to have committed suicide for her shawl was found at the river's bank. Then several years later when the great war is on the Lieutenant is again in Alsace, the Germans are retreating and with his men he stops at a convent to advise the sisters that they had best fall back with the troops. After he has delivered his message he sees his former peasant girl love. She has not yet taken her final vows, so when he is wounded and she professes her love for him, there is still opportunity for the happy ending.

There is one thing about the picture and that is that it is one of the first to show the Germans in the light of humans during the war and any spot where there is a German population there is certain to be a sure fire audience for the film.

Vilma Banky is a comely wench and one cannot blame the lieutenant for falling for her. By the same token almost any girl would be willing to slip a little for Walter Byron as the officer. Sam Goldwyn ought to do something worth while with his boy as a leading man. He seems to have it.

Drawing Power: Vilma Banky and Walter Byron as a new pair of screen lovers together with a fairly interesting story which is at times amusing, should attract business. If you played the synchronized version be sure to stress the fact that the score and songs are well worth while. Irving Berlin's theme song "Marie" looks like a real hit.

Produced by Samuel Goldwyn and released by United Artists. Length 7972 feet. Released Nov. 17, 1928. Story by Frances Marion. Adapted for the screen by Carey Wilson. Directed by Victor Fleming.

A Romance of the Underworld

Worthy Successor to "Dressed to Kill"

(Reviewed by Freddie Schader)

IRVING CUMMINGS has turned out another hit in "Romance of the Underworld." There were a lot of people who believed his "Dressed To Kill" was a lucky fluke and that the director couldn't repeat, but he has fooled them, that is, providing someone else doesn't try to take the credit for it away from him as they did in the first instance. It's box office picture and directed with an easy tempo that alone belongs to Cummings.

There is little of the original Paul Armstrong play left in the version for the screen devised by Sidney Lanfield and Douglas Doty but it is effective picture stuff. Mary Astor heads the cast and does deliver a corking performance, but Robert Elliott and Ben Bard are not far behind her, especially Bard. John Boles does well enough with what is allotted him and Helen Lynch as one of the honky-tonk girls hits with a wallop. A former director, Oscar Apfel, is in the picture and if some one is hunting for a possibility as an American Jannings they should not overlook this bet.

It is the oft told tale of the little country girl who comes to the city and works as a night club hostess turning her earnings over to a man. She manages to escape from this life and eventually marries a boy of wealth and position. Her former "man" becomes aware of her success and decides to blackmail her. He would have been successful had it not been for a plain clothes copper, who first chased her out of the speakeasy and to whom she goes with her troubles. He engineers a little affray between the former lover and the owner of the speakeasy who was the victim of a frame-up by the would-be blackmailer, with the result that the latter is bumped off. This touch is directed in a comedy vein that makes everyone happy when the deed is done.

Drawing Power: It is the type of picture that will appeal to the sophisticated type of audience. Play it up as a second "Dressed to Kill." It has a synchronized score that is tuneful and effective. Mary Astor should pull somewhat at the b.o.

Produced and distributed by Fox Film Corp. Length 6162 feet. Released Nov. 11, 1928. Adapted from the stage play by Paul Armstrong. Directed by Irving Cummings.

Lucrezia Borgia

Spicy Story Muffled

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

THOSE turbulent times of the Renaissance which left their indelible imprint on history's pages echo faintly in this picturization. The Borgia closet is opened and the family skeleton is exhibited. But the wanton spirit of the age does not dare flaunt itself freely in the film (the censors have seen to that) and what one does see seems a trifle musty and childishly make believe. For with every coat of villainy that they put on Cesare they whitewash the character of Lucrezia and put her up one step further on the ladder of purity. No, the story never really goes Decameron; you'll find it quite an odd mixture of pseudo licentiousness, a wearisome account of villainy and an unaccountably insincere portrayal of the title role.

Evidently no attempt was made to have the story historically accurate. The true manner of Cesare's death is sacrificed in order to make a picture of Cesare and Lucrezia's first husband in a hand to hand combat.

But enough of shafts of criticism aimed at the film's historical value. The primary faults that one can find with the production are that it is unmistakably an old film, the lighting is poor and the titles are often juvenile.

The drawing power of the picture lies in its title. Borgia blood has been the subject for stories by Hugo, Sabatini and scores of other authors and their particular brand of wickedness holds the glamour of the forbidden. The characterization of Conrad Veidt as the baffling Cesare is the best piece of work in the picture. It is a difficult role to play, but the Teuton has a sure grasp of detail and an economy of expression that tend to keep the character pulsing, although at times he makes him very melancholy. Lina Haid makes a synthetic Lucrezia, Paul Wegener a realistic rogue, and .... a convincing enough Pontiff worried over his wayward son.

Drawing Power: The individual exhibitor can best determine whether the picture will find a response with his audience. Exploitation Angles: Play up Veidt and Wegener as leading German actors; the Borgias' fame in song and story; real locales.

THEME: A movie account of the affairs of the Borgias, culminating in the death of Cesare.

Distributed by Mutual M. P. Corporation. 7,200 feet. Directed by Richard Oswald. Edited and titled by J. W. McConaughy.

"The Diplomats"

(Fox-Movietone Comedy—26 Min.)

(Reviewed by E. G. Johnston)

A SURE fire hit for any sound equipped house, this looks to be. The writer witnessed it at the Gaiety Theatre, New York City, where a first night audience bellowed their appreciation with a merry succession of honest laughs. A number of the hard-boiled ones were heard to the effect that it was the best thing of its kind done to date. Much credit must be given to the well known team of Clark and McCullough for clever and sincere work, Norman Taurog's direction, and the assistance of F. B. McKenzie and Ben Kline, respectively sound and camera men. Some of the scenes are lavishly done and it is quite evident that a considerable amount of money was spent on this short feature.

Action centres aboard an ocean liner and the province of "Delgrabia," one of the little European countries where intrigue flourishes. The comedy team, stowaways on the liner, are taken for a couple of diplomats in service to the distressed kingdom. Plot revolves mostly around ludicrous efforts to obtain a document which will save the existing regime. This is finally accomplished when the psuedo-distinguished duo arrive at the seat of government.

In addition to Clark and McCullough, Marguerite Churchill and John St. Polis also deserve honorable mention.

Manhattan Cocktail

Hinges on the Ordinary

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

EXCEPT for the charming performance of Nancy Carroll and the suave acting of Paul Lukas, this drama of an innocent country miss turned chorus girl wouldn't amount to much. And that goes also for its synchronization and voice sequence wherein the warbling of a song falls rather flat. Nancy is very nice in pantomime, but she makes a so-so songster.

Dorothy Arzner directed this one, and evidence of a woman's hand is evident in its scenes. The character of the girl is clearly drawn, but the others, with the exception of Paul Lukas, make little headway. A far-too lengthy prologue precedes the modern story and the average spectator will be simply at a loss watching a fantastic presentation dealing with Grecian mythology, which follows fast upon the frontispiece "Manhattan Cocktail."

Richard Arlen fares badly with his role. True, he gets little to do, but he and Danny O'Shea are too obviously pawns moved about at will. When Danny suddenly decides to take a death leap, it all appears to be a bad solution of the mess into which the couple had fallen. The drama, when ended, leaves behind it the feeling of soggy story telling, overlaid with a few fantastic touches.

When his girl went to the big city in company with another school mate, Arlen decides to try his luck there, too. He appears where Nancy and Danny are hoofing it together in Lukas' show, and gets into a mix-up with the latter. Seeing that the girl loves Arlen and wanting her himself, Lukas has Arlen framed and imprisoned and fires Danny because of a suspicion of intimacy with a free-and-easy wife. The girl is called on to make one of those "sacrifices" to save her lover in prison, but her nimble wit brings her safely past the danger. On the night of the show, Danny clubs Lukas and thinking he has killed him, jumps to his death. After this little tragedy, Nancy and Arlen depart in haste from the "big city," and apparently live happily ever after in the country.

THEME: Drama of a country lass and two youths who tried their luck in Manhattan. One died and the other two, lovers, left the city chastened of all thoughts to win success in the theatrical world and returned to the country to enter upon married life.

"Pathe Review No. 1"

(Pathe—One Reel)

A PICTORIAL study of the early days of the "Police Gazette," forerunner of all the tabloids, is offered as the entertainment highlight of this Pathe Review subject. Other interesting sequences are "Portable Acres," revealing how farmers of Mexico solve the real estate problem; and "A-Horseback After Fish on a Mountain," a pictorial story of beautiful girls fishing the mountain streams on horseback. A novel reel very nicely put together.—GEORGE J. REDDY.

"Take Your Pick"
(Universal—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by George J. Reddy)

MIKE and Ike, the Stern Brothers comedians, appear again in another of their comic series for Universal. The fun of this number is gagged at a fairly smart pace, and Director Newfield has handled some trick stuff very well. It will serve as a good enough added attraction for any program.

Our friends Mike and Ike are kept awake far into the night by two pretty chorus girls in the next apartment, who are practicing some red hot dance steps. When the boys step out into the hall to protest, their door locks behind them. Clad only in pajamas, they find themselves in a sad predicament, and a good deal of fun is offered by the various troubles they get into, while endeavoring to reenter their rooms. The chorines next morning forgive Mike and Ike for their fault finding, and arrange a meeting backstage at the show. It is at this point that the main comedy action occurs, with Mike and Ike finally getting a one way ticket to the hospital, after causing almost a panic through their battles with the stage doorman and manager.

"Imagine My Embarrassment"
(M-G-M—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by George J. Reddy)

WITH the strains of "Clap Hands Here Comes Charlie" that introduces the synchronized version of this Charles Chase comedy, the spectator embarks on a very enjoyable 25-minutes or so. Sophisticated and slap-stick humor contribute to the effectiveness of the piece. It is polite clowning that Charles indulges in and audiences are bound to derive amusement from his caperings, and those of Ed. Kennedy and Anita Garvin, who support him.

As is generally true of all of Hal Roach's comedies, the plot is extremely simple: Charley and his family are invited to a party. Anxious to make a pleasant impression at this, his debut in society, Charley has the misfortune to do everything wrong. He makes an enemy of his host and is embarrassed terribly before the guests. His misfortune will be a source of pleasure to fans.

"Men Among Men"
(Vitaphone Talking Comedy—1 Reel)

FRED ARDATH with a company of two people presents his vaudeville drunk skit. There are any number of laughs early in the picture and there is a little kick at the end with the two male friends harmonizing "Sweet Adeline." The plot has the old story of one man trying to tip off his pal on how to square it with the wife because he has been on a souse. The usual result, drunk gets his excuse all mixed up and wifey gets sore and leaves. It will do to fill in on any talking bill.

"The Rag Doll"
(Universal—One Reel)

AN imaginative little piece, a sort of fairy tale, this Laemmle Novelty deserves attention from exhibitors. It is a quaint bit of entertainment. Children will respond to it joyously and the "grown-ups" should find it a cute tid-bit. Employing pure cinema and never seeming to miss the absence of titles, the story is told of a poor unassuming rag doll, whose misfortune it was to possess just plain simplicity. So when her owner was presented with a larger and more fanciful doll, the ragged one was contemptuously cast aside to make way for the usurper. Humiliating incidents befall the rag doll; a dog tries his sharp teeth on her; she is cast into the gutter and floats almost to the sewer's mouth; finally she finds her way into the garbage can from which she is plucked by a thief who seeks to hide his spoils in her sawdust interior. Later the doll is seen reposing on the magistrate's desk as evidence of the thief's guilt. Sentence delivered, she is cast into the wastebasket to begin anew more trials that lead to her dissolution.

To alleviate the sad times, things end happily for the shade of the doll when it appears before the gates of doll heaven and is fittingly rewarded.—GEORGE J. REDDY.

"Whoopee Boys"
(Educational—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by George J. Reddy)

HERE is an unblushingly good-humored two-reeler that will grab the chortles. It is fast unrefined fun that the troupe of funsters indulge in, a bit vulgar, perhaps, but laughably conceived and cleverly done. Monty Collins and Vernon Dent work together like old pals and one can't help but laugh at the friendly shirt-pulling fracas into which they draw the entire assemblage of guests at the party where they are detectiving. Their antics will not let the spectators stay in repose, but agitate his laugh nerves and replenish his stock of giggles.

In addition to Messrs. Collins and Dent, the cast contains Estelle Bradley, Eva Thatcher, Robert Graves and Al Thompson. Stephen Roberts manipulated the megaphone with good results. The two leads are commissiond to watch the guests. They inflict themselves on the various social lights, clowning around like Mexican jumping beans and finally wreck the party with the shirt-pulling fight. Their stuff is simply cuckoo, but it's funny.

"Range Wolf"
(Universal—Two Reels)

ALL that may be said for this two-reel featurette staring Universal's Western hero, Bob Curwood, is that it is just another release in the series. The story of this one is weaker than usual, and is set in production worn locations that have been seen time and time again. Although Westerns draw mostly on the kid trade it might be advisable to give even them a little variation in atmosphere. Curwood tries hard to do some really good work, but he has been handcuffed to a lot of stereotyped continuity that seems to defy his best efforts.

Curwood, as Bob Mason, rides in on the film in time to save a ranch girl from death by stampede of horses. Cattle have been stolen regularly from her ranch and Bob decides to corral the rustlers. This theme serves as the main thread of the story, which has been spotted here and there with the familiar Western gags, such as horse riding, rough-and-tumble fighting, etc. This film will unquestionably go over with the younger generation, but we sincerely wish "U" would give these features a redecoration.

"Beauties Beware"
(Educational—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by George J. Reddy)

TANTILIZING girlies, an indiscreet hubbie who has a weakness for them, his rugged wife who resents his interest in the pretty creatures and a jumble of comedy events laid out according to the pattern of jazzy flirtations, this Ideal comedy with the screen Johnny, Jerry Drew, has its moments of gay solicitude. By far the funniest thing in its chain of events is a fight between furious dames who hurl large gobs of facial cream onto one another's countenances. This is a grand finale that jars the onlooker into laughter.

Jerry likes the girls, but his wife doesn't appreciate his love for womankind. However, when some females give a party in Jerry's house he naturally ducks out of the wife's presence and hies himself to the apartment of Estelle Bradley, where a choice assortment of cuties are having a happy time. Eventually Jerry finds things a bit hot for him inasmuch as he has made an enemy of his hostess' husband (Harry Myers) and his own wife (Dolores Johnson) has discovered his absence and is trailing him.

"Habeas Corpus"
(Educational—M.G.M.-Roach—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by George J. Reddy)

MERRY proceedings, a fine splurge of laughs which scud through its length, an accelerated pace, this Hal Roach starring vehicle for Stan Laurel and Oliver Hardy, delivers in splendid fashion. The "corpus" of the title supplies a theme that is fittingly taken advantage of with plenty of guffaws resulting. Here the word is not used as 'n law, but refers rather to the nefarious trade of those who steal into graveyards at night to rob the earth of the dead.

It is on such a mission that Stan and Oliver are sent. They are quaking with fear, which is accentuated all the more when another party, learning of their purpose, dons a white sheet and frightens them out of their wits. Against the forbidding background of the tombstones, a byplay of comedy ensues.

"Our World Today"
(Educational—One Reel)

A RATHER unusual fish story, a very good marionette show and an interesting portion devoted to the wonders of a modern factory—these assets combine to make of "Our World Today" Magazine an entirely suitable screen amusement. One of the sights in the aquarium of George Wright's Walker House Hotel in Toronto are walking fish and this unusual procedure is laughable, to say the least.

In the marionette show, Tony Sarg's puppets give the story of Columbus and Ferdinand and Isabella and how the great explorer discovered America. The Bessemer Plant of the Edgar Thomson works at Braddock, Pa., are seen; molten steel, the hot ingots of the newly forged metal, fiery furnaces and the huge magnets used to catch and transport the steel contribute an illuminating glimpse into the steel industry. —GEORGE J. REDDY.

(Pathe—One Reel)

EDITOR TERRY RAMSAYE of the Review presents a highly interesting and thrilling subject as the leadoff to his reel on this occasion. It is titled "Cinema Heroes," and offers scenes of the men that crank the cameras for Pathe News reel. All the famous Pathe News camera heroes are shown performing daring feats, in their efforts to gather pictorial records of the world's activities. Other subjects in this reel are: "Once Aboard the Lugger," glimpsing merry English sailor girls who go to sea in saucy pajamas, and "Paper Scraps," Pathechrome scenes of the seasons as conceived by a modern juvenile.—GEORGE J. REDDY.

"Knowing the Ropes"
(Sportlight-Pathe—One Reel)

GRANTLAND RICE contributes another entertaining Sportlight to his good series of one-reelers. This one is devoted to the expert handling of ropes. It first shows the boy scouts manipulating the ropes of a yacht and then switches to a cowboy who goes through some exceptional maneuvers and some remarkable gyrations while keeping his ropes whirling. Lastly are shown some shots of athletes going through their training stunts in rope skipping. It is well arranged and good entertainment.—CHESTER J. SMITH.

"A White Elephant"
(Pathe-Fables—One Reel)

THE adventures of old Al Falfa and Don Dog among the wild beasts of the African veldts provide good laugh material. While hunting elephants they are chased by two of the pachyderms and are threatened with demolition when a churchmouse, whom they had befriended at the beginning of their journey, scares the elephants away.—GEORGE J. REDDY.

Publix-F & R Make Minn. Changes

EDWARD A. SMITH, managing director of the Minnesota Theatre in Minneapolis, this past week was appointed division manager of the Midland division of the Publix-Finkelstein & Ruben circuit. Murray Pennock, formerly of the Paramount Theatre, New York, will succeed him at the Minnesota. Several other changes were also announced. G. Ralph Barton, city manager, was advanced to the management of the circuit's theatres in the Twin Cities. Gordon Green was appointed to the managership of the State Theatre in Minneapolis, and Ed. Prinsen to the managership of the Strand and Garrick. Ben Ferris was made advertising manager for the Twin Cities and John P. Goring, formerly of the Forum Theatre, Los Angeles, was made managing director of the Capitol Theatre in St. Paul, succeeding Clem P. Murphy, who will be production manager for the State in Minneapolis and the Capitol in St. Paul.

The first of next month the Strand Theatre in Sioux Falls, S. D., will go into the possession of Bennie Berger, who has secured the lease of the house, which seats 650. It has been operated for several years by F & R in partnership with Jay Dundas. F & R has built a large new State Theatre since entering this partnership with Dundas and also operates the Orpheum and Egyptian in Sioux Falls. There are also several smaller houses in the city, including the Princess which is run by the McCarthy Bros., owners of more than twenty theatres in the northwest. The Liberty, owned by Charles Sawyer, will be closed soon in order that a store building may be erected on the site. Business men of the city are planning to back a project for building a large theatre and hotel structure in the near future, as they failed to secure the lease of the Orpheum from F & R when the firm closed that house recently for lack of patronage.

Mr. Berger began his expansion program last year when he purchased the two theatres at Bemidji, Minn.

Following the general expense cutting program of First National, due to the assumption of ownership by Warner Brothers, the Minneapolis exchange let some of its office force go the first of the year.

A tour of the northwest territory is being made by Charles Scherwin, special representative from the Columbia Pictures home office, and Ben Marcus, Minneapolis branch manager.

A new theatre opened at Parawan, Utah, during Christmas week, known as the "Alladin." This house is owned and operated by Mr. Mitchell of Parawan.

Miss Margaret Hammer, inspector at the local Warner Brothers exchange, was in San Francisco on a business trip.

C. J. Marley, local manager for the Columbia Pictures Corporation exchange, has entirely recovered from a serious attack of the influenza.

The fifth anniversary of the Victory Theatre was celebrated last week.

Louis Marcus of the Louis Marcus Enterprises here, has returned from a trip to the Pacific Coast.

Pittsburgh Movie Circles Quiet

ANNOUNCEMENT has just been made of the engagement of Samuel Askenase, vice-president of the Exhibitors Program and Show Print Company, well-known Film Rowite. Miss Hermoine Greenberger is the young lady in the case.

Fred Fry has resigned as shipper at Columbia Pictures Corporation, and in the future will devote all of his time to the operation of the Liberty Theatre at West Elizabeth, which he conducts in partnership with Howard Dennison accessory salesman at the Pathe office.

David Silverman, Pathe booker, is to be married some time during the month of February.

Joseph Davidson, booker for Tiffany-Stahl, became the proud father of a baby girl on December 13th.

A. H. Schnitzer, F B O manager, is the daddy of a brand new baby boy, born December 21st.

Cleve. Announces Ownership Deals

MESSRS. I. and Charles Webber are now running the Webber Theatre at Dover. The house has been closed for some time. It was previously operated by Arthur Thompson.

W. E. Weiberg has notified local exchanges that he has sold the Royal Theatre, Salem to M. W. Sheffield and G. W. Briggs.

Charles Burton has purchased the Rivoli Theatre, Central Ave., and the entire building surrounding the theatre. He will operate the theatre himself. Sam Barck, former operator of the house, did not renew his lease which expired the first of the year.

Morris Venzer is the new owner of the Columbia Theatre, Akron. He has purchased the house from William Magreni.

C. L. Tindolph is now associated with Mrs. J. O. Engle in the operation of the Majestic Theatre in Liberty, Center. Formerly Mrs. Engle ran the house alone.

It is stated that H. M. Malone has leased the Dreamland Theatre, Akron, from A. P. Butzum. Butzum has the Orpheum, Akron, and the Strand and Valentine, Canton.

Herman Goldberg is in the city opening the new Vitaphone disc and service exchange. He will remain here about a month, see that everything is all set, and then turn over the office to C. E. Almy who will manage both the Vitaphone service and the Warner Brothers exchange.

Al Freedman, who recently resigned as general manager of Theatres for Loew's Theatres, has booked passage for California.

H. Herron has closed the Bijou Theatre, New Philadelphia following the death last week of Mrs. Herron.

Frank Greenwald is now managing the Cedar-Lee Theatre, having been transferred from the Moreland. Lee Berger goes from the Cedar-Lee to the Moreland.

Loew's Liberty and Doan Theatres have changed their policies from straight pictures to pictures and vaudeville.

In order to check the spreading of the influenza epidemic now rampant in Elyria, all places of public gatherings have been ordered closed for three weeks by order of the Board of Health. This includes schools, churches, theatres, lodges etc.

Herbert Ochs has been appointed manager of the Cleveland office of World Wide Pictures, by Joseph Skirboll, general manager of World Wide. Ochs assumed his new duties last Monday, and is now located in the local Educational exchange, through which physical distribution of World Wide Pictures will be handled.

C. E. Almy arrived in town last Saturday to take over the reins of the local Warner Brothers exchange. Norman Moray, advanced from local manager to home office official, left to attend the Warner Brothers convention in Chicago.

Many theatres in surrounding towns are closing on account of the flu. Among them are the Dorsey at Johnstown, Barton, at Barton, and Home at Seville.

In the "Talkies" too

The fidelity of sound reproduction with motion pictures is affected by every variation in the film — be it ever so slight.

That is why, in the "Talkies" too, Eastman film excels. The great quantities in which it is produced, the strict supervision constantly exercised — the resulting uniformity from roll to roll, day to day, year to year — these factors of Eastman film manufacture are of first importance to the newest development of the art.

THE PICTURE THAT FOOLED EVERYBODY!

No. 622—Straight from the Shoulder Talk by Carl Laemmle, President of the Universal Pictures Corporation

I have to chuckle with every mail that brings glowing accounts of the showing of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" here, there and everywhere.

I can't even resist the temptation to chuckle publicly and in print, because when a picture fools the whole moving picture industry with mighty few exceptions, it seems to prove something or other.

You never in all your born days had so much advice shot at you as I had when I first talked of making a great production of "Uncle Tom's Cabin." I was told it was old, passe, as full of holes as a Swiss cheese, a terrible gamble, an awful mistake, a gigantic blunder and what not.

This advice came from exhibitors and from most everybody in the industry. But I knew one thing they did not know—namely, that there was a terrific interest in this famous old story in the hearts of the people who pay actual money to enter movie theatres.

Vast numbers of letters had come to me direct from movie fans, any of whom are regular readers of Universal's weekly advertisement in the Saturday Evening Post. When the first few letters came to me, I must confess that I was not inclined to pay much attention to them outside of answering them. But as the stream came steadily, steadily in, I took the matter more seriously.

It finally dawned on me that those of us who think of nothing but moving pictures are likely to lose our perspective. So I encouraged the writers who suggested making "Uncle Tom's Cabin" and asked them why they suggested it. The invariable answer was "because it is so human and is such an everlasting love story" or words to that effect.

Well, a story which can rip the people in this day of jazz is good enough for me or for anyone else.

So I started on one of the biggest ventures of my moving picture career.

And now you know the result. "Uncle Tom's Cabin"—pictured as it never was pictured before—is doing a land-office business for exhibitors in all parts of the world—even in countries where I had no idea there would be any interest in it.

It is this sort of thing which keeps the business alive and gives it a much needed jolt. It is this sort of thing which keeps the movie fans coming. It is this sort of thing which shows how wise it is to listen to the voice of the people instead of the voice of the too wise "experts."

So why shouldn't I chuckle?

"Lucky Boy" is a very good talking picture with songs, and with George Jessel who sings the songs, a logical, likable story backed up by a five of them. It is backed up by a stage and having a boy's love for his mother as the main motif, although a romance is worked in. It also has a theme song, "My Mother's Eyes," that rings like a bullseye among the talkers. Besides these, "Lucky Boy" holds comedy, mostly in the dialog and captions, both written by Mr. Jessel. So this picture can go where the Jolsons already have gone. If the house men care to, though the picture easily stands up by itself, they should make an exploitation play to bring the Jolson fans back for comparisons. Advance work for that angle might prove helpful for the b. o. in the world today can sing a ballad or a pop like Al Jolson, but that George Jessel can sing, on top of that Jessel is a finished actor, on the stage or screen. He has a personality and a naturalness of performance, whether acting, singing or talking, that sends itself over. This talking, that sends sel for any of his other and easier ones, including shorts.

With the R. C. A. Photophone process for the dialog, singing and sounds. If you want to accept this Photophone sounding heard for the first time by this reviewer in a theatre (previously heard in the projection room of Photophone), then Photophone for sounding seems to have it considerably over the others. Clear, without a blur or whirr, you must hear Jessel talk and sing to know how far ahead Photophone appears to be as a sound reproducer. In one number, "My Real Sweetheart," Jessel sings, he is supposed to be on the rear end of an observation car on a transcontinental train. It's the actual sameness as though Jessel were singing himself in "one," near the apron.

Nearly every one of the principals speaks. About the lightest voiced is Margaret Quimby, the ingenue, who looks sweetly nice. It appears as though by voice control at the studio (R. C. A. Photophone in New York), whatever imperfections may have been in her natural tones were deleted through holding it down to a quite low register.

There is a quartet (people) drawing room scene with the four bridge players all talking. It is clear. A comedy situation and the best laugh situation in the picture, though Jessel has picked some of his best gags and cross fire for other laughs. Besides his captions.

Ample direction all of the way, with the continuity making no slips. Dialog particularly making no slips.

It's the story of a Bronx boy of Jewish parents, his father a jeweler and he the store's clerk. Rejected by agents and managers, the boy accepts his mother's earrings to pawn, to rent a dark theatre in his neighborhood for one night to display his talent. Neighbors flock to see Georgie, but he falls down on all of the rent ($500) for the one night, and the house is darkened with the crowd turned away.

Determined to make good, the boy works his way to San Francisco, goes on at an amateur night (finely handled in a directorial way), and through that lands in a class Frisco nite club as its soloist entertainer. That's where the romance starts.

Back home, the old folks are listening in one evening and by good fortune get San Francisco. They hear their Georgie announced and singing. In the club he sang "Requiet of Memories" and the theme song, "Mother's Eyes," having singing in the picture started earlier in the picture. "My Blackbirds Are Bluebirds Now."

A message from home says his mother is ill. He returns, and the picture closes with Jessel the new star of "Lucky Boy" under the management of what seemed to be intended for Flo Ziegfeld, the first manager to turn him down when he had tried to break in in the east.

The mother stuff here is stronger than the romantic matter. There is a very bright sequence of the bridge party in a society home.

Entertainment in this picture, fairly evenly balanced, for Jessel is admittedly a showman besides a splendid actor and one of great promise. Any number of the girls will go for Jessel in pictures—he looks that good. Enough strength in the story and the mother and romance section for the silent version to get over, though naturally dialog grips, as Jolson's songs added to his talkers.

"Lucky Boy" as first outlined had Jessel as a singing waiter. With Jolson's "Singing Fool" and Jolson in that character, Jessel quite ethically declined to appear as a singing waiter. Probably the opening of this picture was changed to correspond with his wishes. In that way the opening sequence may have been made a bit long. It takes over three reels to get the boy out of the Bronx bound for the coast. Picture now running in 8,500 feet.

Some of the bigger producers might have chanced this "Lucky Boy" as a Broadway $2 special first. It doesn't get that rating. T-S sensibly intends to send it direct to the picture houses.

"Lucky Boy" should get Tiffany-Stahl plenty of money. It's the T-S highlight to date, and this a young producing firm. An extreme credit to T-S to turn out such a thoroughly all around well made talking picture as this so early—and when other and more strongly entrenched picture producers are still struggling with the talking problems.

Sime.

EXHIBITORS HERALD-WORLD

Georgie Jessel

TIFFANY-STAHL gave a highly spectacular private showing of Georgie Jessel in "Lucky Boy" at the Embassy theatre. At 11 o'clock on a Friday morning the house was packed.

Jessel soon proved himself to be a real acquisition to sound pictures. His voice registered admirably and his manner of presenting his familiar songs was made for the new order of pictures. He was given a highly enthusiastic reception.

"Lucky Boy" will be a box office hit. It has all the elements that go together for an old-fashioned success.

Jessel got into talking pictures late, but he's apparently making up for lost time.

—PETER VISCHER.

DAILY REVIEW,

A New Sensation

George Jessel in the first showing of "Lucky Boy," the big Tiffany-Stahl sound special at the Embassy Theatre yesterday, revealed himself as a box office attraction of tremendous emotional power. In five songs which his role called for in the course of the picture, he carried the house off its feet and brought cheers and applause because of the effective manner in which his appeal went over on the screen to the audience.

We venture the opinion that Jessel is exactly what the picture says, a lucky boy, and that Tiffany-Stahl is another lucky boy to have found this big attraction which undoubtedly will sweep the sound houses.

DAILY REVIEW

Speaking of Pictures

By

GEORGE JESSEL never should be silent in pictures. He has one of the best recording voices in the world, a voice with a clarity and resonance that carries with a greater effectiveness to us than in his stage appearance. In "Lucky Boy" his work is remarkable and if more vehicles can be found we would not be at all astonished if he were to outdistance Jolson. Jessel has overcome the smart aleckisms of youth without losing the youth and he has the emotional soul of a singing artist.

THE Film DAILY

"Lucky Boy"

THREE times George Jessel digs right into your heart in "Lucky Boy." The Jessel personality, undeniably there, does it with the aid of "My Mother's Eyes," a theme song that earns its title and carries an emotional kick of mule-sized proportions.

Likewise does he wisecrack, put over flashes of imitations, warble other tunes and, to sum total it all, provides you with an hour and a half of real entertainment. It's a Jessel funfest. He holds center stage, down stage and all other headline spots at one time. All of which is a job for an experienced trouper. But Jessel is that and does his stuff well.

Looks Like Money

By this time you have probably suspected we think "Lucky Boy" looks like ready money. It is. No question about what it will do in wired houses. We should have preferred to see the picture shorter and the story more expertly knit together, but when it's all over, you find you have been so well entertained that the discrepancies don't make very much difference.

"The Toy Shop"

This is an engaging one reeler, made in Technicolor and distributed like "Lucky Boy" via Tiffany-Stahl. A simple story made delightful by deft handling. Primarily it concerns a wail picked up out of the snow by a toy maker. The child falls asleep and dreams the toys come to life. Charming and particularly suitable for the Christmas season, but sufficiently above the average to rate playdates any time.

Motion Picture News

Lucky Boy

A Real Tear Jerking Melodrama

(Reviewed by Freddie Schader)

TIFFANY-STAHL have turned out a box office bet in "Lucky Boy" which has Georgie Jessel as the star. Now don't fly off the handle and say that Georgie Jessel didn't mean a thing to you when he was in Warner Bros. pictures. This one is different, and, Georgie, who was to have made "The Jazz Singer," for he played it originally on the stage, has finally obtained a chance to redeem himself. He certainly does shine to advantage in this picture and while it hasn't got all the wallop of "The Singin' Fool," it has a lot on the ball and is certain to get money in any house. There are six talking sequences in the picture and the star puts over five songs. The songs are "My Mother's Eyes," the theme of the picture. "Old Man Sunshine," "My Blackbirds Are Bluebirds Now," "My Real Sweeheart" and "Bouquet of Memories." If your house is wired you can't afford to overlook this one.

In the cast there aren't any names that will mean very much to your audience outside of Jessel, but the company surrounding him is adequate. Gwen Lee and Margaret Quimby in the principal women roles look pretty enough, altbough neither will make a spot for herself as far as talking pictures are concerned. Rosa Rosaneva and William K. Strauss playing Georgie's mother and father respectively, manage to score nicely.

The tale takes Georgie from the Atlantic to the Pacific. His dad wants him to be a jeweler but the boy has his heart set on the stage. He tries to make good in the Bronx but proves a flop, so he hikes for San Francisco where he makes good on an amateur night and next is seen as a cafe entertainer. Here he meets the girl of the story. She's from New York on a visit. Back in the Bronx Georgie's folks listening in on the radio hear their boy way out on the coast doing his broadcasting and they wire him that his mother is ill. He hops a train, which is also carrying the girl friend back home. Once back in town the social barriers between the cafe singer and the society girl are broken down and Georgie becomes a Broadway star.

A DO-RE-MI PICTURE. IT'S ALL JESSEL—SONGS, TITLES, DIALOGUE — AND THAT MEANS ENTERTAINMENT APLENTY. WIRED HOUSES HAVE A PROFIT MAKER HERE.

Cast....The Jessel personality dominates this. He's an entertainer beyond doubt. Margaret Quimby adds the feminine loveliness. Others, all good, include Rosa Rosanova, William K. Strauss, Gwen Lee, Richard Tucker, Gayne Whitman and Mary Doran.

Story and Production ...Comedy drama of a jeweler's son with stage anibitions who hits the road, finds it rocky, but comes through, as you expect, at the end. The story is nothing to get excited about Neither is it always well held together, but after it's all over you've been entertained with jazz songs, clever quips and some clutchings at your heart. We ask you what else is the function of motion pictures. Jessel sings wisecracks and does all of the stuff which gave him his reputation in musical comedy and in the main, does it very well. "My Mother's Eyes," the theme song is a pip. Everybody will be singing it soon. We predict it as a runner-up for "Sonny Boy." RCA system used.

Direction, Norman Taurog, Charles C. Wilson, very good. Author, suggested by story by Viola Brothers Shore; Sound Editor, Richard Shields, Dialogue and Titles, George Jessel; Sound Sequences by Rudolph Flothow; Photography, Harry Jackson, Frank Zucker, very good.

Greatest Newspaper Story Screened

Reviewed by Jerry Hoffman

THAT description, "greatest newspaper story screened" in the subhead above takes in a lot of territory, but it goes, doubled or redoubled. After seeing it, one admits not only that much, but adds further it's the best picture Pathe has made this year—and that bunch in Culver City have turned out a flock of films which no one would hide his head over.

The odd part of it is that it remained for a German (or is it Hungarian), Paul Stein, with but two years in this country, to make the most real American newspaper yarn without the aid of any so-called technical directors. Stein refused the aid, (at so much per week) of all city editors and newspapermen, went ahead making his own impressions. And what a story! That's to Jack Jungmeyer's and Paul Gangelin's credit. And what a picture! That's to Ralph Block's and Paul Stein's credit. It's to Pathe's credit.

Phyllis Haver plays a hard-boiled "sob-sister" who tries to revive an interest in life and work in a former star reporter who fell to "carrying the torch." In plain words, he was on a long drunk. She, in the process of so doing, falls in love with him, meanwhile unaware that he is mixed up in a big murder case. She has a bet with the city editor, (what a performance Raymond Hatton gives in that character!) that she will be able to break the story. Margaret Livingstone plays the widow of the murdered man who has a love interest in the ex-star reporter. The latter is given a fine portrayal by Leslie Fenton. Dan Wolheim is the man murdered. While I think of it, there's a kid playing the role of office boy whose name I went to the trouble of getting. He wasn't given screen credit, but he deserves it. It's Jimmy Aldine.

There's no hokum about a cub reporter heating the star man to a big story. There's no false atmosphere which any newspaperman or critic in the country can get sarcastic over. It's the most natural city room action I've seen outside a daily's office. There are neither any forced "production value" scenes nor gang fights for the purpose of adding to the overhead. It's simply a fine story remarkably well told.

Phyllis Haver has given some splendid performances for her pictures. "Sal of Singapore," was among the best of them. As the "sob-sister," she surpasses herself. Raymond Hatton proves that he's a real actor when he is permitted to act. Margaret Livingstone delivers, in fact, everyone and everything connected with the picture does. Even unto the snappiest set of titles one wants to read.

Drawing power: Only stupid exploitation can prevent this from drawing anywhere. Suitable for any and all houses. Exploitation angles: try to get a look at the picture first. There's any number of them to suit any locality. The inside workings of a newspaper are always interesting. The title offers possibilities for great teasers.

Theme: Newspaper story with mystery angle. Romance of a hard-boiled "sob-sister" and a fallen star reporter.

Produced and distributed by Pathe. A Ralph Block production directed by Paul Stein. No release date yet. About 6580 feet when down to footage.

No Interruption of Paramount Quality

A Statement by

HOLLYWOOD, CAL., JAN. 17, 1929

Despite the fire that destroyed one of the sound stages at PARAMOUNT'S Hollywood studio last night, production will continue exactly as scheduled and PARAMOUNT will fulfill every contractual commitment made to exhibitors. All of the production that was to be launched on the new sound stages will be transferred to the ten stages now in use, as the recording apparatus was housed in another building and was therefore not touched by the flames.

The starting date of all pictures will be carried out to the letter and without a single hour's delay. No negative or film of any kind was in the structure that the flames swept away, as all of this material is kept in the laboratories, a mile from the studios. Our present stages can well take care of the increased production just as they did when the new building was under construction.

During that time we completed nine full dialogue pictures, namely, "Interference," "The Doctor's Secret," "The Canary Murder Case," "The Dummy," "The Wolf of Wall Street," "Chinatown Nights," Clara Bow in "The Wild Party," "Close Harmony" and "Innocents of Paris."

At our Long Island studio we have practically finished "The Letter," "The Hole in the Wall," Richard Dix in "Nothing But the Truth," all talking pictures, and the program of sound shorts.

The capacity of our Hollywood studios does not take into consideration the possibilities for increased production at Long Island, where other sound recording apparatus is now in operation.

The following all-talking productions for release this season will start as originally scheduled on the dates listed: January 21, "The Man I Love," featuring Richard Arlen and Mary Brian and directed by William Wellman; January 28, "The Studio Murder Mystery," with an all star cast directed by Frank Tuttle; February 21, "Young Sinners," starring Charles "Buddy" Rogers and directed by Dorothy Arzner; February 25, "The Saturday Night Kid," starring Clara Bow; March 11, a George Bancroft-Josef von Sternberg production as yet untitled; March 11, an Adolphe Menjou starring picture as yet untitled.

This comprises the entire list of all-talking pictures for release this season scheduled for production on the West Coast. In addition to these pictures, eight all-talking productions for release in the Fall will be completed during the months of January, February and March, as originally scheduled.

"Aye! Aye!" says LOS ANGELES

EXAMINER: "For wild melodrama and scorching love 'The Rescue' is Samuel Goldwyn's most thrilling contribution to motion pictures. A film that for action and for rapidly moving situations has seldom if ever been surpassed. Something that will fill the theatres in every town in the United States."

NEWS: "Colman just the right person to portray a passionate, gallant hero, beset with the worthless beauties. 'The Rescue' is romance undiluted. Lily Damita fulfilled promises made for her by United Artists."

TIMES: "The lure of romance and the sea will go far to spell success for Ronald Colman's first starring picture. Plot is unusual—situations of varied interest. 'The Rescue' is particularly notable. Lily Damita is a genuine dscovery."

"Yes Sir!" says DETROIT

PRESS: "Colman has a definite and large following among filmgoers and they are going to admire his Captain Tom Lingard. It is better perhaps than anything he has offered. Teems with suspenseful drama. Lily Damita seems to have a very marked quantity of what is known on screen and stage as s. a. Mr. Brenon will probably carry off another gold medal with 'The Rescue.'"

TIMES: "It gives Colman immense opportunities to show his wares. Needless to say he does. 'The Rescue' is magnificent. Go to 'The Rescue.' Lily Damita is a substantial addition to the Hollywood colony as Colman's leading lady."

"And WHAT A Hit!" says CHICAGO

POST: "'The Rescue' is a picture to be seen and long remembered. What a story it is. Romance and adventure at the world's end. Colman in a role which might have been written for him."

TRIBUNE: "Conrad's story well filmed. Worth seeing. All men, and, I believe, most women will be charmed with this production. The film is alive with dynamic and suspenseful action. 'The Rescue' is in every way a commendable picture. It holds your intent interest from start to finish."

HERALD-EXAMINER: "Have captured not only the letter but actually the spirit of Conrad's novel. You will find 'The Rescue' exactly to your taste. Colman does handsomely by his role. And Lily Damita is lovely to look upon and refreshingly different."

"Give us more"—says NEW YORK

EVE. WORLD: "If you take your movies seriously you just cannot fail to include this one in your list. A very fine picture indeed. Has all the sweep of the novel; crammed full of adventure and romance and is beautiful to behold. Colman does the best work of his career. 'The Rescue' will doubtless prove popular wherever it is shown."

POST: "An unusually entertaining adventure movie. Good photography, plenty of action. The film is well worth a visit."

SUN: "Colman gives just about the finest performance of his American career. A majestic pageant of the Far East and the sea that 'foams and murmurs' on a thousand shores."

TIMES: "Herbert Brenon has skilfully preserved the essence of the narrative. He sustains the interest throughout his many scenes. Colman's performance is so earnest and sensitive he reflects the spirit of 'King' Tom. Lily Damita is fascinatingly handsome and gives an intelligent performance."

WORLD: "In all a good, very entertaining filming of Conrad's story and well worth seeing. It conjures up and holds the glamor and wide sweep of Conrad's story. An ideal part for Mr. Colman."

DAILY MIRROR: "'The Rescue' faithful to Conrad Good entertainment. Herbert Brenon has made an interesting and colorful movie of the Conrad novel Colman gives a beautiful performance. Lily Damita has beauty, intelligence, potent allure and real fire They are splendid foils for each other."

Higher Admission Prices

Will They Prove the Answer to a Lot of Pressing Problems?

By William A. Johnston

RAY GROMBACHER, head of the Spokane Theatres, came to New York last week with the intention of telling us that we were wrong about the all-talking pictures.

Since he was one of the very first exhibitors in the country to install Vitaphone and has kept the talkies continuously and successfully to the fore ever since—a matter of two years—we are pleased to give here his sage advice.

"I don't know about the studio end," he said. "Maybe you are right about the difficulties of talking-picture production. All I know is that the Spokane public wants Talkies. I thought so from the very beginning and I haven't changed my mind a particle. Advertise an all-talking picture and they'll flock to your theatre. I don't know whether they like them or not, but I do know what the box office says."

Two very important points, however, are brought up by Mr. Grombacher; and, it seems to us, they are just the two things the exhibitors must consider most carefully just now in connection with the talkies.

One is the matter of admission price.

The other is: honesty in advertising.

Regarding the latter, Mr. Grombacher tells his public just exactly what kind of sound the picture carries and how much. He has a good-sized stock cut, announcing an all-talking picture, which he gives prominent display in his newspaper annd other advertising. But, in addition, he is careful to point out that there is singing, or sound effects or intermittent talking in tense situations, or whatever the case may be. If he has only a talking news reel he says so—plainly.

As for admission price, he had the courage to raise prices fifty per cent on the occasion of his first booking and billing of a sound picture and he has succeeded in maintaining the advance.

This, it seems to me, is vital.

Karl Hoblitzelle and many other experienced theatre men have talked to us on the same subject.

Here is the picture they draw: Say a house is successful in getting an installation. It has, immediately, the jump upon its competitor. But, sooner or later, the competitive house will be wired. That is inevitable. At this juncture, if the first house did not raise its admission price on sound pictures, both houses will find themselves, in the same old dilemma, of giving a more-and-more expensive bill for the same money.

This admission price matter seems to be the answer to a lot of problems: for instance, that of the chain which doesn't know whether to wire its big city theatres or suburban houses or both; and to the claim that everywhere there should distinctly be all sound picture houses and all silent picture houses.

A confidential correspondent of ours in Australia takes a radical stand in the matter. Incidentally, he is a wise and experienced showman. He says we are all wrong on the price question. We are using the talkies as just jam on the bread and butter when they should be rated a full course meal at the Ritz.

"They are going to install 24 sound equipments throughout this country during the coming year, 12 belonging to Union Theatres, as I understand it, and 12 belonging to Hoyt's," he writes. "That means there will be about 4 or 5 in Sydney; 3 or 4 in Melbourne, and 2 in each of the other big centres.

If This Means You, It Still Is a Fact!

WE recently asked the head of a prominent distributing company:

"Why, at luncheons, does no one ever discuss the most important subject in the industry?"

"What do you mean?" and he looked puzzled since the assembled group had devoted nearly two hours to "shop" talk.

"We mean this—we have debated mergers, alliances, theatre circuits, executive changes, censorship and Wall Street, but we haven't given a moment to the one subject that is more important to the present and future of this business than all the others combined—and that is production."

And it is true—of every assemblage of motion picture executives in the East. They are men with vision, imagination, and a good knowledge of the type and kinds of pictures that will attract the public.

Some of the energy they burn up in useless conversation about the financial and administrative possibilities in motion pictures, could be devoted to conceiving ideas for pictures. These, relayed to the production executives in Hollywood or the Eastern studios, would go farther, in screen form, toward making the industry prosperous than all the pie and coffee rumors combined.

A Shrewd Choice

EXCHANGE managers have something to sell in addition to film. If anyone doubts, C. R. Beacham, of Atlanta, Ga., will prove it.

For years Beacham was manager of First National's Atlanta exchange. He numbered his exhibitor friends by the score. He won their confidence by honest representation, their friendship with friendliness and their regard with loyalty to his company.

Something happened. First National's Atlanta branch had a new manager. Beacham was out.

Something else happened. First National's home office received letters—one in particular—from a leading Southern exhibitor. Beacham was in, but as a special representative.

Exhibitors in the Atlanta territory have never agreed with the action of First National's home office. That has been their right, just as it is the privilege of a home office to reconstruct its organization according to its own ideas.

Now Beacham is once more manager of an Atlanta exchange. Joseph Skirboll, general sales manager for World Wide Pictures, has shrewdly appraised Beacham's assets. Skirboll apparently has considered the confidence, friendship and regard Beacham enjoys among exhibitors in the Southeast. In appointing Beacham to the position of manager of the Atlanta branch of World Wide, he has obtained not only real selling ability but those other assets which have an important value in any merchandising effort.

Frances Klein Resigns

FRANCES KLEIN, who has been with Motion Picture News since almost its beginning, leaves us this week. The separation is exceedingly regretted by the paper and by myself. She has been with us so long, so loyally and so actively that she has grown, it seems, a part of Motion Picture News, and a very large part of the trade, I feel, think of her in just this way. She had and has the very spirit of the business; she has always made its interests hers, its trials and its successes. I doubt if any one has a deeper interest in or a wider knowledge of its affairs and its personnel. We cannot but always regard her as she has been, a part of Motion Picture News.

WM. A. JOHNSTON.

"How easy it would have been to have only installed one or, at the outside, two equipments in each big town, and how easy it would have been to charge 6/- or 8/- and make it something entirely new. They could have packed them in at every performance, and with such few houses they could have picked the very best in talking entertainment, and God knows they need the very best over here, where they are none too struck on the American manner of speech as it is. The runs would have been long runs and I do not doubt that a good talking picture would run 4, 5, or 6 months. That would have kept the talking entertainment entirely separate from the silent, and would not have jeopardized the tremendous interests of the silent theatres. It would have also determined whether the 'talkies' were successful, and if so, it would be possible to wire all of the theatres they could and bring the prices down to conform with the present day motion picture houses without upsetting the whole industry.

"As it is they are going to open with some all-talking pictures and others just synchronized, and there will be silent pictures running all for the same price. The people are going to be fooled and bamboozled into believing that pictures are all-talking, when some of them are merely sound pictures and others are silent pictures with a talking news reel. All of which lets the public know they are being taken for suckers, and they wake up to the fact that they have been taken for suckers and then they find a different form of entertainment."

Pathe Battle For Free Speech Wins Publishers With 14 Million Readers

PRESS ENLISTS IN WAR

Quick Response From Papers in All Sections of Country When M. P. News Presents Facts

NEWSPAPER publishers and editors with a combined daily circulation in excess of 14,000,000 readers have already interested themselves in the fight for freedom of speech on the screen, now being waged by Pathe against the New York State Censor Board.

MOTION PICTURE NEWS has queried more than three hundred daily newspaper publishers. Responses have been amazing, for speed and sharpness of opinions expressed.

The query stated the facts of the case, and emphasized the precedent that would be established for censorship of all forms of free expression should censorship of screen dialogue become a fact.

Press Watching Outcome

Leading newspaper publishers have confirmed the opinion of MOTION PICTURE NEWS, and it is evident that the daily press of America will be watching the outcome of this case as it has seldom watched any but major events.

Publishers and editors who have expressed their opposition to the principle as well as the practice of censorship are at the head of newspaper organizations serving a total of 14,096,776 readers. This total represents the combined circulation of the Hearst newspapers with 9,172,298 readers; the Scripps-Howard newspapers with a circulation totaling 2,288,715; the Brush-Moore Newspapers, Inc., with 127,339; and the following: Los Angeles Times; Portland Oregonian; St. Louis Post-Dispatch; Ann Arbor Daily News; Oklahoman; Oklahoma City Times; Oklahoma City Daily News; Des Moines Register; Des Moines Tribune-Capital; Kansas City Journal; Kansas City Post; Kansas City Star; Evening Huronite (S. D.); Akron Beacon-Journal; Birmingham Age-Herald & News; Montgomery, Ala., Advertiser.

Meanwhile, the hearing on the injunction suit of Pathe to restrain the New York State Censor Board from censoring dialogue

Frank P. Glass, Montgomery Advertiser

"Without question, this attempt to censor dialogue strikes directly at the heart of the freedom of speech. The fight of the Pathe company is of national importance", is the declaration of this prominent Southern publisher.

Carl B. Adams, Cincinnati Enquirer

"It is equally ridiculous for a picture censor to pass on dialogue as for an attorney to prescribe health rules or a merchant to decide scientific truths. Censorship is nothing but an unwarranted arrogation of authority".

A. E. Lyons, Kansas City Journal-Post

"If it comes to the point where we have to have censorship of every word spoken in talking pictures, I am in favor of advocating censorship of the type of cigars our Congressmen smoke and the passage of a Federal law that no one be permitted to smile outside the confines of their own home."

Charles L. Knight, Akron Beacon Journal

"A censorship of talking movies offends in every essential against the freedom of speech and consequently is in violation of the spirit of freedom which the makers of our Constitution tried to preserve to us".

Editorial: Ann Arbor (Mich.) Daily News

"Unquestionably the right of free speech is involved. If every film is required to conform to the opinion of a board of censorship a dangerous power will have been vested in a small group of individuals."

Editor, Daily Oklahoman and Times

"Freedom of speech is certainly endangered by censorship of actors either on the stage or the screen and a precedent is set which, unless fought vigorously, will mark the beginning of the end of the freedom for which America stands."

J. D. Rariden, Brush Moore Newspapers

"The question, however, goes far deeper than any prejudice against any particular film or group of producers, and the results, should they be favorable to the censors, will spread far outside the field of motion pictures into the entire publishing field and eventually will result in the suppression of free speech". (The Brush Moore Newspapers comprise five important dailies in Eastern Ohio.)

L. A. Curb Lists Paramount, Fox Pathe Securities

Two Former Stocks Have Been Played Heavily by Film Colony in the Past

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, Jan. 17.—With a large number of persons connected with the film industry on the coast playing the stock market, the Los Angeles Curb Exchange has listed the securities of Paramount-Famous-Lasky, Pathe, and Fox Film Corporation.

The Los Angeles Curb exchange listings are in addition to the listings of the stocks in the New York market, but allows transactions locally without the necessity of placing orders through eastern brokerage houses. The listings include 2,063,517 shares Paramount-Famous-Lasky no par value common; 850,877 shares Pathe no par value common; Pathe "A" preferred, no par value, in the amount of 251,753 shares; and Fox Film Corporation "A" no par common, 820,660 shares.

Both the Paramount and Fox stocks have been played heavily by the picture colony in the past, but little activity has been displayed in the Pathe stocks locally on account of the unsettled condition of Pathe production during the past six months of re-organization.

Stanley Home Office Moves to Mecca Bldg., N. Y.

The home offices of the Stanley Company of America have been transferred to the Warner headquarters, Mecca Building, 1600 Broadway, Spyros Skouras in charge. S. H. Fabian will continue as the buyer for the circuit, with Ed Alperson, former Warner district manager, as his aide. In charge of operation of the de luxe theatres will be Reeves Espry, former advertising and publicity director of the Skouras chain, whose St. Louis post has been taken over by Thornton Sargent, his erstwhile assistant. Maurice Davis, formerly of Loew's, is Mr. Sargent's assistant.

Dix In Hospital With Flu Paramount Stops Feature

Richard Dix was removed to the Roosevelt Hospital, New York, on Sunday suffering from a severe attack of influenza. The star had been working for a week at the Paramount Long Island studios. His production, a screen talkie version of the former Willie Collier vehicle, "Nothing But the Truth," was halted through his illness. Victor Schertzinger, the director, was handling the picture.

Early last week just after Dix started, he complained that he was suffering from sinus trouble and that it was causing his voice to choke while in front of the microphone. By the end of the week he had developed a fever and his physicians immediately ordered his removal to a hospital in order to combat influenza that developed.

Fight on in Chicago Between Circuits

THAT there exists bitter opposition between Balaban and Katz and Marks Brothers is emphasized this week in reports from Chicago where the Balaban and Katz house, the Roosevelt, is now playing "The Singing Fool."

The picture's present run at the Roosevelt and its previous run at the McVicker's is giving the trade much speculation as to whether or not Balaban and Katz are "milking" the attraction before it goes over to the Marks houses. The latter are giving lots of publicity regarding their coming showings of "The Singing Fool" and are advising Chicagoans to wait and hear the picture at their houses which they advertise as "built for presentation of sound films."

Gottesman And His Chain Both In Warner Deal

Head of Circuit Reported in Line for Executive Post With Theatres

Warner Bros. are again reported not only negotiating for the entire Gottesman Circuit in New England, but also as making overtures to Alfred Gottesman offering him a big executive position with the Warner Theatre chain.

It is said now on good authority that the deal will be closed in the near future and that Mr. Gottesman will assume full charge of all the Warner controlled theatres east of Pittsburgh.

In spite of denials it is said to be a certainty that the deal is not only still under way but very near a conclusion. Should Gottesman accept the theatre executive position it is understood he will assemble his own operating staff to be made up chiefly from his present New England staff, which has been working with him most satisfactorily and which thoroughly understands the Gottesman methods.

The Alfred Gottesman Chain in New England totals eleven first run houses and represents the most serious opposition to the Fox-Poli theatres in their section. Mr. Gottesman's foresight in equipping his houses for the reproduction of sound is said to have paid him royally for his faith in the talkies.

Exhibitor subscribers are important to advertisers in exact proportion to their buying power. The greatest number of buying exhibitors are reached through Motion Picture News.

New Routings Due for Publix And West Coast

Final Dissolution of Chains Rearranges Booking of All Stage Units

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 17.—With the final dissolution of West Coast and Publix Theatres already completed, new arrangements for the routing and showing of stage units will obtain. In fact, new plans have already been effected in the Pacific territory.

Starting this week all Fanchon and Marco units produced for West Coast Theatres will have their premiere at the Colorado Theatre, Pasadena. Heretofore they have opened cold at Loew's State, Los Angeles. This will be the second week's stand in the future. The new routing system plays Fanchon and Marco "Ideas" over the entire country and sends them finally to Australia.

In Seattle, effective January 30, the Fanchon and Marco units, owned and produced for Fox and West Coast, will return to West Coast's Fifth Avenue Theatre, and the Seattle Theatre, now playing the Fanchon and Marco shows, will again house the Publix units from New York. The latter shows will again go via Chicago, with Minneapolis the only stop to the Pacific Coast.

The same change becomes effective in Portland the week of February 6. After that date the Fanchon and Marco units will return to the Broadway Theatre, and Publix's Portland Theatre will play the publix units after their week in Seattle, while they are en route to San Francisco and Los Angeles.

New Film Center Bldg. Officially Opened to Lessees

The new Film Center Building, Ninth Avenue between 44th and 45th Streets, New York City, was officially opened last week for occupancy by Abe N. Adelson, president of Film Centre Bldg., Inc. The initial work on the building was begun nearly four years ago by the Building Committee of the M. P. Producers and Distributors of America.

The building is 13 stories high and has a large number of storage vaults with fireproof walls eight inches in thickness on each floor.

Rubin to Coast for Conference

J. Robert Rubin, of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, is to leave for the Coast early next week for the annual conference at the Culver City studios of the company regarding product for the next year. Mr. Rubin expects to be on the Coast for three weeks in all. Several productions that will mean national tie-ups with large movements are expected to be included in the program.

Warner-Pacent Tie-Up Revealed By Exhibitor

Contract Conditions Show Connection Between Two Companies

A representative exhibitor called at the offices of the MOTION PICTURE NEWS this week, asking for advice in connection with a proposal that he had received from the Warner executives anent the installation in his houses of the Pacent reproduction device. The Warners stated that they were going to equip their houses of the Stanley Circuit prior to permitting any outside exhibitor to obtain installations.

But orders were being taken by Pacent representatives, who will call on the exhibitors. The cost of the Pacent device is to be $2,500, of which $1,250 is payable with the order and the balance on the completion of the installation, according to the exhibitor. The cost of the installing, which is to be in the neighborhood of $150, is to be borne by the exhibitors.

Working Together

Despite the denial on the part of both Warners and the Pacent executives that there is any connection between the two companies, there is without a doubt an understanding of some sort whereby they are working together. That is apparent in the fact that the exhibitor was informed, he said, that in order to get the Pacent device he would have to sign a contract whereby he would take the Warner Bros.-First National feature product for a period of years and likewise another contract to play the Warner Bros. Vitaphone acts.

The exhibitor was also informed that his film rentals for sound productions would be 100 per cent greater than what they are at present for silent pictures.

Three Contracts

A home office representative of Warners is to call on this particular exhibitor in company with the representative of Pacent and the exhibitor will have to sign three contracts at the same time. One will be for Pacent and the other two for Warners, one covering the feature productions and the other the short subjects.

In imparting the information to the exhibitor the Warner executive stressed the fact that there was no connection between Pacent and his company but in the same breath reiterated that without a contract for the Warner product it would be impossible for the exhibitor to get a Pacent installation.

Buster Keaton Reported as Resuming U. A. Association

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, Jan. 17.—Buster Keaton is reported as returning to the United Artists' fold on the completion of his present contract with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. He has two pictures to make for that company and has made two. Should he return to U. A. he will head his own production unit again.

Schenck Emphatically Denies Possibility of Disposing of Any Of The Loew Enterprises

With Stockholders In Control Present, Brands Rumors Of Impending Deals Absolutely False

NICHOLAS SCHENCK in his offices in the Loew State Building on Thursday afternoon issued the strongest form of denial possible regarding the selling of Loew's or Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Present with him at the meeting to which representatives of the trade press were invited, were Arthur and David Loew, David Bernstein and Robert Rubin. Mr. Schenck stated that those in the room represented the control of the Loew Enterprises and that they were all in accord with him in issuing the denial.

He also stated that he had not met with or seen William Fox since a few days after the closing of the deal for the West Coast Circuit by Fox. That was last February. Also a denial was made that there had been a treating with RCA which company it was at one time reported had made an offer for the control of the Loew stock at 125.

Sweeping Denial

David Bernstein, who with Mrs. Marcus Loew is co-executor of the estate of the late Marcus Loew, stated that the estate of the founder of the circuit had not been closed as yet and therefore there wasn't the slightest possibility that Mrs. Loew could have made a deal. This was confirmed by both Arthur and David Loew.

After the statement which had been prepared in advance was handed to the newspaper men who read it Mr. Schenck said that he was ready to answer any question that they cared to put to him. He was immediately asked whether it was possible that banking interests might have bought up control of the company in the open market and through having accomplished this might be making a deal with other interests. He denied the possibility of this having been effected, also that any inside deal could have been made for Mrs. Marcus Loew's personal stock holdings.

The statement issued by Mr. Schenck is as follows:

"It seems incredible that articles affecting the affairs of a great company can be published in the trade papers upon anonymous information and more amazing that they can be republished after an official denial.

"It seems unbelievable that an utterly false rumor, such as the one that an arrangement by which Fox is about to pur-

Caddo Plans Roadshows for "Hell's Angels"

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 17.—Caddo Pictures will roadshow "Hell's Angels" as their own enterprise when ready for release instead of turning it over immediately to United Artists. After playing the legitimate houses throughout the country United Artists will be given the general theatre release.

H. Wayne Pearson of Caddo, who has been here for two weeks returned to New York, Wednesday, and is due back in Hollywood next month. Meanwhile he is completing roadshow details and will take entire charge of several companies to be routed.

The picture is said to have cost over $2,000,000 so far and is not completed yet. It will stand almost $3,000,000, it is said, when finished with technicolor sequences and synchronized sound effects.

Serious Aspect Looms In Foreign Picture Market

Confidential Reports Say European Situation To Tighten Up

Confidential reports received in this country during the last few weeks indicate that the European situation in regard to the importation of American made films is to take on a very serious aspect within the next few months. Advices to the effect that Germany is going to tighten up considerably as far as American product is concerned.

Guy Croswell Smith, who is the European representative of United Artists, returned to America several weeks ago for a series of meetings in New York at which the foreign situation was discussed.

United Artists have been able to build up a tremendous amount of good will in Italy through the diplomatic handling of their affairs by their representative there who is close to the Premier. In Germany, however, the company has not been so fortunate and both there and in France they are going to have difficulties during the coming year.

Other companies have received information from their foreign department representatives that the situation on quotas for the coming year is one that needs immediate attention from this end and advise that means should be taken to placate the foreign producers and their Governments.

Murdock Heads New Big National Vaudeville Chain

Pantages, Joseph Kennedy, Pat Casey Reported As Associates

A coast-to-coast chain of combination vaudeville and motion picture theatres is in the process of formation under the directorship of J. J. Murdock, who stepped out of Keith-Orpheum when those interests were taken over by the R.C.A. Associated with Murdock, according to report, will be Pat Casey, who is the head of the Vaudeville Managers Protective Assn., Joseph Kennedy, the Boston banker, who merged the F.B.O-Pathe and Keith Orpheum holdings and disposed of them to R.C.A., and a number of owners of theatre chains which are now being booked through the Radio-Keith-Orpheum offices. In addition Alexander Pantages is also said to be included in the combination. This latter move would assure the connection to the Pacific Coast for the new circuit.

Big Circuits Included

In the east the principal houses to be included are the Keith-Proctor theatres, of which there are five in New York City and several in the outlying suburbs, such as Mt. Vernon, Yonkers, etc., and several up-State in eastern New York; the Mike Shea theatres in Buffalo and Canada, in which Publix is reported to hold a 25 per cent interest; the Butterfield theatres in Michigan in which Publix are also interested; the Inter-State, Karl Hoblitzell owned, theatres in Texas.

These with the Pantages houses would prove a very formidable chain. The Pantages Circuit parallels the Orpheum and has been built into the strongest kind of opposition to the latter. The reason being that the brand of entertainment that the Orpheum has offered has been allowed to slip, while Pantages built up his string by buying the biggest names for headliners and cutting into the Orpheum business at a rate which wiped out all of their profits.

George Scott, Cameraman, Killed by Gas at Home

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, Jan. 17.—George Scott, well known technical cameraman, died of gas poisoning at his home. Scott is said to have been the only one holding the secret of the Handscheigel process for film coloring as he was the only one thought to know the formula since the death of the inventor.

Jean Hersholt Reported as Leaving "U" With "Climax"

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, Jan. 17.—Jean Hersholt is reported leaving Universal when his option expires March 1. Hersholt is now working in "The Climax" under Renaud Hoffman's direction, and this probably will be his last picture under contract to Universal. Nothing definite is scheduled for future affiliations.

Kennedy Remembered FBO Mgrs. With Gifts

SHORTLY after he resigned as head of FBO, Joseph P. Kennedy sent each of the company's branch managers his personal check for a substantial amount, in recognition of their co-operation during his tenure of office, it became known this week. Each of the managers, in turn, wrote appreciative letters to Mr. Kennedy acknowledging the gift. At present, Mr. Kennedy is understood to be in Palm Beach Fla.

Brands Rumors of Loew Deals Utterly False

chase Loew's, Inc., can be so credited by a trade paper that it is printed as an imminent fact.

"While it is not my intention to dwell too long on the methods of printing news which come from anonymous sources, it is my intention to make one final and unqualified statement regarding the alleged deal.

"There is not a particle of truth in any rumors that any of the interests that bear the name of Loew or that are connected with the great business built up by the late Marcus Loew are for sale, or that they are a part to any merger.

"There has never been negotiation with Fox or anyone else, either corporation or individual, looking to the sale of Loew's, Inc., or Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

"Any such story to the effect that the Loew interests are to be merged or sold is a deliberate misstatement.

"It is true there have been cases in which rumored big deals in the motion picture industry were denied in advance only to be consummated after all, but this is not such an instance and I repeat there is no foundation for the story that Loew's is selling out.

"Many of these rumors have stated that banking interests representing the companies involved were making the arrangements. Let me state with all the emphasis in my power that there are no banking interests authorized to speak for the Loew company. Our interests are our own. We are self-controlled and have no representatives.

"It has been said to me also that Mrs. Marcus Loew plans to sell her stock in the company. This is not so. Mrs. Loew will not dispose of her stock. I hope that you will cooperate with me in putting an end to these false reports."

Jolson's $20,000 From Wesco for Granada Week

West Coast Theatres are planning a particularly strong campaign for the one week's engagement at Loew's Warfield, San Francisco of Al Jolson. The price they are paying Jolson is $20,000 for the week's engagement. That is the same figure at which he was offered to Publix Theatres for their Granada. Publix refused to meet the $20,000 figure.

Will Hays Says Industry Needs No Censorship

Declares It Will Definitely Hit Educational Purposes If Enforced

Hollywood, January 17. — On arriving here, Will H. Hays, president, Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., in discussing the development of sound in pictures for entertainment and educational purposes, voiced the danger to such development created by the attempt of certain censor boards to censor speech. He said:

"Educators and leaders of thought are realizing what censorship of pictures really is now that censor boards are presuming actually to censor speech. News as heard from the screen, the speeches of the greatest public men on the greatest occasions, are all subject to some of the censorship laws, and the great development which is imminent of speaking films for educational purposes is definitely retarded because of the ridiculous possibility of their being cut to pieces by censors.

Industry's Challenge

"The organized picture industry itself has made no strenuous protest against such censorship as has obtained, knowing that it would not spread beyond the few states which established it as a part of the war psychology and a phase of the desire of some to regulate everything, and knowing, too, that the American people would take care of the matter in due season. Our job has been so to improve the pictures that no reasonable person could claim there was any need for censorship. This is being done. The producers of pictures realize their public responsibility, and propose always so to discharge their duty as to be worthy of public trust. That effort will be increasingly pursued.

"Now, as the direct question of free speech is involved, and those few who, with more zeal than judgment, insist on censoring speech itself, the industry, of necessity for itself and defending the whole right of free speech, must challenge that purpose. If they can censor speech from the screen, so they can and will soon try to censor the speech from every rostrum, from every editorial column, from every phonograph and from every radio. The whole principle and purpose is as un-American in conception as it is ineffective in execution."

"Sonny Boy" Al's Next; "Mammy" Is Postponed

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, Jan. 17.—Al Jolson will be starred in "Sonny Boy" as his next picture, featuring David Lee who appeared with Jolson in "The Singing Fool." Work on "Sonny Boy" will be started in February, the picture replacing "Mammy" on the Warner's production schedule for Jolson. "Mammy" will be made later in the year.

Raskob Entry to Amusement Field Foreseen

Wire to Eddie Dowling From Him Reads: "I May Be in Your Business Soon"

That John J. Raskob, former chairman of the Board of General Motors and National Democratic Committee Chairman will shortly be a prominent factor in the entertainment field now seems a certainty. A wire of his to Eddie Dowling, producer and stage star at present in Hollywood is quoted as reading:

"Dear Eddie: I may be in your business soon."

Whether this means that Mr. Raskob will be in the theatrical or motion picture business is not yet known. One story is to the effect that he will shortly become head of the Radio Corporation of America and thus will figure prominently in the motion picture industry and other radio activities.

Another tale that has been going the rounds of Broadway is that Mr. Raskob is to be made "Czar" of the legitimate theatre in much the same capacity that Judge Landis reigns in the baseball field. It is said there is to be a big amalgamation of theatrical producers of the legitimate stage with a plan under way to bring about radical reforms in production following the most disastrous season in the history of Broadway.

These plans are centralizing for introduction next Fall with the beginning of the new season. Among them there is contemplated a central ticket bureau from which there will be handled tickets for all theatres. Other reforms in business methods are being outlined and will be submitted to Mr. Raskob if and when he assumes control.

American Firms in Europe Against Existing Taxations

Representatives of American distributors meeting in Paris recently determined to protest formally against the present tax laws of European governments, which impose a tax ranging from 15 to 20 per cent on profits earned by these companies and transferred to the U. S. The decision to lodge a complaint was the result of the original protest filed with the foreign department of the Hays association in New York. Belgium and France were scored as the principal offenders, with Austria and Germany being runners-up.

J. M. Linn, Fox Portland, Ore., Mgr. Burns to Death

James M. Linn, 39 years of age, Portland manager of Fox Film Corporation exchange, was burned to death near Roseburg, this week when his automobile left the road and burst into flames. Linn was burned beyond recognition. The deceased had a long and creditable record with Fox and served in Portland and Seattle during the past nine years.

Paramount Fire May Alter Sound Construction; Officials Fear Spontaneous Combustion

No Delay in Production, Says Jesse Lasky as Remaining Facilities are Ample Enough

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 17.—As the result of a disastrous fire which demolished two sound stages at the Paramount coast studios Wednesday night causing damages estimated at $450,000, it is reported that sound stage construction may be checked by the builders to determine the possibilities of spontaneous combustion that might result from the air spaces necessary between outer and inner walls to prevent sound penetration. Until the likelihood of this is determined it is said that building along this line will be at least temporarily halted.

Lasky Issues Statement

Spontaneous combustion was given as the likely cause of the Paramount fire. Some estimates placed the damage at $1,000,000, but Jesse L. Lasky gave out the conservative figure of $450,000. Only one of the two stages was completed, but the other was to have been inaugurated actively on Thursday with Clara Bow's "The Wild Party." Maurice Chevalier's "Innocents of Paris" was working on the first stage. Two firemen were injured in the blaze.

In placing the damage at $450,000, Mr. Lasky estimated that the damage done two stages at $200,000 each and added damage to equipment and loss in production delays. All of these damages are fully covered by insurance. The fire started in an attic of the sound stage and its origin can be accounted for only by spontaneous combustion, but an investigation is on and this is still to be determined.

Immediately following the fire Mr. Lasky gave the following statement:

"Production plans will be carried out as per schedule as our sound facilities now in force are ample so that there will be no delay whatsoever in production. We estimate damages at $450,000, which was entirely covered by insurance."

Radio Fans, Too, Like Clara and Buddy

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 17.—That film and radio audiences are practically identical was proved recently during the weekly Paramount hour broadcast over KNX, Los Angeles. The station requested listeners-in to report by phone or telegram how the program was being received, and every person replying would receive an autographed photo of stars.

As a result, Paramount received 1,000 telegrams, in addition to 2,500 letters from radio audiences. Sixty per cent of the requests for autographed photos asked for Bow pictures with Buddy Rogers in second place, mainly because he was a radio entertainer that night.

Fox Theatre Deals Presage More Expansion

Reade Circuit Said to Be Next; $40,000,000 in Bonds to Float Buys

The recent series of spectacular theatre deals by which William Fox has enlarged his circuits in New York and New England are said to presage more expansion. Fox, it is said, has deals under way for the acmetropolitan zone and other sections.

Walter Reade's circuit of 34 houses in New York, New Jersey and Ohio is considered to be the next major transaction of Fox in his campaign for theatre seats. The Reade books are now being conned by examiners, and the deal is declared practically settled. Reade is reported to have demanded $16,000,000. The Reade holdings in New York embrace the Astor, Metropolitan, Bijou, Savoy, Morosco and the Columbia theatres.

The new theatre companies organized by Fox to operate his chain acquisitions will be financed by a bond issue of $40,000,000, which five important Wall Street banking firms will shortly float. Fox Metropolitan Playhouses, which announced the purchase of about 200 theatres in the metropolitan zone and New England, will be sold to the public via a $20,000,000 issue, as will also Fox Interstate Theatres, Inc., which will operate in New Jersey.

Havre De Grace House Suffers $50,000 Fire Loss

The State Theatre, of Havre De Grace, Md., was damaged by fire during the week to the extent of $50,000. The house is owned by F. H. Durkee and was recently wired for sound films. The origin of the fire is unknown.

World Wide's Sales Staff Is Near Completion

All Branches to Be Operating Full Blast by Feb. 1; No District Mgrs.

World Wide's sales organization is now almost complete, according to Joseph S. Skirboll, sales manager, and by February 1 all offices in key cities and Canada will be operating 100 per cent. Practically all managers have been hired. They will be attached to Educational exchanges which handle physical distribution. There will be no district managers. Local managers will hire all salesmen.

Skirboll announced the following list of managers: George G. Moeser, Buffalo; J. J. Sampson, Chicago; Herbert Ochs, Cleveland; L. L. Phillips, Des Moines; R. J. Garland, Denver; George W. Sampson, Detroit; Ralph Abbott, Indianapolis; L. L. Ballard, Milwaukee; Mark Ross, Minneapolis; George Dillon, New York City; C. J. Feldman, Omaha; Joseph Lefko, Pittsburgh; J. P. Bethel, Philadelphia; A. R. Dietz, St. Louis; C. F. Dardine, Charlotte; Claude Beacham, Atlanta; D. C. Gibson, Dallas; W. C. Humphreys, Washington; Donald B. Smith, San Francisco; C. C. McDermond, Salt Lake; A. W. Plues, Cincinnati; C. P. Waxman, New Haven; W. H. Byers, Portland.

Columbia Leases Larger Quarters in New York City

After eight years spent at 1600 Broadway, in moulding their organization to its present position, Joe Brandt and the Cohen Brothers, Jack and Harry, have taken over the entire eleventh floor at 729 Seventh Avenue. Mr. Brandt and the Cohen boys first went to 1600 in 1921 with Carl Laemmle's Universal Company and in 1918 they began their own film company which they called C.B.C., later changing the name to Columbia Pictures. They spent 17 years in all at the Mecca Building and so leave it with a bit of regret.

Columbia has outgrown its old quarters, the organization having made its greatest stride last year. Its personnel has increased and the greater amount of detail work necessitates roomier quarters. The new offices are more than twice the size of the old and will house an augmented sales staff as well as expanded advertising, publicity, exploitation, scenario, contract, auditing and foreign departments.

FBO Finishes "Syncopation" an All-Talking Production

FBO this week concluded scenes for "Syncopation," a musical extravaganza which has been in production for the past month at the Sound Studios in New York. Fred Waring and his Pennsylvanians are featured. Bert Glennon, who directed, will remain in New York for a few weeks to supervise cutting.

Gil Would Correct Producer Slant

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

HOLLYWOOD, Jan 17.—In order that motion pictures may aid in conveying a better impression of Mexico's commercial and natural resources to the world, President Portes Gil has extended an invitation to the most prominent Hollywood producers to be his guests in Mexico for several days. The invitation has been extended through the Counsel Pesqueira representing Mexico in Los Angeles. President Gil is anxious to impress producers and through them, the world at large, that Mexico is more than a series of mountains, deserts, valleys, spotted with occasional towns given to drinking and gambling as the main industry.

"R-K-O Hour" Over National Radio Network

Hiram S. Brown to Address Audience as New Program Is Instituted on Jan. 22

Hiram S. Brown, president of Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation, will inaugurate the "R-K-O Hour" on Tuesday evening, January 22, at 11:00 o'clock Eastern Standard Time, over the National Broadcasting Company's network of stations.

At the microphone will be several Radio-Keith-Orpheum artists, among them Will Fyfe, Mae Murray, Belle Baker, Nick Lucas and others. They will broadcast their numbers, from Radio-Keith-Orpheum theatres in New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Milwaukee and Chicago. The presentation will be practically a tour of the R-K-O houses in these cities, as the broadcasting will in most cases be done from the artists' dressing rooms.

The broadcast is planned as the first of a weekly series of "R-K-O Hours."

Kohn Becomes Director on Balaban and Katz Board

Through Paramount's controlling interest in Balaban and Katz, Ralph A. Kohn, treasurer of Paramount, has been made a director of Balaban and Katz, succeeding W. H. Mitchell. Paramount gained 87½ per cent control of Balaban and Katz some weeks ago.

Sees Need for More Strength In Exhib Body

Grombacher Tells Plans to Increase Membership of Northwest Unit

Big things are being planned by the Allied Amusements of the Northwest, according to Ray A. Grombacher, former president of the Washington State unit who was in New York last week. Mr. Grombacher owns three houses in Tacoma and for many years has been an official in the state organization. He declares that in all of his experience he has never seen a more enthusiastic body of exhibitors than those of the Pacific Northwest.

"At our meeting in December," said Mr. Grombacher, "we decided to enlarge our organization to include not only motion picture exhibitors, but those in charge of all sorts of amusements.

"There seems no good reason why memberships in these state units should be confined to motion picture exhibitors. There are other powerful interests in the amusement field and I think with our combined strength we are in a position to better meet labor and other problems that are constantly confronting us.

"I have no quarrel on with union labor. In its proper confines it undoubtedly does a lot of good, but at times local representatives become too domineering in telling an exhibitor what he can and cannot do. These more arrogant representatives of labor should be suppressed and that requires proper organization.

"We have already insisted upon having our secretary in the room while the findings of the arbitration board are being made, if, as has been the custom, the secretary of the Film Board of Trade is present. While no harm may come from the board secretary being present alone there is still no reason why we should not also be represented by a secretary and unless we are the exhibitor members of the board will depart the sessions."

"Redskin" Will Open at Criterion January 28

When "Interference closes its Criterion run on Sunday evening, January 20, after a run of ten weeks, this Broadway house of Paramount will be prepared to house a new Paramount photoplay, "Redskin," a modern Indian story which has been photographed in color. It commences an indefinite engagement at the Criterion on Monday, January 28. Richard Dix is the star.

Changes in F B O Branches

Charles Rosenzweig, general sales manager of F B O Productions, announced three changes in the personnel of F B O branch managers.

W. E. Matthews leaves San Francisco office to manage the Seattle branch, replacing A. H. Huot. E. A. Lamb is the new branch head in Portland, replacing W. T. Withers, while George Seach is acting manager in San Francisco.

Salary Raises For Big Stars In Silents Only

Gilbert, Barthelmess, Miss Griffith Get Boosts Without Talkies

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, January 17.—That talking pictures have as yet to affect the salaries of high-priced stars is brought out in the recent signing of new contracts at tremendous raises by John Gilbert, Richard Barthelmess and Corinne Griffith. None of this trio has been heard in a talking picture by the public. Regardless of the recent talkie hysteria, further investigation discloses that the highest-priced stars in the industry have as yet to be heard in a talking picture.

Many of such stars have come out flatly against appearing in dialogued films. Several of them have made one or two which are to be released. Those who have talked, however, are not as highly paid as those who have remained silent. An example in the very three named, John Gilbert, Richard Barthelmess and Corinne Griffith is shown in the fact that their new contracts pay them more money for fewer pictures than their prior agreements.

Gilbert is said to be getting $8,000 weekly as against $5,000 on his former contract. This would average him $200,000 per picture at the rate of two pictures yearly, which his new contract calls for. Corinne Griffith collects approximately $100,000 per picture from First National. She also is to make but two yearly as against three or four in the past. Richard Barthelmess gets $150,000 per production, making four yearly.

Leonard Fields to Coast to Enter "U" Production

Having served three years as Eastern scenario editor for Universal, Leonard Fields vacated that post last Friday. He leaves January 19th to enter the production field at Universal City. Mrs. Florence Strauss, who has been associated with First National for more than eight years as scenario editor, has succeeded him.

Two stories by Fields, "The World Tomorrow" and "The Great Cinema Murder," have been accepted by Universal, and it is on their production that Mr. Fields will concentrate his immediate attention.

Mrs. Strauss has already assumed her duties at Universal.

Ernst Lubitsch Returning to Direct for Paramount

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, Jan. 17.—Ernst Lubitsch has returned to Paramount and will direct his next picture for that company. No story has as yet been selected, but there are strong indications that he will use an Elinor Glyn original now being written.

Road Shows and Specials For 1929 Season to Include Small Number of All-Talking Films

With Minimum of 41 Due, Less Than 10 Outside of Warner Productions Will Be All-Dialogue

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 17.—A minimum of forty-one pictures of either the road-show or special type are scheduled for release in 1929 and of these, less than ten, with the exception of Warner product, are 100 per cent all-talkies. Many have already been made. Others are scheduled to go into production within the next few months. There is a possibility of several of the forty-one being held over for a 1930 release date. The number of these will be more than balanced by the additional productions which will be decided upon for making and release during the course of the year.

Not in several seasons have pictures promised as much varied entertainment as the list for the coming year do. There is every known variety, from old-fashioned melodrama, musical comedy, to whimsical fantasies. The synchronized number are in great majority. However, such synchronization are mainly for musical numbers, sound effects, or dance bits.

Titles of Specials

The forty-one made or scheduled to be made are as follows: "Mysterious Island," "Four Feathers," "Bridge of San Luis Rey," "Hells Angels," "The Iron Mask," "Trial of Mary Dugan," "Eternal Love," "Coquette," "Our Daily Bread," "Dynamite," "Christina," "Hallelujah," "Wolf Song," "The Alibi," (formerly "Nightstick"); "Rio Rita," "Queen Kelly," "Show Boat," "Broadway," "The Pagan," "She Goes to War," "Burlesque," "Broadway Melody," "The Leathernecks," Lillian Gish (tentative "The Miracle Girl"); Ted Lewis in "Everybody Happy;" Thomas Meighan in "The Argyle Case;" "The Front Page," "Gentlemen of the Press," Harold Lloyd's "TNT," Charles Chaplin in "City Lights" (tentative titles); Paul Whiteman in "The King of Jazz;" "Hearts in Dixie," "Evangeline," "Saturday's Children," "The Divine Lady;" Al Jolson in "Mammy;" and untitled vehicles to star Ina Claire, George Arliss, Fanny Brice, Sophie Tucker and John Barrymore.

AT a meeting of the board of directors of FBO recently, it was announced that the corporate name of FBO Pictures will be changed to RKO Productions,. Inc.

The four subsidiaries of the motion picture company will be known as RKO Distributing Corporation, RKO Studios, Inc., RKO Pictures of Canada, Ltd., and RKO Export Corporation

Radio Has New Transmitter for Pictures

Leak Shows Apparatus Now Perfected With Speed to Broadcast Films

A new high speed photographic transmitter has been developed by one of the engineers of the Radio Corporation of America that is said to exceed anything that has been evolved to date. The new apparatus has not been installed for outside sending or receiving as yet, but there has been a leak regarding its existence. So fast is the new transmitter that it can carry motion picture images at sufficient speed to make their projection on screens with the same speed that is now employed in theatres.

During the past week several of the daily papers in various parts of the country have tried to hook up with the R.C.A. for an exclusive agreement in the furnishing of news photographs over the new high speed machinery. One of the New York papers wants to tie up the sending of motion pictures of an event of national importance within the next two months. The R. C. A. executives, however, refused to give them any assurance that their plans would be sufficiently worked out within the allotted time for a public demonstration of their machine.

Barthelmess Declines Offer Of Ziegfeld With Thanks

Richard Barthelmess turned down last week Florenz Ziegfeld's offer to purchase his contract from First National and star him in his forthcoming musical production, "East Is West." The First National star was placed in the somewhat unusual position of being asked to play in opposition to himself on Broadway, because that is what the Ziegfeld offer boiled itself down to.

Kunsky Opposes Entry Of Michigan Unit Into Allied Now, As Myers Takes Leadership

Circuit Chief Urges Six Months Delay to Note Exact Policies of Organization

OPPOSITION to joining the Allied States exhibitor organization in the ranks of the Michigan unit developed this week, coincident with the active taking over of the leadership of Allied by Abram F. Myers. Mr. Myers' resignation from the Federal Trade Commission became effective January 15.

John H. Kunsky, of Detroit, powerful circuit head, has declared his opposition to joining the Allied. It is also reported that W. S. Butterfield is taking a similar position.

Issues Statement

When the reports of Mr. Kunsky's attitude became known, Motion Picture News sent him a wire asking for a statement, to which he replied as follows:

"I am opposed to joining the Allied States organization and have counselled for delay of six months to determine exact policy of that organization before contributing funds. I have now joined three or four organizations all of which have seemed unnecessary to entire state group of small exhibitors. Therefore, I am counselling delay before making a rash decision."

Mr. Myers has now taken over the Allied leadership. No announcement of policy has been made. Efforts to reach him through the Washington Correspondent of Motion Picture News for a statement brought word that he was out of town for a week.

Meanwhile, it was reported from Detroit that two powerful circuit officials, W. S. Butterfield and John H. Kunsky, are opposed to the action of the Michigan exhibitor unit in voting to affiliate with Allied States. Both the Butterfield and Kunsky interests are associated with Publix.

Myers is succeeded as chairman of the Federal Trade Commission by Commissioner Edgar A. McCulloch. He had been connected with the Commission since August 2, 1926.

British Firm Will Erect Own Sound Studios

British and Dominions Film Corporation, Ltd., will be the first British producing concern to erect its own studios for making talking pictures. The studios are to be built at Brighton and the product of the company will be imported to America for distribution by World Wide Pictures.

Herbert Wilcox is supervisor of production for British and Dominions Film Corporation. He is now in Hollywood producing "The Fog" and "The Wolves" in collaboration with Marshall Neilan, and studying the American methods of producing talking photoplays.

Gobel, president; George Weeks, vice-president; Eddie Dowling, the star; and Thomas E. Lynn, secretary-treasurer. They were snapped just before they departed from New York to begin work in Hollywood on the picture

Something new in contracts. When Jack Cohen, of Columbia, signed Bert Lytell for the star role of "The Lone Wolf's Daughter," he had the transaction recorded. A microphone on the desk was hooked up to the sound reproducing mechanism and two disc records were made of the agreement

"U" Gets "Show Boat" Dialogue, Music Rights

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, January 17.—Universal is reported to have completed negotiations with Florenz Ziegfeld for the rights to both music and dialogue as used in the latter's production of "Show-Boat." The deal has been on and off for the past six months, at one time Ziegfeld refusing flatly to listen to any offer. He was then supposed to be planning to film "Show-Boat" as a musical comedy in screen form himself, using the cast of his Broadway production.

Work on synchronizing dialogue and music will be started immediately by Universal. It means recalling all principals and other members of the cast, headed by Laura La Plante, Joseph Schildkraut, Otis Harlan, Emily Fitzroy.

Publix Plans 2,300 Seater in Manchester, N. H.

Publix Theatres Corporation has made announcement of plans involving the construction of a 2,300-seat theatre on Lowell Street in Manchester, N. H. The new house will be a joint project of Publix and the Courtere Brothers, proprietors of the Star, Park and Crown moving picture theatres in Manchester. The site for the proposed structure is directly opposite the Star, which house together with the Crown and Park will be taken over for Publix operation. Control of the land, cleared some time ago for theatre plans that did not materialize, passed to the Courtere Brothers a few weeks ago.

Desires Bill Guaranteeing Operators Day Off Weekly

Harry Brooks, of Troy, representing the motion picture machine operators of the State of New York, was in Albany last week, seeking someone to present a bill to the Legislature, which would require all employers of operators to allow one day's rest in seven. The bill will be introduced in the near future.

Capitol Offers Best All-Around Bill On Broadway

Well Balanced Screen And Stage Entertainment Pleases Patrons

This week the Capitol is putting up the best all around bill of entertainment that there is on the street. That goes when one balances the screen with the stage entertainment. The whole program runs two hours and twenty minutes, with the feature, Norma Shearer in "A Lady of Chance" occupying an hour and twenty minutes of this. Incidentally that picture is one of the best features that has been seen on the street in several weeks.

In the hour that precedes the feature there are ten minutes that are given over to "The Merry Wives of Windsor" as an overture. This is followed by a combination of silent and sound news which runs eleven minutes and then for the next 39 minutes the Mort Harris revue, "Reflections," holds the stage.

In the latter there is ample proof that the Broadway picture theatre audiences still appreciate a songstress of grand opera calibre, for on the night that the show was reviewed they simply went wild over Rosemary, a coloratura prima donna who sang "The Blue Danube" with a series of variations that brought the house down. When she left the stage they were clamoring for an encore which they didn't get. Yet this same audience went just as wild a few minutes later when Shaw and Lee, a couple of low comedians, took the stage and presented their routine.

The revue opened with Dave Schooler and the Capitolians presenting a special arrangement by Tony Gale.

A number by the Chester Hale girls followed, after which Rosemary was turned loose on the audience and she reminded of the late Bessie Abbot when she was at her best. Colleano, the dancing sailor, turned loose a series of steps on the audience that won them completely and Dave Schooler staged a comedy number with the band taking part in it. It was "Alone in the Moonlight," done in a burlesque vein that won laughs.

A black and white costume on the Hale Girls made that line look very striking as they again hit the stage, and following them came the laugh wallop in the Shaw and Lee offering. These boys are a bet and the chances are now that the talking screen is going in for specialties they will land with both feet.

Little Girl And Big Piano Run Away With Honors in Roxy Show

A LITTLE bit of a girl and a great big grand piano on the stage of the Roxy ran away with the show there this week. The little girl was Julia Glass. We couldn't see the name on the grand piano. But the two together certainly did things to an audience that jammed the house.

With "Sunrise" running for an hour and 36 minutes, it was only possible for S. L. Rothafel to give his stage program and news a little more than 45 minutes. The result was that his show for the current week runs two hours and 23 minutes.

It was rather surprising that Roxy didn't build up a stronger show than the one he presented for the current week, because the Broadway run that his feature, "Sunrise," had must have taken the novelty off of that production as far as the box office is concerned. But the bill did not measure up in comparison to the two that he presented with "Prep and Pep" and "Romances of the Underworld."

Opening with a four minute organ solo, the next twelve minutes are given over to a combination of orchestral overture and stage presentation in what is termed a "Musical Cycle." This comprises the Hungarian Dance No. 5, played by the orchestra and running four minutes; next for four minutes, is a piano solo, "Hungarian Fantasy" by Julia Glass. When she finished on Saturday night the audience was asking for more and quieted down when she again sat at the piano and played the opening strains of "Liebestraum," at which the lights dimmed and the elevated stage platform was used for a ballet presentation, which also ran for four minutes. The whole was most effective and won the approbation of the crowded house.

Ten minutes only were given over to the presentation of Magazine and Fox Movietone News, the outstanding feature of this being the interview with Julius Rosenwald the Chicago multi-millionaire. He qualifies for the talkies and some enterprising producer on the Coast might grab him off for character roles.

"In Old Vienna" is the title bestowed on the biggest of the stage divertissements. All the outstanding tunes of the old Viennese operettas have been assembled here and the result is a very diverting 23 minutes with lots of color and action on the stage.

Strand, "Home of Talkies", Again Tops Bill With Talkless Feature

WHEN the Strand hasn't a talking feature on the program they manage to live up to the advertised slogan, "The Home of the Talkies," by having at least a short subject that has talk in it. That has been the case in two of the programs that have been seen there by the reviewer, and that is the case for the current week.

The feature production is "Adoration," a First National release, with Billie Dove starred. It has a synchronized score, but that is all, therefore, the burden of making good on the house slogan is up to the Vitaphone short of Jack North, "The Ban-Jokester," and this short more than makes good. North is a bet that the talking picture producers should keep their eye on. For he has a world of personality and puts his talk over in good shape.

Opening with an orchestral prelude, Joe Plunkett, for his farewell week as managing director at the Strand, next gives the audience five minutes of selected news reel subjects in the Strand Pictorial Review. There are three shots culled from the Pathe Weekly, and two from the Fox silent news reel. This is followed by the Fox Movietone News, there being fifteen minutes allotted to the silent and sound news.

Following is a Tiffany-Stahl Color Symphony "In a Persian Market," a ten-minute romance of the East in natural color, which also has a sound accompaniment.

Then after the Jack North reel there is an Aesop Fable, "Stagestruck," also with sound, which receives a number of laughs.

The feature has a Russian Revolutionary theme and runs an hour and twelve minutes, which brings the entire running time of the program to within a few minutes of two hours.

One of the best things on the bill was the trailer for next week's attraction, "On Trial," in which Richard Tucker stands out as the best talking bet.

Sid Grauman Returns Again to Elaborate Prologue

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, Jan. 17.—Sid Grauman returns to the elaborate prologue with the presentation of "Broadway Melody." He is using big stage specialty artists and settings in connection with the picture. Grauman discarded these elaborate prologues for brief flashes while he was presenting "White Shadows" and "Noah's Ark."

Paramount Program Satisfies But It Lacks Big Outstanding Wallop

IT'S a merry melange, the entertainment offered at the Paramount this week, but there is nothing in the bill that could be termed an outstanding wallop for the audience. On the whole, however, it is a fairly satisfying program that pleases.

The one big moment in the whole show was The Gibson Sisters in the Publix revue "Beauty Shop Blues." It was the one sister that offered a contortionistic dance that carried away the honors in the way of applause. The number that the two girls do comes immediately after the opening of the offering, and when the second of the sisters completed h r work the audience were loath to let her leave the stage.

A single reel talking short, produced by Paramount, entitled "Just One Word," was another of the novelties of the bill. Good entertainment value and filled with laughs.

The whole show runs just two minutes over the two-hour mark. It is opened by an overture novelty entitled "Three In One," which is a special arrangement by Herman Hand, in which he has paraphased three popular overtures, "William Tell," "Light Cavalry" and "Poet and Peasant." It played rather well, but would have been far more effective had there not been too much affectation on the part of the guest conductor, Dave Rubinoff. One good thing was the fact that Rubinoff confined himself this week solely to the direction of the overture, and did not intrude himself for a second time during the stage entertainment. Th overture ran seven minutes.

Only 2 Real News Shots

The Paramount News next shown contained but two real shots. They were that of the battle fleet leaving the Brooklyn Yard and starting on their cruise South, and an all-metal airship built at Glendale, Cal. Then came a series of n ws "flashes." Included here were scenes of a New England trawler returning to harbor ice-covered; a shot of Coolidge, Jr., and the return of Hoover to this country. Another seven minutes and this one without a thrill.

Jesse Crawford and Mrs. Crawford filled in during the next seven-minute period, Jesse first playing "Cradle of Love" with accompanying slides, and finally Mrs. Crawford was disclosed at the stage consol of the Wurlitzer, and the two ran through their morning organ exercise, finishing with "Ragging the Scales," the final number being preceded by their playing the scales against well-known compositions. The short talking film followed.

Act Runs 33 Minutes

"Beauty Shop Blues" ran for the next 33 minutes. There seems to have been a bit of a tendency toward heft in the girls in the revue, but as long as "figgers" are coming back again this may be all right. Twelve Foster Girls, a sister team, a soubrette that does imitations, a comedian and a dancer make up the personnel, which is backed by the Paramount stage band and Gene Rodemich, who, in addition to conducting and acting as master of ceremonies, is also a straight man in an old burlesque money changing bit.

The revue opens with a bootblack stand in one, six of the girls as patrons and six as shiners, a neat novelty number. At the conclusion, the full stage with the band is revealed, and two girls are posed on each side of the stage as dolls. They are the Gibson Sisters. First, one of them performs a pedestal dance which just about gets by, then the other sister does her stepping and contorting and brings down the house. The dressing and handling of this girl's work and its reception by the audience proves exactly what the reviewer held regarding a similar act that was shown poorly at the Colony a week ago. Stanley House, the comedian, on next, opened with a "Georgie" song that brought laughs, followed it with cross-fire with Rodemich, the riddles and money changing bit coming in here, and finally finished off with a German dialect number which had a dance finish that scored. Then there was another number by Foster girls.

The stage orchestra filled in with a specialty parodying "Roses of Yesterday," with "Songs of Yesterday" as a tribute to Irving Berlin, and running the gamut from "All Alone," "What'll I Do," "Always," "Blue Skies," and finishing with "Roses of Yesterday," which the audience appreciated. Helen Lynd, imitating Lenore Ulric and Fanny Brice, received an applause reward for her efforts, and just before the finale Karavaeff stepped a fast routine of dancing. The costuming for the act, designed by Dolly Tree, was effective.

Paramount's "The Case of Lena Smith," with Esther Ralston and Jimmie Hall, was the feature film offering.

Marion Nixon Plays Country Lass in "Broadway Bound"

The chief feminine role of a country girl, whose histrionic ability is discovered by the hero of "Broadway Bound," and who later comes to New York to achieve fame, will be played by Marion Nixon, cast last week by Sono Art Productions producing the feature starring Eddie Dowling. Dowling's role will be that of an actor in a small town stock company who aspires to play on Broadway but never realizes his endeavor.

Enjoying a toast with "The Eligible Mr. Bangs" in the Educational-Coronet talking comedy of that name, starring Edward Everett Horton. Florence Eldridge, Horton, Mabel Forrest and Johnny Arthur negotiate a drink in the course of the dialogue

Cameo Shows Smaller Houses How to Do It

Well Arranged Program Puts Theatre Near Broadway Well Over Top

To appreciate this review a word picture of the little Cameo will have to be given you. The house is located on West 42d street, just about 200 feet east of Broadway. It is one of the Radio-Keith-Orpheum theatres, and seats 550. The prices are 50 cents flat in the afternoons and 75 cents in the evenings. It plays features on a sort of catch-as-catch-can plan, and the average business is around $6,000 a week.

This review is written to give the managers in outlying cities an idea of what can be done in New York with a small house near the main drag.

The current week's show here is running a little less than two hours. There is an eleven piece orchestra that opens the program with a five-minute overture, playing the popular hits from musical comedies. The next ten minutes are given over to the showing of a straight Pathe News, after which an Aesop Fable was shown.

Mae Busch and Stan Laurel, in a Hal Roach comedy, "Love 'Em and Weep," that was wholly slapstick, got any number of laughs in the 20 minutes that it took to unreel, after which came the feature.

An idea of the type of feature booking that is done here will be seen in the fact that for the current week they are playing Lily Damita in "Forbidden Love," and playing the star's name all over the place, because about a block away the United Artists are showing Lily for the first time at the Rialto in "The Resene," and her name is played up at the latter house also. The feature runs about an hour and twelve minutes, bringing the running time of the entire bill to an hour and fifty-two minutes.

Reports Vary On Attendance In Pittsburgh

Pittsburgh.—Loew's Penn had a very good week's business with Lon Chaney in "West of Zanzibar." The Publix Unit, "Topsy Turvy Town," on the stage, made a big hit.

At the Stanley a good week's business was enjoyed with Clara Bow in "Three Week Ends," holding down the screen portion of the program. The stage offering was entitled "Cabaret Nights."

The Enright did well with Emil Jannings in "The Sins of the Fathers." The stage attraction consisted of the dancing act, The De Marcos. "Waterfront" fared poorly at the Regent, as did also "Adoration" at the Grand. "Prep and Pep" got an average week's business for the Aldine. "Avalanche" played to disappointing business at the Olympic.

"Captain Swagger" at the Alhambra and "The Triumph of the Rat" at the Cameraphone both reported but fair business. The first half at the Liberty was a "Woman From Moscow" and the last half, "Just Married." Business was poor.

Holiday Aftermath Hits Broadway Sending Box Office Receipts Down

Almost $100,000 Drop From High Money New Year's

THE holiday aftermath certainly was felt along Broadway at the motion pieture theatre box offiees. There was a differenee of almost $100,000 between the reeeipts that were rolled up on New Year's week, as against those of last week. The eight grind houses, in whieh are included the big four—Roxy, Capitol, Paramount, Strand— were almost $70,000 below what they showed the week before, when they finished with $389,971 as their total reeeipts. Last week these same houses had $322,895 to show when the final tally was eompleted. The seven houses that are running on a two-a-day policy finished with $117,562 last week as against $143,075 the week before, a differenee of a little more than $25,500.

The Roxy naturally led the big houses. With Irving Cumming's "Romanee of the Underworld," the money return there was $101,064.25 on the week. The pieture pulled on Broadway, and the Roxy show, of course, was a great help. Next in line was the Paramount, whieh held Colleen Moore in "Synthetie Sin" as its attraetion, and the reeeipts were $65,700. The Capitol, whieh held over "West of Zanzibar" for its seeond week, finished third with $61,695.55. The Strand trailed the parade with "The Home Towners" to the tune of $27,874.

Long Runs Also Slip

Then the houses that are holding pictures for a run, but showing them at a grind poliey, also showed marked slipping, with the top money going to "The Awakening" at the Rivoli, whieh played to $30,000 on the week. "Alias Jimmie Valentine" at the Astor was under the wire with seeond money at $14,962.25, while at the Rialto, "Abie's Irish Rose," in its final week there, did a eomplete brodie by getting $14,300. The little Cameo, with "Ten Days That Shook the World," finished with $6,682.

All of the two-a-day film showings fell off in reeeipts. The two Warner Bros. attraetions, "The Singing Fool" at the Winter Garden and "My Man" at the Warner, coming nearest to holding to the holiday pace by turning in $38,196 and $25,435, respeetively. "The Last Warning" finished with $15,652, while at the Central "The Barker" got $10,670.

"The River," playing the Gaiety, dropped down to $12,339.25, while "Interferenee" at the Criterion showed $11,467. The latter is soon to make way for the Richard Dix Indian special with sound and eolor, whieh is due in about two weeks. The low reeeipts of the street went to "The Viking," at the Embassy, whieh could only show $4,120.50. This one is also due tc move out in about another week

Loew's Warfield Sets New S. F. Record

SAN FRANCISCO.—Box office records of Loew's Warfield were shattered by more than $7,000 with "The Woman of Affairs," Clarence Brown's production for M-G-M. The John Gilbert-Greta Garbo team in a film version of Michael Arlen's story accounted for $41,393 for the week's run. The previous house record of $34,000 was made several months ago by M-G-M's "Our Dancing Daughters," but that figure was passed by "The Woman of Affairs," in the first six days' showing.

"Abie's Irish Rose" Sets Pace In Tampa Houses

Tampa.—Only one picture went over real strong in Tampa the past week. "Abie's Irish Rose," with sound, turned the trick and succeeded in breaking the record of the Tampa, which has been held by Clara Bow. Sunday the business was immense. Monday was good, Tuesday better and the fourth and last day was big. This picture could have easily been played the entire week to fine returns, but the two change policy of the house would not permit its being held over. "Captain Swagger," the feature of the last half, lacked drawing power and the business was hardly up to the average of the house.

"Conquest," an all-talkie which featured the first half at the Victory, did not do as well as the other talkies previously shown at this house. The big draw at the Tampa was probably the main reason this picture failed to attract. "The Spieler" was pretty near a flop. The title failed to register with the clientele of the Victory and the last half went over just fair.

"Prep and Pep" failed to pep up business for the Strand the first two days, business being off. "Steamboat Bill, Jr.," caught the crowds and drew three days of over average business. "The Farmer's Daughter" closed the week to average business. The Franklin had an average week with its six change policy. Three were first runs and three seconds.

Buffalo Enjoys Good Week With Conditions Poor

Buffalo.—Despite four or five days of subzero and stormy weather, downtown theatres in Buffalo report the best business in the last three weeks. The "flu" is still in the city, but, according to reports, Medical Examiner Long issued an announcement that the epidemic will not close any of the theatres.

Shea's Buffalo, featuring Lon Chaney in "West of Zanzibar," brought in fairly good business, and was greatly helped by Publix unit. "The Last Warning," with Laura La Plante was the feature attraction at the Lafayette and did the next best business for the week. Shea's Century did a scoring business compared with last week with "Sins of the Fathers."

"My Man" at the Great Lakes brought out increased attendance for the first three days but eased off towards the end of the week. "A Lady of Chance" was the attraction at the Hippodrome and made good returns at the box office.

At the Victoria Theatre "Wings" was shown for the first time at popular prices, despite the fact that it was at Shea's Buffalo last year it drew well. It was presented with sound effects. "White Shadows of the South Seas" drew well at the Elmwood Theatre.

Slim Crowds In Attendance At Albany Houses

Albany.—The present epidemic of "flu" made itself felt among the motion picture theatres of Albany and Troy during the past week, and kept the crowds down.

The Mark Strand in Albany ran to good houses throughout the week with Clara Bow in "Three Week Ends."

The Mark Ritz also played to well filled houses in "Caught in the Fog." The Leland, using "A Lady of Chance" for the week, had the crowds standing one of two nights for the second show. Neighborhood houses report business as being off during the week.

The Clinton Square Theatre in Albany, sticking to its policy of double feature first runs, used "Homesick" and "The Branded Man" last week with fair success.

In Troy, crowds were still under normal at the majority of the motion picture theatres. The Troy theatre split its week, using "The Home Towners" during the first part to normal business, and "Me Gangster" the latter part to business that did not measure up to expectation. The Lincoln ran to only ordinary business with "A Lady of Chance." Proctor's used "The First Kiss" the forepart of the week and "The Night Bird" the latter part along with a program of vaudeville.

Good Business Is Reported In Salt Lake City

Salt Lake City.—Local first run motion picture houses have reported some very good theatre attendance this past week, with "Submarine," a synchronized production, perhaps carrying away the laurels, by drawing tremendous crowds to the Pantages Theatre at each performance. Due to this successful week's run this picture has been held over for the coming week, it is announced.

Colleen Moore in "Synthetic Sin" was favorably received at the Capitol Theatre by capacity houses.

"Prep and Pep" went over well at the Victory to good sized audiences. The second showing here of "Wings," with synchronization, was presented at the Gem Theatre to very good sized audiences. Lon Chaney in "While the City Sleeps" drew fairly well as a second run at the Rialto.

A double feature bill was offered as the closing performance of the American Theatre, which will reopen shortly equipped for sound and with a new name. The bill included "The First Auto" and "A Reno Divorce." Fairly satisfactory results were had. Buck Jones in "The Big Hop," an aviation picture, and also Greta Garbo in "The Mysterious Lady" were presented at the State Theatre to good attendance.

Century Tops Baltimore Houses

Cold Weather Puts Crimp In Theatre Grosses

BALTIMORE.—With clear and cold weather Baltimore enjoyed only a fair week of attendance at the motion picture houses, the Century, a Publix house, again topping the list with a gross of $20,500. The attraction at this house was "Adoration," a First National sound picture with a strong supporting stage show of short subjects, presentation acts and K. A. O. vaudeville.

Next in line came the New Garden and the Stanley with grosses of $14,000 each. The former had as its feature picture attraction Universal's "The Gate Crasher," with "Tarzan The Mighty" as a short subject and six acts of K. A. O. vaudeville. The Stanley showed M G M's "The Trail of '98" with two sound and one silent short subject, an orchestral overture and an organ solo.

The Hippodrome, with Tiffany-Stahl's "Man in Hobbles" and three shows daily, did a gross of $11,000. The supporting bill was made up of a short subject, a presentation act and K. A. O. vaudeville.

The Rivoli, with a smaller seating capacity, and Pathe's "Captain Swagger," as the feature picture, did a nice gross of $9,800. Four short sound subjects completed the bill. The New Theatre with Fox's "Captain Lash" and four short sound pictures had a gross of $9,500 with three hundred less seating capacity than the Rivoli.

Other grosses for the week were as follows: Valencia, with "A Woman of Affairs," $4,700; Parkway, with "A Lady of Chance," $2,800; and Little, with "Berlin, Symphony of Big City," in its second week, $800.

Extra Programs Aid Holiday Week in San Francisco

Christmas week in the first run San Francisco motion picture theatres in the down-town district was considered fairly good with a couple of exceptions, where business was much better than contemplated. Practically all the theatres, both first run and residential, put on extra programs to induce the people to come.

The outstanding picture and program of the week were shown at Loew's Warfield Theatre. It was crowded all week. The picture shown was "Mother Knows Best" and the Fanchon-Marco Idea, "Mother Goose," was appreciated.

"The Home Towners," a Vitaphone picture, shown at the Embassy Theatre, also attracted well, as did the Vitaphone picture at the El Capitan, where the picture, "The Midnight Taxi," together with a vaudeville program, drew thousands to this theatre that seats 3,100.

"Rin-Tin-Tin" was on the screen at the Pantages, together with vaudeville acts that appealed to all who saw them. The Golden Gate did well with "Ned McCobb's Daughter," shown together with vaudeville acts.

"Behind the German Lines" attracted many to the St. Francis Theatre. "Interference" did not draw the crowds contemplated by the managers of the local Publix Theatres. "Someone to Love," shown at the Granada Theatre, together with special presentation acts, did not draw the crowds figured upon.

In the residential districts the theatres that did good business during Christmas week were: The Royal with "The Sporting Age;" The Washington with "Powder My Back;" The Majestic with "The Wheel of Chance;" The Excelsior with "Rin-Tin-Tin," and the New Balboa with "Lady Be Good."

Minneapolis Business Fair Despite Constantly Varying Weather

DESPITE weather that was constantly changing from intense cold to wet, muggy above-zero temperature the Minneapolis film and film-vaudeville houses were able to give a fairly presentable account of the week from a box office standpoint. At the State, F. & R. Publix, "The Barker," with $17,000 drew heavily enough to warrant being held over for a second week. With Ted Lewis and his band and "Manhattan Cocktail" the Minnesota did $39,000.

Pantages which carried five acts of vaudeville in conjunction with the cinema bill of fare "Submarine," had a fair week, the picture being held over for a second week also. The gross was $10,000.

The Lyric and the Strand both smaller houses and confined to straight film presentations did not collect the regular revenue from the public. The Lyric did $2,500 and the Strand $3,500. The former showed "What a Night," and the Strand, "The Goodbye Kiss."

The Hennepin-Orpheum showing "Loves of Casanova," in conjunction with the regular vaudeville bill of six acts did not have a good week, with $12,000 gross.

Portland, Ore., First Runs Foresee Banner Year's Film Business in '29

Portland, Ore.—If the first week of 1929 is a criterion of those to succeed it, managers of the first run houses state they will have no complaints. The midnight matinees seemed to set the pace, and although New Year's Day was quiet, the succeeding six days have brought out capacity houses, and waiting lines at evening performances.

Paramount's long heralded "Interference" came to the Portland, and packed them in and would have had no trouble in running an extra week did the Publix schedule provide. It broke every previous record when on January 5 it played to 28,000 people and $11,200. At several evening performances it was necessary to run extra shows.

The United Artists also stepped up considerable in the attendance column with an interesting version of the world war which took well, "Behind the German Lines."

Manager Tebbetts brought out an attractive list of vaudeville offerings on Monday night with the headliner Remick & Griffith, who offered a singing and dancing act above average. On the screen "The Ware Case," high class mystery, starring Stewart Rome and Betty Carter, got better business than previous weeks.

Johnny Arthur and Louise Fazenda lend some individual comedy knacks to the various scenes in "The Desert Song," the Vitaphone operetta

Milton Sills returned after a long absence to "The Broadway" in "The Barker," which brought up the box office to good heights but not quite equal to "Old Arizona" week.

"On Trial" at the Music Box continued for another week with but fair matinees but evening performance patronage continued strong. Pantages bill was headed by "The Last Warning" in addition to five varied acts of vaudeville, with attendance all that could be desired.

Al Jolson came back again in "The Singing Fool" in The Blue Mouse," with long lines at evening performances, and Jolson's popularity appears unending. The Hippodrome with their 10c-20c-30c- prices are catching on with Western vaudeville cast and a Rayart feature.

The decision of Jack Mansfield to continue the run of "In Old Arizona" at the Hollywood, suburban, was a wise one, which played to repeated good business at same prices as received downtown. Vitaphone acts were Brown and Whitaker, comedy team, and "Evening on the Don" interpreted by 11 singers and dancers.

Good Work For First Runs In Oklahoma City

Oklahoma City.—Very good results were enjoyed as a general rule by the first run motion picture houses here the past week. Cold and snowy weather has been the rule, and the flu has been working over time.

The Capitol did highly satisfactory business with "A Woman of Affairs," starring Greta Garbo and John Gilbert.

The Criterion enjoyed extremely good business with its first Vitaphone talking picture, "Caught in the Fog," and also with the National Players stage production, "The Gold Diggers."

The Emperor played a Paramount-Zane Grey picture, "The Water Hole," and the business was good.

The Liberty had a fair week with "Give and Take," featuring George Sidney and Jean Hersholt.

Met's $28,500 Tops L. A. Grosses

Loew's State With $28,000 Is Second for Week

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 17.—"The Shopworn Angel," at the Metropolitan, leads in grosses for the Los Angeles theatres the past week, chalking up a mark of $28,500. In general business at all the houses was good.

Second to the leader came "White Shadows in the South Seas," at Loew's State, with $28,000.

"My Man," in the third week at Warner's Hollywood, registered $26,000, while "The Rescue," in its second week at the United Artists, pulled $13,500.

"The Barker" breezed along, in its sixth week at the Carthay Circle, to the tune of $14,000.

"In Old Arizona," in its third week at the Criterion, tallied a gross of $22,500. "Noah's Ark," last three days at Grauman's Chinese, $5,500.

Pittsburgh Has Good Week; Loew's Penn Heads List

Pittsburgh.—Loew's Penn had a tremendous week's business with Gilbert-Garbo in "A Woman of Affairs," which proved to be rather an interesting picture. Teddy Joyce, master of ceremonies, and Publix unit "Bubbles" went over big.

"Conquest" faired well at the Stanley. Many pleasing comments on the novelty of this one.

Stanley's new Enright Theatre (in fashionable East Liberty, five miles from the heart of the town), opened with "Adoration" and played to S.R.O. at most performances. Also used three vaudeville acts of very average quality.

"Varsity" did a fair week's business at the Grand, and didn't seem to cause much interest.

"The Woman Disputed" played to disappointing business at the Regent.

"Blindfold" at the Olympic played to but fair business.

Liberty—First half: "Docks of New York;" last half: "Avalanche." But fair business. Admission prices cut from forty to thirty cents. Only recently had been cut from fifty to forty.

"Mother Machree" got a nice week's business for the Aldine.

"Brotherly Love" did very little for the Cameraphone, while "Submarine" did not fare much better at the Alhambra.

Cold Weather Dents Business In Iowa Houses

Des Moines.—Severely cold weather and streets coated with ice put a bad dent in business at the Iowa theatres and the Des Moines houses did only fair business at a time when they usually have a big season. The first Paramount talking picture "Interference" was at the Capitol and audiences liked it very much. The result was a $6,000 gross.

At the Des Moines the Gilbert-Garbo combination in "A Woman of Affairs" held out strongly in spite of the cold winds and business was satisfactory though only slightly above average with $6,340.

At the Strand with the second week of sound pictures business was pretty good. "Manhattan Cocktail" for the first half of the week did very well and "Sawdust Paradise" playing for the last four days was better received. The combined gross was $2,365.

The King's chivalrous Musketeers—D'Artagnan, Athos, Aramis and Porthos. The Dumas Guardsmen are featured in "The Iron Mask," Douglas Fairbanks' forthcoming United Artists vehicle and it is a sequel to his earlier film, "The Three Musketeers"

Counter Attractions Fail to Stop Attendance at Theatres in Ottawa

Ottawa.—The people of Ottawa, Ontario, were "theatre-minded" during the week of January 7, little being shown in hockey matches or other counter-attractions, although the arrival of belated snow sent thousands of local skiers to the countryside.

The big event of the week was "Mother Knows Best" and various sound subjects at the Regent Theatre, where crowds were in evidence from 11 A. M. until midnight. The Regent is proving far too small for sound programs, which were introduced there December 29.

B. F. Keith's had one of its best weeks with a well-balanced program of pictures and vaudeville, the feature being "Sal of Singapore."

The Imperial Theatre has been doing better since the introduction of synchronized pictures at the Regent, because Manager Ray Tubman has transferred "The Collegians," Laurel and Hardy comedies and other popular silent releases from the Regent to the Imperial and considerable of the crowd have followed. Bebe Daniels in "What a Night" was not a big hit at the Imperial, but the short subjects on the program proved to be quite satisfying.

"Scarlet Seas," at the Centre Theatre, was a good feature in itself but suffered because of its similarity with "Sal of Singapore" at Keith's. Business was steady and a little above average.

There was all kinds of excitement around the Rex Theatre because of the starting of two serials, "Eagle of the Night" during the first half, and "Scarlet Arrow" during the final three days. "The First Auto" and "Shadows of the Night," the respective features, also helped to pack them in.

"Ben Hur" made still another appearance on a local screen when it played the Columbia during the first half, patronage being entirely up to expectations. "Feel My Pulse," during the last three days, was a fair attraction but the first episode of "Eagle of the Night" brought the juveniles in a rush.

Newlyweds. Mr. and Mrs. Al Jolson, who returned recently to California from a honeymoon spent in Hawaii. The Warner Bros. star is scheduled to start "Sonny Boy" at the Warner studio in the near future

Cold Weather Hits Attendance In Indianapolis

Indianapolis.—The after holiday lull brought Indianapolis first run houses a bad week's business. Extreme cold weather also reduced attendance somewhat.

Indiana's business was not up to expectation on "Shopworn Angel." Gary Cooper, ordinarily a good star here, held up the first half of the week but there was a noticeable lull the latter half. Charlie Davis's stage band with a Publix presentation balanced the program.

It was estimated the week's business amounted to about $20,000, compared with a house record of $30,000. "Interference" at the Circle did "fair" business but was not up to expectation or what is deserved. It drew about $16,000, the house record being $24,000.

"On Trial," in its second week at the Apollo, continued to draw but not as heavily as the first week.

"Lady of Chance" did an estimated business of $7,000 at Loew's Palace.

Syracuse Grosses Off for Week

"Last Warning" Does $9,500 at Empire Theatre

SYRACUSE, N. Y.—Motion picture houses reported some good and some bad business for the week starting Jan. 5-11th. The weather was favorable for a good week, being mild.

The Empire Theatre with a seating capacity of 1700 did better than average business with "The Last Warning," a Universal talkie, featuring Laura La Plante. This brought the box office $9,500. "The Man Who Laughs" played the same theatre the previous week to a total of $9,100.

"Docks of New York," Paramount feature starring Baclanova and Betty Compson, did a good week's business with a gross of $8,500, as against $8,000 the previous split week with "On Trial" and "The Butter and Egg Man." The Strand did better than average with Billie Dove in "Adoration." Box office receipts totaling $8,300, while "Conquest," Warner Brothers talkie, featuring Monte Blue and H. B. Warner, the previous week, played to $8,000.

Loew's State and B. F. Keith's Theatres, the two big houses, seating 3,000 and 2,600, respectively, fell below average, with Loew's gross being $10,000 for Norma Shearer in "A Lady of Chance" as against the previous week's gross of $15,000 for a "Woman of Affairs" with John Gilbert and Greta Garbo.

Maurice, Loew's State organist, presented an original organlogue, entitled "Travesty of Broadcasting," or "Tuning In," which took the house by storm. The plan was worked out by the use of a microphone in the picture booth, combined with certain records which were put on through the amplifier of the sound equipment. Along with this a man, also secreted in the booth, made humorous announcements and Maurice tuned in with the organ.

Bruce Brummit, conductor of the 17 piece concert orchestra, gave a selection. Two Vitaphone acts; Fox Movietone News, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer News and Radiogram brought the program to a close.

Keith's Theatre, which broke all previous house records the week before with a gross of $24,000, fell below average business with "Manhattan Cocktail," Paramount picture, and "Home Sickness," Fox feature, and six acts of Radio Keith Orpheum vaudeville. The gross was $10,000.

Richmond Has Good Week With Poor Conditions

Richmond, Va.—Influenza did not keep the patrons away from the theatres in this city last week. The Colonial, showing "Dreams of Love," filled more of its 1800 seats than any time since "Wings" was shown there. The gross was about $5,845 for the week. Loew's, the biggest house in town, with 2200 chairs, grossed $9,210 for the week, showing "A Woman of Affairs," against the house record of $14,700, made the opening week of last April 9.

The Capitol, where Al Jolson's hit, "The Singing Fool," finished its second week's run, grossed $5,180, a figure somewhat below the previous week. This house only seats 600 people and plays five shows a day. Jolson will play there another week, thus establishing a record for the city.

"Lilac Time," at the new Byrd Theatre, grossed $5,553, with its 1660 opera chairs. This is the house which opened four weeks ago. "Lilac Time" has given them a mark to shoot at, the gross being somewhat larger than was made the opening week.

Very Good Or Just Fair Business Is Reported From Cleveland

CLEVELAND—This was a week of either very good business or just fair business. The pictures that the public liked to see they attended in crowds. The other pictures didn't even create a ripple. "My Man," "Alias Jimmy Valentine," "The Barker" and "The Little Snob" all went over big.

"The Barker" broke the house record at the Hippodrome during its first week with $20,000 and held up very well the second week with $15,000. The elaborate lobby display with real carnival concessions operating and thick sawdust on the floor, undoubtedly did much to maintain the high interest in this picture.

"My Man" was a top noteher at the Allen which did $20,000. The interest was chiefly in Fanny Brice herself and in her songs. "Alias Jimmy Valentine" at the Stillman did about $15,000 with the run extending three weeks.

"The Sins of the Fathers" did just fairly well at the State with $15,000. Jannings himself scored as usual, but the theme was not one which attracted crowds in the face of much sickness, a flu epidemic and bad weather.

"The Little Snob," clicked with the public and pulled the receipts of the Cameo up into the $5,000 classification. "What a Night" did just fairly well at the Palace with $17,000 even though it was listed by critics as a good comedy, and as an "audience picture." "Red Lips" divided the week with "Danger Street" at Keith's East 105th St., with just average results.

"West of Zanzibar" and "Manhattan Cocktail" all showed fair results. They played their first subsequent run engagements at the Park.

Vacation and Special Events Aid San Francisco in Good Business

San Francisco.—New Year's week was considered a good one in San Francisco for three reasons: First: The children were home from school as the vacation was still on. Second: The night before and the Eve of New Year's special events took place in the greater majority of motion picture theatres all over the city and, third, the weather was suitable.

Among those theatres that had special "Midnight Events," New Year's Eve, were the Warfield and Granada, which charged $1.50 for the midnight hour, and the people seemed pleased to pay that price.

The Loew's Warfield and Embassy Theatres, the latter a Vitaphone, did the best business of any houses in the city. Both being crowded all week. The Warfield had "A Woman of Affairs" on the screen, besides a remarkable presentation act, "The Green Hat." At the Embassy was shown "The Home Towners."

The Pantages Theatre did well with the dialect talkies, "Give and Take," and the El Capitan, a Vitaphone movie, reported good business with "Caught in the Fog," together with the Utah University Glee Club. The Granada did but fair business with "Synthetic Sin."

"Interference" did but fair business at the California Theatre. "Behind German Lines" drew a fairly good audience the last week of its showing. The Golden Gate Theatre reported remarkable business. Here was shown the talkie, "The Spieler," together with vaudeville.

Good Features Make Satisfactory Week for First Run Atlanta Houses

Atlanta.—A good bill of features in Atlanta theatres last week stirred interest and roused box-office grosses on the whole.

Paramount's first unit screen show headed by the feature "Interference," took first place in quality and brought the Howard increased business over the past several weeks. Eddie Cantor and Ruth Etting, in their respective acts, were likewise well received.

Next in line for honors was Norma Shearer with Johnny Mack Brown in "The Lady of Chance," playing at Loew's Capitol. Capacity houses throughout the week bespoke the popularity of this number.

Next door, at Keith's Georgia, Monte Blue, Lois Wilson and H. B. Warner enjoyed very good houses with "Conquest," talking opus. The Metropolitan offered "The Little Wildcat," likewise a talking picture. However, the main drawing card at the Met this week was a short feature news showing Alice White, First National's star, escorting members of the Georgia Tech football game through that company's studio while they were in California to meet the University of California at football on New Year's Day.

Loew's Grand played two second runs, "The Terror" the first half, followed by "Submarine." Fair houses were reported.

Seattle Starts Year With Bang

"Old Arizona" Breaks Record In Taking Lead

SEATTLE.—All records for a one-week engagement of any film in the history of picture theatres in Seattle were shattered last week at West Coast's Fifth Avenue Theatre when "In Old Arizona" attracted capacity houses for seven days and stacked up a gross well in excess of $25,000. The "one week only" policy of the Fifth Avenue prevented an additional week's run, so the film was moved immediately to West Coast's Coliseum Theatre for a second week.

This was the high spot in a week of very good business at a majority of the theatres. At the Seattle, "A Lady of Chance" on the screen and Fanchon-Marco's stage unit, "Frivols," featuring Red Corcoran, Seattle boy, stacked up the very pleasing gross of $18,500, well in the lead over past weeks. The same applies to the Coliseum Theatre, where "Prep and Pep" was used as the first "talkie" at this house since sound equipment was installed last week. At 35c it was a good attraction, although not big, and did $6,500.

Two hold-over films attracted their share of the business also. At the Music Box Theatre, "My Man" in its second week, did $10,000, and "The Awakening" at the Blue Mouse Theatre grossed $8,500.

Pantages brought in a little added revenue with "Melody of Love" as its first all-talkie, together with a good unit of vaudeville. The gross was $11,500. The Orpheum scored a nice week, but not remarkable, with Ethel Waters as the headline attraction on the stage and "Danger Street" on the screen. The film was just an average program attraction. The house did $16,500.

Flu Ban Lifted In Harrisburg; Business Is Fair

Harrisburg.—Further subsidence of the flu scare, coupled with pictures well selected for their qualities of entertainment, gave Harrisburg theatres an average good week as viewed from the box office. The Harrisburg Civic Club, a women's welfare organization which sponsors the Saturday morning matinee for children at the State Theatre, lifted the temporary ban which it had placed on these performances as a safety precaution against the flu, and the matinees were resumed on the 12th. Announcement of the fact, several days in advance of the date, seemed to have a reassuring effect on adult theatre patrons who began attending theatres more generally than they had been doing.

"Glorious Betsy," completely synchronized by the Vitaphone Symphony Orchestra, and starring Dolores Costello and Conrad Nagel, was the attraction at the Colonial all week and drew more than average crowds. At Loew's Regent the feature play was "A Lady of Chance," with Norma Shearer, Lowell Sherman, John Mack Brown and Gwen Lee. The newspaper criticisms were quite favorable and seemed to have ben justified by the large patronage. The Regent, by the way, has been substituting several short talkie acts, of a vaudeville type, for one long comedy that used to be a regular part of the programs. This week's bill had four such short talkies and they seemed to please.

The Victoria's main attraction was Billie Dove and Antonio Moreno in "Adoration," which attracted only average crowds. The State's film feature the first half of the week was William Boyd in "The Cop," and the last three days the State showed "Taking a Chance."

Two stars, Joe Brown and Belle Bennett, and their director, Al Ray, who directed them in "Molly and Me," a new Tiffany-Stahl talkfilm

Satisfactory Standard Maintained In Kansas City Picture Theatres

Kansas City.—This week was virtually a duplication of last week in attendance, weather and exploitation at first run houses of Kansas City. Despite the fact that the weather was cold and stormy, snow and sleet falling frequently throughout the week, the attendance retained a satisfactory standard.

At Loew's Midland "A Lady of Chance" played to comfortable crowds, especially at night, the matinee business not coming up to the usual matinee's mark when the weather is more permissible for shopping downtown for women. The gross was $22,400.

At the Newman, Fannie Brice in "My Man" also drew out many a patron from a comfortable fireside at night. And the gross was reported at $17,600. The matinee business at the Newman, like the Midland, did not come up to the usual standard, but night attendance bolstered the week's box office mark in a gratifying manner.

At the Pantages "Restless Youth" attracted the younger generation, as could be expected, and both matinees and night business held up well, although night attendance surpassed the afternoon crowds a good margin, the gross for the week being $12,000.

"Synthetic Sin," featuring Colleen Moore, maintained about the same pace throughout the week; in fact, about the same pace which all Mainstreet pictures have maintained for the last month. It did $24,300. At the Royal "The River Pirate" did not draw so well on matinees, but did a fair business at night, the house having a seating capacity of a little over 900, did $4,010.

Seattle Houses Pick Up Business After Christmas

Seattle.—Local first run houses got off to a bad start Christmas week, but beginning on Christmas Day the box offices began to show immediate signs of recovery and the final few days of the week brought grosses up to at least an average mark, and over in some cases.

The big bet for the week was the Seattle Theatre, where Charlie Murray was starred in person as the head of a Fanchon-Marco's "Revue Idea" on the stage. The popular comedian attracted very big business. On the screen was "Dreams of Love."

John Hamrick switched his bills at the Blue Mouse and Music Box Theatres on Christmas Day, holding the previous week's films over until that time. On the holiday he opened "My Man" at the Music Box, and it has been doing a capacity business day and night ever since. At the Blue Mouse, "The Awakening" has also been attracting very good business.

The Fifth Avenue Theatre had "A Woman of Affairs" as the screen attraction. It started off to slow business, but built up after the holiday and finished a moderately good week.

"The Water Hole" at the Coliseum was not much of a business-getter, doing only a mediocre business. "The Tired Business Man" at the Embassy was another film that played to only moderate business.

At Pantages, "Give and Take" was screened as the first talkie at this vaudeville house, and was responsible for a very pleasing business.

Censorship of Dialogue

in "Sal of Singapore" has again been postponed, at the request of Ernest L. Cole, counsel of the New York Department of Education. The case is now to be heard on January 25.

Under the temporary injunction secured for Pathe by Coudert Bros., counsel for the film company, the picture is being played at the Colony Theatre, New York.

Akron Editors Voice Opinions For Free Speech

Vigorously Attack Idea of Censoring Dialogue in Talking Films

Akron, Ohio, January 17.—Censorship of talking pictures was vigorously attacked by Charles L. Knight, publisher of the Akron Beacon Journal, while L. E. Judd, editor of the Akron Times-Press, declared himself fundamentally opposed to the idea of censorship, in statements to Motion Picture News.

Both newspaper executives declared the censoring of dialogue in talking pictures threatened to infringe upon constitutional rights of freedom of speech.

Knight, who in his editorial columns conducts a relentless battle against bureaucracy, was particularly pointed, making his thrust directly at the spirit of censorship.

"I am absolutely opposed to censorship of all kinds," Knight declared.

"I am opposed to either state or national censorships of any production, whether written, spoken or acted. The attempt here made by the New York censors harks back to the time when politicians had made the state inerrant and treated the citizen as the chattel of the state, which was supposd to tell him what he might say, if not what he might think.

Violates Spirit of Constitution

"A censorship of talking movies offends in every essential against the freedom of speech, and, consquently, is in violation of the spirit of freedom which the makers of our Constitution tried to preserve to us."

"I am fundamentally opposed to the idea of censorship," Judd stated.

"In the case of films it has undoubtedly served a good purpose, but whether it was is worth the price paid, I am not convinced.

"The Constitution says we are entitled to free speech. If the censors of New York are acting prior to the commission of an offense against their ruling or state laws, the picture producer is morally and technically correct.

"The freedom of speech is a constitutional heritage. If it is threatened, it should be fought. It is of importance to all who have a thought to express, whether written or spoken."

Censorship Dangerous, Says Huron Publisher

CHAS. H. J. MITCHELL, publisher of the Evening Huronite, Huron, South Dakota, says regarding the attempt to censor talkies: "Speaking without much knowledge of the present controversy, I might say that censorships are always extremely dangerous. It is contrary to all American tradition save for the sole purpose of maintaining our moral and religious standards and concepts. Surely it is unreasonable to censor the speaking picture without reference to the words the actor may use. Surely it is unreasonable to exercise a censorship over the talking screen actor which is not exercised over the actor in the legitimate.

Sees Danger to Free Press in Censoring Talk

Publisher Declares Such Action Would Lead to Restriction of Thought

Canton, Ohio, January 17.—Denunciation of the attempt to censor talking pictures as "improper assumption of power" is made by J. D. Rariden, Editorial Director of the Brush Moore Newspapers, Inc., which include five dailies in Ohio. These are: "The Canton Repository," "East Liverpool Review," "Salem News," "Marion Star" and "Steubenville Herald-Star."

Improper Assumption of Power

"The time to halt the improper assumption of power is before that power actually has been assumed, and in the case of the New York censors who would act arbitrarily against dialogue and sound effects in photoplays, that opportunity is at hand," said Mr. Rariden. "The question, however, goes far deeper than mere prejudice against any particular film or group of producers, and the results, should they be favorable to the censors, will spread far outside the field of motion pictures into the entire publishing field and eventually will result in the suppression of free speech which in turn may even lead to the suppression of the freedom of thought, two of the basic and essential principles of Americanism.

"In this part of the country, the picture in question has not yet been seen, but it appears as though the contemplated stand of the censors is not entirely consistent with previous decisions. If the dialogue and sound effects recently added are objectionable, then the action of the picture must certainly be equally objectionable. The former could not exist without the latter, and if this is the case, as it very evidently is, then 'Sal of Singapore' never should have been flashed on any public screen.

"But looking at the matter from the standpoint of generalities, rather than particular instances, the talking pictures are no different than performances on the speaking stage. Actors, whether their voices come direct or are 'canned,' are entitled to the same rights (including freedom of speech) holding them, of course, responsible for any violation of law or decency as now applies to the legitimate stage.

"To countenance such an assumption of power would not only invest too great authority in too few hands and make it too easy to misuse, but it is unconstitutional and un-American in spirit."

Alabama Press Supports Pathe In Censor Fight

Editors Agree Statutes Should Be Kept Off Books

Birmingham, Alabama, January, 17.—Censorship has always been bitterly opposed by the press of Alabama, which has done much to keep any censorship statutes off the books, and leading publishers agree that Pathe is making a fight for freedom of speech in its attempt to keep "Sal of Singapore" dialogue free from censorial action.

James E. Chappell, assistant to the publisher of The Birmingham News and Age-Herald, the largest paper in Alabama, looks on censorship of speech on the screen as a menace to freedom.

"Any abridgement of expression within the bounds of recognized decency is a menace to freedom," Mr. Chappell stated in an interview with a Motion Picture News representative. "Censorship is a growing evil that must be curbed. The legislative attitude that certain individuals are sound criteria of art and decency is unfounded, of course, and any group with delegated authority to pass on what shall be written or displayed or spoken must work from arbitrary personal viewpoints."

Strikes at Free Speech

Frank P. Glass, publisher of the Montgomery Advertiser and for the last half century an editor of untrammeled expression, was vehement in support of Pathe's fight: He said:

"Without question this attempt to censor dialogue in a spoken picture strikes directly at the heart of the freedom of speech. This growing tendency to abridge rights guaranteed in the constitution of the United States is an ever-increasing menace to the purpose of this nation. No legislature nor any other group has the right to delegate authority of censorship on decent thought, whether it be written, spoken or made into pictures. The fight of the Pathe Company is of national importance."

Condemned by Newspapers

Bureaucratic Peril Feared in Censor Activities

If They Dominate, It Will Be Beginning of End of Free Speech Say Editors

Oklahoma City, Okla., January 17.—Editorial opinion of two of Oklahoma City's prominent newspapermen is strictly against talkie censorship and all that it implies. The reasons of James A. Stapp, dramatic critic of "The Oklahoman and Times," and that of the editor of the "Oklahoma Daily News," are set forth below:

Censorship at its best is bureaucratic, and it seems to me a strict violation of every American's constitutional right. That which we prate of as American freedom of speech is certainly endangered by censorship of actors, either on the stage or on the screen, and a precedent is set which, unless fought vigorously, will mark the beginning of the end of the freedom for which America stands. Naturally, the question of decency arises, which must inevitably be followed by the question of who is to differentiate between decency and indecency. Followed to its natural end, it means that, sooner or later, the life of stage or screen productions would depend on a sword in the hands of fools or fanatics.—James A. Stapp, dramatic critic of the Oklahoman and Times.

Opposed to censorship. Let the courts handle any infringement of moral or civil law.—Editor, Oklahoma Daily News.

K. C. Editorial Writers Oppose Film Censorship

Kansas City, Mo., January 17.—E. A. Lyons, of the Kansas City Journal-Post editorial staff, and Arch Jarrell, editorial writer of the Kansas City Star, are among those strongly opposed to the censorship of sound pictures. Both are familiar with the censorship laws, and both are emphatic in their opposition to them.

Here are their statements:

"If it comes to the point where we have to have consorship of every word spoken in talking pictures I am in favor of advocating censorship of the type of cigars our Congressmen smoke, and the passage of a Federal law that no one be permitted to smile outside of the confines of their own home," said A. E. Lyons.

"If American law-makers continue along the same path which they have been traveling for the last few years it will not take us long to reach a status that would make the old-time Puritans look like roughnecks and bandits. It not only is laughable but pathetic that a great country like America should be led around at the end of a halter by a few sour-faced individuals who have a gross misconception of life. A group of individuals who represent the greatest danger to a democratic country.

"Preposterous", Says Cincinnati Editor

"IT seems preposterous that in a free country a small group of three or five prsons should have authority to decide what thousands of adults presumably in their right minds should see and hear. I am unalterably opposed to any censorship effort. For the New York Censorship Board to pass on dialogue is another evidence of the unscrupulous methods of reformers to gain their ends. It is equally ridiculous that picture censors pass on dialogue as for an attorney to prescribe health rules or a merchant to decide scientific truths. In my opinion censorship is nothing but unwarranted arrogation of authority." This is the statement of Carl B. Adams, of the Cincinnati Enquirer.

Sauce for Salary Seekers

"What manner of individuals are these people who would censor all spoken words in films? Are they persons who could plead not guilty to ever saying anything in their private lives that the world could not be allowed to hear? As a rule they are salary seekers and professional reformers—grafters and hypocrites, stalking about under the guise of Christian people. Can you imagine you or me taking our wife and children to a talking picture that contained spoken words unfit for our family to hear? Can you imagine a producer making such pictures and expecting to receive a large revenue from? Of course not. Then why in the name of common sense do we—intelligent, educated people—need to have some warped-minded job hunter tell us what we shall hear and what we shall not?

"Not many years ago American reformers wanted prohibition. After ten years of experimenting and tampering with the Constitution have they got it? It is to laugh. There may or may not have been good reasons for desiring prohibition. But

Pathe's Battle On Censorship Real Showdown

Wiseacres Wrong in Judging Sound Problem Only Publicity Stunt

Alleged wise minds along Film Row were trying this week to figure the Pathe attack on sound censorship as purely a publicity stunt for that company. As often happens, the "know-it-alls" were proven wrong by the facts.

One thing they didn't know was that plans were made, long ago, by industry leaders for a showdown on free speech on the screen, the only delay being in finding a test case that would bring the constitutional point squarely out into the open.

The wiseacres also forgot, if they ever knew, that Pathe has demonstrated its prowess in fighting censorship battles successfully. This is the fourth case involving the censorship issue initiated by Pathe, where a principle of vital consequence to the industry has been at stake.

Pathe's attack on newsreel censorship in New York State while not successful in the courts brought about agitation and newspaper support in 1922 which resulted in legislation taking censorship off the weeklies.

In 1923, elimination of a subtitle and burlesque scene in a Roach comedy was ordered by the New York Board. Pathe fought the issue in the courts, and won.

In Ohio, in June, 1922, Mrs. Evelyn Snow was dismissed as head of the state censor board as a result of Pathe's fight after she had censored scenes in issues of Pathe News, including a picture and caption of herself.

The big response from newspaper publishers all over the country in support of screen speech freedom shows that the Pathe fight has already registered its sincerity.

But, of course, the alleged wise boys can't be expected to see that.

College Dailies Enlisted in Fight For Free Speech

Ann Arbor, Mich. Jan. 17.—Remonstrances against the claims of the censors that they possess the right to censor dialogue in sound films, which claim is designated as "the most serious challenge of the right of free speech that has come before the courts," are made in an editorial printed in the "Michigan Daily," a student publication of the University of Michigan.

"The Bill of Rights of the United States Constitution recognizes the freedom of

The Rescue

Pretty Tame Box Office Stuff

(Reviewed by Freddie Schader)

"THE RESCUE," a Samuel Goldwyn production starring Ronald Colman, marks the screen debut of Lily Damita in an American production. The picture is a visualization of a Joseph Conrad story directed by Herbert Brenon. There is an attempt to slip over the sexy stuff here, but on the whole the picture proves to be pretty tame stuff for the box office. It is true that Lily has a lot of that quality known as S. A. but Lil also has a lot of teeth that show, even more than Gloria's do, and likewise she has a habit of twisting up the right side of her mouth in a grimace that is far from alluring. On the whole if they are going to continue with Lily at $100 per, which was the exact size of a Goldwyn check that we saw her deposit in the Hollywood Branch of the Bank of Italy one day recently, they had better get a camera man and instruct him to shoot her at certain angles only.

Like all Conrad's writings this one is a rather involved tale with the scene laid in the Java Seas. It has native dances, the booming of tom-toms, Chinese pirates, gun running and all the elements that should make good picture stuff, but it just doesn't click and that is all that there is to it.

Ronald Colman is an Englishman who has taken to gun running in the Java Seas because he craves excitement. He goes ashore on an island to replenish his water tanks and is set upon by the natives. The island's ruler comes to his rescue, with the result that his subjects turn on him and he is forced to flee for his life. The Englishman promises to restore his throne because of the King having saved his life. Then as they are about ready for their coupe, a disturbing element enters the waters in the shape of an English yacht with a party of tourists. Mr. Travers is the yacht owner. He is a middle aged Englishman who has a young wife. The wife gets her eyes on Colman, the gun runner, and all bets are off as far as hubby is concerned. She is strictly on the make from then on. In the end she wins out and Colman loses his store of powder, guns, the lives of his friends that he has promised to help, the friendship of another chief, and all for a night spent in the arms of the wanton wife of the tourist.

Colman gives a corking performance and the girls are going to get a thrill at his powers of resistance when Lily turns her full battery of S. A. on him. But as between Lily and Laska Winters who plays the role of a native girl the honors must go to the latter as the best screen bet of the two. John Davidson as one of the native chiefs also turns in a very satisfactory characterization and carries the story along in good shape.

Herbert Brenon, who directed, made Catalina do very well as a background for the Java Seas showing that it isn't necessary to travel thousands of miles for locations.

A synchronized score by Dr. Hugo Riesenfield fits the picture very nicely.

Drawing Power: Ronald Colman is your one bet here. Do not play up Lily Damita too strong as the public won't go wild about her.

Adoration

Billie Dove in Night Gowns and Revolution

(Reviewed by Freddie Schader)

TRUE to the edict that has been laid down by First National that Billie Dove must appear in negligee in all of her pictures, she swishes through her latest as a Russian Princess in a nightgown. And what a nightgown! Then she becomes poor and possibly cannot afford nightgowns so she wears a little tailored suit, which proves that the Russian Revolution did something for the motion pictures after all, for after the revolution was over one didn't have to look at Billie in a nightie.

From the appearance of the business at the Strand on a couple of afternoons during the current week Billie's lingerie display is not drawing them in. There is no reason why "Adoration" should, for the Russian Revolution is a pretty well worn theme at this day and date on Broadway, and the chances are that that will be true the country over.

Billie Dove has the role of the Princess Orloff in this story by Lajos Biro. Her husband, the Prince, has just returned from the Russian front to surprise his wife and he sees her descend from an automobile of Count Vladimir, who rates considerable as a ladies' man. In fact, he is the leading member of the home guard while husbands are at the front, and he is tending to his job of keeping the home fires burning by not even overlooking the pretty Parisian maids which some of the nobility have imported. Naturally, the Prince is jealous and raises a little row, then on the day that he is to return to the front the revolution breaks and although he is beset by the mob he manages to make his way back toward his home. On the way he notes a woman in a wrap that was his wife's making her way into the home of Vladimir. He suspects the worst, breaks into the Count's home but before he can enter the bed chamber the mob enters and both he and the Count are knocked unconscious.

The story then jumps its scene to Paris where the Russian nobility are doing the best they can. Here we have a Russian general acting as a bootblack, the Princess is a model and she quits her job because the proprietor wants her to entertain his customers. Others are acting as musicians and tumblers, as well as waiters and waitresses in the Cafe Russe. The Princess also takes a job there after she quits modeling and learns that her husband is also in Paris, a little crazed because he believes that his wife was unfaithful to him on the night of the outbreak in St. Petersburg. She goes to him, but he informs her that he is only living for the day that he may meet with her and Vladimir at the same time so that he may kill them and then commit suicide. In the end he is finally convinced that it was his wife's maid who went to the Count's home, and while the Princess still continues to be a waitress the Prince starts driving a taxicab in Paris.

There are a couple of moments in the picture when Miss Dove shows flashes of acting ability, but in the main the honors of the picture must go to Nicholas Soussanin and Emil Chautard. These two walk away with the laurels, although Antonio Moreno as the Prince handled his role with a great deal of sincerity.

Drawing Power: In spots where they have not been deluged with Russian Revolution stuff you may be able to get a little with this. Billie Dove and Antonio Moreno are the names that may pull.

"Served Hot"

(Educational—One Reel)

CLIFF BOWES is featured in this Educational single-reeler, that offers a little different plot from the usual run, and which has been handily directed by Francis J. Martin. The main action of the piece is laid in the novel setting of a "cook your own food cafe," and Bowes with the assistance of a capable supporting cast gets across a goodly amount of laughs, mostly of a slapstick nature.

Wife Dolores and Cliff have quarreled ever since they were married, and keep up the battle as they walk the streets in search of a place to eat. They finally decide to enter one of those restaurants, where you cook your own food.

Cliff soon gets into a jam by bumping into another man's wife, and then spills a bag of flour over the same man. In trying to get to his own table, he accidentally yanks the cloth off another table and deluges its occupants with food and dishes. Lady Luck seemed to have deserted Cliff entirely, for he continues to get into one mess after another. As a fitting climax to his troubles, he attempts to light a gas range and the result is an explosion that wrecks the place generally. A fair enough subject that will fill out the average program.—GEO. J. REDDY.

The Case of Lena Smith

Viennese Love 30 Years Ago

JUST to set you right at the start the name "Lena Smith" is not that of a new brand of Scotch, so you can see that this case has nothing to do with 12 bottles. It is a tale of old Vienna in 1905, with a prolog and epilog laid 10 years later during the World War. The story as set forth on the screen is a peculiar one; it places the star in a role that gives her tremendous dramatic opportunity, but has an ending that cannot by the widest stretch of imagination be classed as a happy one. It does not seem to be a picture that will pull particularly strong at the box office.

In the prolog a draft board in Hungary is shown sending the men to the front. Seated at the table is one of the town's important personages. A boy appears before the board and says: "Father, let's get this thing over and cut the red tape," and he is handed his ticket for a physical examination. Then the story drops back ten years and the story of the boy's birth is shown. His mother, girl from the small village, goes to Vienna, meets a student officer marries him secretly and then goes to work as a servant in the home of his parents. The father is the Morals Commissioner of Vienna. When he learns that the girl has a baby, he discharges her and has the child taken from her. To have the child returned she will have to post a bond of a thousand crowns. She goes to her husband who informs her that he will be unable to help her out. On returning to her quarters she finds her lover from the home village awaiting her. His sister has informed him of the status of her affairs. His years of labor on the farm have enabled him to save 700 crowns which he turns over to her. She again seeks out her husband and the result is that he takes the money from her, telling her he will gamble with it and give her not only the thousand crowns required but much more with it if she will come to his rooms at 11 P. M. that day. When she calls he embraces her and then goes into another room and commits suicide. An investigation is made, the court finding that the young officer died by his own hand, but his father insists that the girl be questioned with the result that it is here disclosed for the first time that there was a secret marriage, a revelation which crushes the Morals Commissioner. He, in his anger following this, declares that he will take the steps to secure the custody of the child and rear it, at which the girl attacks him and is sentenced to the work house for six months. She makes her escape and kidnaps her child from the orphanage and returns to her home town with it.

Then the epilog. The boy, he cannot be more than 16, is shown starting off to war. The mother is seated by the side of the man whom the boy addresses as "Father" at the draft board after she has bidden her baby farewell, and the film fades out. The moral may be: "Even though you are called 'Father' you may not be one."

James Hall, who is co-featured with Esther Ralston has a most unsympathetic role, which, although perfectly played by him, will not help his popularity. Miss Ralston manages to give one of the best performances of her career to date, and Fred Kohler and Gustav von Seyffertitz contribute corking performances.

Forbidden Love

Foreign Made, But Not As Hot As The Title

(Reviewed by Freddie Schader)

JUST as Samuel Goldwyn released "The Rescue" with Lily Damita featured, Pathe put over a fast one and turned loose "Forbidden Love," a production made in England by Gainsborough Pictures which has Lily as the star. But it doesn't appear as though "Forbidden Love" was going to go anywhere as far as the box office is concerned, and certainly Lily Damita, even though she gives the boys a flash of herself in an all glass bath-tub, isn't going to hang up any laurels for herself on the strength of her performance here.

This picture is based on Noel Coward's play, "The Queen Was In The Parlor," and was directed by Graham Cutts. The trouble with Graham was that he didn't cut enough. The story deals with one of those mythical kingdoms in the Balkans, where a young Princess was wed to a Prince who was a profligate and came to an untimely death. The young widow flies herself to Paris and falls in love with an author. Just as they are to be wed the cousin of the bride-to-be very foolishly permits herself to be assassinated and she is the heir to the throne. Compelled to return to her native land she has to forego the marriage to the man she loves, and her advisers at home have arranged another royal marriage for her. The night before it is to take place the author-lover puts in an appearance, saves the life of the Princess when a revolutionary fires a shot at her, and then is invited to an audience with Her Majesty. They have a brief moment together prior to the State Engagement Dinner, at which they arrive at an understanding that he is to return after the dinner and spend the night in the Queen's chambers. He is there when the revolutionaries create a scene in front of the Palace. The betrothed Prince and the Commander-in-Chief of the Army rush to the Queen's apartment to arouse her, whereat she appears and goes before the mob and disperses them. As she turns from the window a shot is heard from her bedroom and the General reports that a man has been killed trying to enter her room. So the poor little Queen was married off for a second time.

Lily Damita shows all her teeth here as in the Goldwyn picture. She also shows other things which reveal her as a rather chunky Continental girl who carries her principal S. A. just below her shoulders. The men supporting her in the film are all more than middle aged and show it on the screen. Not a single American audience will believe that any gal could go haywire over fellows that are ready for the "sugar poppa" category.

Drawing Power: The title, that's all.

His Captive Woman

Good Romantic Offering

(Reviewed by Edwin Schallert)

"HIS CAPTIVE WOMAN," is the sort of picture that will satisfy almost anyone's craving for romance. You don't have to believe a single foot of it to appreciate it either—that is, the audience won't have to after they leave the theatre, though they will be caught by its spell while it is showing.

George Fitzmaurice made this production with Milton Sills and Dorothy Mackaill. The billing really should be Mackaill and Sills, because Dorothy gives a whirlwind performance that should make her one of the stars of the year.

Sills plays a New York policeman, and Miss Mackaill a cabaret girl, who stirs up all manner of trouble by shooting a millionaire lover, and leading the law on a chase half way 'round the world.

The real plot develops when Sills is sent out to get her, and bring her back, and the two are wrecked on a desert island. The cop refuses to succumb to the girl's luring ways even in the tropic setting, though she vamps, and vamps, and vamps.

Later, the climate, an illness and seclusion with the man who won't fall begin to affect her, and she does a sort of Sadie Thompson and reforms. When the reformation is complete, and when she has also saved the policeman's life twice, he capitulates and they marry by mutual consent.

All of this is told in a cutback from a court trial, and there is good suspense up to the point where the verdict and the sentence are announced spelling an utterly hokumish but happy ending.

Scenes photographed in the Hawaiian Islands, especially those on the black sand beach, lend a lot of lure to this production. Miss Mackaill's performance will assure her of a big following, particularly as it comes on the heels of another very effective portrayal in "The Barker."

Drawing Power: Good audience fare, light in texture, but satisfactory enough to please anyone who likes romance.

THEME: Love story of a policeman and a cabaret girl. The girl has shot a wealthy lover and has fled with the cop in pursuit. The two are wrecked on a desert isle, where the girl reforms and nurses the cop back to health when he is stricken by illness. They eventually wed.

Red Wine

Fine Picture Due to Direction

(Reviewed by Jerry Hoffman)

THE Fox executives signed Raymond Cannon to direct after they saw his first and only directorial effort made independently. It was called "Life Is Like That." Cannon received marvelous notices, and he was placed in a tough spot as a result. People couldn't help but expect great things from him and naturally his first picture under contract will be given closer scrutiny than the initial efforts of directors who are signed without as much bally-hoo.

Cannon has made good the promises his independent venture made. "Red Wine," which is being released in Los Angeles under the title "Let's Make Whoopee," isn't a sensation as a story. But it does contain some new things in direction and stunts in photography which are Cannon's ideas, and goes to prove that a man doesn't have to speak in butturals and have a prefix of "Herr" or "Von" to be different and clever.

To me the most unusual feature of "Red Wine," granting the remarkable things Cannon does with a camera, is the fact that he has made Conrad Nagel a thoroughly human being and has given Nagel an opportunity to cut loose with genuine acting. I understand that Nagel wasn't very hot about the role before he started. It has developed into the best thing he has done thus far.

It is just the trite story of a man whose actions are methodical and so systematized that people can set their watches by him. A friend talks him into leaving his wife for one evening and gets him on a wild party, the grounds being "you're only young once." A practical joke played on him after he "passes out" leads him to believe that he has gone much further than he ever intended to. He returns to his wife, horror-stricken. She, desiring him to celebrate their wedding anniversary, unwittingly brings him back to the scene of the wild party the next night. Here he is confronted by the same waiters, dancers and people who saw him making "whoopee" and who are unaware that he is touting his wife on this occasion. Some "imagine my embarrassments" take place and it ends in a very cleverly handled fade-out of husband and wife dancing together in the crowd.

There is a dream sequence handled with a method Cannon calls a "twin lap." There also are some remarkable "traveling shifts" invented by Cannon on his first picture. The dream sequence is one of the best on that order seen in any picture in years. Sharon Lynn is lovely and very effective as one of the girls who help Nagel to go on the loose. Arthur Stone is the friend who talks him into the wild evening. June Collyer is the lovely, wholesome wife, and June gets a little more opportunity to secure individual credit than most roles assigned her in the past have permitted.

Drawing Power: Box office appeal because it's thoroughly human. Word of mouth advertising will help this more than any exploitation.

THEME: Human drama concerning married man who is loyal to wife, work and ideals and who cuts loose for one night.

Produced and distributed by Fox Films. Length 6,500 feet. Released January 6, 1929. Story by Raymond Cannon. Scenario by Charles Condon, screen version by Frank R. Gay and Andrew Bennison. Directed by Raymond Cannon.

Thirst

Hot Stuff on the Burning Sands

(Reviewed by Walter R. Greene)

JOHN GILBERT steps out on the desert in this one, and does some really fine trouping. Perhaps the scorching sun was responsible; then it might have been William Nigh, the director—or Mary Nolan, the gorgeous blonde leading lady, who out-Garbos Greta in the clinches, besides turning in a noteworthy performance all around.

There is no reason why "Thirst" should not click at the box office. The picture shapes up as excellent entertainment, and has the name of Gilbert to draw them.

The story, an original by Jack Neville and Dale Van Avery, is far from stereotyped picture material. Gilbert is head of a South African Diamond mine. Ernest Torrence and Mary Nolan arrive, posing as Lord Stonehill and his daughter, Lady Diana. By a clever ruse, they hold up Gilbert and rob him of a pile of uncut diamonds. They take Gilbert along as a prisoner, and make a wild dash over the desert to escape. Gilbert, amused, falls in love with the girl. Finally, with supply of water diminishing, Torrence declares a truce with Gilbert if the latter leads the trio out of the desert. Gilbert gets in some heavy love stuff with the girl. After an intermixture of drama and comedy adventure on the desert, which consumes most of the footage of the picture, they reach the edge of the wastelands. Torrence grabs the sack of diamonds and makes a dash for liberty. Gilbert and the girl return to the mine; with the final clutch coming soon after.

John Gilbert has discarded his haughty air in this picture, and really shows that he can put over a characterization when he wants to. Mary Nolan is not only beautiful, she shows ability that cannot be kept under cover very long. Ernest Torrence is his regular refreshing self, interesting in every scene, whether it be drama or comedy.

It takes a lot of directing to hold attention in a picture that only carries three characters through its entirety, especially when practically all action takes place on a hot and arid desert; but William Nigh has accomplished just that. Nigh kept the story moving evenly, and turned in a fine piece of work.

Drawing Power: John Gilbert rates as a draw star, and Ernest Torrence has a substantial following. The picture is good entertainment, and rates as such for any type of audience.

THEME: New locale for Gilbert to demonstrate his love-making qualities. Adrift in the desert, he falls in love with his blonde captor, with the latter finally reciprocating at the final clinch.

Produced and distributed by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Authors, Jack Neville and Dale Van Avery. Adaptation, Willis Goldbeck. Continuity, Leonore Coffee. Director, William Nigh.

THE CAST

Hugh Rand	John Gilbert
Lord Stonehill	Ernest Torrence
Lady Diana	Mary Nolan

"Love 'Em and Weep"

(Roach-M-G-M Comedy—20 Minutes)

(Reviewed by Freddie Schader)

THIS is one of the babies that'll take you right back to the pie-in-the-face days. It is full of that good old reliable slapstick that always makes them laugh and it proves it again in this case. Then there are two real troupers in it. They are Mae Busch and Stan Laurel. Mae has been in the movies since Jesse Lasky made them move the first time, and she has been sticking around ever since.

The story is that of an old boy who has married in his late years. But there was a little beach play fellow that he had before the splicing happened. She wants to be taken care of even though the old daddy has married and insists that he meet her for dinner. He can't make the grade, so he delegates his secretary, who is Stan Laurel, to take care of the situation for him until he can get away from wifey. But he can't get away so the little play fellow insists on calling on him at home and from then on anything and everything happens. Twenty minutes of laughs, one right after the other.

"Pathe Review No. 5"

(Pathe—One Reel)

WEEK after week since Terry Ramsaye took over the editorship of Pathe's Review reel, the writer has witnessed the steady improvement in the compilation of this subject. Scenes offering novelty, others of scenic beauty, and still others leaning more to the newsreel angle, rather than an educational, are regularly being spliced into the Review, giving it a distinctly new dress. This latest release offers as its main sequence "Excitement in Silk," a unique fashion affair, contributed by Vyvyan Donner, who is responsible for a number of entertaining novelties previously presented in Pathe Review. Here is revealed how French modernists do their stuff on fashions in fabric. Also unfolded on the same film spool are the specialties: "Hyacinth," done in Pathechrome; "Monarchs of the Plains," displaying some unusual shots of buffalo in action; and "Symphony of Military Motion," depicting a U. S. Marine company at drill.—GEORGE J. REDDY.

Jack North

(Vitaphone—Nine Minutes)

(Reviewed by Freddie Schader)

THIS boy Jack North is a find for anyone of the Coast comedy producers who are going in for talkies. He is youthful, has a great personality and a smile plus a number of little facial tricks that get laughs. His voice records nicely, either talking or singing and he is worthwhile keeping in mind.

In this Vitaphone release, the subject being programmed as "Jack North, the Ban-Jokester," he appears with his banjo, tells a number of gags that get laughs and when they don't his follow-up catch phrase "See what I mean" with a little eye rolling gets the audience. He also sings and plays three numbers, all of them comedy stuff. They are "Back in Love Again," "Oh, Baby, Don't We Get Along," and "When Banana Skins Are Falling," all of them senseless and all of them funny. It's a good number for any kind of a bill.

"Snapping the Whip"

(Pathe-Fables—One Reel)

AT times cleverly gagged and with good animation in its scenes, this Aesop Fable dealing with the adventures of Al Falfa and his animal friends has fairly attractive humor. The merry animals play "Snap the Whip" with Al, and he is snapped off at the end, crashing into a policeman, following which a fight develops.—GEORGE J. REDDY.

Panatrope and Record Put Over "Singing Fool"

Exhibitor Outlines Methods of Synchronizing By Phonograph System

John R. Boice, manager of the Temple Theatre in Mishawaka, Indiana, pulled a successful non-synchronous stunt in connection with the showing of Al Jolson in "The Singing Fool." He secured a Brunswick Panatrope through a local music firm for the advertising the latter got out of it, and also the Brunswick record number 4033 of Al Jolson singing "Sonny Boy."

He first played the record to get the exact time in minutes and seconds of the verse, first chorus and second chorus. He then screened the hospital sequence of Jolson singing sonny to sleep and found it necessary to run the projector at 92 feet per minute, using the verse and first chorus only for this scene. The needle was placed in the outermost groove and the Panatrope turned on two seconds after the nurse puts the blanket over sonny boy and walks to the left of the picture.

For the final sequence it was necessary to run the picture at three different speeds. The needle was placed on the outermost groove and the Panatrope turned on six feet or four seconds after the scene of the audience applauding Jolson's entry. The first verse was played with the projector running 92 feet per minute. At the title, "When There Are Grey Skies" the projector was slowed down to 60.

At the beginning of the second chorus the projector was speeded up to 106 feet per minute, which synchronized perfectly up to the double exposure scene.

Italian Government to Subsidize Talkies

CONSIDERABLE attention is paid in the trade in Germany to the official announcement that Premier Mussolini has submitted a bill to the Italian Parliament providing official funds for the production of talkies, according to information received by the Department of Commerce, Washington, D. C. The net profits of this government-controlled company are to accrue to the War Cripples' Fund. Apart from this production enterprise, Mr. Mussolini wishes to boost the Italian production and film business in general by means of considerably tightening the existing Italian quota.

W. E. Promises Delivery of Portable Sound Trucks to Producers in Feb.

(Hollywood Bureou, Motion Picture News)

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 17.—Portable sound equipment trucks will be delivered to coast producers by Western Electric all at one time. Priority of orders for the apparatus will not prevail in this instance. Producers who have had their orders in for some months have agreed among themselves to accept delivery of the trucks simultaneously, so that it will prove fair to all producing companies.

Fox is the only producer on the coast that has sound equipment trucks available for feature dialoguing. This equipment was delivered by Western Electric last March before other producers had become engulfed in the tidal wave of sound and talking pictures.

By being forced to wait for delivery of the sound apparatus on trucks, all producers using the W. E. license are delaying production on intended sound pictures that require outdoor sequences of dialogue recording. Producers have been promised at least one sound truck each about the middle of February.

Electric Companies Now Searching For Installations in Foreign Lands

WITH Western Electric Company's sound reproducing apparatus well established in cities throughout the United States, the Electrical Research Products Company, subsidiary to Western Electric, is extending its activities to foreign countries. Inroads have already been made in India, Burma, Cuba and Australia, and other West Indian Islands will have the equipment shortly.

The first Western Electric equipment has been installed in British India by Colonel W. E. Dennis. The device is in operation at the Elphinston Picture Palace, in Calcutta.

H. D. Benson, another of the Electrical Research Products' engineers, has made a number of trips to Havana, where the first equipment will be placed in the Fausto Theatre. Other of the West Indies houses that will be equipped shortly are in Kingston, Jamaica, Panama City and in Costa Rica.

J. W. Roberts, former assistant general auditor of Western Electric and later chief accountant for Electrical Research, is now in Sydney where he will serve as general manager of the Australian company. Patchen Jones is business manager and Allan McLean, operating manager in charge of installations. Others in the Australian subsidiary include J. W. Roberts, A. W. Edmund and C. A. Reed.

H. G. Knox has been appointed European manager in general charge of the Continent, British Isles and British India. L. E. Rudolph has established headquarters in Berlin and J. C. Latham, in Paris, in which city a large chain is reported to have placed an order with the Electrical Research Co.

RCA Photophone has also started an invasion of foreign countries, a representative having sailed for Europe two weeks ago to make a survey of the field with the idea of eventually launching a manufacturing plant probably in Paris. Indications are that American equipment will shortly be in operation in many foreign countries.

Phonofilm Installing in Independent Houses

General Talking Pictures Corporation, in charge of the distribution of De Forest Phonofilm sound projectors announces installations this week in theatres of two independent chains. The houses equipped and now under way are the Plaza in Cleveland, of the M. B. Horwitz Ohio chain, and the Tivoli, the first run Brooklyn house owned by Harry Traub. Contracts have been closed for installing at the Haltnorth and Astor, two other Cleveland houses of the Horwitz chain.

Two additional distributors of De Forest Phonofilm equipment have been appointed by General Talking Pictures Corporation. They are J. K. Adams and Joseph Klein.

Sills First to Play Dual Role in Vitaphone Picture

Milton Sills is the first screen star to play a dual role in a Vitaphone talking picture. He has been chosen for this innovation in the story, "Pat and Mike," by Richard Connell.

Bristolphone, Biophone Getting Service on Discs

Recently Equipped Houses Receive Product From W. E. Licensees

Interchangeability seems now fairly well established following the statement of J. E. Otterson, president of Electrical Research Products Company, that licensees of Western Electric Company could reproduce on equipment that came up to the necessary requirements. Sonora-Bristolphone and Biophone seem to have been sufficiently approved to secure service from the producing companies.

Bristolphone was among the first serviced and additional houses are being equipped with that device regularly. United Artists furnished the necessary records during the week for the showing on Bristolphone of "The Woman Disputed" at Portchester, New York. Budd Rogers, sales manager, and Mike Simmons, advertising and publicity director of Sonora-Bristolphone attended the showing and declared the reproduction perfect.

Biophone was installed at Leo Brecher's Lafayette Theatre in New York City recently and has received the approval of Vitaphone which is serving the house with records of "Lights of New York," which opened during the week. It is said that Vitaphone has not generally approved this device but it will service houses where the reproduction comes up to the proper requirements. George E. Quigley, vice-president of Vitaphone said the Lafayette installation was found to reproduce satisfactorily.

Second of Educational's Sound Stages Is Completed

Educational has completed the second of three sound stages originally planned, and the third will be ready for shooting within a week. Each of the two completed stages provides 7,000 square feet of space for the production of talking pictures. Work on the stages has been rushed in order to take care of the extensive talkie program.

Screen Play Draws Better Than Stage

VITAPHONE and legitimate stage presentations of 'On Trial" played simultaneously in San Diego recently with results highly satisfactory to the screen version. Dwight L. Hill, manager of the Superba where the screen play was on exhibition made a careful check of attendances at both houses.

Although the legitimate theatre ordinarily does capacity business, Mr. Hill reports they did not have one capacity house, while the Superba played to standing room every day with the Warner production. Patrons at both houses, according to Mr. Hill, declared emphatically in favor of the screen entertainment.

Joseph I. Schnitzer, FBO president, watches Ben Hecht and Charles MacArthur, playwrights and novelists, sign contracts to write for his company. Hecht's "Upperworld" is already in production while MacArthur's is still untitled.

College Dailies Enlisted in Fight For Free Speech

speech. This right has long been recognized as one of the basic principles of American liberty, and hitherto has not been seriously challenged. However, the recent case of the New York State Censorship Board's attempt to delete the talkie version of a motion picture, after passing the silent version, has brought forward the most serious challenge of the right of free speech that has come before the courts almost since the Fathers added the Bill of Rights to the Constitution. The Board has the right to censor the silent version of motion pictures, since that is permitted by statute, but for it to attempt to censor talkies seems to violate an inherent right recognized by the Constitution, far more than has been attempted in many years.

"The talkies are but mechanical speech and the speeches of human beings and citizens transmitted by a sound device. In securing an injunction against the censorship the producers have recognized the right to eliminate obscene and objectionable material, but for the Board to go beyond this seems to smell of bureaucracy. The Bill of Rights guarantees the right of free speech; that is apparent at a momentary glance. How the statutary board can go beyond its authority and abridge a constitutional right is beyond the realm of logical thinking. It would appear that in this case the Board can do nothing but retire gracefully and allow the talkies to proceed. Complete censorship of the talkies cannot fail to bring about domination by radio fanatics governed by ill-reasoning.

"The talkies would not succeed if they violated the bounds of common decency, for the public would prevent them from so doing. Here is an excellent chance for the blue law tendency, which has given the nation so many unwanted things, to receive a black eye and a definite stop in its ironing process."

Columbia Has Non-Synchronous Service Ready

Phonograph Company Starts First Installations for Smaller Houses

Columbia Phonograph Company bids fair to become a more important factor in the motion picture theatre field with installations now being ready of Columbia Theatrephone, a non-synchronous disc device. The equipment was announced some time ago and the first houses are now having installations made. In addition to the equipment the company is establishing a record library and cueing service, which will be available about February 1st.

The new device is said to be not too complicated but comparatively easy in operation. It consists of two electric amplifying units, motors, turntables and the usual reproducing equipment. The units are housed in a single cabinet, the turntables being side by side and each having its own pickup arm. A cone speaker is attached to each unit.

K. C. Editorial Writers Against Film Censorship

I certainly can see none for desiring the censorship of entertainment for adults."

"It would seem that the producers of talking pictures, even yet in infancy, do not already have enough trouble and difficulty to contend with, they must have censors," said Arch Jarrell. "In some walks of life and under some circumstances censorship may be fitting. But why not let the talkies alone long enough to allow them to get on their figurative feet. Censorship can be carried too far. It can be carried to a point of danger, A point where it actually conflicts with the constitutional rights of citizens. To censor talking pictures would mean a great problem to producers in instances where the words and synchronization were affected. All of American citizens are not bad boys playing 'hookie' from school. Intelligent, reputable adults do not require school moms to watch their every move."

16 Make Debuts in "Mary Dugan"

WHEN "The Trial of Mary Dugan" is revealed in its screen version by M-G-M as a 100 per cent talking picture sixteen stage and screen players will be making their talking debuts in pictures. The production is being personally directed by Bayard Veiller, author-producer of the stage hit.

Norma Shearer heads the cast and will be heard with the following: Lewis Stone, H. B. Warner, Raymond Hackett, Lilyan Tashman, Olive Tell, Adrienne d'Ambricourt, Mary Doran, Dewitt Jennings, Wilfred North, Landers Stevens, Myra Hampton, Wescott Clarke, Charles Moore and Claude Allister.

Watch Radio for Screen Talent

Producers Nab Air Wave Artists for Talkie Roles

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 17.—An unofficial "scout" system, to keep close tabs on radio artists, has been established by several producers of talking pictures. Radio, as a new source from which talent may be derived for motion pictures, was originally discovered by the Warner Brothers some time ago, when they engaged Carlotta King for the prima donna role in "The Desert Song." Miss King's voice was heard by Darryl Zanuck who sent for her and discovered that she also had the physical screen requirements.

Since then, Lou Ayres has been signed by Pathe as a result of his work in the Montmartre Orchestra, heard over KFWB. James Spafford and Russell Colombo have been signed by Paramount following broadcasts over KNX. Warner Brothers control KFWB and Paramount operates KNX. Pathe is still negotiating with KFVD in Culver City and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has a local tie-up with KHJ.

There are many whose vocal personalities are sufficiently strong to make them good bets for talking pictures despite physical shortcomings for the camera. These types are watched, or rather listened to on several occasions by producers or their scouts. If the impression made by the unseen speakers or singer is vivid, the individual is sent for.

Splits Time Between Both Sound Factions

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 17.—An unusual feature of Betty Compson's contract for six pictures with Warner Brothers and four for F B O is the fact that she will be the first to divide her time between the two opposing recording factions in pictures. Warners unofficially represent Western Electric, being pioneers in their system, under the trade name of Vitaphone. F B O unofficially represents General Electric, exploiting the RCA Photophone.

While other artists have worked for various studios using both systems, this is the first case on record of a player being under contract to the opposing sides at the same time.

Renee Adoree With F B O

Renee Adoree, who severed four years' affiliation with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer last week, will do a series of features for F B O as her first free-lance undertaking. Stories and titles have not been selected as yet.

Operation

Mary Duncan, Fox featured player, was operated on for appendicitis last week. Production of her next all-talker for Fox has been delayed pending her recovery.

Snell to Remain Free-Lance

Earle Snell will not renew with Universal when his contract as scenarist expires shortly. Snell will remain on a picture to picture basis, believing that as a free-lance he will be enabled to accept assignments from other studios as well. He has been under contract to Universal for two years, during which period he turned out most of Reginald Denny's stories, the "Cohens and Kellys" series among others.

Bancroft Gets New Story

Paramount has switched "Black Eagles" from a Fay Wray-Gary Cooper team picture to a starring production for George Bancroft. Story is adapted by Oliver H. P. Garrett from the Russian novel, "Golovin." Ben Grauman Kohn is writing continuity.

New F. N. Writers

James Gruen, F. McGrew Willis and Ewart Adamson have been added to the First National scenario staff on individual picture assignments.

Dane and Arthur

Charles "Chuck" Reisner will direct Karl Dane and George K. Arthur in "China Bound," their next team picture for M-G-M. Frank Butler and Sylvia Thalberg wrote the original story.

Wray-Cooper Vehicle

"Here Comes the Band Wagon," a circus story, will be used by Paramount for the Fay Wray-Gary Cooper team. William B. Jutte is writing the adaptation.

King to Direct "Caribbean Seas"

Henry King has had contract renewed by Inspiration and will direct "Caribbean Seas" following completion of "She Goes to War." Both pictures are scheduled for United Artists release. Madame Fred de Gresac is writing scenario of "Caribbean Seas."

Von Sternberg Assigned Story

"Thunderbolt," an original story by Jules and Charles Furthman, has been assigned by Paramount as an early production to be directed by Josef von Sternberg. George Bancroft may be starred in the picture.

Katterjohn F. N. Writer

Monte Katterjohn has joined the First National scenario department, and is writing the original story and dialogue for an Alice White star production.

Recruit

The younger brother of Barry Norton has arrived in Hollywood to take a whirl at acting.

Rubin Dialoguing Own Shorts

Benny Rubin will star in a series of two-reel Movietoned monologues for Universal under the group heading of "High and Low Lifes of History." Jerome Horwin is writing the stories, with Rubin dialoguing. Jack Foley, former gag man and assistant director, will direct the series.

Dotty Jottings

By Jerry Hoffman

THE picking season is on, and it isn't for berries either . . . some of the choices deserve a berry . . . everyone is picking his "ten best pictures," "ten best performances," and ten best this-and-thats . . . and after all choices are made what happens? . . . and who cares? . . . Hollywood is more interested in increasing the list of people whose checks are good . . . ah, therein lies a tragedy!

MAURICE CHEVALIER will be starred instead of featured in "Innocents of Paris" . . . Paramount has decided to concentrate exploitation on the Frenchman rather than the picture titles . . . Douglas Fairbanks says he isn't going to make another picture for some time following the completion of "The Iron Mask" . . . Doug tells friends frankly that he is out of ideas and wants to get a line on this talkie business first . . .

THE use of the word "talkie" is undoubtedly annoying to contemporaries . . . but all the agitation in the world won't stop fans from calling 'em that . . . unless the industry gets a title equally as effective as "Whoopee" . . . years ago they tried to correct the use of the term "movies" . . . what are they called today? . . . you're darned tootin' . . . "movies" and nothing else but . . .

"THE TIGER'S SKIN" is being cured and prepared for Greta Garbo's arrival in Hollywood on March 1 . . . Greta is visiting the folks in Sweden . . . something has evidently happened to title writers in Hollywood . . . even the dailies which ran "Today's best screen title" have cut out the department for "Todays best wisecracks," crediting various filmites with any ad lib bon mot pulled. . .

CONSTANTIN ROMANOFF . . . who might be a Filipino . . . and who has been chasing the world's heavyweight wrestling championship for 20 years and is still running behind . . . has been acclaimed Hollywood's champion coffee drinker . . . without ever having seen Romanoff balance a saucer I'll wager right now that Bob Hopkins can outdrink him . . . in coffee I mean . . . "Hoppie" has reached the point where his hat bobs up and down like a percolator. . . .

IRVING THALBERG, Harry Rapf, Hunt Stromberg and other M-G-M producers are seeking the writer of an anonymous note suggesting that they lure Roy Reigals as a film supervisor . . . the writer said that in the New Year's game Reigals demonstrated his supervisorial talents by running without any idea of where he was bound for. . . .

FOR the benefit of nosey people . . . I don't mean supervisors here . . . who have been rather curious to know what a "conscience clause" in a star's contract reads like . . . "conscience clause" meaning that said star must be good . . . off the set, here's one from Alice White's which says she must "constantly consult and take counsel with her conscience during her term of employment and she will with good faith and to the best of her ability follow the dictates of her better self, both in her private and public life! . . .

GREETING from producer to star . . . "good morning . . . have you communed with your conscience this week?" . . .

F. HUGH HERBERT became the father of an eight pound girl on Christmas Day. . . . Herbert is the scenarist who married his secretary on the lawn of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer about two years ago . . . her name was Eileen Appleby and their daughter . . . when she gets out of screen . . . will be known as Diana Patricia . . . maybe I'm wrong and Herbert is one of those few Hollywoodites who can pay cash for a baby. . . . I'm refinancing mine. . . .

JIMMY CREELMAN . . . who used to be a newspaperman himself . . . has been signed to do two originals for FBO . . . that company is going after the old Fourth Estaters. Estelle Taylor has put the makeup on opposite Lon Chaney . . . Al Santell returns to First National with Billie Dove as his first assignment for the new year . . . Al was sold down the river to United Artists for the Vilma Banky picture . . . the foreign players didn't care for Eddie Cantor so much over the radio . . . I did . . . Lina Basquette and Peverell Marley were married this week . . . Lina's quitting pictures . . . I'm leaving off here . . .

Lupe Velez and Gary Cooper, the principals of "Wolf Song," a new Paramount picture, listen to instructions for a scene from their director, Victor Fleming

Sills in Dual Talkie Role

Milton Sills will be the first film actor to play a dual role in talking pictures. He is to do two different characters in "Pat and Mike," his next vehicle for First National. Frank Lloyd will direct, with Bradley King now doing scenario.

Renee Adoree Leaving M-G-M

Renee Adoree will part company with M-G-M shortly. Her contract is up and will not be renewed. Adoree has been with M-G-M for four years. She intends to free lance, believing she can accomplish more for herself than by being tied to one firm.

Tom Mix Touring in March

Tom Mix will open his tour of the picture houses in Chicago during March. Mix will play ten weeks in the U. S. and then sail for Europe, where he will also play picture houses. There is a strong possibility of Tom's going to Asia and appearing in China, Japan, and India. Jack Hill will accompany Mix. The troupe will include several cowboys as well.

Scenarizing Gish-Reinhardt Story

United Artists signed Emil Forst to write scenario for Lillian Gish's initial production for that company, which Max Reinhardt will produce and direct. Title is "Miracle Girl" which will be changed before release.

Paramount Uses 2 Directors

Paramount is using both a stage and picture director on all-dialogue pictures in order to obtain correct film tempo in talkers. John Cromwell, former stage director, is directing "Close Harmony" as an all-dialogue production for Paramount, with Eddie Sutherland, picture director, working with Cromwell and making suggestions to speed up action and tempo.

Color Classics with Sound

Tiffany Color Classics, one-reelers released by Tiffany-Stahl, will be produced for next season with sound accompaniment.

Carr Signs Irene Rich

Irene Rich has been signed by Trem Carr to star in one feature. Les Saylor will play opposite.

Oland a Paramount Player

Paramount has signed long-term contract with Warner Oland, who will be featured in all talkers.

Grauman Books New Talkie

"The Man Higher Up," a two-reel dialogue dramatic sketch produced by M-G-M with Hobart Bosworth and Robert Edeson featured, goes into Grauman's Chinese when "Broadway Melody" opens for a run at that theatre. William De Mille directed.

Garnett and Higgins

Tay Garnett and Howard Higgins were given new contracts by Pathe this week. Both will continue directing for that firm another year. Garnett was made a director by Pathe during the past season, having been ace scenarist for several years.

MANAGERS ROUND TABLE CLUB

CLEARING HOUSE FOR BOX OFFICE PROBLEMS and THEATRE OPERATION

By Charles E. Lewis

of the Alfred Gottesman Theatrical Enterprises, New England

Torrington Goes Vitaphone

On January, 2nd, Joe Quittner's Palace Theatre in Torrington, Conn., opened with Al Jolson in "The Singing Fool" to a record-breaking attendance. Even the matinee was S. R. O. and at night, in spite of a bitter cold-snap, they were lined up long before the doors opened. The second evening performance was also a sell out.

The installation in this theatre is unusually good and the reproduction of the talking sequences were as clear as a bell. With the addition of a pair of draw curtains, the Palace will be as neat a "talkie" house as anyone will find.

The Palace is under the management of J. Scanlon and after a little talk with him I was gratified to learn what a real "go-getter" he is. He also showed me a post card that was mailed to their large mail list announcing the arrival of the Vitaphone and Movietone. He was at work on a special post card printed in Italian which will cover that element in Torrington and surrounding towns.

We are sure that the other members would be interested in hearing from Torrington and how they are exploiting their sound pictures. So Scanlon, find a spare half hour every once in a while and "shoot" us some of the information.

It Don't Cost a Cent

Manager Ed. J. Cangley of the Sayre Theatre in Sayre, Pa., tells us how he boosted his matinee business through the distribution of different kinds of candy which was supplied gratis from the manufacturers. Here is a real old idea that is still a good one, especially in the smaller towns and cities. If you have a local candy manufacturer, work it through him, if he is progressive enough to see the value of it. Otherwise there are many national manufacturers who are tickled to death to get such publicity for their product.

At any rate, it is worthy of a try-out. Get after it and be sure that it is well advertised to your youngsters so that they will flock for the candy.

Mr. Cangley is also anxious to hear from other CLUB members and expressly asked that should any of them pass his way to stop in and say hello. Therefore, if you have an idea that you think would benefit Cangley's patronage you will be showing the proper club spirit by communicating with him. Likewise, if there is anything you would like to learn from him, just drop a line and he will respond promptly.

Manager's Round Table Club

IS now the largest organization of its kind in the world.

Its membership includes theatre managers and exhibitors from all over the world.

It was the first organization to sponsor and encourage the interchanging of ideas on showmanship, exploitation and theatre operation.

C. E. L.

Taking Us at Our Word

A short time ago we volunteered to furnish members and readers with information regarding non-synchronous devices, with the result that over a dozen requests were received within the past few weeks. All of these requests were carefully investigated, and whatever information we were able to dig up was forwarded to those inquiring.

Members are urged to take advantage of the CLUB Service Bureau and communicate with us regarding any matter which you feel you want to know more about. This especially applies to sound and non-synchronous devices and record services which are swamping the industry at this time. Much money has been foolishly wasted because exhibitors, located at a distance from the larger cities, are unable to secure the information they should have before paying out good money.

The Cambridge, O., Festival

In Cambridge, Ohio, the Christmas Party for the youngsters was handled through Fred Johnson, manager of the Colonial Theatre and Chairman of the Committee for the Kiwanis Club under whose auspices this party was held.

In this case, the Kiwanis Club "footed" the bills, first raising the money by popular subscription at one of their meetings.

Bergmann's Xmas Party

W. H. Bergmann, manager of the Fremont Theatre in Fremont, Nebr., earned some valuable newspaper publicity when he arranged his Christmas Party for the youngsters. But he presented a new angle by making the price of admission any kind of a toy regardless of its value. Even broken toys were acceptable and after the show he turned the latter over to the Boy and Girl Scouts to be repaired. He then placed the entire collection in the hands of the Salvation Army for distribution to the poor families in Fremont.

In commenting on this particular angle, Mr. Bergmann tells us that he ran a similar stunt on Thanksgiving morning but the admission then was for fruit and vegetables and after they had all passed into the theatre the lobby resembled a vegetable market rather than a theatre. These were also turned over to the Salvation Army for distribution and needless to say it brought a lot of joy to many poor hungry people.

All of which brings to mind the thought that is it necessary for us to wait for Thanksgiving or Christmas to work a stunt of this kind? Surely the poor people are just as hungry at other times during the year and your local welfare workers or Salvation Army officials will gladly co-operate and what a whale of publicity you can glean for your theatre through such an idea.

What do you think of this one, boys? If you want any more details than I have set forth, just drop a line to Bergmann, and from experience we know it will be forthcoming by return mail.

Levinson Running B'way, Norwich

With the passing of the Palace Theatre in Norwich, Conn., to the Gottesman Interests, M. J. Levinson, formerly manager of both the Palace and the Broadway, now devotes his full time to the Broadway Theatre which is an "All Sound" theatre.

Leo, M-G-M Lion, Plays Tampa

Leo, the M-G-M movie lion, played a one-day stand in Tampa, Fla., last Saturday. A special performance was staged at noon in front of the Tampa Theatre, and visits were made to all of the other theatres showing the company's product. A special visit was made to the Children's Home and the Old People's Home.

Sound Exploitation for Club Members

New Dep't Will Tell How to Sell Sound to Public

NOTE: Under this department, all ideas and exploitation of interest to theatres already equipped with "Sound" plants, will receive first consideration. If you have successfully put across any attraction in which your "plant" was utilized or if you have worked an advertising campaign on a sound picture, then send us all the information about it and it will appear on this page.—EDITOR.)

If the average manager or exhibitor would take the time to learn a little about the sound plant that has cost him so much money he would soon find out that this plant could be used in many novel ways and would provide his patrons with many opportunities to go out talking about the "stunts" they hear in your theatre.

If you have a mystery picture coming, why not use a novel idea to create interest in the picture and at the same time to make your patrons wonder what it's all about? For example: After your regular trailers have been shown, close your screen draw curtains and use your microphone announcing set. Keep the theatre in absolute darkness and have a girl scream into the "Mike," follow this with as many weird noises as you can create and then let your operator start a small green spot roaming about the stage, the ceiling and as much of the rest of the house as his spot can reach. Then tell them, through the "Mike," that the green monster is seeking someone. That someone may be under their seat. Work this up as much as you can and repeat the screams once or twice again. Then announce the attraction, bringing out the highlights and the mystery angles.

Another idea in this same connection is the running of a horn up in your hanging ceiling, another into the heat ducts under the orchestra ceiling, providing there are grilles in these places to allow the sounds to be heard. The further away they seem, the better is the effect.

Up in New England the Gottesman Theatres use such ideas continually, but they make them different every time so that the audience never knows what the next one will be.

Another great "stunt" is to run a microphone connection down to the organ console and during the organ slide specialty have your organist sing or speak the words of the song into the "Mike" so that this singing or talking comes through the horns. This idea was worked with great success a few weeks ago and brought about audience singing when every other method to do so had failed. The engineer from the Electrical Research Lab. did not think the idea was feasible because he was afraid that the sound would come from the horns and be caught again by the "Mike," but an ordinary arrangement of a "shell" protecting the "Mike" eliminated this danger and it worked a hundred per cent.

Horns arranged in the lobby, over the marquees, in lounge and smoking rooms, etc., could all be used to great advantage if you would only give this angle some consideration and sit down with your operators and try to work them out.

In "sound" theatres, either synchronous or non-synchronous, if you have a large foyer or lobby where standees must wait for the next show, you could keep them happy and willing to wait if you would place a horn or two there so that they could hear the music from the discs, etc.

No doubt, there are many live-wire managers who have successfully done things like this and we are going to ask that they send us descriptions so that we can publish what they have done. This interchanging of "sound" ideas has now become the most important subject in the industry and the possibilities are unlimited.

What have you done? What has the other fellow done?

What are we going to do?

The MOTION PICTURE NEWS, through its exhibitor staff member, Charles E. Lewis, will receive and publish stories on this marvelous new angle. Send them in. Watch for them.

A year that will go down in history as a banner year for the Manager's Round Table Club.

Every "Live Wire" Manager and Exhibitor, not already enrolled, should sign the application and jump aboard for a happy and prosperous cruise.

Sound Gains Headway in Philly and Vicinity

BEGINNING the week of January 15th the following theatres in Philadelphia and immediate vicinity commenced offering talking and sound pictures, the newest improved equipment having been installed: Leader, Columbia, Wynne, Lansdowne, Sedgwick and Waverly. The Empress Theatre, Manayunk, is now being equipped with Movietone and Vitaphone and the Orpheum Theatre, Germantown, starts the presentation of pictures with sound reproduction on January 21st.

The Great Northern Theatre, Broad street and Erie Avenue, Philadelphia, was turned over to Tioga Post, No. 319, of the American Legion on Monday and Tuesday, Jan. 14th and 15th, on which Captain Charles Nungesser, France's greatest war ace, with a record of 105 German planes brought down, who was lost with Coli in their attempted trans-Atlantic flight, will make his first screen appearance in this city. Nungesser's only motion picture, "The Sky Raider," was shown on those nights and the theatre was operated by the legionnaires in uniform.

Thomas Mangan, manager of Washington Theatre, Chester, Pa., was held up by two unmasked youths while alone in the theatre shortly after ten o'clock on January 7th and robbed of the day's receipts amounting to about $750.00. The robbers scooped the money up in a satchel as they pointed guns at Mangan and escaped. Mangan and Edward Weber, a special policeman employed by the theatre, gave chase but the youths disappeared through an alley and no trace has since been found of them. The robbery was the more daring because it occurred directly across the street fro mpolice headquarters.

Pittsburgh Film Circle Sees Active Week

THE Roxian Amusement Company opened its Roxian Theatre in McKee's Rocks, Pa., on January 14th. The house was built with local capital furnished by a large number of stockholders in the community. David J. Selznick is president and general manager of company.

Sam Gallo's Star Theatre at Nanty-Glo, Pa., was recently destroyed by fire.

FIVE theatres in the Southern territory have either opened with Vitaphone this week or are preparing to do so within a few days of this writing.

The Colonial Theatre at Winston-Salem, N. C., started with Vitaphone last Monday; the Carolina Theatre, in the same city, opened with it Thursday night, while the Saenger Theatre at Biloxi, Miss., opened fully equipped on January 15. The Saenger Theatre at Helena, Ark., was scheduled to open with Vitaphone on Jan 14 and the Saenger at Hope, Ark., will do so on Jan. 23.

Atlanta

Branch managers of FBO in the Southeast are preparing to attend a regional sales convention of the company, which is to be held at the home office in New York on January 20.

Tracy Mathewson, news cameraman, is at Savannah, Ga., filming and recording events for Pathe Sound News. Being a combination publicist, traveler, soldier of fortune, and news gatherer of exceptional distinction, Mr. Mathewson is in his element in the new sound field.

George P. Montgomery, for the past three and a half years manager of the Wells Theatre in Anniston, Ala., announced during a brief visit to Atlanta Thursday that he had left the managerial post following the sale of the Wells Theatre on January 2 to Walter Hickey, of Atlanta. Mr. J. G. Wells has owned the house since it opened in 1924, and Mr. Montgomery has held the managerial post since May, 1925.

W. W. Anderson, Pathe's branch in Atlanta, has returned to his office after a visit to Chattanooga.

William G. Minder, who last week became head of Fox's Atlanta branch, and George W. Fuller, Southern district manager of the company, made a trip through the territory last week.

Fred F. Creswell, district manager of Arthur C. Bromberg Attractions, with headquarters in Atlanta, made a trip through the North Georgia territory.

J. N. Morgan, of the Roy Martin chain of theatres of Columbus, Ga., visited film row on crutches this week, as a result of a painful injury to one of his ankles.

Oscar S. Oldknow, vice-president of National Theatre Supply Company, with headquarters in Atlanta, attended a district sales meeting of the company in San Francisco.

Dan Michalove, Southern division manager for Pathe, is expected to return to Atlanta soon from Asheville, N. C., where he and Mrs. Michalove went for the wedding of his sister, Miss Bertha Michalove.

Reuben D. Moore, who has been in charge of the projection booth at the Royal Theatre, Wauchula, for the past eight years, was promoted to the management this week. Harold Clarke, former manager, has been transferred to Jacksonville.

L. B. Hawrell, manager of the Lyric and Orpheum Theatres, Waycross, Ga., was a Tampa visitor last week. The 'flu forced the closing of all the Waycross theatres, and Mr. Howard took advantage of the enforced vacation to make a motor tour of Florida.

Keeping an audience intact, while firemen chop into the plaster walls of a theatre auditorium and extinguish a blaze, is exceptional, but Mrs. N. V. Darley, manager of the Royal Theatre, Tarpon Springs, Florida, did it, and how.

About 9 o'clock last Wednesday evening Mrs. Darley discovered that the lath, inside of the wall near the stage, was one fire. She quickly ordered on the lights and told the audience all about it, explaining that there was no danger. Not one person left the theatre. Firemen responded promptly, marched down the aisle, chopped away the plaster wall and extinguished the blaze with chemicals.

Exhibitors Wage Price Cut War in Mo. Town

COLUMBIA, MO., a town of 10,000 and the seat of the state university, is in the midst of a theatre war which is proving costly to the exhibitors and providing some bargain priced entertainment for the patrons. This is the second time such a "war" has broken out. University students and townspeople are kept busy hurrying from one to another of the four theatres to see pictures and vaudeville far better and at cheaper prices than ever before in the history of the town. T. C. Hall of Moberly, Mo., millionaire theatre owner of Columbia who operates the Varsity, Hall and Columbia Theatres, is featuring talking pictures at the Hall Theatre, the pick of silent films at the Varsity, while the Columbia has been given over to a musical comedy stock company.

At the Missouri Theatre, a new $500,000 house managed by J. D. Stone, a capitalist of Columbia, sound pictures were started there last week in addition to five acts of vaudeville. So, while Columbia's two showmen fight it out for control of the theatre situation, patrons of that city are being educated to a standard of entertainment which may tend to spoil them for the future.

The Orpheum Theatre of Kansas City, playing stock, has come to the front pages of daily newspapers with the announcement that January 21 will be "University of Missouri Night" and that arrangements for line parties by the various fraternities have been made for that night.

When Joan Crawford, screen star, announced she would become the bride of Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., in June the announcement held more than casual interest for Kansas City. Miss Crawford, is a Kansas City girl and was reared and educated by Mrs. Effie Stuttle, mother of Jess Stuttle, a golf professional of Kansas City.

A newsreel, showing the activities of the Mayor's Christmas Tree Association, which distributed food and clothing to needy families of Kansas City, was shown at the Royal Theatre, first run downtown house.

UNIFORMS FOR HOUSE ATTACHES COSTUMES FOR STAGE PRESENTATIONS BROOKS 1437 B'way New York

Fox Supertype Theatre Planned for Cleve.

WILLIAM FOX has announced that he will build a 6,000-seat theatre here during the coming year. It will be of the supertype, in accord with other recent Fox theatre buildings. While the exact location was not stated in the announcement, there is reason to believe that it will be located in the Van Sweringen Terminal project on the Square. This belief is based on the fact that Graham, Anderson, Probst and White, Chicago architects who have made the plans for the Terminal project, have made preliminary drawings of the new Fox theatre. This is the first time that a definite statement was issued from Fox Theatre Corp. as to their intention of building a theatre in Cleveland.

Jack Hays of Universal, who spent a few weeks in Cleveland upon his return to the States from Cuba, is now on his way to Java in the interest of Universal.

A. L. Scott and E. Pennell are the new owners of the Artcraft, Toledo. They have recently purchased the house from W. L. Beckham.

About ten DeForest Phonofilm installations will be in operation in this territory by the middle of February, it is stated. Among these are three in Cleveland, namely the Plaza, Astor and Haltnorth—the Utopia, Painesville; and the Majestic at Charleroi, Pa.

Harold Underwood has joined the Columbia Gold Seal sales force in this territory.

Frank A. Hines, manager of B. F. Keith's Palace, has just recovered from a flu attack.

Mark Goldman, Tiffany-Stahl exchange manager recovered from a two-week's flu siege just in time to attend his niece's wedding in Boston.

M. A. Malaney, Loew publicity and exploitation manager, addressed the Advertising Club last Thursday at a noonday meeting on "Talking Pictures."

A new theatre will replace the Bijou Theatre, Toledo, recently damaged by fire, according to an announcement by Thomas H. Gardner, owner of the property. It will be an 1,800-seat house, and will cost about $100,000. Repairs recently made at the Bijou are only temporary. Alfred A. Hahn, architect, is preparing plans for the new building which will have two stories.

A fire originating in the projection booth at the Dalmar Theatre, Portsmouth, Ohio, has resulted in the house being closed by order of the Fire Chief. Damage is estimated at $2,500. Fire Chief Robert Leedom ordered the house closed until the building is remodeled to comply with the building code.

A complete "little theatre" will be included in the new Toledo-Paramount Theatre, scheduled to open February 1st. All pictures and vaudeville numbers will be previewed by the management in this little theatre, which accommodates fifty people, before presentation to the public. It is provided with complete stage and lighting effects and has sound installation, too.

The Colonial Theatre, Washington Court House has been purchased by the Peal interests of Ohio and Kentucky, and after being remodelled has been renamed the Cino Theatre.

Cashier Foils Robbery at Pantages, Toronto

CORA PARK, a new cashier at the Pantages Theatre, Toronto, one of the largest houses in Canada, prevented a hold-up of the box office on the night of January 10 by screaming. Miss Park was completing her second day of employment at the theatre when a lone bandit ordered her to hand over the money. She yelled and the commotion was so arresting that he ran. A few hours later Miss Park identified a man, William Reist, aged 21, whom the police had nabbed as the offender.

A previous hold-up of the Pantages box office resulted in a haul of $800 for a bandit pair who made their escape.

After playing the Uptown Theatre, Toronto, for five weeks as master of ceremonies, Eddie Loughton has returned to Hamilton, Ontario, where he is filling an unlimited engagement at the Capitol, another Famous Players house.

Despite big crops and extensive general prosperity, the Provincial Government of Manitoba derived only $379,000 from the amusement tax during the past 12 months, according to announcement at Winnipeg. The Government had estimated $420,000 as its revenue from the theatre ticket tax during 1928.

Interior alterations have been made in the Capitol Theatre, Edmonton, Alberta, costing $42,000, and this does not include wiring the house for sound programs. Harold Bishop is the manager of this Famous Players house.

The staff of the Capitol Theatre, Peterboro, Ontario, "remembered" Manager J. A. Stewart with a walnut smoking stand with accessories and Mrs. Stewart with a silver cake dish.

Members of the staff of the Capitol Theatre, Moose Jaw, Sask., and their wives, numbering 70 all told, gathered for a function when Manager E. P. Fields was presented with a set of crystal ware.

N. L. Nathanson, managing director of Famous Players Canadian Corp., Toronto, has appointed Sam DePass as supervising manager of the many suburban houses of the company in Toronto. Mr. DePass has been in charge of the advertising department at the head office of Canadian Famous Players.

H. M. Thomas, Western Division Manager of the F. P. Canadian Corp., will also have charge of the advertising and exploitation department at Toronto in succession to Mr. DePass.

J. Lloyd Dearth, formerly general manager of Pantages Theatres in the North Western States, has been appointed manager of the Capitol Theatre, Vancouver, B. C., by Famous Players Canadian Corp., Toronto.

The Dominion Theatre, Victoria, B. C., J. M. Robertson, manager, has been added to the growing list of wired theatres in Canada, the house also being redecorated, recarpeted and provided with new opera chairs as well during the transformation.

Probably the first time on record that a short subject has been held over for a second week when the main film attraction has been changed according to schedule was noted at the Capitol Theatre, Vancouver, B. C., when Manager Lloyd Dearth retained the short Movietone release of King George for the week of January 7.

2 More Cincy Movies Wired; Other News

There was a special showing at the Executive Chamber in the State Capitol, one afternoon last week, of the motion picture that had been taken of Governor Roosevelt's campaign and likewise of the Inauguration at the Capitol on New Year's Day.

Lee Langdon, who for many years was one of the best known bookers in Albany, and who later conducted the Central Theatre, died in New York City last week of pneumonia. Mr. Langdon had been residing in New York for the past year or so and was known to practically every exhibitor in northern and central New York.

Thomas Stowell, manager of Harmanus Bleecker Hall in Albany, played the part of host last Saturday morning to a large group of men and women prominent in the affairs of Albany at a demonstration of the installation of Photophone.

Mrs. Dennis Regan, one of the old timers in the business, but who leased her theatre some time ago to Louis Benton, is back in the game and once more handling the Star at Greenwich.

Mrs. Alec Feltmann, wife of the owner of the Lincoln and Rialto Theatres in Schenectady, and a former cashier at the Rialto, died last week of pneumonia.

A terrific windstorm put the Vitaphone out of business at the Avon Theatre in Watertown, and it was found necessary to close the show one night last week.

The Pearl Theatre, owned by Morris Silverman, and the Capitol, owned by George Dwore, both located in Schenectady, may shortly combine and be operated as a unit, according to report.

Sidney Abrahams, poster clerk at the Pathe exchange, was confined to his home last week with the flu. Ann Rogers and Catherine Schraa, of the F B O exchange, were also ill with the flu during the week. Howard Morgan, manager for Educational in Albany, was absent from his desk a good part of last week, and confined to his bed with the flu.

The new theatre in Scotia, which will be operated by the Farash Company, has opened. The house is well located in the center of the village and will be known as The Ritz.

Catherine Dobbs, who has been connected with the Tiffany office force for two or three years in Albany, resigned during the past week on account of ill health.

Although there is talk of a new theatre being erected in Schenectady, the Albany and the Hudson Theatres in that city, operated by the Farash Company, are still closed, in order to divert business to other houses operated by the company. On account of the large pay roll at the General Electric Works, the majority of Schenectady houses report business as being good.

Sunday Shows Favored at Clarion, Iowa

GEORGE HAKE of the Colonial Theatre at Clarion, Ia., reports that the Sunday shows, which are permitted for the first time at Clarion houses, are winning favor and that many who opposed them are beginning to change their attitude. Sunday shows were voted on at a special election and won out by a vote of 755 to 405.

FBO entertained a long list of callers, including J. E. Farley of the Star at Waucoma, who made his first visit in many months. Others, who were in to book films, were T. A. Holt of the Princess at Montezuma, J. E. Michaels of the Strand at Jefferson, W. E. Mansfield of the Strand at Belle Plain and the Mills at Tama, W. C. Treloar of the Treloar at Ogden.

Jake Cohen, who has the Strand and the Capitol at Ottumwa, has installed sound equipment at his house within the last few weeks. Mr. Cohen was a caller at the office of Paramount and reported himself well pleased with the new equipment. Another caller at the Paramount office was George Sweneker of the Garden Theatre at Guthrie Center.

J. H. Michaels of the Strand Theatre at Leon, Iowa, reports that rapid progress has been made on the new theatre building which is being erected on the site of the old Strand. The new theatre is to have a capacity of 500 seats and calls for all the most modern equipment and construction. J. H. Michaels is asociated with John Weller in the Leon house and they have also theatres at Oscola and Jefferson.

With the installation of the Vitaphone at the Strand Theatre, Des Moines, a slight advance was made in the evening admission. The previous price was 20-25 and the admissions now are 20-30.

The Crest Theatre at Creston, Iowa, is now under new ownership, having been purchased recently by Macey and Henry, who are old exhibitors in this territory. Clarence Macey has the Strand Theatre at Anita. Z. Z. Henry is owner and manager of the Palace at Exira. They will remain at their old houses and have engaged E. L. Jenkins to act as manager of the Crest. The Crest was previously owned by Roy Benson.

2 Fires and Robbery Occur in Central Penn

AN overheated flue in the Star picture theatre, at Nant-y-glo, a suburb of Johnstown, early in the morning of January 8, caused a fire that destroyed the theatre. The loss is estimated at $25,000, partly covered by insurance. A high wind fanned the flames and firemen were summoned from other towns to aid the local department. The theatre was owned by Jacob Conrad and was operated by William Gallo.

A mother and three small daughters were rescued after being trapped in a blazing picture theatre in Havre de Grace, just across the Pennsylvania line in Maryland, during a matinee performance on January 7. The woman and children were in a basement rest room and were weak from smoke fumes when carried to the street.

A sneak thief thrust his hand through the window of the ticket booth in front of the Victoria Theatre, Harrisburg, at 5 o'clock, on the afternoon of January 8, while a relief cashier was on duty, and grabbed $75 in bills with which he disappeared in crowded Market Street.

Floyd Hopkins, director of the dozen Wilmer & Vincent theatres in Harrisburg and Reading, has been appointed a member of a committee of prominent Harrisburg business men who will represent the Chamber of Commerce at the dedication of the new Harrisburg City Hall, which will take place early in the Spring. Mr. Hopkins is a past president of the chamber.

Mrs. Florence Ackley Ley, former comic opera prima donna and until recently head of the Community Service Bureau maintained in Harrisburg by Wilmer & Vincent theatres, directed the annual holiday party of the Ley School of Dance Arts in the Vance Building, Harrisburg, on January 7.

Wash. Shows Shut by Flu to Open

WITH the disappearance of the slight epidemic of influenza in various parts of the state, it appeared likely that a general reopening of theatres in the smaller towns would follow this week. Cities which have had theatres and public places closed during recent weeks are Yakima, White Swan, Granger and Ritzville, all of which had a fairly large number of illnesses.

"Sunshine" Max Bradfield, a West Coast master of ceremonies from California, arrived at the Fifth Avenue Theatre, Seattle, last week to assume the direction of the Fifth Avenue Stage Band. He replaces Georgie Stoll, who has been returned to the Broadway Theatre in Portland.

John McGill, exhibitor of Port Orchard and Annapolis, Washington, last week was telling the boys about the successful opening of his new Port Orchard Theatre.

Lloyd Lamb, former sales representative of the American Film Corporation, is recovering from a recent sudden attack of intestinal influenza.

Art Aronson, head of the Western Poster Company of the Northwest, is celebrating the arrival of a baby daughter.

Information was received on Film Row to the effect that the Majestic Theatre in Ontario, Oregon, had been bought out by William Lees, owner of the Dream Theatre, opposition house. The Majestic was formerly owned by C. R. Potter.

K. L. Burk, Northwest division manager of Universal houses, announced that Clem Pope has returned to Spokane, Washington, as manager of the Clemmer Theatre there. Art Bishell, appointed to that position about a month ago will probably return to the Universal group in Seattle.

Alex Singelow, formerly connected with the Fox organization in the newsreel division, has been associated with the Sonora-Bristolphone sales department in the Northwest.

Al Rosenberg, president of the Allied Amusements of the Northwest and head of the DeLuxe Theatres, Inc., of Seattle, has appointed "Chuck" Charles as house manager of the new Everett Theatre now under construction and leased by DeLuxe.

The Casino Theatre at Republic, Washington, formerly owned and run by Charles Storch, has been taken over by Robert McAtee.

G. H. VanDusen, former auditor for the eleven Universal chain houses in Seattle, has been moved to the position of cashier at Manager Mat Aparton's local Universal exchange.

The Goodluck Theatre in this city, owned and operated by Mr. and Mrs. S. Z. Williams, last week was renamed the Mount Baker Theatre. The change was made along with a change in policy which brings sound films.

New Theatre, to Cost $150,000 Is Planned for Bartlesville, Okla.

A motion picture theatre that will be a civic monument and will cost $150,000, has been announced for Bartlesville, Okla., by C. E. Burlingham, who plans to make the structure the finest small city show house between the Mississippi and the Rockies. It will be operated by the Berryman Bros. and the Griffith Amusement Co., of Oklahoma City, a Universal circuit.

The called-for site of the structure is now occupied by a furniture store, which will be completely torn down with the exception of the side walls. The front facade is to be faced with "matt" finish terra cotta, the ornament and relief work to be in polychrome colors. Surmounting the main, or front wall, will be open bell towers, to be illuminated at night with hanging lanterns. The front will be 71 feet in height.

It is planned to make the central bay one large window, 17 feet wide and 30 feet high. The window is to be constructed of ornamental wrought iron and glazed with opalescent stained glass; behind the window will be lights that will add to the illumination in front. A large steel marquee, that will be a part of the main structure, will also be in front, and this, too, will be illuminated at night by many incandescent lights.

To be approximately 26 feet square and elaborately finished in marble flooring, colored tile wainscoting and ornamental plaster cornices and decorations, the lobby will have double doors at the front and back and at each side a shop or store.

Aisles will lead from the main foyer to the auditorium, and two main stairways will lead to the mezzanine and balcony. On the former there will be lounge rooms for men and women, smoking room and the manager's office; connecting the mezzanine with the balcony will be two ramps or inclines. There will be no posts in the balcony, as the whole will be supported by huge steel girders. The entire balcony, mezzanine and stairways will be of reinforced concrete.

Ornamental plaster, framed mirrors and wrought iron work of the latest design will decorate the interior. Air washers, motor-driven fans and diffusers will keep a fresh supply of air in circulation during warm weather, while in cold seasons a mushroom type of steam heating plant will keep a constant change of warm air. Indirect lighting will be employed around the proscenium opening, and will emanate from domes, pockets and chases, through ornamental grilles and from soft colored reflectors. The stage will be 25 feet wide. In the basement will be the heating equipment and drssing rooms. The stage floor is to be constructed of concrete, with 2 inches of matched floor finish overlaid. The seating capacity will be about 1,200.

There will be several store rooms in connection with the theatre.

The Strand Theatre, Council Bluffs, Ia., of which Morris Cohn is manager, was recently closed for several weeks while work was being done to the interior of the house.

One unusual feature to be added was a ballroom beautifully decorated, and located on top of the auditorium with a mezzanine effect. Much pains are being taken to make the theatre not unusually attractive but one which will be of advantage to the patrons of the theatre in many ways.

The Blaser-Vollmer Construction Company of Wichita, Kans., has been awarded the contract for the construction of the theatre at 2141 North Market street, Wichita, to be erected by the Stockman-Hartman Theatre Company according to plans drawn by Boller Brothers of Kansas City, Mo.

The theatre will contain the main floor and a balcony and be 50 by 140 feet.

New $775,000 Theatre Waterbury, Conn., May Open Around March 15

John Moriarity, Inc.'s new $775,000 motion picture theatre in Waterbury, Conn., now being erected and which will be leased to the Rialto Theatre Co. of Waterbury, will be opened to the public some time after March 1, probably around the middle of the month. The structure is going up on East Main Street.

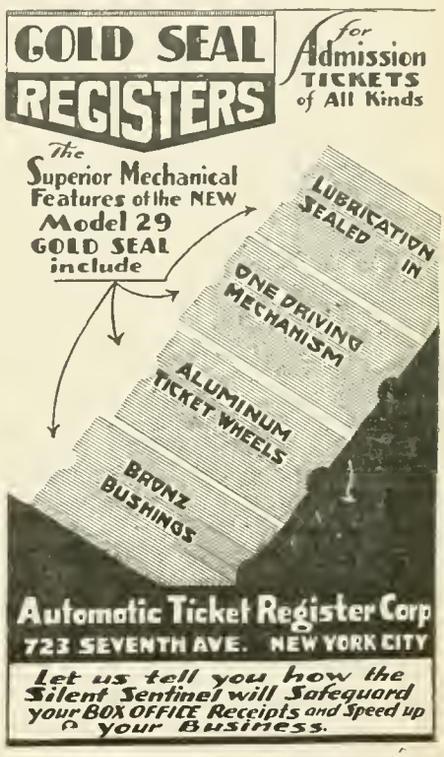
In about two weeks' time plastering work will be completed and the following five weeks, it is expected, will be taken up with the decoration of the building's interior. Christmas was to have been the date for the finish of the plaster work, but unforetold delays have hindered its completion.

At least 10 days will be occupied with the installation of the organ and to seat the 2,700 seats. Each seat must be riveted to the concrete floor.

The president of the theatre controlling company is Moe Mark, who was head of the firm that erected the Mark Strand Theatre on Broadway, New York. Joseph M. Levenson, of Boston, is vice-president and assistant treasurer. Bernhardt E. Hoffman, of New Haven, is treasurer.

Mr. Hoffman will have charge of the policies and programs. It has not been determined whether vaudeville, stage presentations or only films will be shown.

The new structure has a frontage of about 30 feet on East Main Street and runs back 140 feet. From the rear western to eastern boundary measures 170 feet.



New 2,000-Seater Will Be Erected in Owensboro, Ky.

A large and attractive theatre, to seat 2,000, will soon be a reality in Owensboro, Ky. It will be located on Fifth and Fredercia streets, and will be in addition to the string of houses already controlled and operated in that territory by the Strand Amusement Co.

Harry Matthews is manager in Owensboro of the Strand Amusement Co.

Construction Notes and Theatre Openings

The Jefferson Lafayette Theatres, Incorporated, of Charlottesville, Virginia, will begin in February the erection of a 1,000-seat house at the University of Virginia. Plans have been completed and contract will be let on or about January 5th. The theatre will cost approximately $125,000, and will contain all modern equipment.

Burbank Very Active

A high peak of production has been reached at the First National Burbank studio where all the stars and contract players are busy at work. Nine pictures are in various stages of production.

Join Cast

Joan Standing and Raymond Keane have joined the cast of Tiffany-Stahl's "Reputation."

Glyn Story in Talk

"Man and the Moment" is planned by First National as dialogue vehicle.

"Close Harmony"

Charles Roger's dialogue picture, "Close Harmony," will be filmed with Harry Green, vaudevillian, in support.

Contract Renewed

Loretta Young has had contract renewed by First National.

"Weary River" Dialogue

Tom Geraghty is composing dialogue for "Weary River."

Ralston for Jannings Film

Esther Ralston will be a Swiss peasant girl and wife of Jannings in new Alpine story. Robert Castle and Gary Cooper also cast.

Joe Henabery

Joseph Henabery has joined Columbia to direct.

Roach Directing

Hal Roach recently began directing new comedy with Ed Kennedy, Vivien Oakland, Charles Rogers, Nina Quartero.

New Vocation

Abel Baer, song writer for "Lucky Boy," has role in the Tiffany-Stahl film.

Titling

Julian Johnson has titled Parmount's "Wolf Song."

Carol Lombard

A graduate of Sennett school, Carol Lombard has role in M-G-M's "Dynamite."

In Work

Willard Mack has placed "Hunted," his own play, in work at M-G-M studio.

Choosing Cast

Russell Simpson, Margaret Livingston, George Fawcett, Black Craig have roles in "Innocents of Paris."

Eddie Dillon

Eddie Dillon, who first directed Bessie Love, appears with her in M-G-M "Broadway Melody."

"Hard at Work"

The above words were included in a message received from W. S. Van Dyke and "Pagan" unit recently at their location site in South Seas.

Paramount Writer

Patrick Kearney is now on the Paramount staff. He dramatized "Elmer Gantry."

Returning to Berlin

Dita Parlo, German actress, will leave Hollywood shortly for Berlin and will return to Paramount in early summer.

Wilcox Borrows Louis Wolheim

Louis Wolheim has been loaned by Caddo Productions to Herbert Wilcox of British and Dominions Films, Ltd. He will play the lead in "Wolves," the second production which Wilcox will make at Metropolitan Studios. Mickey Neilan is now completing "Fog," Wilcox' first American production. No director for "Wolves" has been signed as yet.

St. Clair to Direct Lloyd

Mal St. Clair has taken up the megaphone released by Ted Wilde in directing Harold Lloyd. Wilde resigned because of illness.

"The Cocoanuts"

Production on "The Cocoanuts," starring four Marx Brothers, as an all-talkie, is to begin on February 1 at Paramount's Long Island studio. Irving Berlin will write new songs for film version and George S. Kaufman, author of libretto, will sit in as advisor on picture.

"San Luis Rey"

"Bridge of San Luis Rey" went into production last week at M-G-M studio on Coast. Lily Damita will play role of Camila, Ernest Torrence will be Uncle Pio and Emily Fitzroy the Marquess. Jane Winton, Michael Vavitch and others have also been cast.

Ina Claire

Pathe's new star, Ina Claire, opened on Christmas night at Werba's Theatre in Brooklyn, in "The Lady of Newgate," written by Edwin Justus Mayer. It will come to Broadway for a run.

"Evangeline"

Henry Wadsworth Longfellow's poem will be filmed by Edwin Carewe as Dolores del Rio's next starring film for United Artists. Al Jolson is writing a theme song.

Powell Signs "Talkie" Contract

Paramount has signed William Powell to new contract which specifically provides for his services in talking films.

Brenon to Make "Lummox"

"Lummox" will be produced for United Artists by Herbert Brenon.

Reynes Joins Pathe Sound Unit

Muriee Reynes has joined Paul Bern production unit at Pathe studios on Coast, and will act in advisory capacity on a number of dialogue films.

New Lee Contract

A Christmas gift from Paramount was a contract signed last week by Rowland V. Lee.

With Jannings

Ann Brody, Paul Guertmann and Leone Lane last week joined the cast of Paramount's tentatively titled production, "A Tale of the Alps."

Titling

John Farrow is titling "Four Feathers" for Paramount, while Julian Johnson is writing the titles for the silent version of "Tong War."

To Write Dialogue

Tom Gibson has moved his typewriter to Pathe where he will write the dialogue for forthcoming Photophone pictures, his first assignment being "Noisy Neighbors."

From Vaudeville

Harry Green, a figure on the vaudeville and musical comedy stage, has signed with Paramount, and will play in "Close Harmony."

Joins Cast

Frank Lackteen has joined the cast of "The Fire Detectives," his tenth serial for Pathe.

Russian Supervisor

Captain Nicholas Kolbianski, formerly of the Russian Imperial Guards in St. Petersburg, is acting as technical director of all of the Russian sequences for "The Leatherneck," at the Pathe studio.

New Role

Louise Fazenda will play a part in First National's "Hot Stuff." William Bakewell has the male lead in this collegiate story.

Promoted to Directorship

Ralph Dawson has been promoted to a full-fledged directorship by Al Rockett, of First National. Dawson was formerly a cutter at Warner Brothers and the megaphone is the reward of his past work as film editor. His last work in that capacity was "Desert Song." His first assignment has not been determined as yet.

"White Collars" Cast

Conrad Nagel, Bessie Love, Leila Hyams, and Robert Ober will be featured in "White Collars," an all-talker, which William De Mille will direct for M-G-M.

In the "Talkies" too

The fidelity of sound reproduction with motion pictures is affected by every variation in the film — be it ever so slight.

That is why, in the "Talkies" too, Eastman film excels. The great quantities in which it is produced, the strict supervision constantly exercised — the resulting uniformity from roll to roll, day to day, year to year — these factors of Eastman film manufacture are of first importance to the newest development of the art.

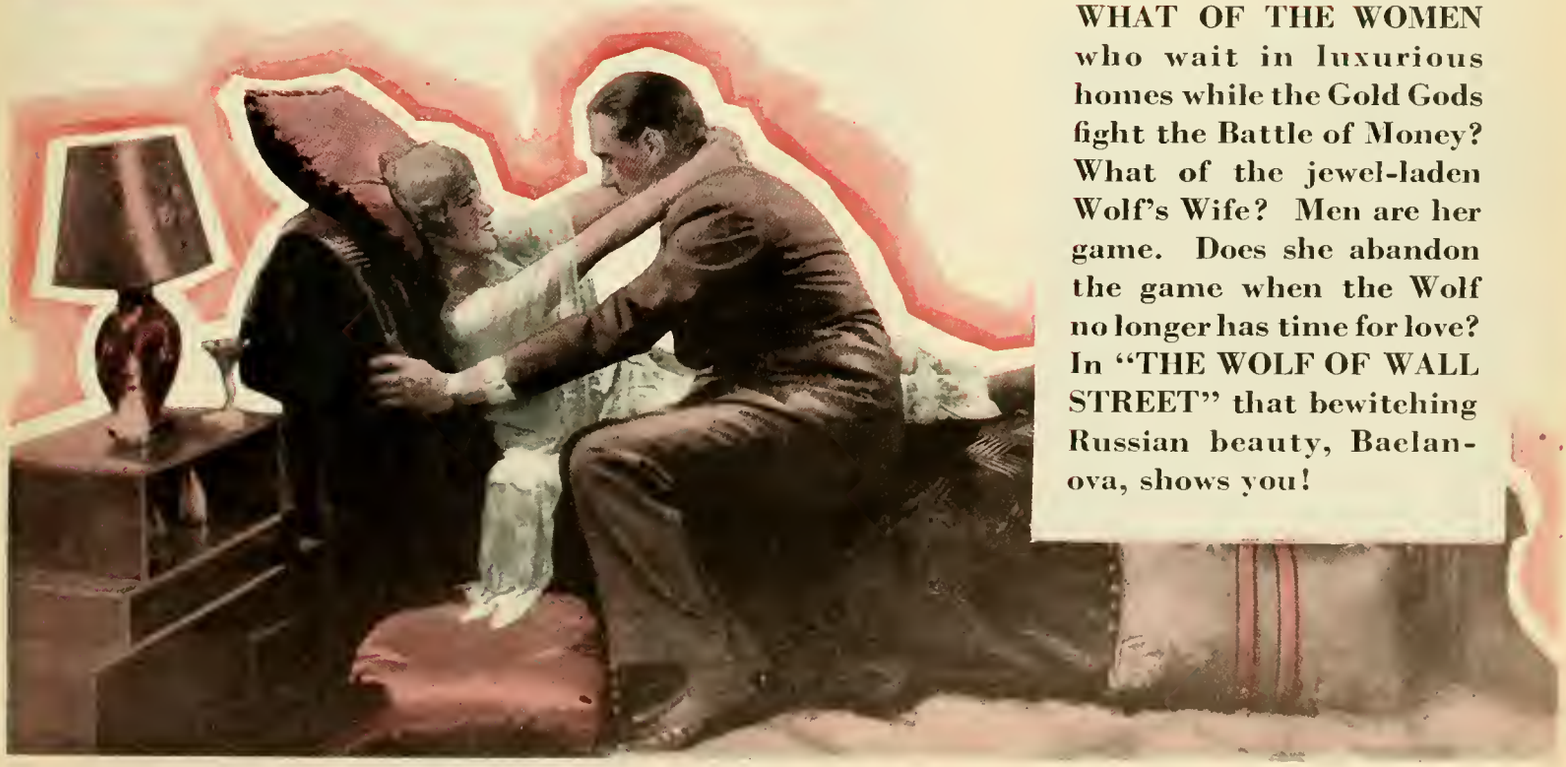
"THE WOLF OF WALL STREET"



The Wolf

His Wife

WHAT OF THE WOMEN who wait in luxurious homes while the Gold Gods fight the Battle of Money? What of the jewel-laden Wolf's Wife? Men are her game. Does she abandon the game when the Wolf no longer has time for love? In "THE WOLF OF WALL STREET" that bewitching Russian beauty, Baclanova, shows you!

THE WOLF ON THE SCENT! George Bancroft, star of "Underworld" and "Docks of New York", gives his greatest performance.

DANGEROUS BUT NICE. While The Wolf battles for money, his wife dallies with the polished charms of Paul Lukas. Then the fateful day—!

RUTHLESS IN HIS WRATH. The brute strength of the lion and the cunning of the beast that gives him his nickname—you'll love The Wolf.

WHERE MILLIONS ARE WON AND LOST. All the frenzied excitement of the Stock Exchange is accurately portrayed. Battleground of the money monarchs. Real, fascinating! You hear as well as see it all!

Opening long run engagements at the Rialto, New York, and everywhere. Nationally advertised in 700 newspapers, Saturday Evening Post, etc. to 120,000,000 people! "THE WOLF OF WALL STREET" and most of the other knockouts AVAILABLE SILENT AS WELL AS TALKING!

THE FAITHLESS WIFE AT BAY! Surprised in her love nest, she fights with all her dangerous charms to win back her husband. A revelation!

TERRIBLE TITAN OF THE TICKER. Only two things he loves—the race for gold and the arms of his beautiful wife. His enemies attack both!

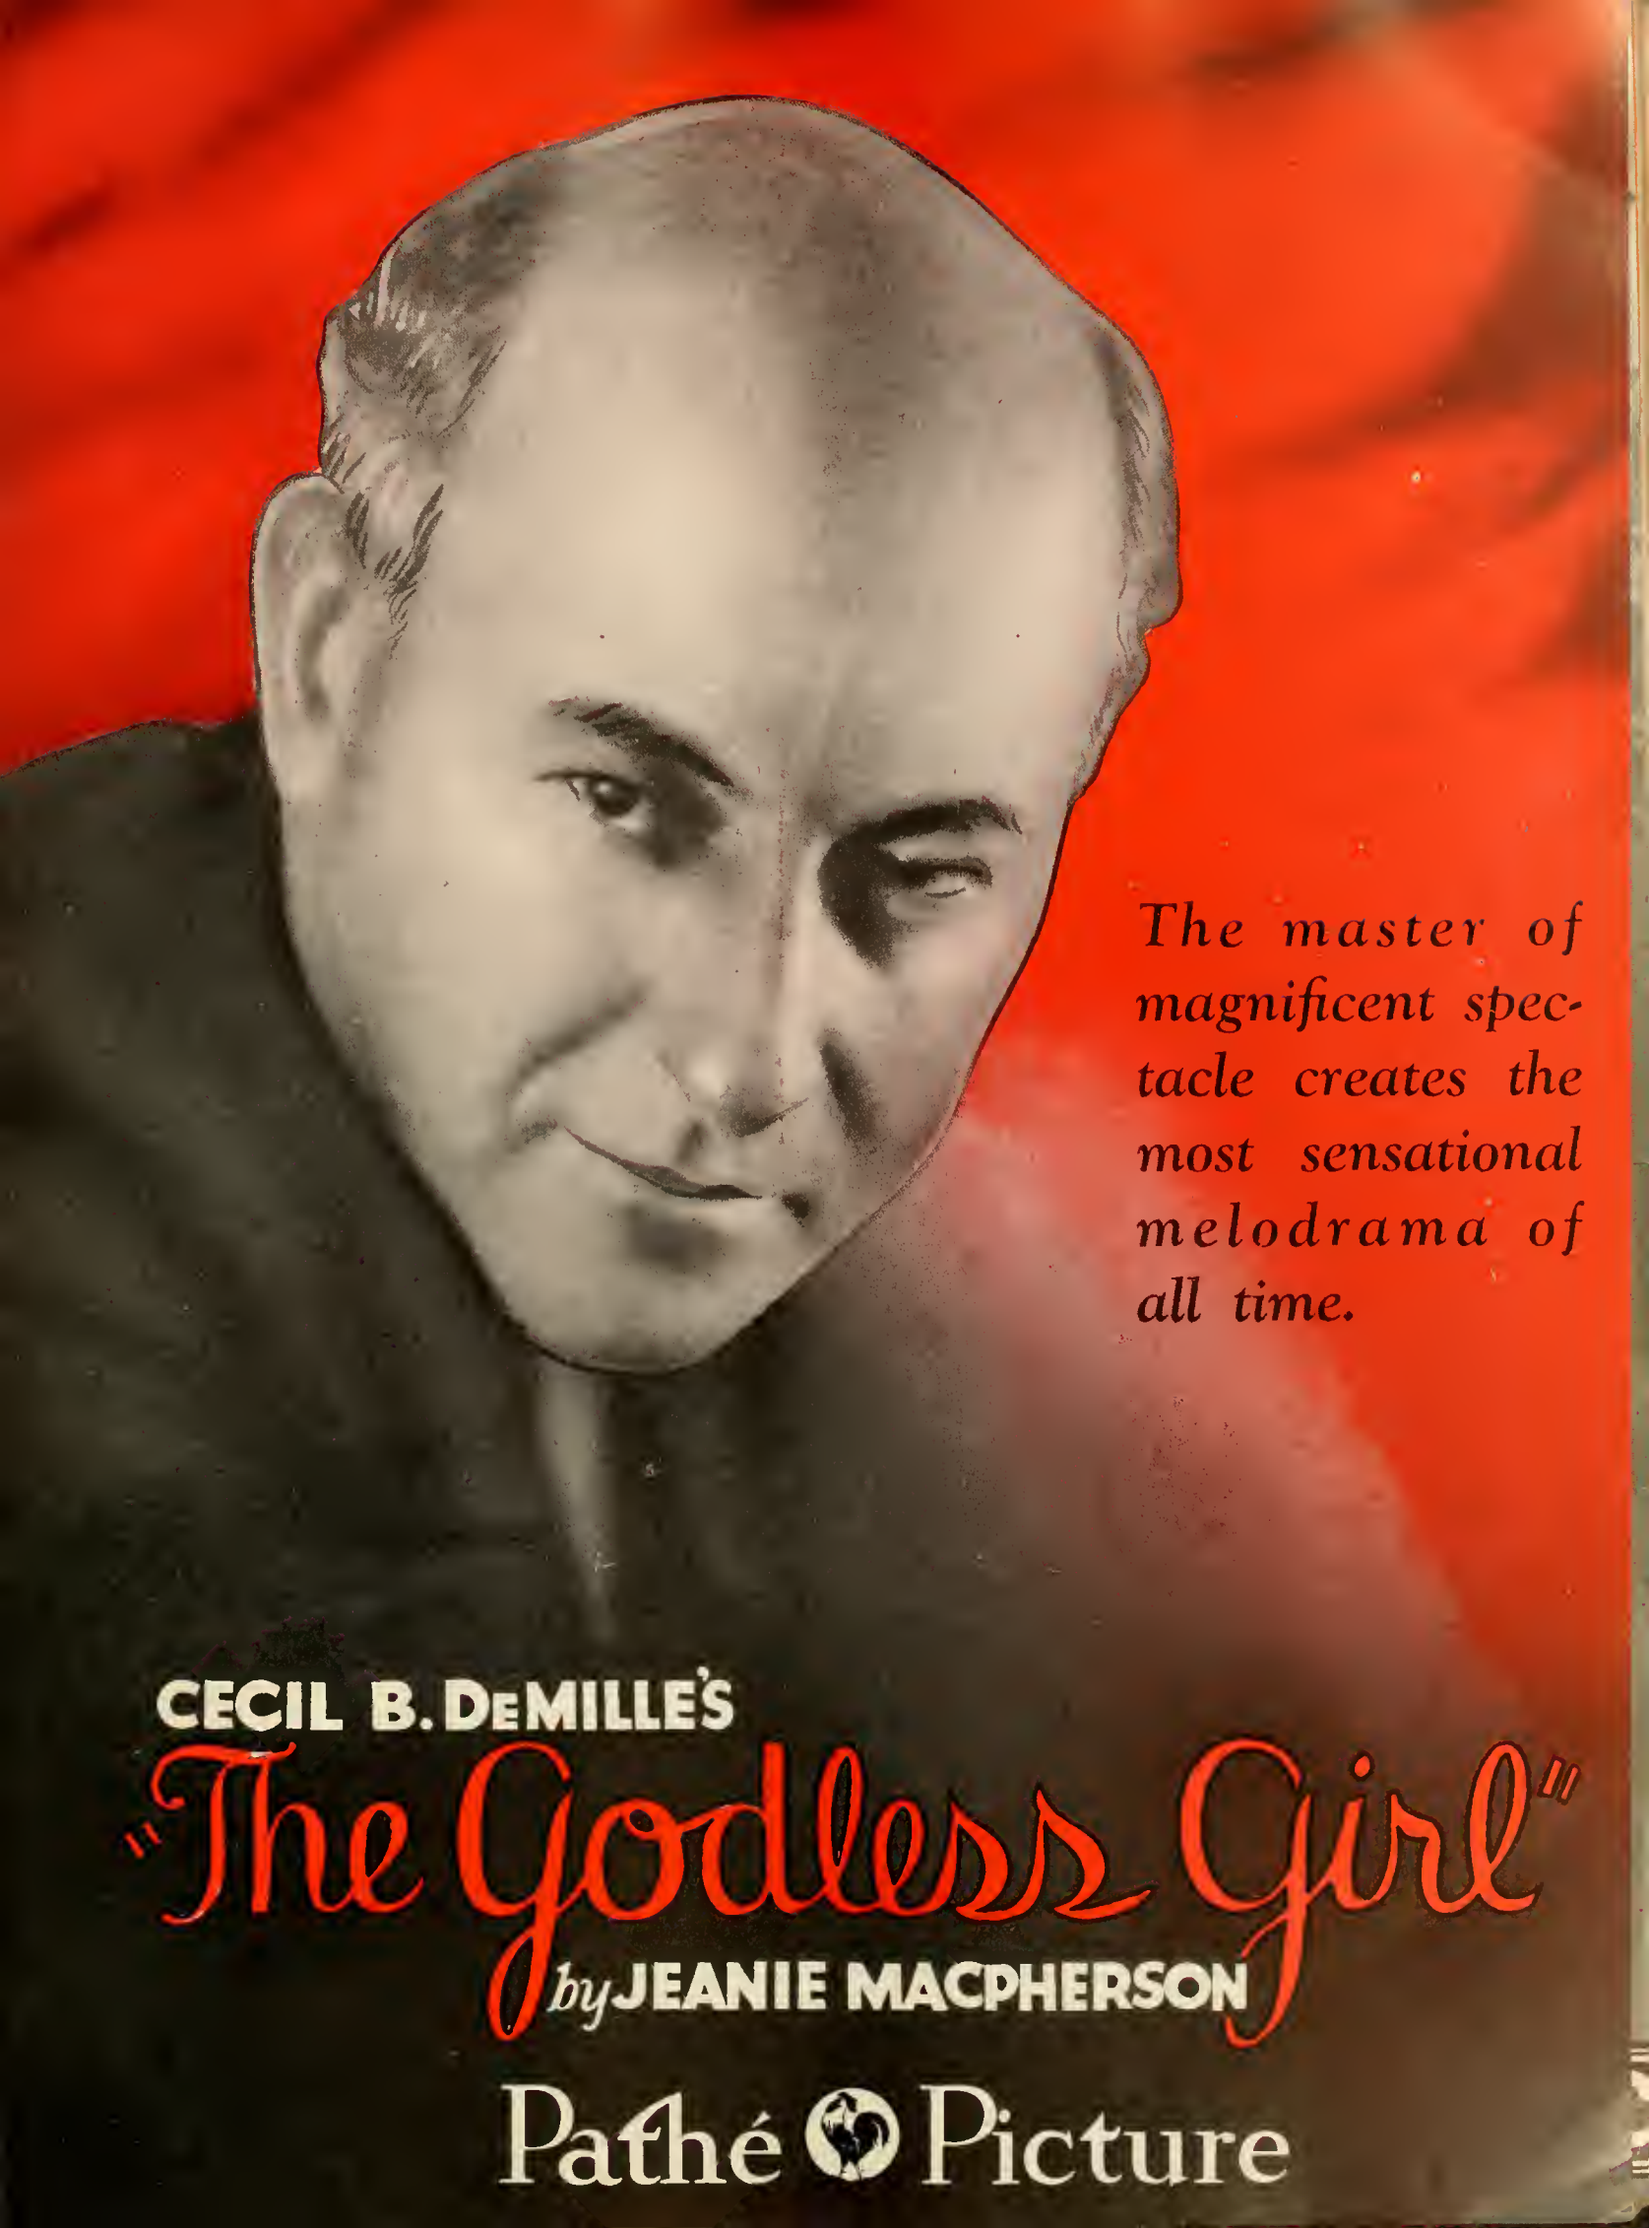
"YOU ARE THE REAL SUCKER!" Nancy Carroll cries. "Your wife is upstairs in the arms of your best friend. I dare you to go up and see!"

LINCOLN

FEBRUARY TWELVE

1809 1865

Pathe is honored by the opportunity for this contribution to the new art of sound pictures.



George Billings, the screen's most able interpreter of Abraham Lincoln, appears in an extraordinarily impressive recital of the Gettysburg address. A gifted quartette sings a famous soldier song of the Civil War.

The picture presents a dramatically effective review of the landmarks of Lincoln's career.

This production, occupying ten minutes of screen time, is released for the week of February 10, 1929.

The musical direction is by Mr. Josiah Zuro—the recording by the R. C. A. Photophone System.

Spontaneous Response to the Announcement of the New Model Western Electric Sound Equipment for Small Theatres

"Electrical Research Products, Inc., takes pleasure in announcing the development of a standard Western Electric Sound equipment specially adapted for small theatres.

"We are prepared to accept orders now for these equipments for installation after June 1, 1929 for either Vitaphone or Movietone productions only, at a price of $5,500 including installation, and for dual equipment for both Vitaphone and Movietone at a price of $7,000 including installation."

The foregoing announcement was made through the trade press on Jan. 10. Within the few days which have elapsed a substantial number of orders have been placed with us both by chain operators and by individual theatre owners.

This spontaneous response confirms our conviction that discriminating small theatre owners have been awaiting moderately priced sound equipment of the same reliable quality as that now rendering service in the large first run houses.

In developing the new apparatus Western Electric engineers have built on the successful experience in designing, making, installing and servicing equipment now in use in more than a thousand theatres. The result is a sound reproducing system of equal electrical quality and mechanical durability. In a word, it is Western Electric.

This organization pledges its continued co-operation with producers and exhibitors alike. It will maintain the present high quality of its apparatus, and its nationwide technical staff is at the service of the entire industry.

The Press and the Screen

A Remarkable Demonstration for the Freedom of Speech

By William A. Johnston

THE outpouring of vigorous expressions from newspaper publishers and editors in support of free speech on the screen has now assumed nation-wide proportions. Evoked by the issue in the Pathe case against the New York Censor Board, this mobilization of powerful newspaper influence is, we believe, unrivaled in the history of the industry.

We have had the honor of being the medium through which this vital question was called to the attention of more than 300 publishers; and the response has been so remarkable that we may fairly say that the press, in the great majority, militantly champions the right of the screen to talk, without being hamstrung by the follies and dangers of political censorship.

The issue is, of course, yet to be fought out to a final conclusion in the courts. But in the great court of public opinions, as represented by newspaper thought, it has already been decided squarely and vigorously in favor of the Constitutional rights of free speech.

The industry itself, we are sure, feels grateful for and proud of so great a manifestation of good-will. For the Pathe case is a fight on behalf of all the screen world. And this point has been immediately recognized by newspapers throughout the country.

Moreover, the intelligent newspapers of America has been quick to see this incontrovertible fact: that if the screen is not to be allowed freedom of speech, subject only to the same restrictions laid upon press and individual, then the Constitutional guarantees as expressed in the Bill of Rights are placed in jeopardy. The circle of bureaucratic power might be easily widened, once there is an entering wedge. And the danger would then confront all forms of expression.

So the industry's fight for freedom of speech is in behalf of itself, to be sure; but, looked at in a still broader sense, it is being waged also in behalf of all forms of publication, of which the screen is only one.

For the first time, then, the vital interests of press and motion picture become clearly and unmistakably the same. And this is attested to, we think, in the splendid way in which newspaper editors and owners have come to the defense of the freedom of the talking picture.

We publish in this issue further expressions of leaders of the newspaper world. The work will go on. But, at this moment, publishers and editors who have declared themselves against censorship, in wires and letters to us, command an audience of no less than 15,500,000 readers.

This is magnificent testimony to the standing of the motion picture industry in the eyes of the press of the country. It means that the screen is fully recognized as a great medium of expression for which the press demands, as regards freedom of speech, the same rights given it under the Constitution.

So we say that such a mobilization of vigorous sentiment actually marks an epoch in the industry's history; and testifies to the great merit of the fight that Pathe is making, in behalf of the whole picture world, for liberty.

Speaking Editorially

An Appreciation

"IT would seem that the entire nation is watching the fight that the Pathe organization is making in the courts to protect the right to free speech on the screen. Motion Picture News is to be congratulated on its tremendously progressive step and the unusual initiative displayed in the campaign to arouse the editors and the daily press of the country to the menace to the right of free speech that underlies the attitude of the New York State Board of Motion Picture Censors in regard to the talking picture.

"The whole campaign is one that is a revelation in trade journalism in the motion picture industry, and the fact that Motion Picture News is making this fight for a constitutional right a matter of nationwide interest through arousing the daily press of America, makes it a fight of the entire industry and not that of a single company. The whole Pathe organization is highly appreciative of the assistance that Motion Picture News is enlising for it in this fight."

(Signed) COLVIN W. BROWN,
Executive Vice-President Pathe.

An Example for Every Film Executive

A RUMOR persisted last week that an important executive for one of the major companies was about to resign his position and join a large commercial concern in another field.

The executive was away on a trip, and MOTION PICTURE NEWS telegraphed him. He replied that the rumor was without foundation, and asked that even his denial be kept confidential. His explanation of this request was that publication of his statement that the report was untrue would be read by many of the field sales force of his company, and that they, unfamiliar with the frequency of rumors in New York, might find cause for worry.

This was not merely solicitude by the executive in question for the peace of mind of his company's sales force. It was plain horse sense of a kind that is needed in great quantities throughout the business.

Why keep the men on the firing line constantly upset and worried about the security of their jobs by unfounded rumors that this or that executive is resigning, with a successor who may make many changes? Branch managers and salesmen have enough of trouble and worry in trying to make their sales quotas, without destroying their confidence in the permanence of the executives whose positions give them the authority to fire and hire.

In this particular case two other trade papers were asked, with MOTION PICTURE NEWS, not to publish the rumor and denial, and it is greatly to the credit of their good editorial sense that the request was granted.

The confidence, enthusiasm and ability of the selling personnel of the motion picture industry should be protected by every legitimate means against disturbing and costly rumors.

A Significant Anniversary

THE National Board of Review of Motion Pictures is observing its twentieth anniversary at its annual meeting in New York this week. We are glad to say a word in commendation of the constructive work done by the Board, over this long period, in behalf of the screen.

With "Selection, not Censorship" as its keynote, the Board of Review has stood, and stands, squarely against political censorship. It classifies, and selects, pictures; it does not prescribe. In its own words: "The National Board is not a repressionist, nor dictatorial, nor propagandist group in the region of morals. This organiaztion has no brief for the reform group. It takes the part of no radical coterie. It threatens neither the public nor the producers of motion pictures with the thunderbolts of Jove. It finds its rule of practice in American common sense."

It enlists the best thought of members in every State in the Union, and stimulates the production and use of selected pictures, without, of course, having anything to do with their commercial exploitation.

Without blare of trumpets, the National Board goes right along, year after year, doing a very necessary and vital work. The legend, "Passed by the National Board of Review," is as familiar to picture patrons as the main title of a film itself.

On its twentieth anniversary, the organization has every reason to be proud of the splendid service it has rendered the cause of the motion picture.

Myers Asks Federal Action on Sound Situation; Charges Unfair Practices

ALLIED'S OPENING GUN

Many Reforms Demanded by New Exhibitor Leader; Wants Arbitration Rules Changed

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23.—Elimination of various practices deemed unfair to exhibitors, either voluntarily or by Government action, was demanded this week by Abram F. Myers, president and general counsel of the Allied States Association of Motion Picture Exhibitors, in a formal statement setting forth the policy and outlining the program of the organization.

Changes in methods of booking pictures, adoption of interchangeability for sound equipment, amendment of the arbitration rules and action with respect to the music tax are the principal features discussed by Mr. Myers. Unless the reforms demanded by the exhibitors are brought about by voluntary action and negotiation, he warns, machinery of the Federal Government will be invoked to bring them about.

Warning is given the producers that they must not seek to interfere with the activities of the exhibitors' association. Producers have often expressed the hope that the exhibitors would perfect a strong organization with which they might deal, it is pointed out, and their attitude toward the new association will be viewed in the light of these expressions. Allied States will not seek to meddle in the internal affairs of any other branch of the industry; on the other hand it will not tolerate any interference by other branches with its own affairs, says the statement.

For Free Selection

The new organization is committed to the free selection of films as contemplated in the Brookhart Bill, but it will be satisfied if this can be worked out by negotiation instead of by law. Those provisions of the bill which would make the Federal Trade Commission an arbitrator of disagreements within the industry are also approved by the organization in the event that the industry itself cannot settle its own problems.

A complete study is to be made of the arbitration situation in the motion picture industry, one of the issues in the pending Paramount case, and if the facts justify

Parallel With M. P. Patents Case Is Alleged By Myers

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23.—The Department of Justice was asked this week by Abram F. Myers, President of the Allied States, to take prompt action with respect to allegedly unfair contracts restricting the use of sound equipment and pictures. Contracts and other information gathered by Mr. Myers were submitted to support his contention that the agreements between a sound equipment manufacturer and film producers were illegal.

The agreement, according to Myers, providing that sound films produced by certain companies shall not be leased for reproduction on machines not made or approved by the sound equipment manufacturer, gives theatres having approved equipment an incalculable advantage over those that have not.

"From such study as I have been able to give the matter," Myers declared, "I have concluded that the restrictions in question are clearly outside the power of the parties to impose. I can see no substantial difference between such restrictions and the ones which were held illegal in the suits brought by the government against the Motion Picture Patents Company and the United Shoe Machinery Company."

Wisconsin Ends In a Deadlock On Affiliation

Woodhull and Steffes Offer Arguments to Allied and M.P.T.O.A.

A five hour session of heated controversy at the M. P. T. O. of Wisconsin annual convention in Milwaukee on Wednesday as to affiliation, resulted in a deadlock. "Pete" Woodhull, president of the National M. P. T. O. organization engaged in debate with Al Steffes, representing Allied States. The opposing sides compromised on a meeting of the city organization of Motion Picture Theatre Owners to be held on Wednesday, January 30, at which time decision will be made as to affiliation of the city organization.

This decision will materially affect the final action of the State organization and it is generally believed that the State will follow the footsteps of the city group. Definite action on the part of the State M.P.T.O. was postponed. Abram F. Myers, head of Allied States, was not present at the meeting. The convention was definitely closed to the representatives of trade papers.

Wampas Frolic

Charles Judels is now staging the annual Wampas Frolic, which is slated for the Shrine Auditorium on February 12. This year's frolic will consist of a show only, no dance being held in conjunction.

Michigan Votes Affiliation With Allied States

Exhibitors Confirm Action of Board of Directors at Detroit Meeting

The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Michigan, at a session held in Detroit on Wednesday of this week, voted to confirm the action of its board of directors who previously had voted to join the Allied States Association, headed by Abram F. Myers.

The vote brought out the greatest manifestation of interest that has been seen in connection with an issue here for a long time. There were over 400 ballots sent out and all but 52 were returned. Of these 249 voted to affiliate with Allied and 101 voted against such affiliation. Previously the board of directors had voted 12 to 3 in favor of the move.

At the meeting of the board of directors all were present with the exception of Messrs. Butterfield, Johnson and De Lodder. The board voted unanimously to reimburse Ritter, Cross and Riehey on their pledge of $10,000 to Allied States for the first year.

Among the directors who attended the session were: Porter, Hall, Niebs, Ritter, Eiseman, Trendle, Reynolds, Ackerman, Wetsman, Kopping and Kirchuer.

The vote on the matter of affiliation is held to prove that there is nothing in the way of a serious split which had been rumored in the ranks of the Michigan organization.

Ziegfeld Will Produce Follies As Own Picture

Promises $3,000,000 Film With Stars of Past and Present Shows

Florenz Ziegfeld is to make his own Movietone production of his Ziegfeld Follies and he will start work on it as soon as he has completed his present stage production of "East Is West." Ziegfeld made the announcement to his executive staff during the week.

In the making of the "Follies," Ziegfeld will use all his stars with whom he holds contracts and will enlist the services of as many as possible of the famous veterans of past "Follies," including both principals and beauties, many of whom began their stellar careers with him.

In his communication from Palm Beach Ziegfeld said in part:

"I will myself produce the genuine 'Follies' in sound pictures and show up all the imitations. My 'Follies' girls alone will make the record a masterpiece with their beauty.

"I will spend $3,000,000 to make my Movietone 'Follies' the perfect record of the perfect revue that has so many ineffective imitators."

The Ziegfeld staff is now communicating with the long list of celebrated artists and beauties who appeared in various editions of the "Ziegfeld Follies." Many of the former Ziegfeld girls are now stars in their own right, the screen having been especially hospitable to them. Ziegfeld promises that the cast and chorus of his Movietone "Follies" will be the largest, cleverest, costliest, most captivating group of entertainers ever assembled in one feature picture.

State Troopers to Check Up On "Wild Cat" Films

State Troopers and other peace officers attending the New York State School for Police at Troy, were given a talk last week by George S. Hall, of the motion picture division of the State Department of Education.

Mr. Hall took as his subject "Inspection of Motion Picture Films." Troopers were asked to inspect carefully the seals and permits on all films, especially in small town theatres as a means of preventing the showing of "Wild Cat" films in this state.

Changes in "U" Chain Ranks

A shifting of Universal Chain Theatrical managers in Indianapolis and Cleveland occurred last week. Charles Loewenberg has been assigned the management of the Rivoli and Granada Theatres in Indianapolis, replacing Willis Grist, who has been transferred to the Hilliard Square Theatre, Cleveland.

Film Exports at High Level in October

EXPORT trade in motion pictures in October, with shipments aggregating 30,438,408 feet valued at $796,510, reached the highest level it has touched since last March when 29,345,061 feet valued at $810,860 were exported, according to figures just compiled by the Department of Commerce, Washington, D. C.

Shipments during the month included 23,034,792 feet of positive film valued at $550,770; 472,400 feet of negatives valued at $95,092 and 6,531,216 feet of raw stock valued at $150,648. Our largest market for positive film in October was Australia, to which we shipped 2,572,901 feet, followed by Germany with 1,678,807 feet. Argentina, Brazil and the United Kingdom also each took more than 1,000,000 feet.

Second Code of Ethics Session Not Likely Soon

Pending Litigation Defers Action Until Case Is Decided

Because of complications that have arisen it is not likely that the Federal Trade Commission will call a second Code of Ethics conference with the motion picture industry for some time to come despite the fact that the time allotted for the test period from the first conference has expired.

The principal reason for delaying the holding of a second conference is pending litigation. This litigation directly concerns points adopted at the last conference and the Commission figures these should be disposed of before additional problems are taken up. Perhaps nothing further will be done until the courts here have acted upon the issues in the case against Paramount.

Another thing that defers matters somewhat is that Abram F. Myers, who presided at the last Trade Practice Conference has severed his connection with the Commission and his successor has not yet been named.

In its December report the Commission states that its case in the Circuit Court of Appeals in New York to enforce its "cease and desist" order against Paramount awaits printing of the transcript, briefing and argument. It will probably be some time before the matter is disposed of.

Paramount and Fox Plan Sequels to Old Successes

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, Jan. 24.—Sequels to outstanding pictures of three or four years ago are being prepared by both Fox and Paramount. The former will make "The Cock-Eyed World," a sequel to "What Price Glory"; while Paramount has announced "Ten Years After" as a follow up on "Wings." Raoul Walsh will direct "The Cock-Eyed World"; William Wellman is slated to make "Ten Years After."

Warners Install Film Recording; Coast Reports

Indications Point to Plan of Gradual Switch in Sound Systems

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, Jan. 24.—Indications point to Warner Brothers gradually replacing the disc system of sound recording in favor of the film track method of recording. Equipment for the latter system was installed at the Warner studio this week. The addition of this equipment will enable the company to shoot by either the disc or film process.

The film method allows a wide range of flexibility and latitude in producing, especially on running shots and exterior scenes. The switch over to the sound-on-film method from the present disc would naturally be gradual and probably take nearly a year, but a person close to the situation is authority for the information that this plan will be carried out for Warner and First National productions. The Vitaphone trade mark, naturally, will be retained due to the value given it by its wide publicity.

Harry Warner, head of Warner Bros., at his New York office declared that he knew nothing about plans to use the film track system instead of the discs, and furthermore that he was not interested in the technicalities of production so long as the company's studios produced results, when a Motion Picture News representative called his attention to the above report from the coast. "In technical matters," he said, "I don't know what they are doing at the studio. All I want from the studios are pictures that will succeed as popular entertainment in the theatres. The methods, systems or technics by which that end be attained I am no more interested in than the public itself, which is interested only in entertainment values."

Kent Departs Hollywood After Completing Plans

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, Jan. 24.—Sidney Kent departed Los Angeles today after having spent two weeks at the Paramount Hollywood studios. He devoted much of his time while here to lining up next season's sales and releasing campaign.

RKO Starts New $250,000 Coast Building Program

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, Jan. 24.—A new construction program to cost $250,000 was started on the RKO Studios, (formerly F B O) last week. All existing stages are to be sound-proofed, and a new stage devoted exclusively to sound, erected. Three new projection rooms, adapted for sound uses, also will be included.

Newspapers Militant in Support of Fight for Free Speech on Screen

CENSORSHIP CONDEMNED

List of Publishers Backing Pathe Battle for Talkie Freedom Growing

IMPORTANT additions to the rapidly growing list of newspaper publishers and editors who are vigorously supporting free speech on the screen were made this week in wires and letters to MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

This issue was brought out into the open by Pathe in its fight against the New York State Censor Board, on behalf of the whole industry, and has been called to the attention of more than 300 newspaper executives by MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

Many of the most important newspapers in the country are now, through editorials and the great influence of their owners or editors, squarely against autocratic and bureaucratic powers over what the picture theatre patrons may and may not hear on the screen.

The number of readers served by these newspaper organizations has now reached the total of 15,597,011. In addition to those quoted this week editors or publishers of the following have previously declared themselves against the censorship of speech on the screen:

The Hearst newspapers; the Scripps-Howard newspapers; the Brush-Moore Newspapers, Inc.; Los Angeles "Times"; Portland "Oregonian"; St. Louis "Post-Dispatch"; Ann Arbor "Daily News"; "Oklahoman"; Oklahoma City "Times"; Oklahoma City "Daily News"; Des Moines "Register"; Des Moines "Tribune-Capital"; Kansas City "Journal"; Kansas City "Post"; Kansas City "Star"; "Evening Huronite" (S. D.); Akron "Beacon-Journal"; Birmingham "Age-Herald" and "News"; Montgomery, Ala., "Advertiser"; "The American Mercury."

Censorship of sound by statute is sought by the state censor boards of Ohio and Kansas.

This new double-barrelled threat to the freedom of speech on the screen became known this week. In Ohio, the board has been censoring sound productions, in accordance with authority from the Attorney-General. Numerous controversies have resulted.

The Kansas bill, which would provide censorship of all spoken lines in talking pictures, has already been introduced. A measure to levy an amusement tax on picture houses has also been presented. Kansas City daily newspapers are bitterly opposed to both measures.

JULIAN S. MASON,
Editor,
New York Evening Post

I believe that in certain extreme offences against public decency the public must defend itself, whether these offences are on the stage, in the newspapers, in the movies or in the talkies. I believe that this power is usually most wisely exercised by prompt and ruthless action by the police. I am decidedly interested in your fight; first, because I am opposed to censorship except in the definite and necessary way which I have outlined above. Indeed, if it came to a choice between the evil of free speech and the evils of censorship, I would go without any censorship whatever. Second, I am opposed to censorship in the particular point raised by your case, because it is self-evidently merely a dangerous and familiar effort to grab power on the part of a bureaucracy.

FREDERICK E. MURPHY,
Publisher,
Minneapolis Tribune

I firmly believe that the reasoning brought to bear in justification of a censorship of the talking movies is just the same reasoning that could be brought to bear for a censorship of free speech. It is the belief of a great majority of the people in the United States that a censorship of free speech would be intolerable and I am of the opinion that a censorship of speech in the movies would only be but a preliminary step toward the attainment of a censorship on all speech. For this reason I am unalterably opposed to it.

HAROLD C. PLACE,
Editor,
Toledo News-Bee

Permit me to commend you for the fight you are making to prevent censorship authorities from extending their autocratic powers. Censorship, even at its best, is widely abused. The attempt to censor the talking movie picture is simply another step in the process of confining freedom of speech, freedom of thought and fundamental liberties. I think it is not only unconstitutional but ought to be vigorously combated.

HOWER GUCK,
General Manager,
San Francisco Examiner

It seems to me an obvious fact that freedom of speech and freedom of press are constitutional rights restricted only by proper regard for decency and good taste. There can be no actual difference between talking pictures and talking actors. One should have identical rights with the other.

BOYD GURLEY,
Editor,
Indianapolis Times

Any censorship violates the real spirit of America. If it is legal to censor a talking movie, it is also legal to censor the printed word or the spoken speech. Censorship is abhorrent to every lover of liberty. We are not a nation of children.

"U" Will Test Silent Against Talkie Version

Simultaneous Showings for "Broadway"; Dialogue for "Show Boat"

As reported exclusively in last week's issue of MOTION PICTURE NEWS, Universal has concluded a deal with Florenz Ziegfeld whereby the picture company obtained the right to reproduce in the screen version of "Show Boat" all of the Ziegfeld material in the stage version.

Carl Laemmle had previously purchased the silent picture rights to the Broadway production and that version of the picture had been completed. This week Universal started remaking the film with dialogue, music and sound effects. These portions will be made at the Ziegfeld Theatre in New York. Helen Morgan will sing two songs, Jules Bledsoe will sing "Old Man River" and one other and Aunt Jemima, with a chorus of thirty Negro voices, will sing the theme song. Mr. Ziegfeld will personally supervise the making of the dialogue. A. B. Heath has been recalled from Hollywood and will supervise the Movietone production.

Another important decision made by Mr. Laemmle is to test whether the public prefers talking pictures to silent productions. He will do this by releasing both the synchronized and silent versions of "Broadway" and run them simultaneously in New York. The release is at present scheduled for April, with a strong possibility of postponement.

Laemmle has written Will Hays offering to make this $2,000,000 investment an experiment at the mercy of public judgment. He asks Mr. Hays to appoint a committee of critics to see both productions and report both their own opinions and the reaction of the public. Under the plan the silent version and the talking release will play in direct opposition to each other.

Beery to Leave Paramount When Contract Expires

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, Jan. 24.—Wallace Beery is leaving Paramount at the expiration of the optional period of his contract in May. It is understood he draws $3,500 weekly and studio executives are said to feel this amount is not warranted in view of the limited number of suitable parts for the actor on the company production schedule of talking pictures for the coming year.

Alice White in "B'way Babies"

"Broadway Babies," the new title for Alice White starring First National vehicle to follow "Hot Stuff," and formerly called "Broadway Musketeers," is being placed into continuity form by Monte Katterjohn and will be directed by Mervyn LeRoy.

Goe Wins Appointment by Tiffany-Stahl

CARL J. GOE has been named assistant general sales manager of Tiffany-Stahl by Oscar Hanson. He has been placed in charge of the contract department.

Mr. Goe has had wide experience in the film industry following a career in the advertising and banking fields. He joined First National as a salesman and later occupied various executive positions with that company for a period of four years. He then joined FBO as assistant to Harry Berman and Lee Marcus. Later he was with Associated Exhibitors as assistant general manager of sales. At the time of the consolidation with Pathe he became assistant to the Pathe feature sales manager.

First National to Handle Warner Pictures Abroad

Gus Schlesinger Heads New Executives to Operate in Foreign Fields

By an arrangement just completed, First National will handle the distribution abroad of Warner Bros. and Vitaphone pictures as well as their own. There will be an amalgamation in all countries with the exception of England and at the present time, Germany. The alliance covers interests and sales activities in France, Switzerland, Belgium, Hungary, Mexico, Australia, Norway, Sweden, Denmark and Dutch East Indies.

Herman Starr, president of First National, anounced that Gus S. Schlesinger is appointed foreign general manager of First National with headquarters in Berlin. H. A. Bandy, formerly foreign sales manager of First National, now becomes manager of foreign distribution with headquarters in New York. Arthur Clavering, Warner managing director in England, will supervise First National sales in that country.

Robert Schless, Warner managing director in France, will take charge of Warner-First National operations in France, Belgium and Switzerland, and Harry J. Cohen will be assistant to Mr. Schlesinger and known as assistant foreign manager, operating abroad.

It is planned to inaugurate Vitaphone in all parts of the world upon Mr. Schlesinger's return to Europe. He is scheduled to sail on the Leviathan February 6.

Dix at "Redskin" Premiere

Richard Dix, the Paramount star who has been in the hospital for the past few days recovering from bronchitis, will attend the premiere of "Redskin," his own film, when it opens at the N. Y. Criterion this Saturday evening. Victor Schertzinger, William Powell and Nancy Carroll will also be present.

Charges Against Pathe Dismissed By Government

Federal Trade Commission Says Case Doesn't Call for Action

Declaring that "The facts developed did not call for the exercise of the remedial powers granted by law to this commission," the Federal Trade Commission, Washington, D. C., has dismissed the application for a complaint against Pathe.

The brief, written by Lewis Innerarity, secretary and attorney of Pathe, and filed by Pathe with the Federal Trade Commission, points out that "block booking," which was the gist of the charge against Pathe, is but a trade term for the selling of pictures in quantities or selling pictures at wholesale.. Pathe argued that it was entirely within its rights in refusing to sell a single picture for the same price it would ask for a group of two or more; and that any prohibition against motion picture producers and distributors engaging in wholesale business, leaving all other kinds and classes to indulge in it freely, would be unconstitutional and discriminatory.

In its brief, Pathe claims the right to say to those to whom it licenses its motion pictures that they may have the Pathe product only on the terms proposed by Pathe and no other. It claims the right to dispose of its product "entirely untrammeled by any agreement, understanding, combination or otherwise."

The Pathe brief also contends "unless the motion picture industry is to be classified as quasi-public in its nature, there is no great obligation resting upon any of the many private business enterprises engaged therein to merchandise their product with a view of satisfying any public demand."

Silent Version Of M-G-M Film Is Decided Upon

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, Jan. 24.—M-G-M has decided to release a silent version of "Broadway Melody," although the picture was shot from the Movietone angle only. Titles have been injected for the silent version and it is said the film shapes up well in this version despite the many singing and daneing sequences.

"Early to Bed," Collegiate, Next Colleen Moore Vehicle

"Early to Bed," a story of college sororities and frats from the pens of Lynn and Lois Seyster Montross, authors of the "Fraternity Row" series in College Humor, will serve as the next First National starring vehicle for Colleen Moore. Production is set to start around February 1 at Burbank and director and cast will be announced soon.

Reported Mayer Tendered Post As Ambassador

M-G-M Officials Doubt He Would Accept, If Offer Made

Will Louis B. Mayer accept the post of Ambassador to Turkey, which, according to reports, has been tendered him by President-elect Hoover? That question is one which the industry is weighing at this time. Mayer, it is known, is to come to New York late in February and be present in Washington at the inauguration of Hoover. But in the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer organization it is stated that Mr. Mayer has a contract for a period of five years, four years of which are still to run and they do not believe that he will leave the industry at this time.

Robert Rubin, one of the vice-presidents of the organization, stated just prior to leaving for the coast for the annual conference with Mayer and Irving Thalberg, that both of these production executives were under contract for another four years, and that while Mr. Mayer undoubtedly looked upon any post which the president-elect might tender him as flattering, he doubted that Mayer would accept.

"Of course, Mr. Mayer has amassed a fortune in the motion picture industry," continued Mr. Rubin, "and it is quite possible that he might care at this time to achieve distinction in public service for his country, but I still doubt that he would want to leave the industry in which he has created a most enviable position for himself. I do not know whether Mr. Hoover has offered Mr. Mayer the post of Ambassador to Turkey or a post in the Cabinet. I heard that there had been some talk of a special post in the cabinet which would embrace a public relations bureau in conjunction with the film industry as was in force under the direction of George Creel, but I do not know if this is a fact or not. Of course it would be a splendid opportunity for Mr. Mayer, and the motio npicture industry in general should rejoice that one of its executives should be selected for important Governmental work by the Administration, but I still feel that Mr. Mayer will prefer to remain in picture production."

Von Stroheim Through With "Queen Kelly"

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, Jan. 24.—Eric Von Stroheim has been taken off of "Queen Kelly," Gloria Swanson having completed most of the silent sequences, but he may be recalled for a few silent sequences later. Edmund Goulding is directing the dialogue sequences at Pathe and the plan from now on is to shoot dialogue and silent scenes while on the set instead of returning to the sets on completion of the picture for the dialogue.

Pacent and Warner Deny Agreement Exists Tieing Up Product With Equipment

Exhibitor's Statement Held At Variance With Contract Signed for Product

BOTH the Pacent Reproducer Corporation and Warner Bros. deny emphatically a statement of a representative exhibitor printed last week to the effect that there was a tie-up between Warners and Pacent whereby the exhibitor had to sign for Warner product for a period of years in order to secure the Pacent equipment.

The statement of this exhibitor in part, was that he had to sign three contracts at the same time, one covering the Pacent installation, one for Warner feature productions and one for Vitaphone short subjects. The exhibitor said he had been informed by the Warner executive that there was no connection between Pacent and Warners, but at the same time he declared that without a contract for the Warner product it would be impossible to get a Pacent installation.

In denying the entire story, Pacent Reproducer Corporation says:

Pacent's Denial

The article appearing in your issue of January 19th, to the effect that there is a tie-up between Pacent Reproducer Corporation and Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc., whereby exhibitors who do not purchase pictures of Warners Bros., First National or Vitaphone, cannot obtain the Pacent machine, is incorrect. There is no such tie-up.

"The Pacent Reproducer Corporation is prepared to fill orders, with due regard to effecting proper distribution of machines and also with due regard to the credit standing of the exhibitor, in the order in which they are received, subject to our production schedules, regardless of what product the exhibitor, placing the order, desires to reproduce on such machines.

"It is entirely obvious that unless the exhibitor can obtain product, the installation of the machine is not from his standpoint desirable and we assume that many exhibitors who have inquired as to our reproducing system have gotten in touch with Warner Brothers and with the various other producers to ascertain whether the product of such producers would be available if such machines were installed. We reiterate, however, that the making of an arrangement with the producing companies named, or with any other producing company, is not a prerequisite to the purchase of the Pacent Reproducer system, nor is the sale of our equipment in any way related to the ar-

Md. Court of Appeals Upholds Blue Verdict

THE Court of Appeals of Maryland recently upheld the verdict of Judge Albert S. J. Owens in the Baltimore Criminal Court against John G. Callan, president of the Liberty Defense League, finding him guilty of breaking the Baltimore Sunday blue laws; a fine of $100 has been imposed upon Mr. Callan. It is understood, however, that he was merely testing the law and a resolution to remit the fine paid by Mr. Callan will be introduced into the legislature. Mr. Callan is a member of the House of Delegates from the Second District of Baltimore and on last Tuesday evening he was scheduled to introduce a bill into the legislature to permit the showing of films on Sunday in the city. By the terms of his bill, those who cared to take advantage of the terms would pay for a special license.

Ministerial alliances are preparing to battle against the passage of the bill.

Film Industry Aids Publicity For Inaugural

Trailers Figure Prominently In Exploiting Hoover Induction Plans

Elaborate plans are under way for the Hoover inaugural in Washington and the film industry will figure prominently in the publicizing of the event. It will be the first "old fashioned" inaugural since 1913

The festivities will cover a period of three days, March 2, 3 and 4 and the majority of the states in the union will send delegations. Film trailers are to play an important part in the advance publicity and the whole industry is pledged to lend its cooperation.

The film section of the publicity committee is headed by Sidney B. Lust, a Washington exhibitor. Provision is being made by the committee for accommodations

On the newsreel publicity committee are, Andrew May, chairman, of Harris and Ewing; M. H. McIntyre of Pathe, Harry Van Tine of International Newsreel, and Albert Holland of Fox.

The publicity campaign on the film angle has already been well launched with the filming by Pathe Sound News of Colonel U. S. Grant, chairman, and W. Irving Glover, executive secretary of the general arrangements committee.

Publix, West Coast Launch Hot Battle on Coast

Change Weekly Openings and Recruit Stars to Bolster Shows

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, Jan. 24.—The battle between Publix and West Coast took on a lively aspect this week and the struggle promises to be hotter than ever from now on. Stars will be called upon for personal appearances and campaigns increased in every way to attract the patrons.

Publix recently changed the name of the Metropolitan to Paramount, and Loew's State, the latter a West Coast house, moved the opening day permanently to Thursdays, to meet the same change of the same kind made by Publix. It is reported that when Publix planned the name change and the opening change Harold Franklin of West Coast suggested they also change without an expensive campaign, pointing out that West Coast could match expenditures to protect Loew's State, their first run.

Publix went ahead with a big billboard and newspaper campaign and also booked "The Doctor's Secret," a Paramount all-talker. It was also arranged for big studio lights and personal appearances of the entire star and feature player list of the Paramount Hollywood studio on opening night. Among these are Jannings, Menjou, Rogers and Ralston.

Loew's State countered by booking the M-G-M talker, "Alias Jimmy Valentine." The advertising was also increased 20 per cent with a further increase to follow. The State also opened Thursday with Sun Ares and M-G-M stars and players, among the latter being William Haines, Lionel Barrymore, Raquel Torres, Bessie Love, Dorothy Sebastian, John Mack Brown and Leila Hymans. This is only the start of the battle. In recent months the State has been averaging neck and neck in grosses with less seating capacity than the Metropolitan. Fanchon and Marco units are held mostly responsible for this as the Publix revues booked in from the east have little local drawing power.

"Hell's Angels" B'way Premiere in April or May

"Hell's Angels," the Caddo Company production now nearing completion will have its Broadway premiere in April or May, it is thought. Another three months will be spent in cutting and synchronizing. The production has been nearly two years in the making and is said to represent an investment of more than $2,000,000 for Howard Hughes, president of Caddo. More than 1,500,000 feet of film were ground through the camera since shooting began October 31, 1927. But despite its cost, Hughes is confident of realizing a nice profit on his picture.

30 "Radio Pictures" Announced by Brown

RADIO - KEITH - ORPHEUM inaugurated a weekly radio program Tuesday night of this week on a coast-to-coast network emanating from WEAF in New York with Hiram S. Brown, president of the corporation, delivering a brief message in which he revealed that the picture product of the company would be exhibited under the trade name of "Radio Pictures" and that there would be at least thirty features made this year.

These pictures he announced, would be made at the company studios in Hollywood, with no reference being made to the pictures to be produced in their New York studios.

rangements which the exhibitor may make with any producer."

George Quigley, vice-president and general manager of Vitaphone, issued the following denial:

"We are selling Vitaphone product to any exhibitor who has sound apparatus capable of reproducing with a degree of quality equal to that obtained by the Western Electric Sound Reproducer System. There is no differentiation made on any other basis. No agreement of any kind has been entered into by Vitaphone and the Pacent Company.

"Neither Warner Bros., nor the Vitaphone Corporation, nor First National Pictures assumes any policy of preference for one type of machine over another as long as its quality is satisfactory. Verification of this fact can easily be obtained by examining the contract forms used by any or all of the three organizations."

R. F. Woodhull Made Honorary A.M.P.A. Member

The Associated Motion Picture Advertisers made R. F. Woodhull, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, an honorary life member of their organization at a gala meeting held in New York January 18. In presenting Mr. Woodhull with the membership, George Harvey, president of the A. M. P. A. emphasized the fine cooperation between the exhibitors' and publicity men's organizations.

Present for the occasion were Michael Comerford of the Comerford circuit, Martin Smith, past president of the M.P.T.O. A. of Ohio, and William Benton of the Benton circuit. On behalf of the A.M.P.A., James Beecroft chairman of the Hollywood Masque Ball committee also presented to Mr. Woodhull tickets for the event which is to take place at the Hotel Astor in March.

Rules Actors Can't Deduct "Host" Costs

Entertainment of Press Not Allowable as "Business Expense" on Tax

Washington, D. C.—Newspaper men who are entertained by motion picture actors hereafter will accept invitations with the knowledge that their host desires their company sufficiently to pay for their entertainment out of his own pocket, in view of the ruling just rendered by C. M. Charast, general counsel for the Bureau of Internal Revenue, that such expenditures are not deductible in income tax returns as ordinary and necessary expenses directly connected with or pertaining to the taxpayer's business.

Actors, however, are given an "even break" by the general counsel's finding that expenditures for the upkeep and operation of automobiles are allowable deductions as business expenses to the extent that they represent the cost of transportation actually required in carrying on business.

The opinion was rendered on a request for information regarding the deductibility of such expenditures incurred by an actor and his wife whose names are not revealed.

"It appears," the general counsel states in his opinion, "that A and his wife, the taxpayers, spend considerable sums annually in entertaining newspaper reporters at luncheons, dinners and the theatre. The contention is made that actors must do entertaining of such nature in order to obtain favorable publicity and maintain their popularity with the public; that the cost of such entertaining is, in reality, an expense for advertising; and that the amount thereof should be allowed as a deductible business expense. Expenditures are also made by the taxpayers for the maintenance of an automobile and the employment of a chauffeur.

"It is the opinion of this office that expenditures made by A and his wife in entertaining newspaper reporters are not ordinary and necessary expenses directly connected with or pertaining to their business and, therefore, should not be allowed as deductions for business expenses."

Fox Issuing Film in L. A. Under a Special Title

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

At the suggestion of Harold B. Franklin, president of West Coast Theatres Circuit, Raymond Cannon's first directorial opus for Fox Films is being released by that company in Los Angeles under the title of "Let's Make Whoopee!" It will be released as "Red Wine" throughout all other sections of the U. S. It opened under the "Whoopee" title at Loew's State this week, this same house having sometime ago played "Annie Laurie" under the title of "Ladies From Hell."

Don't Neglect Silent Pictures Is Hays' Advice

Tells Members of Board Necessity of "epic" Type Features

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, January 24. — Producers should continue making silent pictures as well as talkies, particularly of the "epic" type, Will Hays told members of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors at a meeting of the board of directors last week. The conference, the first held in the association's new quarters in the L. B. Mayer Building, was in the nature of a house-warming.

The suggestion that the silent drama should not be neglected met with much interest. Hays said that producers should each year turn out lavish silent productions, featuring masses, huge sets and other features of the "epic" calibre. These pictures, he pointed out, should be made on scales similar to "The Big Parade," "The Covered Wagon," "The King of Kings" and others.

Censorship also was touched upon at the meeting. In regard to this Hays stated:

"Coincident with the realization that the motion picture industry must resist the attempt in some places to censor speech from the screen, is the renewed determination on the part of the industry to make certain that its pictures are of such quality that no reasonable person can claim any need for censorship. This attitude, which the industry must take is not only for itself, but in the defense of the whole right of free speech. The particular part which the studio has in this effort is the most important job of all and that is care as to the quality of production."

Academy Technicians and Coast Engineers Confer

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, Jan. 24.—A joint meeting of the Technicians branch of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences with the Pacific coast branch of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers was held Wednesday night in the Academy rooms.

The gathering of over two hundred listened to discussions on various technical aspects of sound picture production. The speakers included vice president Ling, of Electrical Research Products; Drs. McKensie and Wente, of Bell Telephone Laboratories; and J. W. Kaufman, vice president of Carpenter-Goldman Laboratories, consulting engineers.

N. Y. As Recording Center For Sound Held Hampered By Stringent Union Rules

Building of Big Stages By Equipment Concerns on Coast Coming?

NEW YORK CITY is in a position right now to achieve supremacy in the talking picture production field, unless the stringent conditions that are being enforced by the labor unions will compel the producers to return to the coast and at the same time make it necessary for the larger companies turning out recording devices to erect studios there for the purpose of renting space to producers for the making of sound pictures.

That the labor situation in the sound studios is a vital one was brought to light by Albert Ray, the director, who has been in the east making two talking features for Tiffany-Stahl in which Belle Bennett and Joe Brown are co-starred. The features are "Mollie and Me" and "Reputation." Both were shot as silent pictures on the coast and the talk sequences were added in New York at the RCA studios.

These studios are being rented to producers who take over the entire studio overhead for the time that they are in the studios. This means that the cost averages about $500 an hour for an eight-hour day at the studios, making it cost producers about $4,000 a day for the use of the plant exclusive of their own production overhead such as salaries for their stars, directors and own crew which they may bring on from the coast.

As against this the Sound Studios, Inc., which is the old Pathe Studios in the Bronx, are said to be making a flat charge of $5,000 a day to producers who want to make their sound pictures here.

The experiences with the labor union situation here that directors have had has been such that it has rather discouraged them from coming east to do their work and as soon as the west coast is sufficiently equipped to make sound pictures they will undoubtedly remain at the other end of the continent.

Union Restrictions

According to Albert Ray, a director cannot make a move in any of the studios here without the sanction of the union. As an instance, in the making of one of his two productions he wanted a sign painted crudely to hang in a small time theatre dressing room and asked the property man to make that sign. He was informed that that was impossible and that a union sign painter

Paramount May Keep Director Team Policy

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 24.—Teaming of a stage and a screen director in the making of certain talking pictures may be a permanent policy with Paramount as a result of the work done by Eddie Sutherland and John Cromwell with "Close Harmony." Those two are next reported to do together "Burlesque" from George Manker Watters' play.

Paramount has several stage directors on its roster in addition to those whose experiences are only of the screen. Among them are Edward Knopf, Robert Milton and Cromwell. Each of these may be teamed with a film director, with the credit divided between talking and silent version. However, on "Close Harmony" Eddie Sutherland alone is being given directorial credit.

$163,559,000 Estimated for New '29 Houses

National Survey Reveals Estimated Figures of Architects

According to a national survey conducted by the Architectural Forum," a leading publication in its field, new theatres of all types to be built during the year 1929 will cost $163,559,000. The figures are obtained, according to the publication, from 2,057 architects operating in all parts of the country, and from general information obtained from the building field as covered by other publications in the group of which "Architectural Forum" is a member.

Theatre construction represents 3.2 per cent of the total building planned by the entire nation which, according to the publication, will reach $7,308,793,200.

Based upon locations this theatre building will be divided as follows:

Northeastern States	$6,303,000
North Atlantic States	62,891,400
Southeastern States	3,746,600
Southwestern States	7,812,200
Middle States	74,032,200
Western States	8,773,600
Total	$163,559,000

Tashman and Love

Lilyan Tashman and Montagu Love have been engaged for roles in "Bulldog Drummond." The former will play Erna in this United Artists production, and the latter Peterson, the master criminal.

Photoplay Now in Curriculum of University

Southern California Offers Students New Course In Photoplay Appreciation

Hollywood, Jan. 17.—A course in Photoplay Appreciation will be introduced as a permanent part of the accredited curriculum of Liberal Arts College, University of Southern California. This will mark the first acknowledgment of an American university that motion pictures is a definite and distinct art, and should be studied as such. The course will undertake to create a better understanding of motion pictures, and will not provide for any teaching or research to enable those enrolled to enter the film industry as workers.

Other Colleges Interested

Although University of Southern California is the pioneer to offer a course of this nature, it is understood that other colleges and universities throughout the country are vitally interested.

In view of the fact that there is not adequate subject matter available, prominent members of the industry on the coast will deliver lectures to the class during the first semester.

Introduction of the course came after many conferences between heads of the institution and members of the committee on college affairs of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences.

Schedule of Lectures

The complete lecture schedule for the initial course follows:

The lectures scheduled above will supplement the regular study of various film productions that have been released during the past three to five years.

Pathe Earnings Show Big Jump

THE Pathe Exchange, Inc., second quarterly period report under the new management covering period July 14th, 1928, to October 6th, 1928, shows a profit of $167,798 compared with a profit of $65,338 for the previous twelve weeks period ending July 14th, 1928, and a loss of $415,389 for the sixteen weeks ending April 21st, 1928.

These figures are after all charges, including provision for depreciation, interest and amortization of discount, etc., and after charging certain estimated excess production costs on pictures in production prior to April 21st, 1928, to the Special Reserves previously established.

Holds New York Hampered As Sound Center

would have to be engaged for the work. When he said "Get a sign painter" he was further informed that one would have to be procured from the Paramount-Famous-Lasky studios in Long Island as the only sign painter that came under the jurisdiction of the union was employed there. It necessitated a wait of three hours for the company until the sign painter showed up. A couple of rough signs, in other words, costing $1,500 in addition to the amount for the actual painting.

In the shooting of a silent scene the union, it is said, insists that a sound track must also be shot so that the union sound camera operator is on the job. The camera man cannot turn on the motor that operates his camera, an electrician must be engaged at $12 a day to stand-by and switch the camera off and on.

As against these unfavorable conditions, it is pointed out, there are many conditions that favor New York as a sound producing center. In the first place, this is the center of activity for the manufacturing and perfecting of the sound recording devices. Whenever there is any improvement developed in either the camera or the sound recording device it is always tested out here before being sent to the Coast. That makes New York at least three months ahead of the Coast in recording.

J. V. Allan Made Warner So. and West Sales Head

J. V. Allan, for some time connected with Warner Bros. as branch manager in Detroit, was this week named to the post of Southern and Western sales manager, the place vacated recently by Claude C. Ezell, who was recently advanced to the position of General Sales Manager.

The new Southern and Western sales manager will make his headquarters at the home office in New York. He will start in the near future on a trip through the territory under his supervision.

Plan Bridge To Connect Theatre And Dept. Store

F. P. Canadian Would Build Connecting Structure Over Main Street

If negotiations now pending are successfully concluded Toronto's leading department store and leading motion picture palace will be connected by a bridge which will span Hayter street, one of the principal thoroughfares of the city. While the municipal authorities do not appear anxious to grant the concession, such a move is not improbable.

Famous Players Canadian Corporation has purchased a site in a central location in Toronto and plans have been drawn for the most impressive theatre in Canada. The structure and furnishings apart from the land are to cost $1,500,000. It will be the largest theatre in the Dominion and one of the largest in the British Empire, with a seating capacity of 4,200.

The property has a frontage of 63 feet on Yonge street and a second frontage on Hayter street, just opposite the 35-story Eaton Department store, which is now under construction. The Hayter street frontage is 150 feet and the lateral depth is 220 feet. It is here that the proposed bridge is planned to connect the theatre and the department store.

T. H. Bragg of Famous Players executive staff at Toronto has direct supervision of plans and tenders for the theatre.

Convention to Determine West Penn. Affiliation

The ninth annual convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Western Pennsylvania is being waited with considerable interest as it will determine whether the theatre owners of the unit will affiliate with the M.P.T.O.A. or the recently organized States Association.

That question will be the main issue of the convention, which is to be held April 14, 15 and 16.

Milwaukee Board Re-elects All Former Officers

At the annual meeting of the Milwaukee Film Board of Trade all officers who have been serving for the past year were re-elected for the ensuing year. The officers are, Charles Trampe, Midwest, president; Eddie Weisman, Educational, vice-president; Sam Shurman, M-G-M, secretary-treasurer; Robert Smith, Warners, sergeant-at-arms. J. E. O'Toole was named chairman of the board of arbitration.

Members of the board of directors also include, J. A. Kraker, Paramount; E. J. Weisman, Educational, and W. A. Aschman, Pathe, and A. N. Schmitz, FBO, alternates.

Williams Plans Debunking Series In Two Reelers

Facts of History Will Be Accurately Stated in Dialogue Films

Debunking the family quarrels of nations with truthful presentation of facts of history now inaccurately stated in many historical works will be sought in a series of twelve two-reel productions to be screened with dialogue.

This innovation in motion picture entertainment is announced by J. D. Williams, Vice-President and General Manager of World Wide Pictures, Inc. A separate company, Greater Union Films, Inc., has been formed to produce the series. They will be based on Owen Wister's book "A Straight Deal." Distribution will be through Educational Film Exchange.

The importance of the enterprise is said to reach far beyond the limit of the amusement world because the subject matter of the story, or stories, is the truthful treatment, or debunking, of the many misunderstood, controversial, historical episodes between Great Britain and the United States which, perpetuated in inaccurate histories have resulted in a smouldering international distrust which Mr. Wister characterizes as "the ancient grudge."

Back of the primary and practical essential of entertainment value, according to Mr. Williams, is the intention to achieve greater amity between the peoples of Great Britain and America and prove that the degree and number of instances of friendliness and sympathetic cooperation shown to one another by official and unofficial representatives of the two countries in times of crisis far outnumber and outweigh the total of differences that have arisen through so-called national family quarrels.

Mr. Williams is now negotiating for the services of several of the most prominent directors and scenario writers. One of the ablest production executives in the industry is to be in charge. An editorial board of international authorities on the subject is in process of organization to assure the correctness of the material in order that the pictures shall be worthy of the approval of the leading patriotic and welfare organizations such as The English Speaking Union, with its 18,000 members on both sides of the Atlantic, The Carnegie Foundation, and others.

"Through the new science of talking pictures the screen can now get over the message of international good will that forward looking statesmen, educators, and publicists in both countries have for years labored with little effect to tell," says Mr. Williams. "I can think of no greater mission for the screen and the industry than bringing back, honestly, the great figures and events of the Anglo-American family drama with the assured effect of convincing all its members that, after all, blood is thicker than water. And talking pictures, entertainingly produced as an appealing show, will do the job as nothing else can."

Three News Reels Reported In Combination For Screen Press Assoc. To Cut Costs

Fox, Universal and Kinograms Mentioned in Tie-Up With Others Asked to Come In

THE formation of a screen news reel press association was definitely reported as under way this week. Those most vitally interested are said to be Fox, Universal and Kinograms.

According to the report, Universal is said to have reached an agreement with the Hearst organization which produces the International News which U. distributes. They are to continue distributing this product until the end of this year, according to the present contract. Undoubtedly, with the Hearst organization getting out the M-G-M news reel they would break from U. at the time that the contract is up and center their efforts to building up the newer news reel.

Universal would then be without a news reel and as that organization has the numerous International accounts they would want to continue serving the exhibitors that they now have on their books with a news subject.

During the last two years, with the advent of the Paramount News and the M-G-M News into the news reel field the fight for accounts has been very strenuous with price cutting to such a marked degree that practically none of the news reel companies operating have been able to show a profit, it is said.

It is believed that the proposal is that the companies entering the combination are only to be tied together in the matter of collecting and securing news matter, but that they will maintain separate identities insofar as the selling and distribution of their various reels are concerned.

More Than 15 Iowa Houses Close

MORE than 15 of the smaller motion picture houses in Iowa, were forced to close last week the Des Moines Film Board of Trade is informed. There have been four times as many houses closing this month as in previous records for this time of the year. Many of the houses attribute their plight to the competition with nearby towns of larger size where sound equipped theatres are attracting the trade.

Tri-State Theatre Chain in South Split Wide Open

Summary of the dissolution of the Tri-State Theatres Corporation chain, as reported in Memphis, Tenn., shows 14 of its 17 houses have reverted in the past few weeks to former owners, due to forfeiture or other causes for invalidation of leases held by the chain.

The list shows the following owners now in charge of the former Tri-State houses:

Ritz, New Albany, Miss., F. L. Marshall; Star, West Point, Miss., L. B. McEachin; Sharp's Humboldt, Tenn., J. E. Sharp; Mystic, Fort Smith, Ark., J. R. Dodson; Royal, Hot Springs, Ark., J. G. Blaschko; Spa, Hot Springs, Ark., Earl Housley; Strand, Clarendon, Ark., P. F. Engle; Commodore, Eureka Springs, Ark., Herman Alwes; Palace, Ashdown, Ark., Sam Dudney; Lyric, Mena, Ark., Price McCall; Liberty, Heber Springs, Ark., H. H. Miller; Imperial, Gurdon, Ark., Earl Powell, and re-leased to Arkansas Amusement Enterprises; Wright's, Gurdon, Ark., R. D. Wright, and re-leased to Arkansas Amusement Enterprises.

Montreal Mgrs. Ordered to Take Down S.R.O. Signs

New regulations for exhibitors in the City of Montreal, Canada, have been coming rather frequently of late and the most recent civic order has caused some commotion among theatre proprietors. The managers have been ordered to throw away their "S.R.O." signs by Ald. Desroches, chairman of the City Executive, because, under a new ruling, there will be no such a thing as "S.R.O."

The order, which has just been put into effect, provides that all admission tickets entitle patrons to immediate possession of seats. When all seats are filled, no more tickets are to be sold.

"U" Sales Officials Make Flying Trip to Chi Meet

Headed by M. Van Praag, general sales manager for Universal, a group of Universal sales heads from the home office departed last Wednesday on a flying trip to Chicago where they attended a sales conference at the Chicago "U" exchange.

Included in the group were Ted Schlanger, assistant general sales manager; Fred J. McConnell, sales manager for short products; and R. V. Anderson, sales manager for International News.

On the way back to New York, the group expects to stop over for similar meetings in Cleveland and Buffalo.

Slight Increase in B'way Business in Favor of Regular Film Theatres

Receipts Up $10,000 In Grind Houses; Off $4,000 In Runs

A COMPARISON of the receipts of Broadway last week as against those of the week before showed that the regular motion picture theatres pulled an additional $10,000, getting a total of $332,878.25, while the receipts in the houses where pictures are in for a run on a two-a-day showing policy dropped off $4,000 with $112,108.75 resultant. There really wasn't anything on the street that was an outstanding wallop in the attractions that came in for the seven-day period, but all of the big theatres did a consistent business.

This week there is a different story on Broadway and when next week's figures are published it is almost certain that two house records will topple by the wayside. Both the Roxy and the Capitol are doing an absolute turnaway from early morning until late at night and the figures tabulated for the first five days of the week indicate that both will break the house records.

Three of the pictures in for a run, "Interference," "The Viking" and "The Barker," disappeared from the Main Stem, with "Redskin" coming in Saturday night at the Criterion to replace "Interference," "The Bellamy Trial" opening Wednesday night at the Embassy where "The Viking" was, and "Weary River" opening Thursday night at the Central housing "The Barker."

The biggest business on the street was as usual at the Roxy where "Sunrise" played its first popular priced engagement in New York. The final total here showed $113,782.75, which accounted for the $10,000 lift in the regular houses. The Capitol with "A Lady of Chance" got $65,762.20, running just ahead of the Paramount where "The Case of Lena Smith" played to $62,200. The Strand with Billie Dove in "Adoration" brought up the rear with $28,156.30. That was not very strong for the latter house and showed that Billie Dove did not pull up to expectations.

In its first week at the Rialto "The Rescue," with Ronald Colman starred, came under the wire with $26,700 with Lily Damita brought in from the coast to make personal appearances at the theatre over the week end in the hope that the business might be bolstered up.

At the Rivoli "The Awakening" in its fourth week there pulled $19,900 to the window. It is finishing this week to make way for Emil Jannings in "The Sins of the Fathers," which has a happy ending.

Its second week at the Colony got $10,879 with "The Last Warning," the picture almost touching $26,000 on its two weeks, which gives Universal about an even break for the cost of operating the house. The little Cameo, which also had a Lily Damita picture, a foreign made production entitled "Forbidden Love," released by Pathe, played to $5,500, which is a little below the average here.

In the run houses the top money continued to be attracted by "The Singing Fool" at the Winter Garden, where the receipts went to $36,196, with the other Warner Brothers attraction "My Man" at the Warner, pulling $23,650.25 for second money. The Astor with "Alias Jimmy Valentine" slipped into third place with $14,658. "Interference" in its final week at the Criterion clicked to the tune of $11,447 after having a fairly long run. "The Barker" at the Central in its last full week showed $10,116, while "The Viking" also on its get-away week, went to $4,809.75.

Loew's Penn, Pittsburgh, Does Smart Business With "The Awakening"

LOEW'S PENN had a tremendous week's business with Vilma Banky in "The Awakening." As far as Pittsburgh is concerned Miss Banky is one of the best drawing cards on the screen. Publix Unit, "Magic Rug," proved very good entertainment.

The Stanley had a good week's business with "Interference," a production that seemed to please the multitudes. Stage attraction was "Garden Frolics," an average musical tabloid revue.

Adolphe Menjou in "His Private Life," did but average business for the Grand. This star's popularity is waning in his own home town. "Varsity" did better than expected at the Regent. "Manhattan Cocktail" fared well at the Enright, where a good week's business was enjoyed. "Plastered in Paris" got some good crowds and some good laughs at the Aldine. "Marriage by Contract" did fair at the Alhambra, as did also "Dream of Love" at the Cameraphone.

Seattle First Runs All Enjoy Good Week With No Outstanding Leader

SEATTLE.—Last week was a successful one among the local first runs, with business generally strong among the leading houses, without any one outstanding leader. High gross for the week was set by Publix's Seattle Theatre, with an overwhelming program that included "Interference" as the feature, Eddie Cantor's short talking reel as a filler, and Fancho-Marco's "Night Club Idea" on the stage.

At the Fifth Avenue "The Barker" followed the record-breaking run of "In Old Arizona." Business, though good, was apparently off after the previous great week. "The Lion's Roar" as a short feature was highly satisfactory.

"In Old Arizona" was so successful last week, it was moved by West Coast to their Coliseum Theatre, where it enjoyed another great week, and is being held over for a second week.

At the Music Box Theatre, "My Man" in its third week continued to click at an important rate, with a house well filled at all times. It goes forward into a fourth week, with a possibility of another to follow. The Blue Mouse, sister house, did not fare quite as well with "The Awakening," and this film ended its run after two and a half weeks. The past week was only moderately good in comparison with former attractions.

In the vaudeville field, Pantages scored a distinct box office success with "Submarine" in its sound form. A fairly good vaudeville bill supplemented the film and resulted in a gross better than average. The Orpheum, on the other hand, let the vaudeville portion of the bill dominate, using "The Spieler" on the screen. It compared unfavorably with "The Barker."

Flu Epidemic Receding, Says Health Dep't

THE national epidemic of influenza with which the country has been hit during the last few months has passed its peak and is now receding, officials of the Public Health Service, Washington, D. C., believe. Reports from all sections of the country show that cases have decreased 50 per cent from the peak of ten weeks ago. The prevalence of sickness has not been accompanied by an increasing rate of mortality, the figures show, and the death rate from all causes is but six per cent higher than comparable periods a year ago

$7,000 Is Best For Snowy Week In Des Moines

DES MOINES.—Heavy snow early in the week sent Des Moines first run houses off to a poor start, but some of them picked up to an average week before the current runs concluded. "Abie's Irish Rose" has the best gross of the week at the Des Moines with $7,000. Next in line was "Synthetic Sin" with $6,600 at the Capitol.

The Strand with a 10, 20 and 30 scale and a split week showed the poor gross of $2,100 with "The Air Circus" and "Variety."

"White Shadows" Does $9,837 at Ottawa Regent

OTTAWA.—Rough weather had a great deal to do with smaller crowds at Ottawa, Ontario, theatres during the week of January 12 and the storms also affected local sporting events adversely.

The high spot of the week in the way of film features was "White Shadows in the South Seas," with $9,837 gross. This attraction drew packed houses at the Regent.

Attendance fell off at B. F. Keith's, where the screen feature was "Hit of the Show" but it wasn't the fault of the picture. The vaudeville was considered below average and the weather hurt as well. The gross here was over $3,000 down, the total being $11,490.

Baltimore Century Does $21,500

"Alias Jimmy Valentine" Tops $18,000 for Week

BALTIMORE. — The extremely cold weather here on Monday and Tuesday and rain on Wednesday night, during the week beginning January 14, hurt business to some extent at some of the first run theatres here.

"Sins of the Fathers," offered at Loew's Century, with "Just Kids," a Loew-Publix attraction with Jack Stanley acting as master of ceremonies, pulled down $21,500 for the week and it would have been better but a fire next to the theatre on Monday cut down the receipts of that day about $2,000.

The Hippodrome went way up with crowds every day, with the take estimated at $14,000 for the week. The feature film was "Object—Alimony," well received by the audience, but this is only an item in connection with the Bert Smith Players offering "So Long Letty" and Keith-Albee vaudeville acts. The show was excellent and business went $3,000 over the previous week.

"Decameron Nights," offered for a return engagement at the Little Theatre, brought $800 into the treasury of that playhouse for the week. It has only 267 seats.

The business done on "On Trial" at Warners' Metropolitan was very good on that all-talking attraction. Patronage at the New Garden, where "Give and Take" was offered with five acts of Keith-Albee vaudeville, flopped considerably, the receipts being estimated at about $10,000, a drop of four and a half grand from the previous week.

"Red Wine" did not prove such a good puller at the New Theatre and only $6,000 was estimated for the week. The Parkway held up well with "A Woman of Affairs," being given its second run there and the box office showed receipts amounting to $2,900.

Due to extreme cold on first two days, it took until Wednesday for "Alias Jimmy Valentine" to strike its real stride but the week was a good one, the receipts being $18,500 for it at Loew's Stanley.

Loew's Valencia came along with $3.800 for the UFA-M-G-M picture "Behind the German Lines." This was considered a good week for that house.

Business Flops In Canton Under Good Conditions

CANTON.—An unexplainable "off week" was reported by the manager of every first run theatre for the seven days between Jan. 6 to 12. With weather conditions better than usual at this time of year, although it turned sharply colder, managers were able to explain the unexpected and sudden let-down only because of the illness prevalent in this community.

F B O's "Gang War," with sound accompaniment and an extra feature on the program in Belle Bennett's "Sporting Age," played to better than average houses for the first four days of the week at the Strand. Only average business was reported at the Alhambra, Loew's and the Palace.

Although running only the last three days of the week, Norma Shearer's "A Lady of Chance" played to more admissions at Loew's than did Emil Jannings' "Sins of the Fathers," the attraction for the first four days. "Love Over Night" and "The Vanishing Pioneer" broke even at the Palace, with "Mother Machree" doing fair business for the Alhambra.

$14,000 With "Alias Jimmy Valentine" Is Best at Syracuse

SYRACUSE, N. Y.—Despite blizzards, rain and below zero weather, Syracuse first run houses made a good showing for the week of Jan. 12th to 18th. Saturday was perfect movie weather but at 2 p. m. Sunday a raging blizzard came from the west, continuing three days with zero weather. It then warmed up and rained only to freeze, making walking and driving perilous.

The Eckel Theatre with Milton Sills in "The Barker" had them standing at all performances. The First National talkie grossed just $3,000 less than the $15,000 pulled in by Al Jolson in "The Singing Fool." The theatre, which seats 1400, was jammed at all performances with the matinee prices raised to 35c, the evening admission. With this feature the Schine Theatre ran two Vitaphone acts. "The Barker's" popularity warranted its being held over for a second week.

"Alias Jimmy Valentine" proved a big hit at Loew's State Theatre and packed them in to the tune of $14,000. This Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer feature was the first dialogue sequence picture to be shown at this theatre. Along with this was shown Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer News, Fox Movietone and two Metro Movietone acts. Bruce Brummit and his 17-piece concert orchestra presented an overture and Maurice, organist, used a male and female soloist in conjunction with his organlogue.

"Prep and Pep" was the feature at the Empire Theatre along with "Touchdown," a local high school movie. The cast for this local picture was made up of all high school students and produced by the Syracuse Herald Tri-C club and the Empire Theatre. This is the first time a local high school picture has been attempted in Syracuse with all high school students in the cast. An "Our Gang" comedy was also shown. The box office receipts were $6,000.

Alice White and Jack Mulhall in the First National sound picture "Naughty Baby" did a fair week's business at the Strand Theatre with a gross of $7,000. B. F. Keith's Theatre reported average business for the week with "Varsity," P. F. L. feature, the first half and "The Air Legion" rounding out the week. The gross was $11,000.

Birmingham Far Below Standard In Week's Report

BIRMINGHAM.—The flu epidemic has subsided somewhat and box-office returns showed a slight increase for the week ending January 12, but business is not up to the standard for this time of the year. Since August returns have ranged from 25 to 50 per cent below what would be expected.

Better attendance marked the openings this week. The Alhambra's wired house topped the grosses with $8,700, the feature attraction being "Abie's Irish Rose." The Ritz showed "Show Girl," a silent picture in a wired house, to $7,025 gross.

The Empire, with "The Trail of '98," was third in grosses with $3,250. In the smaller houses, the Strand, wired, with "Sins of the Fathers," did only $1,475.

Sub-Zero Weather Hits Milwaukee

$9,550 Is Best Gross for Week In Film Houses

MILWAUKEE. — When the weather reaches eight, ten and even fifteen below zero, and the temperature rises only long enough to usher in a blinding blizzard, and when this is the program for seven days in the week, theatre business is bound to slump a bit. This is what Milwaukee experienced the past week. Add to that the present prevalence of flu and you have a condition most discouraging.

The Alhambra Theatre offered the "Awakening of Love" and did very fair business in spite of the adverse weather conditions. The gross reported was $9,000. This picture started its run on Tuesday and was continued for ten days. The picture got a good start in this way. It did not gross what its predecessor "Give and Take" had, but came very close to that mark. "Give and Take" yielded about a $10,000 week at the Alhambra through the holiday season.

The two vaudeville houses did comparatively good business, with the Orpheum leading the Riverside in receipts. "The Woman from Moscow" was the Orpheum's offering on the screen, and "Singapore Mutiny" was featured at the Riverside.

The Merrill offered "Interference" and advertised it well as an "All Talkie." Resulting business was $9,550 and the picture is being held over for an additional week. "Submarine" opened at the Strand for an extended run. Despite the inclement weather, patronage was good at this house, which grossed $8,300. "The Red Dance" was offered at the Wisconsin with Al Belasco introducing five acts of vaudeville to complete the bill, which did $19,000. Business here was slow, far below what the bill merited. The Embassy, the old Empress, opened with picture and sound this week. The Embassy is located near to the Riverside. It will not run first run pictures; prices range from 15c to 25c.

Cincinnati At Low Ebb Under Poor Conditions

CINCINNATI.—There was nothing in the final box-office check-up during last week to cause managers to shout with joy, although they all remained in the black. The flu epidemic, although somewhat abating, zero weather, heavy rain and wind storms combined to keep the attendance down to a rather low ebb.

The Albee featuring Colleen Moore in "Synthetic Sin," on the screen, together with a good vaudeville bill proved a good draw, everything considered.

"Interference," with 100 per cent dialogue at the Lyric, got a good break for the week, and will be in town for another seven days. The Capitol, with "Sunrise," with Movietone, and a number of Vitaphone shorts, and Movietone News Reel, had a fair following for the week. "Battle of the Sexes," at Keith's did nicely.

The Strand, with "The Hit of the Show," with sound, was about on a par with its sister houses in the Libson chain, which is another way of saying that business, although good, could have been better.

The Family, split-week at popular prices, featuring "Honeymoon," first half, and "Scarlet Lady," second half, did a fair share of business.

Palace, pictures and vaudeville, with "Dry Martini" on the screen, had an unusually good following, as did a majority of the neighborhoods.

"The Barker" Jumps St. Louis Take With $21,489 on Week

THE Grand Central Theatre opening with "The Barker" First National's first talking picture, showed a big increase over the previous week with a gross of $21,489.

At the Ambassador, Seventh and Locust Streets, Gary Cooper and Nancy Carroll in "The Shopworn Angel" was the screen attraction while Ed Lowry presented "Step On It" as his stage revue. The gross of $29,233 was behind the previous week because of added shows in that week due to New Year's Day.

The Missouri's gross was $23,165 with "Give and Take" on the screen and Eddie Peabody leading the stage show "Gypsyland." Business was not as good as the previous week.

The Midtown Theatre with "The Singing Fool" grossed $12,841 and was behind the prior week.

"My Man" Does $25,000 In Topping Only Average Week in Portland, Ore.

PORTLAND, ORE.—Just a average week was reported by first run houses, though new cinema offerings were displayed. A cold wave continued, which played havoc with matinee attendance but the evening crowds brought up attendance somewhat.

Waiting lines were the rule again at the Music Box, which opened the initial week with Fanny Brice in "My Man." In point of attendance this promises to come close to figures on Al Jolson. The gross was reported as $25,000.

"Abie's Irish Rose," with $22,000 gross, proved a most popular offering, and could have held over another week if house rules permitted. Georgie Stoll and his musical gang contributed excellent numbers. Fox Talking News completed the program.

Emil Jannings in "Sins of Fathers" at the Portland had a fair attendance and did $19,240. Ruth Etting was seen and heard to advantage in a Paramount specialty. Lou Forbes directed Fanchon and Marco's "Silhouette Idea," a daring and original presentation.

The Rivoli Theatre secured a very good first run in "A Certain Young Man" with Ramon Novarro, which showed to increased business over previous second run offerings.

The People's Theatre gave a return engagement of Billy Haines and Marion Davies in "Show People," which gathered in a few dollars more than previous week, the house now being under new management.

Al Jolson in "The Singing Fool" finished a return engagment at the Blue Mouse, with good evening houses, the gross being $4,500.

Pantages put on "Submarine" as their screen offering and proved one of the most popular of the season, and brought out capacity houses on first three days in spite of continued cold weather.

With "Power" the Oriental had a fair to good week with $6,200.

A first glimpse was obtained of Lily Damita in "The Rescue" at the United Artists, but again attendance was lacking at the end of the week, the gross being $6,100.

Sally O'Neil and Eddie Cline, who directs her in "Broadway Fever," the new Tiffany-Stahl production

Harrisburg Has Good Week With Better Features

HARRISBURG.—Outstanding plays like "Alias Jimmie Valentine," with William Haines, at Loew's Regent, and "Submarine," with Jack Holt at the Colonial, got the cream of the week's business in the first run theatres.

Fair success was attained at the Victoria by "The Barker," starring Milton Sills and Dorothy Mackaill. Miss Mackaill, by the way, appeared in two screen pictures for part of the week, having been shown in "The Whip" during the first three days at the State. The last three days at the State the film feature was Alice White in "The Show Girl." June Collyer and Don Terry in "Me, Gangster," brought fair results at the Russell, while Fay Wray and Gary Cooper were on the screen at the Rialto in "The First Kiss." The Grand put on a double feature bill consisting of "Under the Tonto Rim" and "Haunted Island" with a good measure of financial success.

The experiment of holding children's matinees each Saturday morning at the State Theatre, with an all-picture show, sponsored by the Harrisburg Civic Club, a women's welfare organization whose representatives select what they regard as proper pictures for juvenile consumption, has thus far been somewhat disappointing from the viewpoint of attendance. Children are admitted for ten cents and adults who wish to accompany them pay 25 cents.

$23,000 for "Old Arizona" in L. A.

Tops Previous Best in Fourth Week of Showing

LOS ANGELES.—All Los Angeles houses did a better business than usual last week. "In old Arizona," at the Criterion, is the sensation of the town, topping all previous weeks by doing over $23,000 in the fourth week and, judging from appearances, it can stay for twelve weeks or more.

Both Loew's State and Metropolitan played a six-day week. Loew's State, with "Red Wine," billed here as "Let's Make Whoopee," drew $26,500. The Metropolitan, with Colleen Moore in "Synthetic Sin," drew $27,000. "My Man," in the fourth week at Warners, played to $19,500, and "The Rescue," at United Artists, did $8,500.

"The Barker," at the Carthay Circle, slipped to $12,000 in the seventh week, and is being suddenly withdrawn Sunday. "The Divine Lady" follows it in Tuesday. Grauman's Chinese was dark.

"Interference" Sets New House Record for Tampa

TAMPA.—The talkies now hold the house record of the Tampa. Clara Bow, silent, has held the record up until last week when "Abie's Irish Rose" romped in and boosted the figures by $200. Then this Sunday "Interference" comes in and tops the Abie record for the opening day by around $200 more.

The Tampa seats better than 1600. Sunday prices are 25 and 60c and no free list. Three of the five shows were capacity, so it is a very safe estimate to give this picture credit for pulling at least $3,000 on the day. However, "Interference" failed to pull as strong the following three days, so Abie holds the record for the first half business.

"A Shopworn Angel," opened rather weak on Thursday, but the picture went over well, and gave the house a better than average week.

"My Man" pulled a very good week's business for the Victory. The two opening days went over strong, and the balance of the week was good.

The Strand had three features that had the pull and each one of them showed up better than average at the box office; "How to Handle Women," two days, "Someone to Love," three days and "Spies" the last two. The Franklin also did nicely with their six changes, in fact all houses enjoyed a week that was somewhat above the average.

Indiana Hangs Up $19,000 Week At Indianapolis

INDIANAPOLIS.—Local first run houses did a good week's business here between January 12 and 18 despite cold and drizzly weather with an underfooting of ice. Paramount's "Take Me Home," at the Indiana, the largest theatre in the city, hung up a gross of $19,000.

Second on the list of grosses was the Circle, which had as its feature attraction Paramount's "Sins of the Fathers," together with Vitaphone shorts. The cash registers rung up $15,000.

The Palace, housing the good attraction, M-G-M's "Alias Jimmy Valentine," and Metro vaudeville acts, fell off somewhat with $11,000, and the Apollo, smallest of the first runs in seating capacity, did $7,000 with "Riley the Cop."

Relaxing on the set. William Collier, Jr., visiting the M-G-M stages, Leila Hyams, Edward Earle and Dorothy Sebastian play a game of cards during the making of Buster Keaton's "Spite Marriage" (M-G-M)

"The Barker" With $25,700 Tops Grosses For Kansas City Houses

KANSAS CITY.—That the quality of the picture is stronger than the condition of the weather was proved conclusively in Kansas City when all first run downtown houses, presenting an exceptionally good lineup of pictures, did a greater business than the previous week, although the weather virtually was the same—cold and stormy.

William Haines in "Alias Jimmie Valentine" drew $23,100 at the Midland, compared to $22,400 the previous week, while at the Newman "Simba," accompanied by the personal appearance of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Johnson, drew $18,200 against $17,600 of the previous week. However, the picture and Mr. and Mrs. Johnson came in for a good newspaper play. Three news stories were used in each of the daily newspapers, which helped things considerably.

At the Pantages, "Love Overnight" slightly beat the mark of the previous week, drawing $12,400 as compared to $12,000 of the week before. Milton Sills in "The Barker" at the Mainstreet packed them in, the picture drawing $25,700, the gross of the previous week being $24,300.

"The Shopworn Angel," featuring Nancy Carroll and Gary Cooper, also surpassed last week's mark at the Royal—$5,800 against $4,010. The Mainstreet was the only theatre to use any exploitation out of the usual routine. The lobby of that theatre was made to resemble the grounds of a carnival, there being popcorn stands, vendors of various wares and the usual concessions.

Cleveland Downtown Houses Have Good Business With Poor Weather

CLEVELAND.—The week just concluded was one of the worst of the winter, with heavy storms, of snow and rain, and sleet intervening. Automobiles skidded all over the streets, taxis were at a premium, and there was every possible inducement to keep people at home. Nevertheless, business was good at the downtown houses. Keith's Palace had the ropes up for almost all performances. This was because Lita Grey Chaplin was the headline vaudeville attraction. The picture, "Captain Lash," was well liked, but it is more than doubtful whether it would have drawn as well on its own merits. The gross is reported as $22,000.

"The Trail of '98" did very well at the Stillman during its opening week with $15,000. The bad weather was no doubt balanced by the Road Builders Convention, which thousands attended, and these visitors, all staying at downtown hotels, made up for the other thousands of motion picture goers who stayed at home.

"The Shopworn Angel" at the State, surrounded by an excellent Publix Unit Show, did very well with $19,000. The picture was well liked.

"The Rescue" at the Allen made a fairly good showing with $16,000. Especially did business pick up on Tuesday, when Lily Damita, star in the production, made four personal appearances.

"Show Folks," at the Hippodrome, interesting for its backstage settings, was a pretty good business getter, but could not stand up strong against the heavy competition. It did only $13,000.

"Porgy," presented by the Theatre Guild at the Ohio Theatre, did so well that an extra Friday matinee was offered. "My Maryland" playing a return engagement at the Hanna also drew well.

Flu Epidemic Raids Boston Grosses

Business for Week Rated Just Fair; Keith's Holds Up

BOSTON.—Boston's epidemic of influenza and the grippe has made a heavy raid on the theatre box offices with a decided falling off noted at all theatres. With more than 8,000 pupils of the Boston public schools and more than 600 school teachers out on account of the epidemic, some idea of the extent of its inroads on patronage of theatres may be gained.

The B. F. Keith Memorial Theatre was one of the bright spots in an otherwise gloomy situation. Because of the small seating capacity of this new first run theatre and the demand for an opportunity to see the theatre and its shows, there have been no vacant seats even while every other Boston house was liberally sprinkled with them. "Adoration" was the film and it was cordially received.

The Keith-Albee Boston fared as well as any of the other first run theatres with its presentation of "Taxi 13." Publix Metropolitan could not boast of its week's business with "Sunrise" but through no fault of the picture, which won favorable reviews on all sides and was well received. Lon Chaney in "West of Zanzibar" drew good audiences to the Loew's State. "Dream of Love" followed, doing a fair business.

"The Awakening" at Loew's Orpheum did business which will compare favorably with the other theatres and the introduction of a dance contest by amateurs helped to make a week satisfactory to the prevailing conditions.

"My Man" proved an excellent attraction at the Scollay Square Olympic. "Interference" showed simultaneously at the Washington St. Olympia and the Fenway and did a fair week's business at these Publix theatres.

The second week of "Synthetic Sin" with "Side Show" as the accompanying picture, grossed well at both the Modern and Beacon of the Netoco chain.

Other films which averaged well for the week in Boston theatres are "White Shadows in the South Seas" at the Bowdoin Square, "Quality Street" at the Howard, "Lights of New York" at the new Netoco Globe Theatre, "My Man" at the Publix Allston and the Central Square, "Revenge" at the University, "Three Week Ends" at the Field's Corner and "Honeymoon Flats" at the Embassy.

Warfield Leads First Run Houses In San Francisco

SAN FRANCISCO.—Loew's Warfield Theatre, again, did the biggest business of the week and it was an enormous business. In the evenings people stood for a long time waiting to get in. The screen attraction was "The Lion's Roar," a Mack Sennett Talking Comedy.

Of the three Publix theatres, the Granada did the best. "The Case of Lena Smith" was on the screen and "The Parisian Nights," a good presentation, on the stage. "Sins of the Fathers," with Emil Jannings, as shown at the California Theatre, did not go over as the managers of the three local Publix Theatres thought it would. The picture "Interference," shown for a second week at the St. Francis while doing a fairly good business, did not do what some thought it would.

The El Capitan did good business with the talkie, "Submarine," shown together with the presentation, "Show Girl." The Embassy Theatre, another Vitaphone house, also reported good business with the picture, "The Home Towners."

Gaston Glass and Virginia Valli in a scene from "Behind Closed Doors," a Columbia mystery film

Small Crowds In Attendance At Albany Theatres

ALBANY.—From the standpoint of the box office, Fannie Brice in "My Man," running last week at the Mark Strand, proved the best business getter in a week that was characterized by unpleasant weather and small audiences in the majority of theatres. The feature was coupled with two Vitaphone presentations as well as a Movietone News.

At the Leland, a satisfactory business was reported with "Mother Knows Best," while the Mark Ritz did only fair in a week's run of Billie Dove in "Adoration."

The Clinton Square played to just fair business with its program of first run double features, including "The Siren" and "A Midnight Adventure." Residential houses in Albany reported business as being off.

In Troy, business was decidedly bad in fact some theatres assert that it was the worst week of the entire winter. Three reasons were ascribed for the slump, one being that the people generally did not have the money for entertainment at this time, while a second reason was laid to the flu epidemic and the third to weather conditions.

At the Troy, "Beau Broadway" did a mediocre business, both afternoons and evenings. The forepart of the week was given over to Clara Bow in "Three Week Ends" and this picture went over well for two days but fell down on the remaining two. The Lincoln played to very poor business with "The Scarlet Lady" the fore part of the week and "Someone to Love" the last half. Proctor's featuring Eva Tanguay in person the last of the week did well.

Oklahoma City Thrives Despite Severe Weather

OKLAHOMA CITY.—While cold weather has prevailed, theatrical business in Oklahoma City has been very good the past week.

At the Capitol the feature picture was "Interference," with sound, and Eddie Cantor in his singing and talking act "That Party in Person."

At the Criterion the stage show did well with Frances Gregg in "Mother's Millions" and the feature picture "The Midnight Taxi" with Antonio Moreno and Helene Costello in Vitaphone talking parts.

"Sins of the Fathers" with Emil Jannings did well at the Empress and the "Last Warning" at the Liberty pleased good crowds.

Buffalo Hits Slump; Business Reported Fair

BUFFALO.—Business at the down town theatres went down at the box offices last week, at the Hippodrome the screen feature was Bebe Daniels in "What a Night." It was helped out with good vaudeville.

The Great Lakes theatre started their program with the Fox anniversary picture "In Old Arizona," the first of Fox' all-talkies. "The Shopworn Angel," starring Nancy Carroll and Gary Cooper, was a big help to the box office at the Buffalo, but the grosses a little lower than the average.

At the Century "Alias Jimmy Valentine" drew well, but showed a slight decrease, in the box office reports. The Great Lakes might have done better perhaps than it did last week with "Conquest." "Scarlet Seas," at the Lafayette, showed a fairly good business, but would have gone down if it had not been for the vaudeville.

Business at the Victoria appeared to be spotty with the Warners talking film "Mother Knows Best." "Just Married" was the screen play at the Roosevelt. It brought in fair business.

A double bill at the Elmwood showed "Gang War" and "Golf Widows" with fair results.

Cold Weather Hits Grosses In Beloit Houses

BELOIT.—Motion picture houses here for the week of January 6 to 12 inclusive showed a falling off in receipts from the previous week. This was attributed to the children returning to school from their vacation and to extremely cold weather.

The Rex, with a capacity of 600, showed "Phantom City," "Synthetic Sin," "Singapore Mutiny" and "The Air Legion." Grosses for the week were $1,876 as against $2,500 the previous week. The Majestic, with a house capacity of 1,100, did $4,423 as against $6,230 the week before. The pictures on display at this house were "In Old Kentucky," "Detectives," "The Terror" and "The Cossacks."

"The Awakening" Hits $25,000 At the Big Minnesota

MINNEAPOLIS.—With moderate weather prevailing business was generally good here for the week of January 13 to 20, the big Minnesota with 4,025 seating capacity leading all houses with a gross of $25,000. "The Awakening" was the feature attraction accompanied by a Publix unit presentation.

The real leader, however, was the Hennepin-Orpheum with 2,900 seats and a gross of $24,000. The screen attraction was Pathe's "Ned McCobb's Daughter," with short screen fillers and six acts of vaudeville.

There was quite a drop below these two houses with the State next in line with $16,000. The screen bill was topped by the First National talkie, "The Barker."

The Strand and Pantages each did a gross of $9,000, the former with "Behind the German Lines" and the latter with "Submarine." The Lyric with a lower scale of prices grossed only $2,500, the screen attraction being "His Private Life."

Opinions on Pictures

The President

This Might Have Been a Good Comedy

(Reviewed by Freddie Schader)

"THE PRESIDENT" is a foreign made film. Eddie Klein is responsible for it having been imported and the little 55th Street Playhouse, one of those Art Picture Theatres, the scene of its American premiere.

Of course it is understood that it is difficult for pictures of this type to get a showing in this country, but this one with a little additional touching up of the titles that would add to the comic aspect of the situations in the story could have been developed into a very good comedy. The ground work is present in the picture to permit of this.

On the whole the story is a burlesque on the Republican form of government. But in this country we are broad enough not to stop a film because it kids the procedure that we follow in choosing our directors of the national corporation. If this was an American film kidding an European custom as established as our elections are, then Hays and our Government would have been flooded with diplomatic messages urging its being banned.

"The President" relates the adventures of a lowly peasant farm hand, who, suffering illusions of his own grandeur and ability to make attention compelling speeches, steps into a political convention in his native country, dressed in a borrowed dress suit and a topper that doesn't fit, and holds forth at great length in front of that assemblage with the result that he is hired as a spellbinder for the coming campaign. He does inflame the populace by his oratory and becomes a great favorite. He is chosen to be the radio announcer on the date that the party is to announce its nominee for the presidency. When he reads the speech and notes the name of the Royalist who has been nominated by the men higher-up, he announces his own name instead, with the result that he is elected.

The principal Royalist, whose plans were defeated by this, then visits the president and proposes a match between the newly elected office holder and his daughter. The girl consents with the understanding that it is to be one of those "wife in name only" arrangements. Then after she is wed her father tries to obtain a franchise for all the oil lands, which the President refuses to grant, whereupon the Royalists plot his unseating. They are almost successful, but the farmer lad turns the tables on them again, and then they plan his assasination. When they attempt this he walks out on the country but the people insist on his return and he is again seated with his wife, by this time discovering she is in love with him.

Drawing Power: Not much to this one, unless it is retitled and worked into a laugh from start to finish.

The Little Wildcat

They Aren't Wild, But Are Catty

(Reviewed by Freddie Schader)

WARNER BROS. have turned out a very entertaining talking feature in "The Little Wildcat." There are about four short talking sequences in the production and they have been so nicely blended that one overlooks the fact that there are silent moments in the feature. Incidentally, two old timers to both the stage and screen, George Fawcett and Robert Edeson run away with all the honors that there are to be had in this picture. Of the quartet of youngsters, Doris Dawson, Audrey Ferris, James Murray and Hallem Cooley, only the first mentioned shows anything like a flash when it comes to talking. In little Doris Dawson the Warners would seem to have a bet that could be developed as Sue Carrol was, for she is not unlike Sue as to type and has a pleasing little pouty manner of working. Ray Enright who directed the picture handled little touches in a pleasing way.

It is Fawcett and Edeson as two old Civil War vets who both open and close the picture. It starts and ends with these two quarrelling. Fawcett was a private and Edeson a Captain in the war. The former has become a power and has more than a million and he has hired the former captain as his companion so that he can get even with him for things that happened during the war.

There are two girls, Fawcett's granddaughters. Audrey Ferris playing the elder and Doris Dawson the younger. Audrey is being courted by a local swain played by William Cooley, but whenever Doris gets a beau, Audrey will break off with her boy friend just to steal whatever Doris has in tow. That is the situation when Jimmie Murray playing Conrad Burton an aviator, arrives in town to promote an airport. The grandad hates airplanes and flyers and when the Chamber of Commerce asks him to contribute a piece of land for the airport he flys off the handle. Then Conrad steps in and tries to meet the girls so they can win the old man over. It's the same old story, Doris gets him and Audrey wants him. In the end Doris goes to the boy's room in the hotel and compromises herself, first having tipped off grandfather where she is going, so that he'll appear and insist that she marry the boy, even though he is an aviator.

Drawing Power: This one will please the old folk and likewise tickle the flaps as well. Then there are two names, that of Robert Edeson and George Fawcett to play up, together with the aviation angle. It is all there with romance, laughs and talk.

Produced and distributed by the Warner Bros. Length, 5,644 feet. Running time an hour and four minutes. Released Jan. 5, 1929. Directed by Rey Enright.

The Leathernecks

Fine Story, Well Handled

(Reviewed by Jerry Hoffman)

"THE LEATHERNECKS" is a perfect example of both judicious and injudicious use of sound. It shows its qualities and its defects. It is a fine story, beautifully handled and there isn't a fault to be found in the work of any member of the east. Yet, I wish I had seen a silent version before I heard the dialogue.

The treatment of "The Leathernecks" is what makes its sound effective. The crux of all situations in the entire story is a court-martial. Tex Calhoun (played by William Boyd) is on trial for desertion. He and two buddies, one of whom is insane at the time of the trial, and the other dead, left the Marines without leave for a secret mission. He unfolds his tale in dialogue, and there is a very clever and novel "voice dissolve" as his voice dies slowly into the scene of which he is telling. The "flash-backs" which constitute most of the action, are all in silent form.

It is a story of the remarkable friendship of three marines, played by Boyd, Alan Hale and Robert Armstrong. The locale shifts from France to Northern Russia and then to Tientsin, where the court-martial takes place. In Russia, Boyd, or rather Calhoun, has fallen in love with a girl of the nobility. They are married. A revolution takes place, her father and brother are killed and she is kidnapped. Calhoun is led to believe that she is dead. While down in Tientsin his buddies hit the trail of the man who abducted Calhoun's wife. They leave and a couple of weeks later he discovers the reason and follows. He arrives at the place to find the abductor killed, one of his buddies insane and the other dying. But no trace of his wife. He returns with his buddies, one dying en route. He faces trial and the timely reappearance of his wife serves to save him from being found guilty.

Drawing Power: Good any place. Even special potentialities, properly handled. Exploitation Angles: Plenty of names, go after them.

THEME: Story of the marines exceptionally well told, and without any war or battle sequences in it. Marine who marries a Russian girl and loses his two dearest friends in their attempt to aid him recover her when she is kidnapped.

Marquis Preferred

Anything Else Is to Be Preferred

(Reviewed by Freddie Schader)

THIS is just another Menjou "walk through." There is little or no story and were it not for the fact that Chester Conklin is in the picture there would be nothing to look at. Dot Farley in a mother role helps a little but not enough. The two girls that are supporting the star, Nora Lane and Lucille Powers respectively, contribute absolutely nothing to the picture. Why they were ever selected will remain one of Melrose Avenue's mysteries, unless the new Mrs. Menjou has decreed that a certain type of girl must in the future play opposite her husband. If she has it is just too bad, 'cause 'Dolph isn't going to get very far with that kind of support. The best thing about the whole picture were the titles which Herman Mankiewicz was responsible for.

The picture is based on a story by Frederic Arnold Kummer with Ernest Vajda contributing the adaptation. After viewing this it must be admitted that Vajda, like his companion in arms Caesar, has kept his record clear of any success other than the one he had originally and on which he received his picture contract.

Frank Tuttle, who directed, tried his best with the material at hand, but that was not enough to turn out a hit.

Menjou is a marquis and like most of them, broke. He owes everyone, his credit having made it possible for him to maintain his chateau, but with the opening of the story his creditors come down on him and insist on settlement or else he is to be ousted from his home. He thinks quickly and promises a settlement shortly, for he is about to marry an heiress. A moment later, after they have left, he confesses that there is no heiress in sight and his tailor who has remained behind to evesdrop overhears the confession and threatens trouble. The valet and the chef try to convince him that there is something to the heiress idea, providing he will furnish the funds to exploit the marquis. This he consents to do and a contract is drawn up incorporating the marquis, with the trio to provide the girl.

It is then that they come upon a Chicago packer who with his wife, son and daughter are touring the country. An arrangement is effected whereby the packer's daughter is to marry the marquis, but this is against his plan for he is really in love with companion. The girl discovers the contract and spurns the marquis as a fortune hunter, after which he marries the packer's daughter and leaves her immediately after his title has been officially conferred upon her. A time later and he is working in a book shop on Fifth Avenue in New York and in dressing the window with books, he tells the story of his affairs to the girl he loved who is standing the other side of the window.

Drawing Power: Nothing but the star's name.

Under the Southern Cross

Interesting Drama of New Zealand Maoris

(Reviewed by Walter R. Greene)

PRODUCED in the wild country of New Zealand, with the entire cast composed of Maori tribesmen, "Under the Southern Cross" has plenty of good entertainment.

Scenic beauty of the country provides a background for a dramatic love story with members of opposing native tribes as the principals; and yet the picture is so constructed that the customs and tribal dances are logically woven into the production without losing audience interest.

The leading players in the drama—all natives who never before appeared in front of a Bell and Howell—could give a few of our Hollywood actors a few pointers in how to register sincerity before the camera. It is hard enough for a director to make a picture at one of the fully-equipped studios with trained film players; but an ordeal when the director takes a crew on location. But Lew Collins found himself in the hinterland of New Zealand with only two cameramen for a staff, and with only natives as actors; and asked to bring home a picture. He did.

The story is that of the eternal three: hero, heroine and villain. The girl, daughter of a great chief, is pursued by the villain, son of a chief in the same tribe. Meeting the son of the head of another tribe, the girl immediately falls in love. A contest for the winner of the girl is staged by athletes of the two tribes amid elaborate tribal ceremonies. The heavy's team is successful, but the girl escapes the village and goes to the hero. The villain follows, with a fight ensuing, climaxing on the crater edge of an active volcano. After a realistic battle, the villain is tossed into the boiling pit. Tribesmen pursue the hero, with the two tribes finally clashing in a free-for-all spear battle. Villages are burned during the melee, but peace between the tribes is finally established when the two lovers get to the final fade out.

There are sequences of exceptional photography throughout the picture, especially those of the fight on the brink of the burning crater and the scenes shot in the underground stalactite caves. Night shots of the war canoes crossing the lagoon are outstanding.

Drawing Power: With more than ordinary advertising, the picture should draw. There are no names to tie to, but any class of audience will be greatly entertained after they are in. The picture is unusual, but of the type that the real showman will just love to put over.

Produced and distributed by Universal. Length, 6,500 feet. Release, not set. Directed by Lew Collins. Photography by Wilfred M. Cline and Harold Smith Titles by Walter Anthony.

Why Be Good?

Boosting Colleen's Average

(Reviewed by Jerry Hoffman)

EVEN in preview form, this promises to be one of the best John McCormick has turned out with Colleen Moore in some time. The story is better than some of her more recent vehicles, for which Carey Wilson can take a bow. William Seiter has given it good handling in direction, and Paul Perez is entitled to a big hand for his titles. They are very clever and draw plenty of laughs.

"Why Be Good?", which was originally slated for release under the title of "That's a Bad Girl," revolves about a young lady who is rather wild—but of the type "thoroughly capable of taking care of myself." She meets the young son of the owner of the department store in which she is employed. They fall in love, (there should be a rubber stamp for that phrase in reviews), but his dad insists that he discover just whether she is a good girl or not before they marry. To slice it thinner, he discovers she is good and they marry.

It is more of the lovable Colleen than has been seen in some time. What's more Colleen, with her usual generosity, permits a great deal of footage to scenes in which she is not, but which are full of entertainment just the same. That's what makes Colleen so adorable on and off and what makes her pictures good. Not that Colleen can ever tire the eyes of an audience. She isn't the type.

Neil Hamilton is opposite Colleen with a fine supporting cast including Edward Martindel, Louis Natheaux and Bodil Rosing, among others. There are plenty of live scenes and, incidentally, Colleen proves to be quite a wonder as a hoofer.

Drawing Power: Colleen Moore's value should never be neglected. Besides the title and theme, dealing with youth and the jazz life can be played for grand results.

Produced by John McCormick. Distributed through First National. Release date, March 17, 1929. Length, 7,000 feet. Directed by William A. Seiter from the story by Carey Wilson. Titles by Paul Perez.

"Sweet Adeline"

(Pathe—One Reel)

THIS Aesop Film Fable, which is entertainingly animated, has for its novel setting, the theatre. Among those appearing on the bill at the Fableville Playhouse is Adeline, favorite of all, but loving only Milton Mouse. After some clever pen work in which magicians, hippos, tigers, etc., do their turns, Adeline goes into a dance on the stage, and partner Milt sings "Sweet Adeline."

Before Milt has finished his yodeling, he is socked by a villainous cat. The curtain lowers, and the lovers depart from the stage door. The villain, waiting outside, makes off with Adeline.

Milt sets out in hot pursuit. He chases the cat and the gal up and down buildings, on elevated trains and in taxis. Finally he overtakes the pair, beats the cat senseless and completes his song to sweet Adeline. The cartoonist has put some good effort into this number, and it will surely please fans of these films.—GEORGE J. REDDY.

New Fairbanks and Barrymore Pictures

Douglas Fairbanks in "The Iron Mask"

Star in an Entirely New Light

(Reviewed by Edwin Schallert)

DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS in "The Iron Mask" reveals the maker of many a good romantic tale in an entirely new light. In this lavish production, which spells huge investment in rich and beautiful settings, he becomes the sponsor for what might be called a "noble experiment" conveying a spiritual message.

Ever since "The Gaucho," Doug has been en route to a new goal, and "The Iron Mask" is much further along the way than its predecessor. It is a beautiful picture, it is an interesting picture, and unusual.

The star has resumed the role of D'Artagnan. He has taken up the life of this character approximately where the story left off in "The Three Musketeers" and has carried on from there to the climaxing tragedy of his death. The picture also shows Athos, Porthos and Aramis slain in a terrific conflict with the aim to restore the throne of France to its rightful possessor. Richelieu and the handmaiden of the Queen, whom Doug loves, also figure prominently in the plot, though they, too, fail to survive the havoc.

Doug has removed the sting of these many deaths in a visionary ending. Here four musketeers, showily semblances of themselves, are shown to be reunited, hailing a future after death with "there is greater adventure beyond." The picture effectively closes with the title "The Beginning" instead of "The End."

People will be attracted to this production, and, in many cases, inspired by its courage to say something new on the screen. They will find that it has the same lively spirit of the old "Musketeers," especially in the opening portion. Here swashbuckling adventure and excitement predominate and there is plenty of comedy, even though the latter portion of the picture is far more serious it cannot be said that the adventurous feeling has been lost. There is always abundance of action, growing out of the varied and colorful story.

Marguerite de la Motte, Nigel de Brulier, William Bakewell, Dorothy Revier, Boris de Fas are seen in prominent roles, while Allan Dwan directed.

When the film is shown publicly, it will have the spoken word as additional embellishment. The characters will speak directly to the audience in soliloquy form. Sound or silent, the picture is sure to reach a wide audience and be both applauded and debated.

Produced by Douglas Fairbanks. Distributed by United Artists. Footage not determined. To be released on March 30, 1929. Director, Allan Dwan.

Eternal Love

Not Likely to Fulfill Expectations

(Reviewed by Edwin Schallert)

JOHN BARRYMORE and Ernst Lubitsch. The combination sounds as if it might yield one of the season's greatest pictures. A great actor and a great director. "Eternal Love," the picture which discloses the union of their talents is likely to arouse anticipations too high for the character of fulfillment.

This is not to say that it is not a splendid production. There are scenes of natural beauty photographed in the Canadian Rockies that are absolutely unrivalled. There are splendid and subtle touches of direction in which Lubitsch is master. Barrymore himself gives a performance as admirable as anything he has done since he came to pictures. Furthermore, the role he plays is unusual.

The locale of "Eternal Love" is Switzerland during the period of the Napoleonic invasion of Austria. The troops made the little republic their highway. Peasants under military rule are forced to give up all firearms. And Barrymore, at the behest of the heroine, although his life is that of a hunter finally yields to the mandate of the invaders.

All this is preliminary to the main story which tells of the mismating of the hero and heroine, through a forced marriage of the former. The broken lives of the two central characters are shown, their conflict with small town prejudice, which eventually results in their being run out of the hamlet and forced to flee to the mountains. The ending is stark tragedy—the man and woman killed by an avalanche but with a sort of mystical close that suggests their happiness after death.

Nothing that Lubitsch has done in the least resembles this picture. Its quality of beauty is exceptional and unquestionably it has stronger popular elements of appeal than "The Patriot," through the pathos and sentiment of its love story. Barrymore is not the ideal type for the role he plays, but he acts effectively. Camilla Horn is very beautiful, Mona Ricco does a pepful rural Carmen and Victor Varconi's performance as the husband of the heroine is noteworthy.

"Desert Nights" New Title for M-G-M's "Thirst"

Hollywood, Jan. 24.—M-G-M announces a change in title of "Thirst" which was reviewed last week. It will be released under the name of "Desert Nights," the latter being considered a more appropriate title.

A Lady of Chance

A Gold Digger De Luxe Is Norma

(Reviewed by Freddie Schader)

THIS feature is one of the best in screen entertainment value that has hit Broadway in three weeks. It's a picture that holds an audience and with Norma Shearer's name on it there seems no reason why it shouldn't show a nice big profit at your box office.

The picture was made from a story written by LeRoy Scott and Robert Leonard directed it. Boh, incidentally, showed that he still remembers his Broadway and Atlantic City from the manner in which he handled this one.

At the opening of the picture Norma Shearer, as Dolly, is found operating the switchboard in a fashionable hotel. She's there fore the express purpose of making a wealthy chump so that she can pin on the shake, but just as she is about to connect another gold digger with her little boy friend, who were on the job for the same purpose step up and declare themselves in on the play. The result is that when the John is taken for ten grand, the two interlopers try to stall Dolly with a tale that the check that was given in payment when the badger game was worked, was stopped. In reality it was paid and the money reposed under the pillow of Gold-digger No. 2. They didn't fool Dolly at all for she just walked in took the money without their knowing it and walked out again.

Then she is at one of the big boardwalk hotels in Atlantic City during the cement convention, overhears a little chatter in the elevator and makes up her mind to take another chump who has been mentioning money away up in the telephone numbers. But this chump is too clean morally to even fall for her wiles or understand what they are all about. He takes it seriously and proposes marriage, whereat little Dolly decides that would be as safe a way as any of taking him into camp. But here again the two "friends" of the previous episode step into the picture, and again little Dolly is too wise for them. She skips out leaving them hold the bag and marries the boy and starts south with him. Of course, they follow and when the boy manages to sell his formula to the biggest cement company in the world they are right on the job to declare themselves in. Dolly, who by this time has fallen in love with her husband is afraid to block their plans for fear they will expose her past and she carries on with them until the last minute in New York, when they stand ready to sign a contract with the boy which will mean that they will have all the rights to his discovery. Then she calls the police herself and gives herself up to save the situation.

Drawing Power: Norma Shearer and her cast will pull anywhere.

Myers Tells Policy of Allied States

intervention by the exhibitors' organization in that suit a petition will be filed for permission to become a party in the case. "There is a deep-seated feeling in exhibitor circles that there should be more equity and less law in the practice of arbitration in the industry," is is asserted. "The inequality that has existed between exhibitors and distributors in the matter of advice and preparation will be in a measure overcome through the agency of the Allied States Association. However, the rule that the arbitrators shall not depart from the strict letter of the contract really takes the practice out of the field of arbitration."

The organization also will carefully study the music tax which, it is declared, gives rise to more dissatisfaction than any other charge imposed on the exhibitors. All the questions involved in this tax will be carefully investigated but, until all the data has been secured, the organization will take no stand on the question.

Mr. Myers' statement, in full, is as follows:

Text of Statement

"The Allied States Association of Motion Picture Exhibitors has been formed to meet the obvious and pressing need for an organization to promote and protect the interests of the only unorganized branch of the motion picture industry.

"The functions of the several branches of the industry are distinct, even when they fall under common domination or control. The exhibition of motion pictures is distinct from the production and distribution of such pictures. While the members of the several branches have a common interest in the welfare of the industry as a whole, the exhibitors cannot, and should not, rely on the other branches for the protection of their interests.

"The exhibitor does not apologize for his presence in the industry. He has made, and is making, his contribution to its advancement and prosperity. In the beginning he taught the public to attend motion pictures and to like them. During a critical stage of the industry he largely financed the production of pictures under a system that called for advance payments on contracts for films that had not yet been made. That he has survived the unusual competitive situations obtaining in the industry is proof of his ability and showmanship.

"The purpose in forming the Allied States Association was to provide an effective agency to promote and protect the interests of the exhibitors of motion pictures. I accepted the leadership of the movement because my observation of the industry caused me to recognize the urgent need for such a body, and because the many expressions received from exhibitors throughout the country convinced me that it would succeed.

Represents Exhibitor Interests Only

"The Allied States Association represents the interests of the exhibitors only. It will cooperate with other branches in matters affecting the interests of the industry as a whole, but in all matters in which the interests of the several branches conflict it will speak and act only for the exhibitors.

"There will be no departure from this policy. The exhibitors in looking to the Allied States for protection will not have to distinguish between the voice of Jacob and the hands of Esau.

"This is the only policy that picture exhibitors can support or tolerate. There is nothing in it that should alienate any such exhibitor. It is only when the interest of a particular exhibitor in some other branch of the industry exceeds his interest as an exhibitor, that he will be justified in opposing or withdrawing from this organization. Should this policy result in any exhibitors aligning themselves definitely on the side of the producers, at least the atmosphere will be cleared, and the past and future acts of such so-called exhibitors may be judged in the light of their primary allegiance.

"The producers and their spokesmen have often voiced their concern for the welfare of the exhibitors, and have expressed the hope that the exhibitors would perfect a strong organization with which they might deal.

"The attitude of the producers towards the Allied States Association will be viewed in the light of those expressions. Moreover, the right of one branch of an industry to organize for its protection is the same as the right of any other branch. Any interference with the exercise of that right, direct or indirect, will constitute an un-American act which will merit the public condemnation that it receives.

"The organization of the Allied States Association is such as to exclude politics from its operations. It will not seek to meddle in the internal affairs of any other branch of the industry. It will demand like immunity for its own affairs. Its value as a constructive agency for the promotion and protection of exhibitor interests will be judged in the light of its accomplishments; it may possibly be reflected in the nature, source and inspiration of any opposition it may encounter.

Brookhart Bill

"The Brookhart Bill has for its primary purpose affording the exhibitors the right of free selection in leasing films. The many letters I have received and conferences had convinced me that there is an urgent demand in exhibitor ranks for a change in prevailing selling methods. If this can be worked out by negotiation between the several branches of the industry, all will be satisfied.

"A subordinate feature of the Brookhart Bill would empower the Federal Trade Commission to act as an arbitrator and to make rules for the guidance of the several branches of the industry in case of disagreement. This immediately gave rise to the cry of 'Government regulation'; and the argument was advanced that the Government should stay out and leave the industry to settle its own problems. This calls for a bona fide effort on the part of those making the argument to settle such differences within the industry.

"The exhibitors do not want Government regulation for the sake of regulation. If they can accomplish their legitimate ends without regulation they will be entirely satisfied. But they are not unmindful of the fact that the industry now operates under many forms of Government regulation from which they derive no benefit. The copyright law which gives a monopoly value to the films they must use, and under which a music tax is imposed on them; the patent law, under the pretext of which conditions and limitations are imposed on the use of sound equipment, and the tariff law, designed to exclude foreign films and equipment, all are Government regulations.

"The exhibitor would rather not be regulated; but as between remaining in business subject to regulation, and being driven out of business for lack of regulation, they choose the former.

Interchangeability

"The burdens incident to the readjustment to sound have not been equally distributed among exhibitors. One manufacturer of sound equipment, claiming basic patents, has agreements with the producers of film that such film shall not be leased for reproduction on machines not made or approved by it. The reproduction equipment of this manufacturer is expensive and the company is far behind in its installations.

"Meanwhile the theatres having such equipment have an incalculable advantage over those that have not. There is room for the suspicion that the interests enjoying this competitive advantage are not over-anxious to terminate it. There are other reproducing devices which are immediately available, have been pronounced satisfactory and are cheaper. Exhibitors having such installations are having difficulty in getting sound film and disks because of the restrictive covenants in the license agreements. In numerous cases film has been absolutely refused.

"From such study as I have been able to give the matter in the short time that has elapsed since I took active charge of the Allied States Association, I have concluded that the restrictions in question are clearly outside the power of the parties to impose. I can see no substantial difference between such restrictions and the ones which were held illegal in the suits brought by the Government against the Motion Picture Patents Company and the United Shoe Machinery Company.

"The situation appears to call for action by the Government in the public interest. Such a proceeding if pressed to prompt conclusion would afford general relief. Several instances of refusal to lease film for reproduction on unlicensed equipment will be submitted to the proper authorities in the expectation of inducing such action. Failing this the association will co-operate with the individual members in an effort to find a prompt solution of their individual difficulties.

Arbitration

"Public policy favors arbitration, and so far as I am aware no one objects to any system for the prompt, economical and fair adjustment of disputes. Whether arbitration, as practiced in the motion picture industry, measures up to those standards, or is merely a coercive method for enforcing the specific performance of contracts wholly lacking in mutuality, is the issue in the case of the United States of America v. Paramount-Famous-Lasky Corporation et. al., in Equity No. 45-100, in the United States District Court for the Southern District of New York.

"Numerous exhibitors with whom I have discussed this case have found serious fault with the answer filed on behalf of the defendants. The facts in support of their criticism will be collected and sifted, and submitted to the proper authorities if found pertinent. A petition for leave to intervene will be filed if that course shall later seem advisable.

"There is a deep-seated feeling in exhibitor circles that there should be more equity and less law in the practice of arbitration in the industry. The inequality that has existed between exhibitors and distributors in the matter of advice and preparation will be in a measure overcome through the agency of the Allied States Association. However, the rule that the arbitrators shall not depart from the strict letter of the contract really takes the practice out of the field of arbitration. Take, for example, a suppositious case. The disgruntled manager of a theatre that is about to be sold contracts with the agent of an exchange for a large amount of pictures of the kind that are wholly unsuited for exhibition in that theatre. The purchaser of the theatre is not advised of the transaction until the exchange calls on him to assign play dates. He declines to assign play dates and is summoned before the board. The exchange man is present with counsel, and under the practice the award must be against the exhibitor under the strict terms of the transfer clause.

"In such a case it is hard to discover what

Outdoor Talker and Presentation All Roxy Shows

"In Old Arizona" Smashing Records at Big House With a Short Show

Because of the feature, "In Old Arizona," running an hour and thirty-three minutes and the desire of the management to create a new record for the Roxy with the first all-talk outdoor feature to be produced, the show at this house was cut to the bone to permit of the turnover to get the crowds in and out of the house this week. The entire program comprised only a Fox Movietone News running thirteen minutes, a single shot from the silent news running a minute, and a stage presentation entitled "Excena Mexicana," which ran twenty-one minutes. This gave the show a total running time of two hours and eight minutes, which is about a half hour less than the program usually is at this house.

The business for the first four days was terrific and the outlook is that the record will be broken. So certain were they of this that immediately after the first day Roxy himself departed for Florida for a week to ten days' vacation figuring that "In Old Arizona" would remain possibly three weeks at the house.

The program opens with the Movietone News and the presentation follows. It is a colorful arrangement which has "My Tonia," the theme song of the picture as its principal musical contribution. Gladys Rice has a number early in the offering that gets over, and the 32 Roxyettes in a series of Mexican dances shine as the outstanding hit of the show. A sister act singing native songs in Spanish scored with a portion of the audience who evidently understood what they were singing about. A male chorus number at the finished showed pleasing harmony.

The feature followed and on Monday during at least two of the shows the amplifiers were out of commission at exactly the same place in the picture on each occasion. After that day the picture was cut an additional 500 feet to permit of greater time being made on the subsequent shows for the week.

Duncan Sisters on Paramount Bill to Stand Off Strong Opposition

THE Duncan Sisters were evidently brought into the Paramount this week atop of the regular show to stand off the opposition of the "Arizona" all talking bill at the Roxy and the showing of "The Green Hat" under the title of "A Woman of Affairs" at the Capitol. It wasn't a bad idea, for the Duncans will undoubtedly pull some additional patronage to the big Publix house, although their offering is just the same as the one they have been doing in picture houses for a couple of years. In addition to the sister act the stage show had the Publix revue "Barcelona" a Boris Petroff unit and Adolphe Menjou in "Marquis Preferred." The latter proved to be just another Menjou feature, with the star walking through a role that had no kick to it and had it not been for Chester Conklin and Dot Farley there would have been little or nothing to it. The couple of girls supporting Menjou were very weak.

To admit the Duncan Sisters there was one number cut from the "Barcelona" unit. Even with this the show ran two hours and eighteen minutes.

Opening the program was a six minute overture of a medley of Southern melodies, Osman and Schepp, the banjo duo, being added to the regular pit orchestra under the Dave Rubinoff direction for a brief moment in the number. Rubinoff is becoming more and more of a Creatore in his eccentric manner of directing. He may if he continues to build himself along this line finally fall heir to the title "The Mad Leader."

The Paramount News with two news shots and the balance of three "Flashes" took the next five minutes of the show with Jesse Crawford following with two numbers. They were "Where the Shy Little Violets Grow" and "When Summer is Gone" both of which were seemingly very much to the liking of the audience on Saturday afternoon, for the organist was heartily applauded for his contributions.

"Barcelona" filled in the next thirty-two minutes of the show. The Dorothy Berke Dancers are strongly played up in the programming of the unit, but other sets of girls seen in the three revues prior to this one have shown a great deal more pep and proved a better stage flash than these. Vocally they were far from pleasing and their dancing was naught to speak of. The girls had the opening chorus and another number immediately following it. The latter a routine with capes and swords was the better of the two.

Joe and Jane McKenna with the burlesque dancing routine filled in next and walked away with the honors as far as the unit was concerned. Jane McKenna reminded one a lot of the type of work that Mabelle Lewis did a few years back. Gene Rodemich and his boys with Bobby Gilbert went over with a number and then the dancers were on for their "Flamingo" number which proved their most colorful

Paul Specht Band, Estelle Fratus Are Hits of the Colony's New Show

PAUL SPECHT and his orchestra went into the Colony this week as the stage band which is to be utilized to build presentations around at this house. The leader was billed around the Broadway neighborhood with one sheets, evidently his own property, carry a strip date for the house. Specht made his debut with the showing of the Warner Bros. Vitaphone feature "The Little Wildcat," in which George Fawcett and Robert Edeson show up to such advantage that they put the balance of the cast out of the running. Because of them the picture proved highly entertaining and the surrounding bill was equally so. The show ran one minute over two hours.

Eight minutes of the current International News reel opened with a trailer for next week's attraction, Pathe's "Sal of Singapore," in talk, showing up very well. This was followed by Pathe Sound News No. 6. The latter was more of a magazine than a sound news reel. It held the Carrillon at the Rockefeller Church in New York the arrival of the round the world cruising "Belgenland" at San Pedro, Cal., with George Ade and other celebs taking the tour making brief talks. The feature followed for an hour and four minutes, after which one of Universal's "Lucky Rabbit" cartoon comedies, "The Yankee Clippers" was shown.

Specht Clicks Nicely

Paul Specht and his band together with the added specialties absorbed the next 20 minutes. Opening with "I Can't Give You Anything but Love Baby" the boys clicked with the house and their follow up "Sweetheart of All My Dreams" sent them along further. Then Evelyn Dean, who is from Chicago arrived for a blues ballad and some stepping. Her gown was charming and she isa blonde, outside of that it would have been just as well had Evelyn remained in Chicago, for she has nothing that she displays on the Colony stage that will add to the gaiety of Broadway. "Sleep, Baby, Sleep" was the next band number and this was followed by a production number "Wedding Bells Are Breaking Up That Old Gang of Mine." That's a pretty lengthy title but the number is done most effectively by the Specht organization. The band is screened behind a drop, while the drummer having left his traps and donned his overcoat is out in one under a prop lampost telling the story of the boys who have married.

Soubrette Has Everything

A little Soubrette from Australia, Estelle Fratus, stepped out in front of the band next and walked away with the show. She's cute, has a great little personality, a pretty pair of limbs and boy, how she can hoof! Triple taps are nothing to her, they just roll out under her toes, and with it she can handle a number nicely. She's good enough to head any one of the Publix units. Her one number was "What Are You Going To Do Now?" and she sold it. A stepping routine and a forced encore followed. A "hot" dance number by the boys and then Billy Rose with an acrobatic dance that entitled him to the label of "The Human Pinwheel." For the picture houses it would be just as well to drop the chair trick that he is using, or else split his stuff in half; first doing the chair stuff and then into the hoofing.

The final number by the band is "A Night At The Club" with a melange of the old barber shop chord melodies revived. It's a little draggy as against the pace of today and therefore if it is used it should not be the closing number of the turn.

Capitol Out for Big Week's Trade With Strong Bill

Putting on Extra Show for "Woman of Affairs;" Colorful Revue

This week it looks as though the Capitol is going to be another house on Broadway to break the record for business. There is no doubt but "A Woman of Affairs" will hold over for a second week. The house put in an additional show by opening at 10.30 A.M. after Sunday. At that the show here is running two hours and twenty-six minutes of which the feature takes an hour and thirty-two minutes. But with the possibility of a record-breaking week in sight the Capitol is giving its audiences a full show just the same as usual.

For an overture they are playing "William Tell" running eight minutes. This is followed by a combination silent and sound news reel for nine minutes after which the stage revue is on for thirty minutes.

This stage revue is a mighty colorful affair entitled "The Pirate Blues" with the foredeck of a pirate sloop used as the setting and the stage band in pirate costumes. Three outstanding hits developed by the specialties were interpolated in the program. They were Evelyn Wilson, who did two numbers, her first being "Everybody Loves You," which hit heavy. Her second number, however, had the audience asking for more when she finished and she virtually stopped the show. A little later Al aud Ray Samuels stepped a routine that also scored with those in front and this made two bullseyes in the show, but atop of this the biggest applause hit of all showed when Howell, Harger and Naldi, an adagio trio, went through their routine. These two men and a girl displayed a series of throws and catches, with an outside loop being done by the girl, that brought the house down.

Dave Schooler and his boys were in fine form and a special arrangement of a number by Tony Gale likewise scored.

The Duncans on Paramount Bill Stand Off Opposition

one. Jack North, "The Ban-Jokster," next, proved that he is much better on the screen than in person. Rene and Evelyn in a tango were the offering just prior to the finale and they showed some delightful work.

The Duncan Sisters appeared just ahead of the feature. The girls running through their close-harmony singing and then going into their burlesque bit. The latter was best received by the audience, although the scattering of flowers and then vegetables into the audience lead one to believe it wouldn't be long before the Paramount might have "country store night" and then go into the "dish racket." That sort of thing is out of place in a theatre that has the class that this one has.

Buffalo Votes In Support of Talking Films

Poll Overwhelmingly For Dialogue, But Also Wants Silents

Talking pictures are all popular, but paradoxically the motion picture theatre-goer wants the silent films retained, according to a poll made of audiences in his theatre by H. M. Addison, managing director of the Great Lakes Theatres in Buffalo, New York.

Out of a total 2,000 votes cast on the various questions propounded by Manager Addison 1,962 expressed a preference for talking films and 38 against them. At the same time in answer to the question, "Do you want silent films eliminated?" no less than 1,308 voted no and 654 voted yes.

The synchronized score proved none too popular in this poll, but in explanation of that it is said that the city boasts a large music loving population and many singing societies. Answering the question, "Do you prefer orchestral music to synchronized score?, 1,941 voted yes and but 52, no.

There was also a preponderance of opinion against limiting sound in pictures to effects and music. The vote against this was 1,635 to 351.

Following are the questions asked and the vote recorded:

	Yes	No
Do you prefer talking pictures?	1962	38
Do you want silent films eliminated?	654	1308
Do you prefer orchestral music to synchronized score?	1941	52
Would you limit sound in motion pictures to effects and music?	351	1608
Do you like part talkies?	981	1001
Is your interest in talkies increasing?	1950	43
Is your interest waning as the novelty wears off?	32	1961
Do talkies lessen your attendance at stage plays?	321	1603

Columbia to Produce One-Reel Talkies

A SERIES of one-reel talking pictures, to include in their casts prominent stage and vaudeville names and promised as entirely different from any now on the screen, will be made by Columbia this year.

Poll at Exhibitors Meeting Demonstrates Synchronized Films Unprofitable

SYNCHRONIZED pictures are not profitable to the exhibitor, according to a poll made among theatre owners of the M. P. T. O. of Eastern Pennsylvania, Southern New Jersey and Delaware at the meeting held on January 17. No exhibitor reported any profit on the synchronized films, though talking pictures showed a balance on the right side of the ledger.

This poor showing of the synchronized pictures was ascribed by the house owners to the increased cost, the exchanges asking from 25 per cent to 50 per cent for synchronization charges and the additional charge for the records of from $25 for two days in the smaller theatres to $250 per week in the larger houses. In addition the increased cost of operation adds greatly to the expense of the exhibitor.

Officers were elected at the meeting as follows:

President, Lewen Pizor; vice-presidents, C. Floyd Hopkins of Harrisburg, and Walter Steumpfig, Philadelphia; treasurer, Mike Lessy; secretary, George P. Aarons. The following were elected members of the board of directors: Charles H. Goodwin, Jay Emanuel, Charles P. Shisler, George Kline, Columbus Stamper, George Gravenstein and Harry Green.

New Equipment In Field Proves Interchangeability

Talkaphone Latest to Get Approval for Sound Reproduction

Interchangeability is becoming more and more definitely established each week since the statement was issued by Electrical Research Products Company to the effect that pictures might be shown on equipment that came up to the necessary requirements.

Talkaphone has been added to the disc devices that have proved their interchangeability with pictures recorded by the Western Electric sound system of recording. This information was furnished by W. A. Steffes with "Lilac Time," at the Logan Theatre in Minneapolis. Paramount, First National and United Artists are said to have accepted sound contracts under this device, and Columbia also has signed to extend service.

Bristolphone, already established, will make two more demonstrations this week at the Family Theatre in Jackson, Michigan, and the Midland in Newark, Ohio. The Jackson will open with "The Flying Fleet" this Sunday, while the Midland introduces "Interference," Monday.

Vitaphone pictures are to be served on Biophone apparatus at the Miller Theatre, Milwaukee, according to John A. Ludwig, who, with Jerry Abrams, distributes the Biophone equipment in the Milwaukee and Chicago territories. Ludwig and Abrams are in New York for conferences with Alfred Weiss, head of the Biophone corporation. Single reelers are being screened at Ludwig's Parkway, Milwaukee, in a test of the Biophone installation at that house.

First Yiddish All-Talkie Due From Universal

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, Jan. 22.—The first all-Yiddish talking picture will be made by Universal and will get under way in the near future. It is titled "The Green Millionaire" and was originally produced as a stage play. Abraham Schomer wrote it and with Sherman Lowe is adapting it for the screen. Rudolph Schildkraut will probably play the leading role.

Warners to Re-Make "The Narrow Street" as Talkie

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, Jan. 24.—Warner Brothers will re-make "The Narrow Street," which they first produced in 1925, with the new version to be all-dialogued. It is understood that Warners are searching for suitable talker material from past releases, and will re-make any that lend themselves to the new process. Recently Warners finished an all-talk version of "Skin Deep," previously made by Thomas H. Ince.

Sound Pictures Cut Employment of Movie Extras

Annual Report of Central Casting Bureau Shows Falling Off

According to the annual report of the Central Casting Bureau from the west coast talking pictures are responsible for reduced employment in the ranks of motion picture extras. The seriousness of the situation from the standpoint of the extras may be gleaned from the fact that during the year 1928 the earnings dropped more than a third of a million dollars over 1927.

The figures contained in the report are interesting. They show that the extras earned $2,469,711 in 1928 as compared with $2,838,186 in 1927. The average was $8.59 in 1928 as against an average of $8.94 for the previous year.

The total daily placements for 1928 show a decided drop over 1927. In 1928 the placements were 276,155, while in 1927 they were 330,397. The deficiency in the figures for the two years are explained by the fact that sound pictures have been in an experimental stage for the past year and producers did not care to take a chance at this early stage of development with large mob scenes. The situation is now righting itself, however, and indications are that the extras will soon again come into their own.

Laemmle Puts New Technique Into "Broadway"

Carl Laemmle, Jr., associate producer for Universal, has instituted a new technique in the making of talking pictures in connection with the filming of "Broadway." Formerly the silent version was shot first in its entirety and then the sound and dialogue sequences were made.

By the new plan Laemmle alternates the production schedule so that silent scenes are taken one day and dialogue scenes the next. The photography of the silent scenes and the same scenes in dialogue on successive days is said to make for closer coordination and greater efficiency, as well as for more perfect portrayals.

When the players make the silent version it is really a rehearsal for the sound version as they speak their lines all the way through. This means a saving of both time and money. Dr. Paul Fejos is directing "Broadway" under the supervision of young Laemmle.

Paramount Signs Oscar Shaw for "The Cocoanuts"

Oscar Shaw, musical comedy star who from time to time has appeared in the silent drama, will again play a screen role, this time in "The Cocoanuts," the forthcoming feature that will star the four Marx Brothers.

Norma Talmadge to Be Heard in Talkie

NORMA TALMADGE'S voice will be heard for the first time on the screen when she makes her next picture, an all-talkie that will be based on a Broadway stage play, which John W. Considine, Jr., United Artists studio executive is now selecting in New York. Gilbert Roland will be Miss Talmadge's leading man and George Fitzmaurice will direct.

Two current Broadway plays are now under consideration for Miss Talmadge and the definite selection of one of them will probably be made this week. Laura Hope Crews, prominent stage actress is in Hollywood and will rehearse Miss Talmadge in her lines.

Feist Making National Survey On Sound Films

Final Test Is Good Picture Whether Sound or Silent, Says Sales Chief

Felix Feist, general sales manager of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, is on a coast-to-coast trip, in which he is checking up carefully on the public reaction to sound pictures generally and all-dialogue pictures particularly. Stopping at Atlanta, Mr. Feist summarized his findings, briefly, up to that point as follows:

That good pictures effectively synchronized with music and sound effects are making a strong bid for permanent favor; that only a carefully selected and very limited number of plays lend themselves to all-dialogue handling, and that the utmost discrimination must be used in choosing vehicles for all-talking productions; that the final test is a good picture whether silent, synchronized with music and sound effects, part-talking or all-talking. The records show clearly that good silent pictures have drawn bigger money in direct competition to part-talking or all-talking pictures.

On his way to Atlanta, Mr. Feist stopped over for a day at Charlotte. He was joined in Atlanta by District Manager Charles E. Kessnich, who, after the Atlanta conference at the M-G-M exchange, departed with him for New Orleans. Mr. Kessnich will go as far as Dallas and then return to Atlanta, while Mr. Feist will continue on to California.

Morton Downey Signed by Pathe for Talkies

Pathe has signed Morton Downey, brilliant young tenor, to appear as a singing and talking artist in productions to be made in New York this year. The picture will be made by Robert T. Kane at Sound Studios.

Downey's first production for Pathe will be a full length feature called "Mother's Boy," from an original story by Gene Markey, who will write the dialogue and prepare the script.

Columbia May Put Synchronous Device on Market

Success of Non-Synchronous Machine Prompts Entry Into New Field

Columbia Phonograph Company, having established itself in the non-synchronous sound field with the Columbia Theatrephone, is now considering a synchronous device which it may shortly have on the market. The company is one of the largest disc and phonograph manufacturers and already claims to have installed 146 of the Theatrephones.

An extensive selling campaign of the Theatrephones is under way, with a well organized sales department handling the machine and sales offices to be established in all the key cities. Theatrephones, it is said will be produced to the number of 250 a month after March 1.

Columbia has exclusive contracts with Kolster Radio, which owns the Nakken sound-on-film patents and manufactures several of the parts for Theatrephone. The agreement between the companies, it is said, will be carried out if Columbia enters the talking picture synchronous field. Columbia, is said, however, to prefer a sound-on-disc synchronizer.

Lane Music Box Revue Rights Go to Educational

Lupino Lane has signed an agreement with Educational Film Exchanges, Inc., whereby the latter company has the sound picture rights to any of the material staged in the Lupino Lane Music Box Revue which is being presented at the Hollywood Playhouse in Los Angeles.

The Revue had its premiere on Christmas night and Educational will present many of its highlights and much of its dialogue and musical accompaniment in future pictures. Lane is Educational's leading comedy star. He has had wide experience both on the stage and screen. In the cast with him in the Los Angeles musical comedy production are, Doris Eaton, leading lady; Wallace Lupino, brother of Lane, and Betty Boyd, the latter two featured players on the Educational roster.

Tiffany-Stahl Finishes Two More Productions

Tiffany-Stahl has completed two more talking productions at the RCA studios in New York and Belle Bennett, Joe E. Brown, Alma Bennett and Alberta Vaughn have returned to the coast. The two pictures are "Molly And Me" and "Reputation," the latter a temporary title. These make three completed talking productions, as George Jessel's "Lucky Boy" was also recently finished.

Coast Wise to Tax "Expert" Gag

Finds Income Specialist Files "Gyp" Returns

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 24.—So-called "income tax experts," who have found Hollywood film stars easy pickings in previous years, are now discovering that the many tax liens issued during the past year by the government have made stars leary of them. Annually, as the deadline for filing approaches, hundreds of alleged "experts" flock to Hollywood and clean up with film folk who have not the business ability to render their own accountings.

Hollywood screen people have been gullible for practically any type of high-powered salesman. Each year a large number of shysters sell many stars the idea of permitting them to handle their income tax returns on the basis that they can save them great sums of money. Many of them claim to have worked for the governments' tax departments in the past, and a few have actually been employed by government departments. Most of them work on a percentage basis, receiving an amount based on what they claim to have saved the account in taxes. Fees ranging from $10,000 to $25,000 on such arrangements have been known to be paid.

Expert "Gyppers"

What actually happens in such cases is that the alleged "expert" has turned in an account which doesn't save the star a cent and ofttimes costs him more than it would had he filed it himself or permitted a certified accountant to handle it. In other instances, the "expert" files accountings which are erroneous and which save the taxed person money only until the government has checked up. In such cases, the "expert" has received his fee and disappeared long before the star or director knows he has been "gypped." It is generally two or three years before the star is notified that his income return of a certain year is not true and in many cases this has resulted in liens, or fees for attorneys, going to much greater expense to clear matters up. By this time, the amount supposedly saved, not only must be paid to the government, but adds interest at six per cent per annum.

Avoiding Danger

Several artists and directors personal managers have taken the precaution to guard their clients from such "experts" by handling their income tax returns themselves. These managers keep a record of all contracts and sources of income for their clients and the worry is taken entirely from them.

There are also many established attorneys and accountants in Hollywood who do not enter the classification of "gyp expert." The ease with which the fly-by-nighters talk stars out of going to their established representatives or attorneys has cut into the good faith as well as income of the honest ones.

No More Sad Endings for Jannings Films

A TWENTY four sheet announcing "Sins of the Fathers" carries this line: "A Hundred Jannings in One Picture and A Happy Ending."

The "happy ending" slogan is figured by wiseacres along Broadway as being virtually an official announcement that the unhappy endings of preceding Jannings vehicles failed to click properly at the box office.

A check up by Paramount among theatres, it is said, led to abandoning tragic denouements for Jannings films.

Mix May Return to Fox, Hollywood Hears

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 24.—Tom Mix may return to the Fox fold, following the completion of his tour in Europe, according to Hollywood reports. Mix and RKO are definitely through with each other. While Fox was originally willing to let Tom go, they discovered that his box office value was far from lost as soon as he joined FBO, now RKO. They immediately reissued seven of his old features and found greater demand than ever for the Western star.

7 New Roach Comedies

Final titles for seven of new Hal Roach comedies have been selected. The latest "Our Gang" comedies will be known as "Wiggle Your Ears" and "The Holy Terror." One will be released in February, the other in March. The two new Stan Laurel-Oliver Hardy co-starring comedies will be called "Wrong Again" and "That's My Wife." The first of these will be released in February, the other picture in March. The seventh and eighth Charley Chase productions, also for release in February and March, have been titled "Off to Buffalo" and "Loud Soup." The new All-Star comedy will be known as "When Money Comes" and will be released in March.

"Voice of the Storm"

Lynn Shores will direct "Voice of the Storm" for FBO. Cast includes Karl Dane, Theodore von Eltz, Martha Sleeper, Warner Richmond, Brandon Hurst, and Hugh Allan. Walter Woods wrote the continuity.

Roach Signs Society Girl

Hal Roach has signed to a long-term contract a new discovery of his, Jean Harlowe, former Chicago society girl, who has been in the cinema capital but a short time.

Arzner to Direct Rogers

Dorothy Arzner, Paramount's woman director has been assigned to direct Charles "Buddy" Rogers' next starring film, "Young Sinners."

Seiter Gets New F. N. Contract

First National has signed William A. Seiter, director, to a new contract. Mr. Seiter's first production under the new agreement will be "Prisoners." Upon completion of "Prisoners" Mr. Seiter will direct Colleen Moore in "Early to Bed." Ian Keith will have the leading role in Miss Griffith's new production. Among others in the cast of "Prisoners" are Jean Lafferty, Otto Matieson, Ann Schaeffer and Baron Von Hesse.

Change in Name

L. G. Rigby, scenario writer under contract to Warner Brothers, will hereafter get screen credits under the name of Gordon Rigby. He is writing adaptation and dialogue for "The Narrow Street" which Warner Brothers will produce as an all-talker.

Rehearsing Dialogue

Dialogue rehearsals have been started for Ronald Colman's initial all-talker for Samuel Goldwyn's "Bulldog Drummond." F. Richard Jones is directing, with cast including Joan Bennett, Lilyan Tashman, Montagu Love, Lawrence Grant, and Claude McAllister.

Music Tax

"Regardless of considerations of justification this tax gives rise to more dissatisfaction than any other charge imposed on the exhibitors of motion pictures. The Department of Justice examined the subject with some care, and announced that it could take no action under the Sherman Anti-Trust Law, because interstate commerce was not affected.

"The sole support claimed for the tax is the copyright law. The extent to which the law really supports the tax in its present form, and, assuming it does, whether or not the copyright law ought to be amended, are questions which will be carefully studied."

MANAGERS ROUND TABLE CLUB

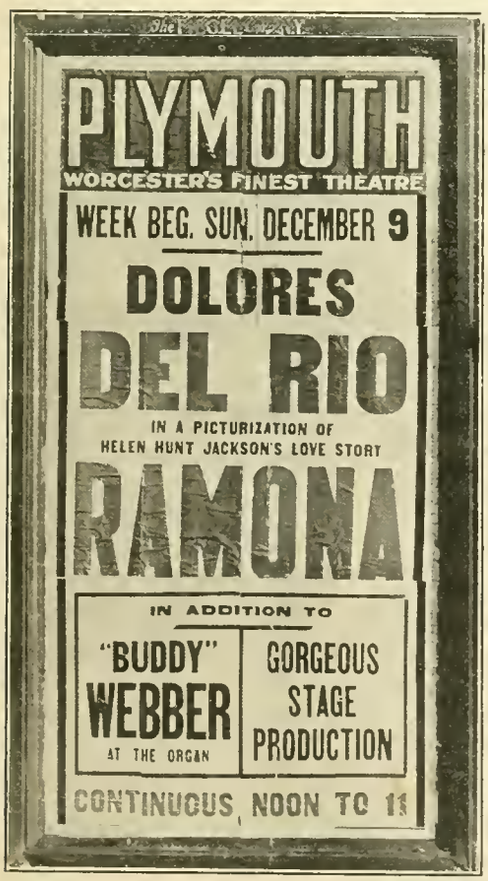
CLEARING HOUSE FOR BOX OFFICE PROBLEMS and THEATRE OPERATION

By Charles E. Lewis

of the Alfred Gottesman Theatrical Enterprises, New England

Billboard Poster Advertising

We are showing below the type of three sheet board referred to in our recent article about this type of advertising. Those who recall the article will agree that it represents one of the neatest kinds of advertising adaptable in any town and city. When results are considered then the expense is not great.



Further information about such advertising will be cheerfully given to those interested.

A Request for Program Suggestions

Sydney Oshrin, manager of the Allerton Theatre in the Bronx, N. Y., asks that managers of the CLUB send in copies of their programs so that we may select, what we believe are the best, and publish them here as a guide to other members. We think the suggestion is a good one and therefore invite members and readers to send us their program weekly. While you read this make a note to place us on your mailing list. Many members have already done this and we receive a certain number every week. Now, acting upon Mr. Oshrin's suggestion we are going to ask for EVERYONE'S weekly program or house organ.

In addition to publishing some of these programs on the CLUB pages we are certain that we can pick out many interesting things to talk about.

Listen Sydney, if you are looking for REAL suggestions on exploitation of pictures just keep watching the CLUB pages and you will find more tried and successful stunts than any exchange-man ever believed possible about his own pictures. So look no further brother, you have what you are looking for right in front of you. And this applies to all the other Sydneys, Harrys, Jacks and others.

A sample of three-sheet billboard used by the Plymouth Theatre in Worcester, Mass.

Thank You Wyatt

I have a very fine letter from Robert Wyatt, manager of the A. H. Schwartz Rialto Theatre in Brooklyn and Bob I was sure glad to hear from you. As for meeting me officially as Chairman of the Round Table Club, I can only suggest that you send your application in as soon as possible, then you WILL be one of us.

I will certainly let you know when I can meet you personally and hope it is very soon. In the meantime we would like to hear how you put over some of your pictures. Send me the "dope."

What Are "Robots?"

Did you read Mr. Johnston's editorial comments on the subject of "Robots" in the issue of January 12th? If not, do so at once and then, if you work for a theatre chain, pin it in a conspicuous place in your office. After that, just wait until the G. M. or one of the other (numerous) officials pay you a visit and if they read it—great.

But maybe you work for a "regular" circuit where such practices are not popular and where you are really permitted to "manage" the theatre you are in. Then, it will just be interesting reading for you. When circuit heads squelch the individuality and personal aggressiveness of a manager and force him to conduct the job of retaining a vacilating public along the lines that they dictate, they invariably do a lot of harm.

The First Talley

RECENTLY we sent out a letter asking members which, in their opinion, was the best Box Office bet: A Good silent picture or a fair synchronized picture.

The score up to this time is as follows:

For Good silent pictures, 27.

For Fair synchronized pictures, 0.

Inasmuch as there are quite a few more members to be heard from we will withhold any comment at this time, but as soon as all the answers are in we shall endeavor to draw up a summary based upon the letters we have received and also publish some of the more interesting letters from different parts of the country. C.E.L.

Welcome Jack Allen

Chalk up another member from Canada. This time it is Jack Allen of the Capitol Theatre in Kitchener, Ont., Canada.

Jack writes to tell us about his Christmas Party and how it was handled in his theatre and it just proves again, that they are just as "live" up his way as they are anywhere else.

Something tells me that Allen will be a steady contributor to the CLUB pages and coming from up Canada way should make it all the more interesting. Thank you, Jack, for your season's greeting—the same to you and let's hear from you again—soon.

Good Will and a Holiday Spirit

R. L. Nellis, publicity manager for the Strand and Arc Theatres in Crawfordsville, Ind., sent me some mighty fine publicity which he engineered for his Strand Theatre by co-operating with the local Sunshine Fund.

He placed a barrel in his lobby where patrons could deposit any article which they wanted to contribute to be distributed to the needy at Christmas. The papers, in appreciation of his fine aid, gave him plenty of free publicity and all together he earned lots of good will for his theatre.

Once again, let us say that such tie-ups can readily be arranged at other times of the year and will always create much favorable comment in your town. Try it with your local Sunshine Society, Salvation Army or other welfare working organizations.

We'll bet after you've tried out the idea you'll be on the alert to repeat it whenever the occasion arises. Good-will is so valuable a thing to have that theatremen should always try to further it.

"Sound" Exploitation Division

Preparations of exploitation stunts on "sound" pictures are now being edited for early publication. Members and readers who have used some special form of advertising campaign on "sound" pictures are urged to send in a description, together with any newspaper ads, etc., that they may have. They will be published under this new division of the CLUB.

Newspapers Assist Canadian Exhibitors in War on Tax

Many newspapers of Ontario, Canada, have taken up the battle against the rather heavy amusement tax which is imposed upon patrons of theatres in the Province, thus supporting the exhibitors in their demand that the Ontario Provincial Government cancel a large portion of the levy.

The "Fort William Times-Journal," among others, refers to it as a "Nuisance Tax" that is a relic of the war. The suggestion is made that all tickets up to $2 should be exempt from the tax, in view of the healthy financial condition of the Province.

Canadian Editors Cut Down On All "Free Advertising"

Canadian newspaper editors are clamping the lid on the publication of free reading matter for moving picture distributors when the latter have not made their presence known in the advertising department of publication offices. This particularly concerns new film enterprises in the Dominion.

Through their association, the newspaper publishers have intimated that "free advertising" would be refused until a start is made with "paid publicity."

Wesco Theatres Plan Three New Buildings

WEST COAST now has two theatres in Stockton, Cal., the California and the State, designs are being drawn for a third house. This theatre will be at a location between Main and Market streets, according to 'Frisco report.

West Coast will enter Modesto for the first time, giving the people of that city the finest building that money can build.

Marysville will soon be introduced to West Coast entertainment, through a new theatre structure to be built shortly.

Harry Cappelen, well known along 'Frisco row has been made manager of the Coliseum Theatre. He formerly worked at the Golden Gate, California and other local theatres.

Walter A. Weber and Albert A Greenbaum were re-elected to their respective offices, representing the Musicians Union Local No. 6 A F. of M. They have served their members for a number of years in unbroken annual terms.

Mel Hulling, with Pathe in 'Frisco several years ago and later with Associated Exhibitors, was a recent visitor.

Pietro Brescia, assistant musical director at Loew's Warfield for the past four years, conducted the concert orchestra at the Alexandria Egyptian Theatre, which reopened at Geary Street and 18th Avenue on January 4th. Brescia expresses the policy of the theatre, as indicated by Samuel H. Levin, its owner, for the highest standards of musicianship both in the classic and popular sense, in scoring the pictures and playing the stage concerts.

L. J. Williams, formerly from Tacoma and Seattle, Washington, where he was connected with some of the largest theatres, has been made manager of the Alexandria Theatre in San Francisco by the Levin Brothers.

3 Des Moines Publix Key Houses Wired

THE Strand theatre, Des Moines, now has the Vitaphone and Movietone installation which makes all three of the first-run Publix houses in Des Moines so equipped. This gives the A. H. Blank-Publix houses the pick of the sound pictures as there are no other houses nearabout so equipped. Several theatre owners in nearby towns are to have the sound equipment before spring.

Mrs. Nate Frudenfeld, wife of Manager Frudenfeld of the Capitol Theatre, Des Moines, has been convalescing at the hospital, following a bad attack of the "flu."

Herbie Koch left the Capitol Theatre, Des Moines to go to the Riviera at Omaha as organist

A petition has been circulated at Newman Grove, Iowa in which a request is made for a special election to decide upon Sunday movies. The petition has been filed with the city board. The Ministerial Alliance of Newman Grove have in former years made quite a stand against the bringing in of Sunday shows to Newman Grove. They are also opposed to the Sunday shows at this time.

The Plaza Theatre Corporation last week sold the Plaza Theatre at Waterloo. The new owner is W. T. Waugh.

O. P. Laird is the new owner of the Grand Theatre at Nashua. This house was formerly owned by Mrs. Larson.

Flu Has Hurt Up State Pennsylvania Business

THE flu, which has been ravaging the up state sections of Pennsylvania, has seriously affected the motion picture business. Salesmen traveling through this section of the state report that sales have fallen off from 45 to 50 per cent. Health authorities, however, are of the opinion that the epidemic is on the wane and several schools which have been closed have been allowed to reopen. No theatres are reported as being closed as yet but indications are that several will be forced to shut down unless business improves in the near future.

The Castle Theatre, Frankford avenue and Amber street, Philadelphia, operated by Charles Segal, has been leased by Jacob Becker.

Two anniversaries will be observed during the week of January 28th at the Stanley Theatre, Philadelphia. One will be that of the house itself, which is just rounding out eight years of continued success, and the other that of the birth of Victor Herbert, who was always a favorite in his guest appearances at the Stanley. The anniversary of the Stanley brings to mind the fact that it was the building of this theatre and 19th and Market Sts. eight years ago that marked the establishment of a new theatrical center in Philadelphia.

Fred D. Pheit will build a new theatre in Oak Lane on the site now occupied by the old Windisch residence at the corner of Broad street and 65th avenue.

The Twin City Scenic Studios recently opened an office in the Widener building, Philadelphia, under the management of E. L. Wayne.

Paul Donville, a young Philadelphia artist who has been commissioned to paint the mural for the foyer of the new Uptown Theatre, has been compelled to tear out the partitions of the upper floor of his house in order to accommodate the large canvas. The painting is called "The Chase" and measures 8 by 27 feet.

Final arrangements have been completed for the annual dinner-dance of the M. P. T. O. of Eastern Pennsylvania, Southern New Jersey and Delaware, to be held in the Crystal Room of the Benjamin Franklin Hotel in Philadelphia on January 27th.

Ciney and Vicinity Have Quiet Week

PLANS have been developed by John Eberson, architect, Chicago, for the new theatre which the Young Amusement Co., of Gary, Ind., will build at Springfield, Ohio, in opposition to the Regent-Schine organization, recently formed there.

The Regent Theatre, Springfield, operated by the Schine-Chakeres interest, has gone talkie, and will shortly feature Movietone.

Archie F. Bangert, who began his theatrical career as an usher of the old Keith house at Columbus, a dozen years ago, and who subsequently managed Loew's Broad in that city, has now been made manager of the Broadway, at Columbus, which has reopened as a second-run house.

Approximately 600 news carriers employed by one of the dailies at Dayton, Ohio, were given a Saturday morning matinee at Loew's Theatre, as the special guests of the newspaper and Manager McManus. The delegation paraded the principal downtown streets prior to the performance.

The Photoplay Theatre, Grand Rapids, has ben extensively remodeled, entirely redecorated and equipped with a new front.

Chester Martin, manager of the Orpheum Theatre, Cincinnati, has thrown aside his arduous duties and left for a month's sojourn in Hollywood, where he will be the guest of Al Rockett, general manager of production of First National Pictures.

The Orpheum, Cincinnati, is broadcasting a fifteen-minute program of musical selections and movie intimacies every evening except Sunday from local station WKRC.

Fire originating in the basement of an adjoining furniture store, menaced the Rialto Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio, for several hours one morning last week. The store was completely wiped out, but the theatre lobby and auditorium were saved by hard work of the firemen, although the exterior of the building was considerably damaged. Projection machines and other paraphernalia were removed from the building during the course of the blaze.

The meeting of trustees of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners' of Ohio, which was scheduled for Columbus early in January, has been postponed, but will probably be held late in January.

Indiana Theatre Deal Effects Four Houses

THE Fourth Avenue Amusement Company of Louisville, lessees of the Grand Theatre, Terre Haute, Ind., since April 1, 1927, has completed a transaction with the Western Indiana Theatres Corporation and the Keith-Albee interests, transferring the leases of the Indiana, Liberty, American and Hippodrome Theatres here to the Fourth Avenue Amusement Company.

Shannon P. Katzenbach, manager of the Grand Theatre, becomes general manager of the five Terre Haute houses.

The deal carries with it a 25-year lease on the Indiana Theatre, a 45-year lease on the Liberty, a 23-year lease on the Hippodrome and a 5-year lease on the American Theatre. The Western Indiana Theatre Corporation, it was said, will remain intact.

Confession of a 16-year-old youth led to the arrest of a young man and a girl companion at Indianapolis, Ind., and, according to detectives, prevented a holdup at the Apollo Theatre. The youth told detectives that the three planned to rob the manager of the theatre when he started to the bank with the theatre receipts. The two young men were ushers. It was decided to arrest the two rather than permit them to proceed with their plans and walk into a police trap.

George S. Challis, owner of the Wysor Grand Theatre, Muncie, Ind., has announced that he will install a Vitaphone in the Sipe Theatre in Kokomo, Ind., and said he had appointed H. E. Stevens, of Danville, Ill., to manage the Sipe and Indiana Theatres, both in Kokomo. Mr. Stevens will succeed J. J. Dewald. Mr. Challis is head of the theatre company erecting a house in Anderson, which will be equipped with Vitaphone before it opens March 1.

It is seldom a theatre can burn for a week and cause no damage. But this is what happened to the Tivoli Theatre, South Bend, Ind., before the fire ate its way through the stage floor.

Firemen, finally called when the fire appeared on the stage, were obliged to tear away boards for some distance to get to the base of the fire.

Lack of a crowd recently at the Luna Theatre, Logansport, Ind., probably accounted for the lack of a panic when a fire broke out in the furnace room. Before the fire was discovered, about half of the small house had left the building because of the smoke filled auditorium.

An immaculately dressed bandit, working lone-handed, held up Emory Hoover, manager of the Luna Theatre, Logansport, Ind., and escaped with $860. Hoover was alone at the time and was unaware of a visitor in the office until commanded to put up his hands.

Paul C. Bryan, formerly Atlanta branch manager for Fox has recently been appointed special representative of the Fox Movietone department.

Approximately 45 cases were disposed of at a recent session of the Atlanta Joint Board of Arbitration and another meeting was held Tuesday, Jan. 22, to clear up all cases on the calendar.

In order to permit the screening of sound pictures in the exchange, RKO Productions, Inc. (new name for FBO), will equip the Atlanta branch with RCA Photophone.

A divisional meeting of Warner branch managers in the Southern territory was held in New Orleans last Saturday and Sunday at the Monteleone Hotel. It was attended by Claude C. Ezell, general sales manager; J. V. Allen, recently appointed Southern and Western division manager; John Ezell, head of the Atlanta office; M. W. Davis, Charlotte office; F. F. Goodrow, New Orleans office; Otto Rohde, Oklahoma City office, and T. B. Wildman, Dallas office.

F. A. Rogers, who operates the Tiger Theatre at Auburn, Ala., announced that he had made arrangements to equip his house with Vitaphone and Movietone, installations to be made in August. The Tiger is now being operated with non-synchronous device.

Louisville

David E. Dow, resident general manager of the Keith-Albee-Orpheum Theatres in Louisville, who has just been appointed colonel on Governor Sampson's staff, has been promoted to division manager in the Western district of the K-A-O Corporation. He planned to leave the Rialto Theatre here Jan. 18 to take over his new duties under John F. Royal, manager of the Middle West districts, with headquarters in Chicago.

With Mr. Dow's promotion, the announcement was made that J. H. Boswell, now manager of the Mary Anderson Theatre, will become manager of the Rialto, and A. B. McCoy, manager of the Majestic until it was closed Jan. 1, will become manager of the Mary Anderson.

G. A. Duncan, Lyric Theatre, Carlisle, Ky., has been confined to his home with a severe cold.

Florida

Following the lead of Tarpon Springs, who allowed a "straw" ballot of qualified voters to decide on the Sunday movie question, the city commissioners of Lakeland decided to allow the same arrangement for their city. Petitions will be circulated to all qualified voters and if a majority favor the Sunday shows the commission will repeal the ordinance which now prohibits them.

Eddie Crane, who has been at the Capitol Theatre, in the Springfield neighborhood of Jacksonville, has resigned as managing director, and left for St. Petersburg, Fla., where he will be associated with the Shimko interests at the Patio Theatre.

Locke Crumley, manager of the Jefferson Theatre at St. Augustine, Fla., is still in the hospital with the flu.

Charles S. Morrison, for seven years associated with Jacksonville theatres, has resigned as manager of the Florida, effective Feb. 2, to become president and general manager of the Jacksonvile baseball club.

Announcement of his successor at the Florida will be made in a week or so, according to information at the Publix district offices in Jacksonville.

J. E. Ramos, manager of the Prince, Tampa, has decided to discontinue the "tab" shows. The stunt went over nicely during the holidays, but since then they have not been showing up very strong at the box.

Memphis

Managerial changes in two loop district theatres and one film row exchange marked the news of the past week.

The executive place at the new Orpheum Theatre, opened Nov. 19, has been taken over by L. R. Pierce. He succeeds W. A. Hartung, sent to Memphis by Radio-Keith-Orpheum to launch the new house.

Harold Evans, manager of Loew's Strand, has been promoted to the managership of Loew's Richmond, Richmond, Va. His place is taken over for the time being by R. E. Fowler, former assistant manager of Loew's State.

Fox Film Corporation's Memphis office got a new manager and a new booker with the arrival of Hugh Rennie, formerly salesman at Denver, new manager, and L. Dinwoodie, formerly booker at Indianapolis.

J. C. Shannon, branch manager, becomes a salesman out of the St. Louis exchange, and J. B. Loomer, booker, goes on the road as salesman from Memphis, covering Arkansas.

Memphis theatres last week were already calling the influenza crisis a thing of the past, while houses in the territory were beginning to show far brighter prospects, with 16 that had been closed on account of the malady reported re-opened during the past six days.

A check Tuesday of reports of closing disclosed that out of 46 theatres in the Memphis territory which have been closed on account of the flu, 18 have been reported as reopened, leaving 28 still closed.

Sound pictures will make their debut in Hot Springs, Ark., on Feb. 9, with Vitaphone and Movietone at the Princess, owned by Sidney M. Nutt.

The Burlington Theatre at Knoxville, Tenn., was badly damaged by fire late last Saturday night.

The Grenada, Grenada, Miss., owned by Homer J. Williams, is showing pictures this week with Orchestraphone accompaniment.

Other Orchestraphone installations reported include the Regent, Indianola; the Strand, Wilmot, Ark.

Ohio M.P.T.O. Board Convenes After Delay

THE board of directors of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Ohio met in Columbus on Jan. 22nd. This is the meeting that was originally called for Jan. 8th, but was postponed because many of the members could not attend.

Nat Barach of Ad-Vance Trailer Service and Charles Beckerman, who is associated with him in the sale of this service, together with Mrs. Barach and Mrs. Beckerman, are spending a few weeks in Florida.

Mrs. H. Goodsteen, mother of Al Goodsteen of Standard Film Service and of Marie Goodsteen of Warner Brothers, died last week after a long illness.

Mrs. Sallie Lieberman, mother of Dick, Sam and Joe Deutsch, all three well known in film circles, died last Wednesday upon her return from California.

The flu epidemic has subsided in Elyria and the theatres have been reopened after being closed for two weeks. Exhibitors who had looked forward to good business when the ban was lifted were disappointed.

Herbert Ochs, local manager for World Wide pictures, has appointed Otto Brauenig on his sales force.

Paul Fine, representing Biophone, reports that Biophone installations are being made in the Termania and Dreamland Theatres, Columbus.

Max Federhar of Akron has turned the Nixon Theatre over to Charles P. Stalder and V. M. Gill, and is now operating Stadler and Gill's People's Theatre. So, as matters now stand, Fedehar has the People's, Regent, Rialto and Cameo Theatres, while Stalder and Gill have the Nixon and Southern.

K. C. Police Seek Photophone Thieves

KANSAS CITY police are looking for thieves who broke into the Prospect Theatre last week and made off with a Photophone demonstration machine and fifty records belonging to the Photophone Company of Missouri.

A theatre now being built at Carthage, Mo., by H. H. Harris, of Springfield, Mo., is to be equipped for sound pictures. The seating capacity is to be 500.

The Old Home Theatre, Hutchison, Kans., has been purchased by C. L. Burt. Fred L. Hershon, Paramount salesman out of Kansas City, has leased the Princess Theatre, Bunceton, Mo., from Mr. and Mrs. Brent Peters.

Many improvements on the Fourth Street Theatre, Moberly, Mo., have been completed, according to Frank Celoud, manager of the Midland Theatre interests in Moberly.

The interest of James Searle in the Main Street Theatre, Independence, Kans., has been purchased by his partner, Robert Montgomery.

Fire of undetermined origin did slight damage to the Missouri Theatre, Maryville, Mo., last week.

Herbert L. Baker, part owner of the Diamond Theatre, suburban house of Kansas City, died from bronchial pneumonia. He was 54 years old.

Among the out-of-town exhibitors in Kansas City market this past week were: Edward Frazier, Grand Theatre, Pittsburg, Kans.; Ben Levy, Hippodrome, Joplin, Mo.; William Leucht, Savoy, South St. Joseph, Mo.; H. C. Trickett, Bird City, Kans.

The first quarterly salesmen's meeting of the year, under the supervision of the Kansas City Film Board of Trade, was held Saturday, January 19, at the Ivanhoe Temple, Kansas City. The problems of salesmen and sales managers were discussed and luncheon was served at 1 o'clock. In the afternoon the discussion was held jointly between salesmen and office executives.

The Novelty Theatre, Topeka, Kans., which now is being wired for talking pictures, was recently sold by L. M. Crawford to the Lawrence Amusement Company. The selling of the house marks the end of Crawford's theatrical interests in Topeka.

Film salesmen, exhibitors and branch managers of Kansas City are contributing to a fund for Sam Goldflam, veteran film salesman, who is confined in a hospital and is without funds or relatives who are in a position to aid him.

Mrs. William Welch—or Miss A. L. Menaugh, as she is more widely known—who, for the last two years, has been secretary of the Kansas City Film Board of Trade, will resign, she has announced.

Tiffany-Stahl Western Managers to Meet

GEORGE APPLEBY, Seattle manager for Tiffany-Stahl, was waiting word last week, as to the exact date that he would be enroute to Hollywood to meet Grant L. Cook, M. H. Hoffman, John Stahl, and other company executives, who are to visit the Coast for a meeting with western branch managers. En route to the South, Mr. Appleby was to pick up L. A. Samuelson, branch manager of the Portland office.

Arthur H. Huot, manager of the FBO exchange, Seattle, oldest branch manager in point of years of service on the local Row, last week announced his resignation with that company, and plans to sail for a vacation in the Orient within a few weeks. Division Manager Frank Shea has replaced Mr. Huot with William Matthews, former FBO manager in Portland and more recently connected with the same company in San Francisco.

The Home Theatre, one of the older suburban houses in Seattle, last week was closed by its owners, Mr. and Mrs. W. T. McLaren.

Ben Fish, manager of the local Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer exchange, last week announced the appointment of Jack Burk to his sales staff in the Western Washington sector.

Hal Elias, exploiteer for M-G-M in the Pacific Northwest territory, is reported to be rapidly recovering from an attack of flu suffered during the holidays.

Walter McNeish, former owner of the Bijou Theatre in Tacoma, which was acquired some time ago by the Circle Theatre Company for operation, has again taken over full command of the house, according to report.

Harry Ulsh, showman of Ellensburg, Washington, visited Seattle last week with a tale of the recent robbery of his theatre safe. Bandits who blew the safe, got away with more than $400 in cash.

Mac Rubenfield, formerly located in this territory as a special representative for M-G-M, and now connected with that company's office in Los Angeles, spent the last week here on a combined vacation and business visit.

New Ontario Censor Regulations in Effect

UNDER the new regulations in Ontario governing the classification of films, made effective January 1, those pictures which are considered suitable only for adult audiences by the Ontario Board of Moving Picture Censors, will not be marked at all, it is announced.

Film subjects which are called suitable for both adults and children, however, will bear thte label "U" and the advertising for such pictures by exhibitors is to bear this mark as a guide for parents.

His Excellency, Viscount, Governor-General of Canada, extended Vice-Regal patronage to sound pictures for the first time when he attended a performance at the Regent Theatre, Ottawa, the Canadian Capital, on January 17.

Manager J. M. Franklin of B. F. Keith's Theatre, Ottawa, Ontario, has been re-elected a director of the Ottawa Businessmen's Association, thus continuing his community activities in this direction.

William Long, manager of the Rialto Theatre, Edmonton, Alberta, has been supervising structural changes in the house which are costing $30,000.

A new theatre is to be erected on the site now occupied by the Palace Theatre at Lethbridge, Alberta, by the Lethbridge Amusement, Limited, a local syndicate.

As a result of an order by the Ontario Board of Moving Picture Censors, the feature "Underworld" is now being presented in Ontario Theatres under the title of "Obey the Law."

Manager Harry Dahn of the Capitol Theatre, Montreal, has been laying considerable emphasis upon the fact that this house is the first to make a regular practice of presenting sound programs with both English and French titles. This was particularly brought out for the week of January 13 when the feature, "Adoration," had the two-language titles, while an added picture, "The Confession," an all-talking subject, had different portions of the dialogue in French. Fine result was seen in the box office.

Dallas Operator Badly Burned in Film Fire

S. A. FRANKLIN, operator for the Dixie Theatre, was seriously burned on the face, neck and hands when he attempted to save films during a fire which destroyed the entire front of the building. I. Wyll, proprietor of the theatre, stated that the fire apparently started in the electric rectifier beside the projection room about 3:30 P. M. Only a small crowd was in the theatre at the time and all escaped safely. The Dixie Theatre is located in the down town section and features second runs. The damage will be repaired and the theatre reopened as soon as possible

Bob Kelly, former publicity director of the Texas Theatre in San Antonio, has been promoted to the position of director of publicity for this district, and will have his new office at the Greater Palace Theatre in Dallas. Mr. Kelly's former position will be assumed by Bob Armstrong, formerly with the Worth Theatre in Fort Worth.

The Arcadia Theatre, the Deluxe Suburban theatre of Dallas, will reinstall Vitaphone and Movietone within the next few weeks as present plans call for a "talkie" opening on Feb. 26, according to L. H. Grandjean, manager. The Arcadia was the first theatre in Dallas to use Vitaphone regularly, but it was necessary to discontinue its use when the Melba installed Vitaphone. It will be possible to make the installation with little delay since the house is already wired for sound equipment.

Since the burning of the Rex Theatre at Stinnett, Texas, that town has been without a show house for three months. The business men of Stinnett decided that a theatre was needed, and let a contract for remodeling a theatre site. This venture is not being attempted for the purpose of showing a profit, but more in the light of a civic improvement and from present indications it seems assured of success.

Two Salt Lake City Houses Get Sound

WESTERN ELECTRIC engineers have been in Salt Lake City working on the installation of sound equipment at the Capitol and Paramount Empress Theatres. The projection booths of these houses are being enlarged.

The Orpheum Theatre of the C. and A. Amusement Company at Pocatello, Idaho, will have equipment for sound and talking pictures installed this month, according to R. D. Carrothers and Eldon Archibald. Remodeling of the projection booth to accommodate the needed machinery is now under way.

Morris Cohn, brother-in-law of Louis Marcus, head of the Louis Marcus Enterprises, died at his home in Denver January 11th, following several weeks' illness.

The Judith Theatre of Lewiston, Montana, opened with Vitaphone December 29th.

At the annual meeting of the Salt Lake City Film Board of Trade, held Jan. 7, L. C. Wingham was elected president, Wayne C. Ball, vice-president, and D. T. Lane, secretary and treasurer and general consul.

R. P. Collins, special Vitaphone representative for Warner Brothers, arrived at the local office during the week.

Pinanski Acquires Site at Natick, Mass. for New Netoco Structure

THE town of Natick, Mass., will soon be favored with a modern motion picture theatre according to an announcement from Samuel Pinanski, President of the New England Theatres Operating Corp. Netoco, which through its program of expansion now embraces a chain of nearly fifty theatres, recently completed negotiations for a choice theatre site at Hayes and East Central Streets in Natick. Ground will be broken within the next few weeks, and the theatre will be ready for opening early in September.

Ten stores will be housed in the same building with the theatre. The theatre itself represents an investment of a quarter million dollars. The plans of John Edmund Kelley of Boston, the architect, have already been approved.

In architecture and treatment the new theatre will be colonial. Entrance to the foyer is planned through a vestibule 24 by 20 feet, and a lobby of equal dimensions. The lobby will have an advance ticket sales parlor. The foyer replete with marble pillars and appropriate murals will be large and spacious, with lounging alcoves flanked with marble fireplaces, and stairs leading to the mezzanine. The balcony will contain 500 of the 1500 seats. The spacing of the seats greater from back to back than required by the Massachusetts Dept. of Public Safety, assures plenty of leg room. Spacious ladies' room, men's lounge and general lounge are included in the plans. The private parking space which surrounds the theatre on three sides is large enough to accommodate four hundred cars. Free parking will be a feature of the theatre's service. Egress to this parking space is planned through the foyer, and through four exits in the auditorium, assuring quick spilling of the house without confusion.

The latest cooling and heating systems are to be installed. All the latest sound equipment including Vitaphone and Movietone are included in the plans. The stage, 82 feet wide by 28 feet deep and with a proscenium opening of 42 feet is large enough to accommodate the most lavish presentation. Nancy G. Harris, well known theatre woman in Natick has been named by Mr. Pinanski as resident manager.

Elaborate Theatre and Office Bldg. Will Be Erected in Rome, Georgia

CONSTRUCTION of Rome's, Ga., new $110,000 motion picture theatre has been started this past week, the contract having been let last Saturday to the Grahm Construction Company of Atlanta. The contract stipulated that actual work was to begin within seven days after the signing, with the building completed and ready for opening within five months.

The theatre, to be located on Broad Street between Fifth and Sixth Avennes, is being built by John M. Graham, Bee Broach and Fred Johnson, for the Lam Amusement Company.

The new house is to be up-to-date in every detail. It will not only be one of the most modern in any city the size of Rome, but it will be fully equipped with the very latest in "talkies" or synchronized sound.

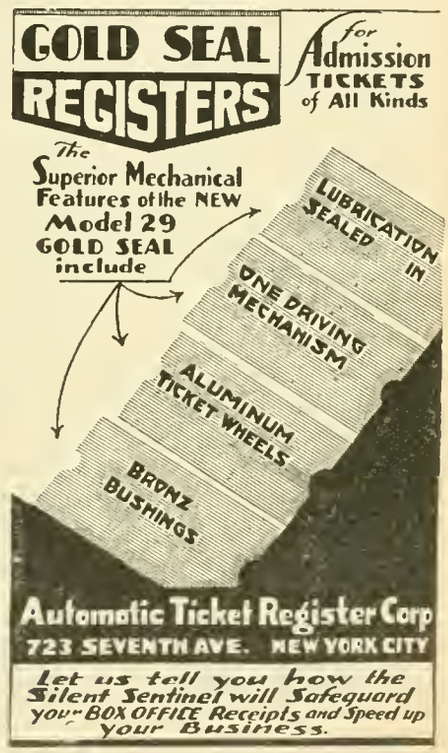
M. A. Tucker, theatre architect, drew the plans, and he, with two special engineers, will superintend the construction. The architecture will follow the revived Greek style and the theatre will be decorated both inside and out. It is announced that no expense will be spared by the builders or the Lam Amusement Company to give Rome the very finest in motion picture theatres.

The building will be two stories high and will house two stores fronting on Broad Street, in addition to the theatre auditorium. The lobby entrance will be between the stores. The seating capacity will be between 1,200 and 1,500, making it easily the largest motion picture house in any city the size of Rome.. When completed the new house will give the city four motion picture theatres, the three others being the Rivoli, the Strand and the Broadway. The latter, it is understood is to be completely remodeled.

These four houses, together with the city auditorium, will give Rome a seating capacity of 4,500.

O. C. Lam and J. H. Lam, who will operate the new house, are planning to give Rome the best in pictures—silent or with sound, and announce that the new theatre, will be the last word in comfort, modern down to the smallest detail and that the furnishings will be the finest that can be had. It is planned to make the exterior of the building a show place in itself. Both are being heartily congratulated for their enterprise in giving the citizens of Rome a playhouse of the beauty and size that the plans for the new theatre insure.

Construction Notes and Theatre Openings



The new Sherman Theatre, Stroudsburg, Pa., was opened with formal ceremonies on the night of January 7th. It is a structure in Corinthian style of architecture, owned by H. A. and Fred F. Schuermann. Delegations attended from the Rotary, Kiwanis and Lions clubs, and master of ceremonies was A. F. Everitt, editor of the Stroudsburg Record.

The Stanley Company is having plans prepared for a large modern motion picture theatre, to be located at Wayne & Chelton Avenues, Philadelphia. Preliminary plans indicate that the structure will be of brick, stone and steel. It is being designed by Thomas W. Lamb of New York and the plans will be submitted for bids in the near future.

Dozier Stone of Columbus, Mo., is contemplating the erection of a new theatre in Fayette, Mo. Plans are being arranged by Boller Brothers of Kansas City, for a main floor and balcony house.

Contracts for the construction of the new Strand Theatre on Commercial Street, Emporia, Kans., have been awarded by the Strand Theatre Corporation, headed by Harry McClure, president, to Davis & Hillis, Emporia contractors.

The plans for the house were prepared by Boller Brothers of Kansas City, and call for a building 75 by 130 feet, two and three stories high with basement. It will be of re-inforced concrete and brick construction, trimmed with stucco and terra cotta. The estimated cost is $225,000.

Hollywood—Continued

"She Goes to War"

John Monk Saunders, author of "Wings," now is titling "She Goes to War," the Henry King production of Rupert Hughes' story. Eleanor Boardman has the principal role in this film.

"Behind Closed Doors"

Scenes of mystery feature the shooting of "Behind Closed Doors," now in production at the Columbia West Coast Studios. Cast has Virginia Valli and Gaston Glass as leads. In supporting roles are Andre De Segurola, Otto Matiesen and Fannie Midgley. R. William Neill is wielding the megaphone.

Pathe Signs Aldine

As the direct result of his portrayal of the newspaper office boy in "The Office Scandal," Jimmy Aldine has been placed under a long-term contract by Pathe. Six years ago he made his debut in pictures as the cabin boy in "Down to the Sea in Ships."

"Time, Place and the Girl"

With an all-star cast engaged for its interpretation, the Vitaphone version of "The Time, The Place and The Girl" has gone into production at the Warner Studio. Recording of Vitaphone sequences outdoors will be one interesting phase of this picture based on the stage success by Frank R. Adams and Will Hough. The roar of an excited football crowd will be the first Vitaphone episode to be filmed by Director Howard Bretherton. Grant Withers, Gertrude Olmstead and Betty Compson head the cast. James Kirkwood, Vivian Oakland, Gretchen Hartman, Irene Haisman and Best Roach, also have parts.

Joan Bennett

Joan Bennett, daughter of Richard Bennett, has been signed by Art Cinema, United Artists producing unit, to a three-year contract. She left New York Wednesday, January 16th, for Hollywood.

"U" Engages Lowe

As a result of his adaptation, continuity and dialogue on Universal's "Broadway," Edward T. Lowe, Jr., has been tendered a contract by Associate Producer, Carl Laemmle, Jr.

New Title

"This is Heaven" is the title which Samuel Goldwyn has definitely decided on for the new Vilma Banky picture which has recently been completed on the coast as her first appearance in a modern American role. This production, an original story of a Hungarian immigrant girl in New York written by Hope Loring, was filmed under the temporary title of "Fifth Avenue."

Matt Moore in "Coquette"

Mary Pickford has added Matt Moore to the cast of her all-talking production of "Coquette." Moore will play the role of Stanley Wentworth.

John Gales, who had been previously slated to play the role of Stanley, was also under contract to appear in stock in San Francisco and found that the screen work would interfere with his stage run.

Columbia Signs Neill

Columbia has signed R. William Neill, director, for the making of six pictures.

New Pathe Serial in Work

Pathe has started production on "Queen of the North Woods," new serial with Ethlyne Clair and Walter Miller in the leading roles. Spencer Bennet and Tom Storey will co-direct the picture, from an original by George Arthur Gray.

Belated Honeymoon

John Barrymore and his bride, Dolores Costello, sailed from Los Angeles recently on the S. S. Virginia for a belated honeymoon trip. When their wedding took place Miss Costello was at work on "Alimony Annie." Their first destination will be Panama. At the Canal they will board their yacht and continue their trip, probably spending some time at Havana.

John Reinhardt Cast

John Reinhardt, son of the Austrian composer, Heinrich Reinhardt, has been signed by Universal for a featured role in the forthcoming all-dialogue screen play, "The Climax" which Renaud Hoffman will direct.

"The Cloud Patrol"

Marjorie Daw again plays opposite Reed Howes in "The Cloud Patrol," the latest picture in the "Russ Farrell, Aviator" series of aviation dramas being released by Educational.

New Leading Lady

Cliff Bowes, who is again appearing in Educational-Cameo Comedies, has a new beauty as leading lady in "Served Hot," his most recent laugh-maker in this series. She is Dolores Johnson, a typical Spanish type, who recently has been playing in several of Educational's fun films.

Paramount Writer Marries

William N. Robson, 2nd, member of the Paramount scenario staff, was married recently in Hollywood to Irene Kosinska, stage actress, who appeared in several Broadway productions after winning a prize for excellency in the Otto Kahn school.

"Venus" Finished

Camera work on another United Artists picture, Constance Talmadge's "Venus," has been completed. This story, filmed in its original locales on the Mediterranean Coast and in Paris, was brought to the screen by Louis Mercanton, from Jean Vignand's French novel.

Pathe Signs Casey Robinson

Casey Robinson, title writer, has been engaged by Pathe to direct "Listen, Baby," Pathe's second all-talking picture, which Paul Bern will produce.

Victorious on the Courts

Paramount Studio tennis team defeated First National Studios 7 matches to 0. Frank Tuttle, John Cromwell, Salvini Baiano, Wells Root and Oliver H. P. Garrett are the permanent members of the Paramount team.

Hagen May Make Another

Walter Hagen, golf professional, admits negotiations are on for his appearance in a feature production. Hagen made "Green Grass Widows" last year for Tiffany-Stahl.

In the "Talkies" too

The fidelity of sound reproduction with motion pictures is affected by every variation in the film — be it ever so slight.

That is why, in the "Talkies" too, Eastman film excels. The great quantities in which it is produced, the strict supervision constantly exercised — the resulting uniformity from roll to roll, day to day, year to year — these factors of Eastman film manufacture are of first importance to the newest development of the art.

EASTMAN KODAK COMPANY

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

Only LUPINO LANE Could Make a Comedy Such As "ONLY ME"

Twenty-four parts in the picture, and every role played by Lupino Lane himself. Who else could do it? The versatility that made such an astonishingly clever novelty comedy possible, makes Lane the outstanding star in the two-reel comedy field, and as great a box-office asset as you ever had in Short Features.

The comedian takes twenty-four distinct roles and the results are astounding in cleverness—ARTHUR JAMES—Motion Pictures Today.

Every time we see a Lane comedy we say it is the best we have yet seen—worth preferred position on any program—Associated Publications.

If exhibitors don't give this unusual subject the break it deserves, then there is no sense in comedians continuing to put originality, brains and perspiration in their work—Film Daily.

A genuinely good piece of work—Motion Picture News.

RICHARD DIX in "REDSKIN"

"PARAMOUNT takes an easy lead in talking pictures," said the New York World as "INTERFERENCE" started capacity 9-weeks' run at Criterion at $2. Now Dix in the dazzling "REDSKIN" succeeds "Interference" at the Criterion at road show prices—and business is even better! "REDSKIN" is well nigh perfect film," says the N.Y. American. "REDSKIN" is a hulu—a knockout!" says the N. Y. Mirror. Dix's greatest since "The Vanishing American"—and almost entirely in gorgeous Technicolor. Victor Schertzinger Production. Music score by J. C. Zamecnik.

MACK SENNETT TALKING COMEDIES have swept to world wide fame—in a few weeks—on a tidal wave of laughs.

Many of the nation's finest theatres have booked "THE LION'S ROAR." Just look over their names.

All of them are sending their audiences away laughing and saying "here is something new in comedies." Most of them are getting a new idea of what short subjects can mean to the box-

It was the worst day of the winter. The venerable trade press—almost all of it—was there to see a Sennett Talking Comedy, "The Bride's Relations" by name. Off went the lights and on went the opus. It wasn't long after that the laughter began to mount and stay that way. Remember: rotten day, film-saturated newspaper men and a projection room showing. Only a jewel among comedies could get the response it did. For your box-office good, get it. Educational is the place to go.

Announcing

PACENT REPRODUCER SYSTEMS

The Pacent Reproducer Corporation takes this opportunity to make formal announcement of its two complete Reproducer Systems for theatres. We believe that this equipment, backed by long experience in the field of sound reproduction, will be of unusual interest to exhibitors throughout the country.

LOUIS GERARD PACENT
President
Pacent Reproducer Corporation

Mr. Pacent is a graduate engineer, a Fellow of the Institute of Radio Engineers, a Fellow of the Radio Club of America, member of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers, Fellow National Geographic Society, Chairman of the American Engineering Standards Committee on Parts and Wiring, and the author of several books and a number of radio papers.

He is known as the inventor of many radio devices and is recognized as an authority on sound.

Naturally anyone investing money in sound reproducing apparatus is interested in two things: the product and the company behind it.

Pacent Reproducer Systems are the result of long research and development work by Louis Gerard Pacent, a leading figure in engineering and scientific circles, and a group of engineers working undet his direction. For months before being placed on the market, Pacent Reproducer Systems have been put through the most severe tests. They have been tested, retested, checked and compared with similar apparatus. The merits of and advantages of Pacent Reproducer Systems are definitely established.

Two systems are now being manufactured, and installations are actually in and working in leading houses in various parts of the country. Exhibitors using Pacent Reproducer Systems send in the most enthusiastic reports of big business done, and favorable comments from patrons.

A Few of the Important Features of Pacent Reproducer Systems

NO BATTERIES: Both Pacent Reproducer Systems operate directly from any 110 volt 60 cycle alternating current outlet without batteries of any kind.

DOUBLE CHANNEL AMPLIFICATION: One reserve amplifier for each amplifier used to run a show. Interruptions and breakdowns in sound program minimized by this feature. Pacent Reproducer Systems are the only systems having complete, double channel amplification throughout.

SPECIAL SPEAKER SYSTEM: Latest and most efficient type of Dynamic Speaker used with special baffle board arrangement. Even sound distribution assured with complete elimination of dead spots in the theatre.

Pacent Reproducer Systems are now manufactured for the disc method of reproduction. The Pacent Film Attachment will soon be available for sound-on-film method of reproduction.

LOW PRICE: Pacent Reproducer Systems are marketed at prices much lowet than any similar equipment of equal quality. They are sold outright to the exhibitor. $2,500 buys complete equipment of the synchronous type, for house with seating capacity not over 2,000 seats.

$3,500 for complete system for theatres of from 2,000 to 4,000.

Full Details Will Be Advertised in an early issue of this publication

Profitable Warfare

By William A. Johnston

THERE'S a battle on, out in Los Angeles, between the Paramount Theatre and West Coast Loew's State.

The facts, briefly, are these: the above contestants used for their ammunition increased newspaper advertising. And in short order both houses began turning the people away. Then the other houses, the United Artists, Criterion, Tower among them, began to scrap for the overflow and they also splurged on advertising. And the result is that Los Angeles is doing capacity business all around, the best the city has had in years.

That's the story and the moral must be obvious to anyone.

The show business thrives on advertising; always has, always will. It's the mainspring.

There was never a good showman who was not also a good advertiser.

Lethargy in advertising will put a wet blanket on the best show material that brains can devise.

I don't believe that any executive in the business will argue against these salient points: yet, the fact is that they pay less attention to advertising than to any other factor in their business.

This Los Angeles incident is, in my opinion, the outstanding event of the day in the picture show world. It is more important than mergers, than the acquisition of theatres, than the controversy of sound versus silent pictures. It is equally as important as production itself and the millions that are poured into it.

You would think that the astute picture executive noting this Los Angeles situation, would say to himself: if that's the force that puts people into the theatres then that's the force that will put pictures into the theatres.

But if he does get himself into this vein of thought, he will look over his budget and find that nothing has been allowed for advertising; and probably, he will decide to put some increased millions into production and theatres—and then hire a press agent.

The basic trouble is that, with few exceptions, executives who are adept at production, distribution or what not, don't know just what advertising is.

One of our recent sound news reels would enlighten them. Adolph Ochs, publisher of The New York Times, was quoted as follows: "Advertising is the very essence of news."

So it is.

And you buy advertising space in proportion to what you think this news is worth.

If John Wanamaker is going to sell a million dollars' worth of bargains tomorrow, he buys space accordingly. He doesn't try to sneak into the newspaper a two penny reading notice. He doesn't give a luncheon to the New York press.

If there were an advertising revival in this business today, it would do more good to the box office than sound pictures and Wall Street combined.

Speaking Editorially

Picture Ratings

RAY A. GROMBACHER, president of Spokane Theatres, Inc., sends us some very interesting information on picture ratings in his ace house, "The Liberty." Actual box office standings of pictures at this theatre, starting with August 3 and up to and including January 10, are as follows:

1. Singing Fool
2. Lilac Time
3. Lights of New York
4. Wings
5. My Man
6. Glorious Betsy
7. The Terror
8. Lion and the Mouse
9. Street Angel
10. State Street Sadie
11. On Trial
12. Interference
13. Women They Talk About
14. Home Towners
15. Fazil
16. Four Sons
17. Two Lovers
18. Woman Disputed
19. The Patriot
20. Sunrise
21. The Red Dance
22. Conquest
23. Wedding March

Mr. Grombacher adds: "We have left a few out for the reason that they were pictures that were booked on short notice or else did not have a full week's run."

As Mr. Grombacher suggests, we are glad to pass this information along to exhibitors and the trade generally.

What interests us equally as much as the ratings themselves is the aggressive way in which Mr. Grombacher goes after the proper advertising and exploitation of pictures. For instance, he says: "Exhibitors throughout the United States who did not get back of Colleen Moore in 'Lilac Time' were very foolish as it proved to be one of our biggest box office attractions. We got behind this with both guns with the result that it stands second on our list."

Again: "We take the credit for bringing 'My Man' to fifth place on the list on account of the personal effort in the way of advertising put back of this picture."

A careful study of the pictures appearing on Mr. Grombacher's list shows that the talkies and sound films form the leading box office attractions at his Liberty Theatre. There is hardly a picture named, which does not have sound in some form, and Mr. Grombacher adds: "There is no doubt that 'The Singing Fool' heads the list without any competition whatsoever."

Exhibitors everywhere, we are sure, will find the ratings given by this leading theatre owner of the greatest interest and importance.

A Word From Singapore

WE are in receipt of a letter from an exhibitor of Singapore, commenting on the recently run telephoto advertising section in this publocation:

"Happy congratulations on the success of your 'Telephoto Advertising' which I read in your latest Motion Picture News to reach me here. It is the first of its kind I've come across. The Film Industry really owes another credit to you and Motion Picture News.

I wish you continued prosperity in future undertakings."

Faithfully yours,
(Signed) Jose Nonis,
Pavilion Theatre, Singapore.

An Important Test

CARL LAEMMLE'S decision to run the silent and talkie version of "Broadway" in New York simultaneously is a move of real importance. This idea will afford a concrete test of "what the public wants." Moreover, it cannot fail to have a significant bearing on the much-discussed merits of sound vs. silence, and vice versa.

At the moment, it is a well known fact that producers themselves are in a quandary as to how to proceed in laying out next season's pictures. Shall the production schedules have more silents than sound pictures. What percentage of the total output should be talkie, in whole or in part? These are questions vital to the future progress of the industry. They are yet to be answered.

Remembering it is the public, and not the industry, that, in the last analysis, determines the fate of pictures, it is clear that Mr. Laemmle, in asking the public to decide between talk and silence in a notable production, is rendering a real service to the whole picture business.

It is a progressive step and merits high praise.

Fox St. Louis Opens

The 5,000-seat picture palace which will be the St. Louis standard bearer of the Fox company had its formal opening Friday, January 31. Initial work on this mammoth playhouse was started in 1926, but was then delayed for almost a year. Then excavation was started and work was continued until things were in readiness for the steel structure, when a strike by steel workers again delayed matters. The Fox in St. Louis is an exact duplicate of the Fox Detroit. The view of the grand stairway, showing the architectural and decorative styles of these playhouses, above is of the Detroit theatre.

THE BOYD THEATRE PHILADELPHIA

A De Luxe Playhouse in The Modern French Style

HOFFMAN-HENON CO.
Architects and Engineers

PHILADELPHIA'S newest playhouse, the Boyd, has created a stir in theatrical circles on account of the modernistic style of its ornamentation, its luxurious furnishings and brilliancy and harmony of colors.

The Boyd, which is located at Nineteenth and Chestnut Streets, is owned by Alexander R. Boyd, former vice-president of the Stanley Company of America, and a pioneer in the construction and operation of motion picture theatres.

Modern French decorations are used harmoniously throughout, with orange the dominant color. The whole keynote of the decorations is the progress of woman through the ages, illustrated in the murals, in the stained glass insets and in the statues. To symbolize the supremacy of woman, the artist has chosen the Greek legend of the Amazons as the subject of the large mural above the proscenium. The picture represents the defense of the Amazon Queen against the warriors of Asia on one side and tribes from Asia on the other. This theme is continued by a succession of pictures down the sides of the proscenium and along the walls of the auditorium. Another distinctive feature of the decorations is a series of black and gold silhouettes on Monel metal in niches along the sides of the auditorium representing women of various countries

The Boyd is actually on Sansom Street, but it has a fine frontage and entrance on Chestnut Street. This frontage is 44 feet wide, and consists of a broad entrance promenade flanked by two stores, numbered 1908 and 1910 Chestnut Street. Above the stores are the theatre offices.

The theatre stands on a site of historic interest. For the third time it has become a place of social activity. In 1830, Jacob Ridgway built this mansion there and it was the scene of many social functions for a generation in his time and in the time of his daughter, Mrs. James Rush. Then, the mansion became part of the Aldine Hotel, long the home of many society folk and the stopping place for theatrical people. When that part of the Aldine was torn down a year ago, it was purchased as the site for the Boyd Theatre.

The corridor from Chestnut Street, handsomely furnished, leads back to the theatre proper, which measures 154 feet by 125 feet. A row of exit doors open on Sansom Street, while around the theatre extends an areaway. Although the Sansom Street frontage is really a rear wall, it presents a handsome façade on that thoroughfare of vari-colored brick.

Twenty floodlights of changing colors brilliantly illuminate the Chestnut Street front at night. Patrons, entering from Chestnut Street, where the box office is located, pass along the corridor to the auditorium, in which the stage forms the western end. On the eastern side is the foyer, a spacious apartment with stairs at either end leading to the balcony. Back of the balcony is a promenade overlooking the foyer.

The main auditorium has been so constructed that a full view of the stage and screen is afforded from every seat. The seats themselves are specially designed for comfort. An unusual feature, used previously in the West, but never before in the East, is section of five rows of reserved seats in the rear, elevated above the floor.

Looking around the auditorium one is struck by the rich beauty of the decorations. The proscenium arch is 50 feet wide and 30 feet high. Above it is a beautiful ultra-modern mural, which dedicates the theatre to the progress made by women in the history of the world.

The balcony is low and is gained by flights of easy steps. It alone will seat more than 700 persons. Its promenade in the rear overlooks the foyer, looking down upon the specially manufactured rug, 26 by 46 feet, and upon the handsome marble fountain. Returning to the foyer we will find other stairways leading down to a lower mezzanine, in which there are a combined lounge and smoking room, from which open rest rooms for men and women and a special cosmetic room.

THE theatre is primarily intended for the presentation of motion pictures, but its stage is capable of handling all sorts of theatrical presentations. Its width and depth are augmented by the fact that the orchestra pit may be raised to the stage level and formed into a stage apron. The organ console is also on a lift and may be brought up into full view of the audience. The house is also equipped with apparatus for the presentation of both Vitaphone and Movietone films.

Colored glass and metal work form a large part of the decorative scheme of the theatre. The marquee on Chestnut Street is of colored glass and iron. Booths for the two ticket sellers in the lobby are of hammered wrought metal with colored glass panels. The railings of the marble stairways are of beautifully wrought iron and bronze.

The theatre will seat 2,500 persons, 1,800 on the ground floor and 700 in the balcony.

A MODEL THOUSAND SEATER OF THE STADIUM TYPE

El Campanil Theatre, Antioch, Calif., Constructed at Cost of $150,000

IN the planning of El Campanil Theatre, at Antioch, California, the most practical plan evolved for buildings to accommodate audiences of less than 2,000 has been adopted. It is the stadium type of structure, consisting of an orchestra section near the stage, sloping slightly to the midsection, where there is a cross aisle, at which point an upward change in the angle of rise occurs. The lower section is given over to loge seats. The rows in this section are divided by drapes suspended upon iron supports and foot rests are provided in the drape supports.

El Campanil was built by its proprietors, Ralph M. Beede and Ferd Stamm, associated in the theatrical business in Antioch since 1911. The theatre was opened last November. It represents an investment of $150,000.

El Campanil, the tower of bells, is Spanish in design as well as name, exemplifying the spirit of pioneers of California who showed their faith in the land to which they had come in search of fortunes.

The exterior or front of the theatre is of the Spanish type of architecture, a pleasing style which combining a certain degree of simplicity with the proper amount of ornamentation, makes a balanced and pleasing whole.

The color of this pleasing exterior is light tan with the ornamentation in light gray. There are three niches the panels of which are Venetian red in color with black grill work beneath. In the central niche hangs a bell, after the fashion of the missions. This bell is from the old grammar school building which was torn down two years ago to make room for the more modern primary school building. The bell gives a local historical touch to the theatre. Many grown men and women who will attend the theatre came to school in their kid days in answer to the pealing summons of the bell. In the two other niches one on each side of the central niche are small cast bells. The window of the upstairs offices are trimmed in black.

The marquee is a warm gray color with trimmings of yellow, green and gold. From directly beneath the marquee one approaches the ticket booth which is bodied in old brass with the lower part in black tile marked off in terra cotta lines.

The lobby is done in ivory with green and black mosaic stenciling below while the walls are of green.

BEFORE entering upon a description of the interior of the theatre it might be well to describe the type or style of architecture or decoration. The type is Spanish Renaissance, influenced by the Moorish, or it might be termed a compromise of the two. It was chosen because of its ponderful possibilities in color and design. Moorish colors are primitive—red, yellow and green.

The ceiling is of a soft orange color, the walls of red and gold tapestry. The pilasters are silver, gray and blue, with red and green trimmings. There are three niches on each side wall, the colors of which are blue, yellow, gold, silver and green, over a gray background with the panel or central space a rich Paris green. The grills are black, of course. Shawls of yellow, black and gold will be thrown over the iron grill work. The posts on each side of the niche panels are dark blue in color.

The same colors as used on the niches are used on the organ lofts and proscenium arch, except that the gold is brought out more on the lofts. Around the arch the brighter, primitive colors are subdued by gray. The organ lofts are connected (as to color) by bands of gold.

The straight lines of the proscenium arch are broken by two nude feminine figures placed in the center above the arch for decorative effect. The two figures are on either side of a large lyre. The curtains for the stage are of red and green with gold trimming.

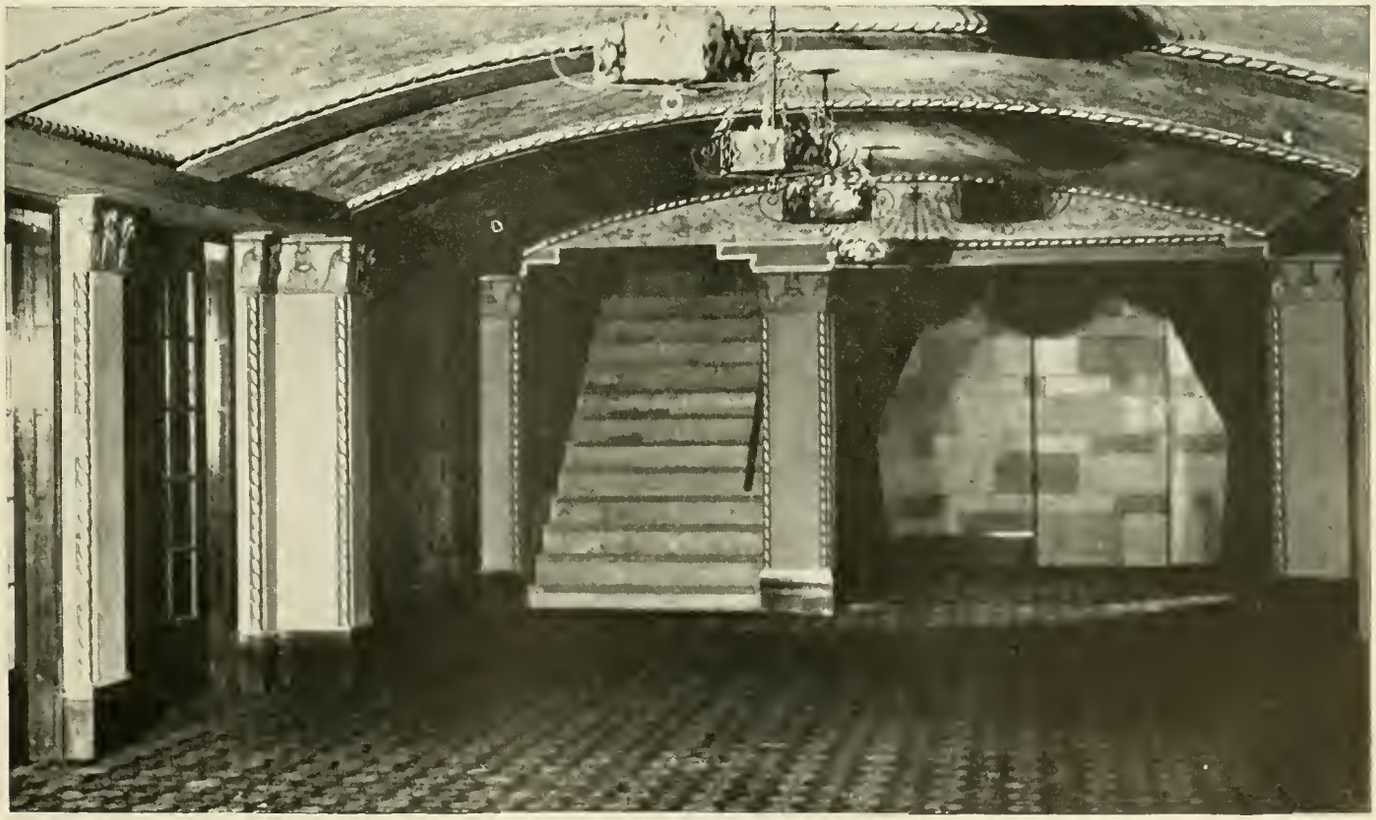
The lower part of the side walls in gray stone effect, blends in with the gray of the stage and the quiet color around and above the arch.

There are eight pendant ceiling lights of Moorish design, drum type. Lighting fixtures are affixed on the lower stone-like side walls. The niches are lighted by radiance shining upward from behind the grills and from ceiling lights shining downward from the pilasters.

The entire decorative scheme is one of a high order. It is planned to make a theatre where people will feel invited to seek entertainment, where the atmosphere is restful, where the colors represent gayety and happiness. The proper use of color has been found highly inducive to the mental and consequently the physical comfort of humanity. The decorations of El Campanil have been done with this knowledge in mind so that not only will the best programs interest the public but also that the theatre be complete in its success of making people happy.

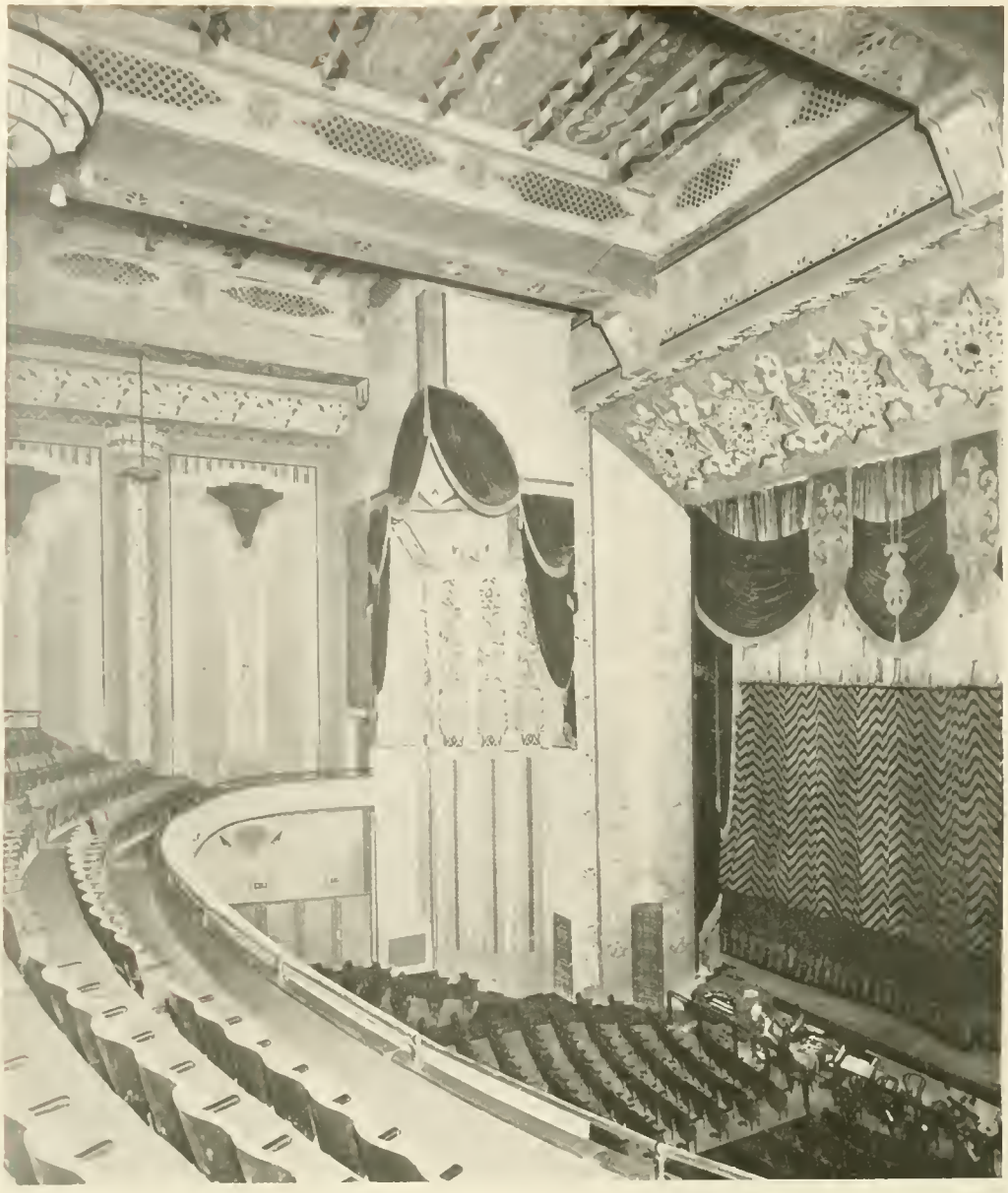
The stadium plan, affording the best seating accommodations and eliminating ventilation problems which arise when a balcony is built into a house of the size of this, is well adapted to the type of decoration chosen as a means of expressing the spirit and tradition of the early California settlers. Its interior appointments are highly artistic and practical.

View from stage looking toward rear



Entrance to the auditorium is from the sides of the foyer, there being no central passage way. Patrons advance at either side toward the stage in entering and come to an aisle which crossing the width of the building, the aisle connecting both passages. Access to seats is from the cross aisle, either forward to the orchestra seats or up to the loges and opera. There are three sections in the orchestra seat group, which numbers four hundred and fifty chairs.

Four aisles go up to the loges, there being three sections of six rows in the loges with one hundred and fifty-four chairs. The opera portion has five sections, with five hundred chairs.



There is a stairway direct from the foyer to the opera section at the west side. An exit at the east side of the gallery opens down to the hall in the office section, but will not be used except in emergency.

The theatre has an excellently equipped projection room, a modern type heating and ventilating system, and a three-color lighting system.

In the auditorium there are eight ceiling units, each containing twelve 75 watt lamps for each of the three colors. On the stage there are two strip border lights suspended above and thirty-two 150 watt lamps in the footlights. The organ grilles also are three-color lighted. The exterior of the building is illuminated with flood lights which show every fine detail.

A NEW ENGLAND HOUSE IN THE NEW STYLE

Plymouth in Worcester, Mass., is Twelfth Link in Gottesman Chain

IN the Plymouth theatre, twelfth link in the Gottesman Chain in New England towns, Worcester, Mass., has one of the most attractive and practical picture playhouses one could locate in a long travel through various sections of the country. The finished work reflects nothing of the admixture which might be expected in the case of a building operation that faced the early vicissitudes and delays attendant upon this particular enterprise. The Plymouth was started by one builder and was about three-quarters completed when difficulties arose and the unfinished structure remained in that condition for almost a year, when Alfred Gottesman took it over and set about the task of rushing it to completion. In order to effect the most speedy course to that end as well as to make the Plymouth a playhouse distinctly modern, the modernistic style of decoration was decided upon as the keynote of the interior.

These factors must be borne in mind when viewing the interior views shown on this and the adjoining page, for in certain details a combination of decorative scheme is evident. The cement finishing of the walls lent itself to the application of a heavy stipple paint. The entire ceiling was glazed to eliminate the too bright coloring originally applied there, and after glazing, the beams were painted with modernistic designs. The work of finishing the theatre was supervised by Mr. Charles E. Lewis, associated with the Gottesman circuit and well known to readers of Motion Picture News as the originator and conductor of the "Round Table Club."

The Plymouth has a seating capacity of nearly 3,000. The orchestra floor accommodates 2,000 seats, and the balance are divided among the loges and balcony. It is single balcony construction, with the front section accommodating six rows of loge chairs.

A feature of the construction is that the house can be emptied without sending patrons through the promenade, foyer or lobby, and still without throwing open exit doors direct to the street. This has been accomplished through the inclusion of special passages, well lighted and heated, that lead from both floors direct to the side street. The vomitories lead directly to the loges, while reserve stairways can be thrown open to the top balcony when the house is crowded.

As shown in the sectional view of the auditorium, the stage and proscenium wall treatment accomplishes an interesting adaptation of modernistic designs. No white lighting is used inside the house, flame tint lamps being used throughout. Special color lighting is used to bring out special details of the decoration. The organ grilles, for example, are flooded by a magenta spot, concealed in the upper niche of the arch. The draperies over this arch were added to offset the severity of the lines. The auditorium is lighted in blue during the showing of pictures, and in red during stage shows.

On the right, the entrance arrangement. The orchestra floor is below the level of the foyer. View shows stairway from foyer and promenade.

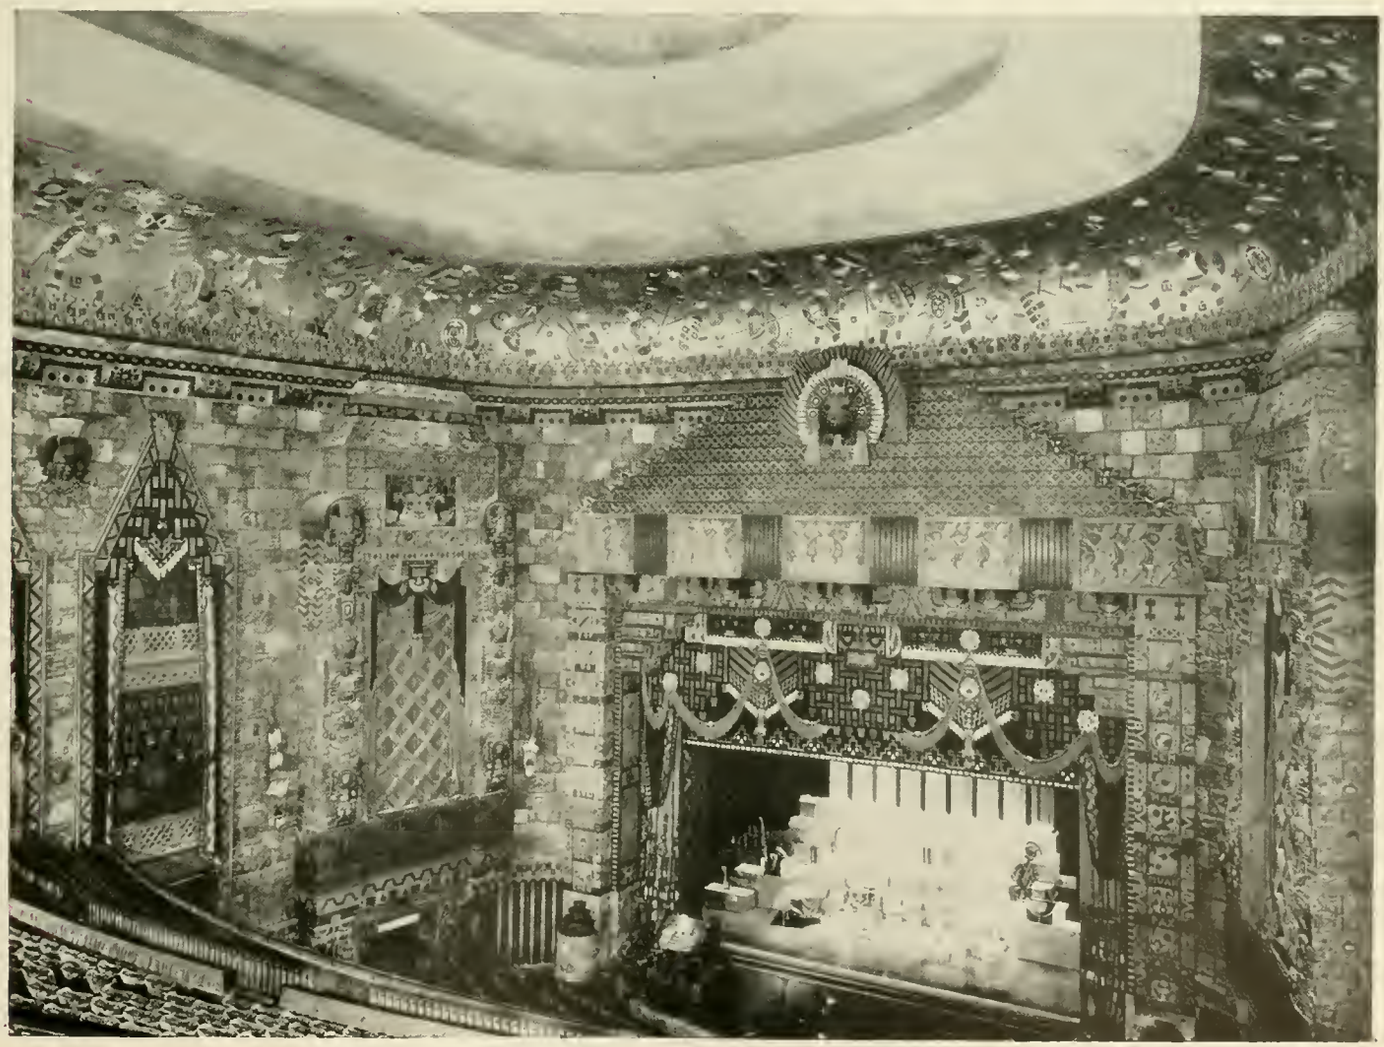
Below, the lobby. Walls are of alternate marble and travatine, with the latter stained light brown to harmonize with ceiling designs, combinations of Egyptian and Modernistic.

A Night View of the Fisher Building and Theatre, Detroit

A MAYAN TEMPLE OF THE FILMS IN A MODERN SKYSCRAPER

SO far as the rank and file of Detroit's population is concerned, the most important feature of the huge Fisher Building, located at West Grand and Second boulevards, is the lavishly finished theatre that imposing structure houses.

The Fisher Theatre goes some lengths beyond any other "temple" form of playhouse which decorators and architects have evolved in their efforts to produce bizarre and colorful effects. The ornamentation is extraordinary.



The entire scheme is a faithful representation of designs found in the ruins of Mayan temples. And its many odd features are subjected to the most striking presentations.

The Fisher has a seating capacity of about 3,000 persons. It is operated by the Kunsky Theatre Corporation.

Use Color for Cents Value in

Nothing "Arty" About This Showman Discussion of Things That Make Your Lobbies Pay

WHEN color in commercial life becomes so important that automobile companies maintain large staffs of artists merely to advise on the color ranges of their products, it behooves the up-to-date exhibitor to keep his mind on the colors he employs when decorating his lobby to attract custom. Color, according to the merchandising head of one of New York's largest department stores, sells more goods than any other single factor. If this is true of dress goods, automobiles, kitchen utensils and other merchandise, it is just as true of films, when one considers it in the light of the showman's shop window, his lobby and theatre entrance.

Color is the most important item to be held in mind when decorating the theatre lobby. So often I see lobbies which the exhibitor has prepared with no thought given to the appropriate color for use with the picture being advertised.

One prominent New York exhibitor attempted to promote his showing of "Nanook of the North" with orange and green decorations on a hot August day. I could have told him before he opened his theatre doors that he would lose money. If he had used, let us say, blue and white, which are not only appropriate to an arctic picture, but also give an effect of coolness which might have mitigated against the heat, he would perhaps have done a brisk business.

Color should be considered by the showman in its dollars-and-cents value. For it has just such a value. Proper color attracts. Any school boy can tell you that, and the wrong color repells. It is a showman's business to attract, and therefor only those colors which have not percussion enough to attract the eye, and tone enough to please the senses should be used. I should say, any color can be used—but only in the proper combination.

Let's go back to our exhibitor friend who made the mistake of using green and orange to exploit an arctic picture on a hot day. Either one of his colors was right. He could have used the green to splendid advantage if he had combined it with white and blue that I have already spoken about, instead of orange. On the other hand he could have used orange—but only a little—in combination with his white and blue effects and still retained an arctic atmosphere and a suggestion of coolness within the interior of the theatre. But, orange and green in combination and associated with the tropics and give immediately an impression of stuffiness and heat.

That is the dominant thought in thinking of color: what effect will it create on the observer. When choosing the colors for his lobby display, the theatre man should always ask himself these questions:

"Is it in keeping with the theme of the picture? Is it appropriate to the time of the year? Are the colors pleasing? Are they dramatic enough to attract the eyes?"

My own lobbies are examples of what

Its Dollars & Display Lobbies

An Interview with

Hal Burrows

Art Director, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

The colors of Germany, combined with those of Heidelberg university formed the color scheme for our lobby display exploiting "The Student Prince." Panels showing marching military students were the main pictorial feature of the display.

I am driving at. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "White Shadows in the South Seas" was a problem in the way of lobby decoration. Most New Yorkers were familiar with the travel book on which this photoplay was based, and we were afraid that they would look upon the picture, a true drama, as a mere travel film, and pass it up. Our problem was to make everything connected with the film dramatic.

On the huge sign above the theatre we had a diver fighting with a shark, electric lights playing over this display, gave a water effect, and the sign itself was worked out in colors associated with the tropical locale, deep blue, light blue, green and brown.

This same color scheme was repeated in the lobby, where panels covered the walls. These were worked out stylisticly. Scenes from the photoplay were shown, dancing girls, native warriors on the march, and the meeting of the hero and the heroine. A plain parchment shade of large size was used to cover the center lights of the lobby and the ceiling around this shade was painted with huge, dark green leaves of tropical plants and with gaily colored birds.

"White Shadows in the South Seas" was put on in the middle of the heat wave and so we had to be especially careful as to what colors we used to draw attention. Most striking colors are also hot colors. We used scarlets and oranges and yellows, but we worked these only lightly into the general effect of dark green, blue and light blue and brown.

For "The Big Parade" we used patriotic colors, red, white and blue color. For "The Student Prince" we used the colors of Germany, combined with the colors of Heidelberg university. For "The Trail of '98" we used blue, silver, white and scarlet as our dominant colors. For "The Garden of Allah" we used a light yellow, green and crimson.

In addition to color, of course, there are other things to be considered in the design of lobby displays.

The pictorial presentation of the theme of the film exploited must be expressed in compelling terms. And equally important is the necessity of "making a picture" that will attract and appeal to the public as something dramatic, amusing, thrilling.

As a matter of fact motifs are almost as important as color. One should pick those characters, objects and designs which are most illustrative of the photoplay one is showing, and also those things which create most curiosity in the beholder's mind.

A motif in art as in music is anything which runs in repetitive form throughout the entire composition. We used totem poles as our motif in decorating the lobby of the Astor Theatre for "The Trail of '98." Around the lobby we had drawn a parade of dog teams and miners in white, yellow and cream against a background of light blue, spangled with silver stars. The drivers of these teams were painted in red, yellow and dark blue. At intervals the Astor Theatre lobby is broken up by columns, and on these columns we painted totem poles in vivid colors. They lent just the right note to our display. Palm trees were the decorative motif in the lobby display for "The Garden of Allah." A soldier in uniform with full pack, gas mask and tin helmet was the often-repeated motif of "The Big Parade" decorations.

The stock posters of the leading film distributors are made with a view to providing material for cut-outs. And a little imagination added to some careful planning in making up the cutouts is all that is needed to produce display effects that will sell the show.

Good design also enters into making a lobby display attractive, and good materials are also important. Sloppy cutouts and cheap lithographic work plastered around a lobby are worse than having no lobby decoration at all.

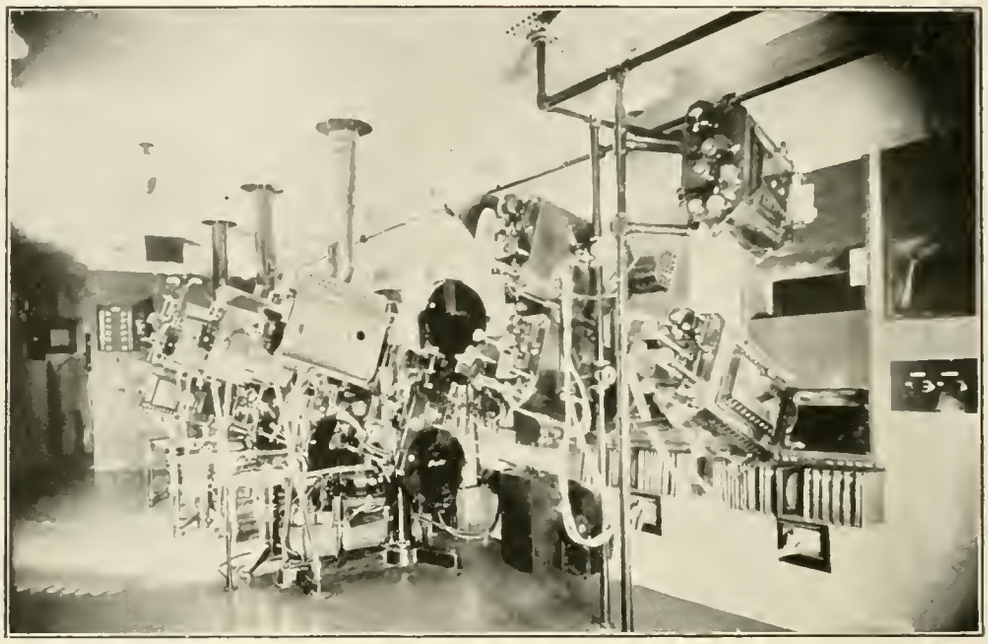
Of course, I quite realize, that not all exhibitors have the facilities or the talent at their disposal to make a good-looking lobby, and to such men I can only say: If you can't make it good, at least make it funny or striking. So many lobbies are neither flesh, fish nor meat.

Hal Burrows frequently has demonstrated his ability in the arrangement of frontal and lobby decorations of the sort that attract the attention of the public and project the story of the film exploited by them. His advice on the selection of colors and motifs for lobby displays are of particular interest to the manager and theatre exploiteer.

Do We Need Standards of Projection Booth Design? Well Rather!

IT IS nearly thirty years since the motion picture theatre was born and we are just now informed that a movement is under way to bring about the standardization of certain fundamental features connected with the design of the most important working part of the theatre—the projection room.

Meanwhile, everything under the sun which in any way touched upon the theatre and the production of films; even unto and including the width of the stripe running down the side of the usher's pants and the precise angle at which these erstwhile West Pointers wear their caps, has been subjected to the standardizing influence of various committees until, apparently, there remains nothing more to standardize except that department of the theatre which, believe it or not, is responsible for the amount and quality of the shekels which pass through the front door.



Standards of film stock, of film development, of projector parts, nomenclature and of other miscellaneous items are all very important to be sure, but they are not one bit more important than standards of projection for the simple reason that the most beautiful film in the world can be made to appear quite intolerable when projected under adverse conditions.

The exact reason for delaying this matter of projection room standardization until a time thirty years after the inception of the motion picture theatre is difficult to ascertain, but the fact remains that during this time no concerted action has manifested itself in this direction. The result of this lack of action is exactly what might be imagined under the circumstances.

Idiotic errors in projection room design have been the rule rather than the exception. These errors have run the entire gamut of foolishness—even to the point of constructing elaborate theatres with no projection room at all?

If ever an art—and in many senses of the word, projection can lay claim to this distinction—has been sorely abused, projection of motion pictures and the contingent work of spotlighting and effect lighting has had its share of the tribulations which are traditionally supposed to constitute the test of fire for all human endeavors aspiring to honorable recognition.

The history of projection can be traced by the errors which have marked each new step in its advancement. From those early days when film, after passing through the projector, was received in canvas bags from which it was later unravelled and rewound, to the present when the entire layout of the projection room is sacrificed to the inclusion of sound picture equipment, many times of doubtful value, each new advance in projection has been consolidated and made secure purely by dint of acquisition and by virtue of perseverance in the pursuit of an ideal.

An interesting view of a well planned booth—the exception to the rule. Projection room of the Warner Bros. theatre in Hollywood

If the same thought and care had been expended on every detail of the practical application of the countless devices invented for the benefit of the theatre in general as must have gone into the creation of these improvements the history of projection, undoubtedly, would have been written in different terms.

A general lack of coordination between the parties inventing these devices and those applying them to the theatre has characterized nearly all such attempts. Architects, many times, are responsible for the foolish mistakes which attend the inclusion of new equipment in the theatre.

ONLY recently, the Public Address Control in a theatre widely advertised as "The World's Perfect Theatre" was completely gummed up because the architects so far forgot themselves as to design the theatre as if the projection room did not exist.

This total ignoring of the projection room requirements resulted in a condition which, in the very kindest terms possible, can be described as nothing short of comical.

Architectural considerations probably demanded that the rear top wall of the theatres (constituting the front wall of the projection room) be curved sharply so that the deep point of the curve coincided with the center line of the projection room.

The inside front wall of the projection room was straight so that when the portholes were cut it was found that those ports near the center of the room (the projector ports) had a wall thickness which was a minimum of eight inches for the center port and increased rapidly on each side of the center.

Spotlight ports and effect projector ports were found to be fully thirty inches thick which necessitated sloping the sides of the ports sharply on the bottom and sides to permit a complete coverage of the stage.

The conditions were not so bad within the projection room proper, but in the public address control room trouble aplenty was encountered. This room was located at the right of the projection room (facing the stage) and the room was so far off center that the wall thickness at this location measured no less than eight feet. An observation porthole measuring sixteen by sixteen inches was the largest permissable opening that could be cut in the wall due to limitations in the decorative configurations of the outside wall.

The final conditions revealed an observation port sixteen by sixteen inches through a wall eight feet thick with the result that only one-fourth of the stage area was visible to the control operator.

The restricted view was such that it was

STAGE LIGHTING

IN FLORENZ ZIEGFELD'S NEW THEATRE

VIEWED from a chair in the house, the Ziegfeld Theatre is a colorful and enjoyable place in which to see a play. Mr. Florenz Ziegfeld knows as well as any man the value of beauty, color and light in the presentation of successful stage productions. Neither expense nor talent was spared in giving this theatre a full measure of these requirements.

Back stage are found all the mechanical aids which make a show run smoothly. A bank of Vitrohm (vitreous enamelled) Theatre Dimmers assures perfect coordination of action and smooth—flickerless—complete lighting.

Ward Leonard Vitrohm Dimmers are installed in practically all the world's great theatres and in thousands of neighborhood playhouses. Regardless of the size of your theatre, we shall gladly prove to you the profit possibilities of Vitrohm Dimmers. Send also for Bulletin 75 describing the various types of Vitrohm Dimmers. THE TEN POINTS of Vitrohm Dimmer Superiority

1 Vitreous enamel insulation.
2 110-step control; all steps equally effective in even, flickerless light reduction.
3 Greater lamp load capacity for space occupied.
4 Unit space engineering; each plate in the dimmer bank is replaceable immediately by one of a different capacity to compensate for lamp load change.
5 Continuous duty operation at full rated load on any step without excessive heating.
6 Dimmer units enable banking to any desired capacity.
7 All moving parts, including contact buttons, ground or machined, thus insuring smooth and easy action.
8 Resistive elements of plates permanently and completely protected from disintegration.
9 Cost of systems employing Vitrohm Dimmers the same or less than that of other equivalent lamp load systems.
10 37 years of experience and knowing "how."

Ward Leonard Vitrohm Theatre Dimmers are most frequently specified for installations where the lighting control must be dependable and accurate.

Listed here are 10 reasons for Ward Leonard supremacy. Only with Vitrohm Dimmers do you get all of these essential features. Send your dimmer specifications to us for estimate. 37 years of experience is fully at your disposal.

A Distinguishing Insignia

IT is fitting that owners of Carrier Conditioned Theatres should remind their patrons that Manufactured Weather has been provided for their health and comfort. For this purpose the attractive bronze plaque, pictured above, has been designed and cast.

This tablet, displayed in lobby or foyer, is the mark by which a Carrier Conditioned Theatre may be recognized. It is a symbol of alertness, progressiveness, and thoughtfulness on the part of the theatre owner and architect. It is a pledge to the patrons that the finest Air Conditioning System available has been provided. It is the mark of Carrier acceptance of complete responsibility to make "Every day a good day" in the theatre.

Each of the many Carrier Conditioned Theatres is eligible to receive one of these tablets. Just write to our Newark Office stating that you desire to place this distinguishing insignia in your theatre.

If your theatre is not Carrier Conditioned, or if you are contemplating the construction of a new house, now is the time to have our engineers call and present to you the essential facts underlying the successful application of Air Conditioning in the theatre.

Ask, too, for the book "Theatre Cooling and Conditioning."

Very light new construction

The map of the United States shown here is divided into seven territories, with colored shading indicating the division of new proposed theatre building as represented for the period from December 15th to January 15th. This new construction is represented in valuation of dollars and cents rather than number of projects.

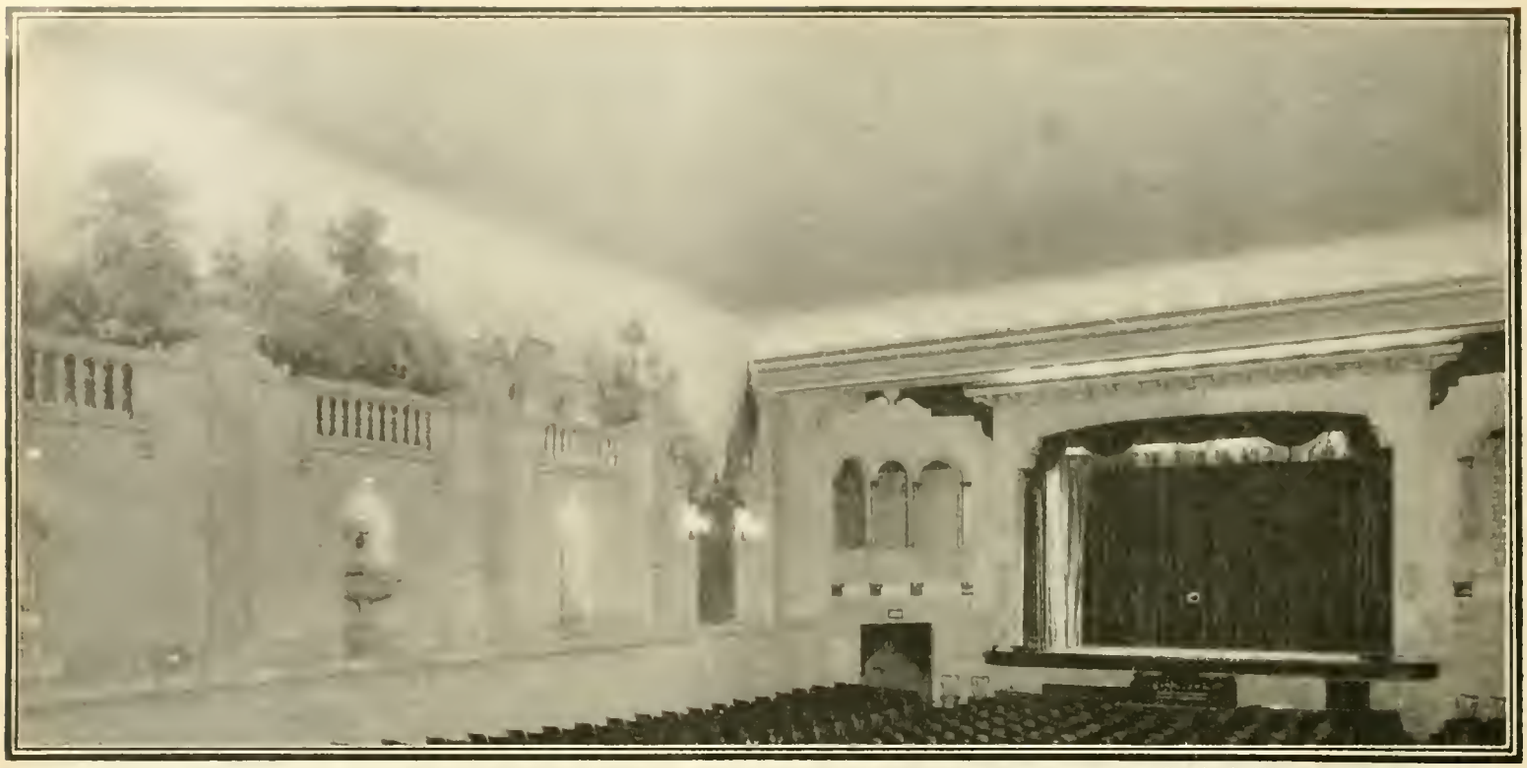
The shading is in four densities: solid, which represents the greatest value of proposed theatres; heavy stipple, which is second in valuation of new construction; medium, which areas represent conservative building; and the very light areas, where the investment in new theatre projects is very light. The information used in compiling the statistics visualized by the map was obtained through several reliable sources, and the map is to be considered as very nearly accurate in representing comparative theatre building activities in various sections of the country.

The circles shown on the map are located in key cities and illustrate averages of theatre attendance during the period from December 15th to January 15th, 1929. The diagrams indicate the relative attendance at the first-run theatres in these cities during the period covered. These are given by "averages," with symbols to indicate "Above Average" and "Under Average" box office returns. The term "average" as applied in this survey indicates satisfactory box office returns, based upon theatre expectancies, which, in turn, are governed by past earnings under similar or nearly similar conditions.

These attendance statistics were compiled from an analysis of the Key City Reports, published weekly in Motion Picture News, and other sources of information gathered by this publication.

THE total estimated expenditure for new theatre building projects announced during the period of this report—December 15, 1928, to January 15, 1929—amounts to $19,094,500. Compared with the similar period last year there is little difference between the amount of building as figured in dollars and cents.

While this report covers an overlapping period and it seems early to be demonstrating that 1929 will see as much money invested in new theatre construction as its predecessor—which set a high record—the fact remains that up to this early present activities in new projects are equal to the predictions made in our January issue giving the report of the Architectural Forum with a forecast that $163,622,800 would be expended in 1929 on theatre building programs.



The current report shows the North Atlantic states leading by a wide margin with $8.141,000 as the estimated cost of 18 new projects announced during the period.

The $19,094,500 figure for the whole U. S. is the estimated cost of a total of 74 new projects, calling for a total of 124,630 new seats.

From these figures it will be seen that the average cost per theatre is $258,034. The average seats per theatre, 1,684. And the average cost per seat, $153.22

Compared with the averages for 1928 compiled from reports in The Showman, the averages of this report are lower in the items of cost per project and also cost per seat. The 1928 average cost per theatre was $271,000, and the cost per seat averaged at $208.00.

The second heaviest expenditure for new theatres announced during the period are in the West Coast district. Here a pro-

When Intermission Comes—

ARE your patrons jerked rudely back into the harsh realization of everyday life by glaring lights?

Or are the impressions gathered from the feature picture permitted to linger with them, encouraged by the atmosphere created by lighting, and the artistic decorations of your theater?

Your box office receipts will tell you!

Good lighting is dependent upon good lamps. When you use Edison MAZDA* Lamps you get lamps that are of a known standard of quality.

gram calling for 15 new theatres was announced. Ten of these new houses will be built in California, at a cost of $4,085,000, and having a total of 19,850 new seats. The one project calling for an investment of more than $1,000,000 in the West Coast district is included among these buildings to be erected in California. The total number of new seats projected during the period for the West Coast district is 25,050.

The Middle States come next with a total of $2,898,500, to be expended on 22 new projects, which gives an exceptionally low average cost per project. The average cost per theatre on this program is $131,750, and the average for the 31,680 new seats is $91.50 per seat. The distribution by states of the new buildings announced for the district are: Ohio, 2; Indiana, 2, and four each for Illinois, Michigan and Wisconsin.

The following tabulation lists estimated expenditures for new projects by districts:

New England	$1,120,000
North Atlantic	8,141,000
South Eastern	70,000
South Western	1,385,000
Middle States	2,898,500
Western States	760,000
West Coast	4,720,000

In the South West a total of 8 new projects were announced, comprising a total of 10,150 new seats. Average cost per theatre in this group is $173,125, which gives an average number of seats per theatre of 1,270, the average cost per seat being $136.00.

New England's projects announced during the period number 5, with one of these costing over $500,000, and with a total of 8,500 new seats at an average cost per seat of $131.76.

In the Western States five new projects were announced, with the total seating capacity 11,300, giving an average of number of seats per theatre of 2,260. In the South Eastern district only one new project was announced, this being a 750 seater.

The state for which the largest investment in new projects was announced during the period is New York, where 9 new theatres were launched, calling for the expenditure of $4,975,000. Thus New York leads California by only $890,000. Of the four new projects calling for investments in excess of $1,000,000, two will be located in New York; one in Pennsylvania, and, as already noted, one in California.

THE most important holidays of the year came along in the middle of the period on which we are reporting theatre attendance at the key cities. The Christmas and New Years holidays, however, can never be considered by themselves as big opportunities for the theatre men, for the reason that at no season of the year is business so generally depressed for the theatres than the period immediately preceding Christmas— a time when the public is more concerned with shopping as an occupation for the time spared from work-a-day duties. When the records are all in it usually sums up into a proposition that the theatre reaps a harvest from Christmas day to New Years and needs the harvest to balance against the lean days preceding the festive occasion.

This year, with the added handicap of the "flu conditions"—the medical men termed it such and carefully avoided the word "epidemic"—the theatres in many parts of the country were unable to pick up as briskly as they normally would have after the Christmas holiday. Business generally, nevertheless, has showed a definite tendency to hold to the normal despite this adverse condition.

Our current map shows 18 cities at Average, with six Above Average and only four Under Average. This is rather remarkable in the face of the flu conditions and the fact that reports of December sales by leading retailers showed a large gain over the preceding year—because the merchants become active competitors of the theatre during the pre-holiday buying period. Last December more than previously first run houses in the key cities indicated the expected slump by holding over for second weeks pictures that would not be given that distinction at any other time of the year, save during the height of the summer season. A number of the older releases, shelved in favor of more likely attractions, also appeared at these first runs the week preceding Christmas.

SOUND, of course, remains the popular topic of trade conversation, much of the discussion concerning sound still blowing the way some isolated box office reports go. This is natural in view of the fact that so much importance has been attached to the invention as a means of widening the scope of the appeal pictures. But at this early stage some of those whose extreme enthusiasm at the outset convinced them that "sound" was everything, are beginning to lose their confidence—which, as usual in such cases, represents the setting in of one extreme after another.

Many of the most far-sighted showmen at the beginning of this new complement to the pictures appraised "sound" at its high value as an adjunct, and issued warnings against visionary viewpoints that the entire complexion of picture presentations and the public's tastes were being altered. During the height of the novelty, when a sound picture drew people in droves and the sound overshadowed everything else—even established standards of entertainment—there was a tendency to believe that all the theatre needed was an apparatus, at that time most difficult to obtain owing to high costs and limited production, and the crowd would come marching in, laying their quarters and half-dollars on the line and making vows as they departed to rush back and see the next new picture "in sound" at the first opportunity. Some day, perhaps, something capable of doing that will appear on the horizon of show business—but the promise is yet to be fulfilled.

"Sound," as a matter of fact is bringing new patrons into the theatre, but it is being demonstrated in every key city in the country that the theatres need the old patrons as well and that both new and old like and will pay for a good bill of entertainment, regardless whether it has this or that accessory.

The established screen stars, too, still are to be considered, because the reports show that their "names" on the marquee mean more than the word "Sound," provided their current picture has popular appeal.

THE picture topping the list of the leading ten attractions at key city first runs during the period of this report, for example, is a picture without dialog—though it has a synchronized accompaniment of sound effects and musical score. This is "A Woman of Affairs," the Garbo-Gilbert co-starring effort. In competition with dialog pictures in several cities, "Woman of Affairs" ran up top grosses for the town. But that is not remarkable when this particular picture is considered, because this one happens to be an excellent work, so pronounced by reviewers and picture men and approved in no uncertain terms by the public. "A Woman of Affairs" set a new record at Loew's Warfield, in San Francisco; was near the top figures for Loew's State in Los Angeles, the high mark at this house is held by "Dancing Daughters"; gave the Ambassador in St. Louis one of the best weeks of recent months, and was at better than average figures at all save one of the first runs it was reported on during the period of this report. These are remarkable accomplishments, but still they prove nothing for or against "talking pictures" as such.

In the field of the talkies we have reports of many excellent box office results credited to Fox's "In Old Arizona" and Paramount's "Interference." Both of these, due to their being later reelases, had fewer first run bookings during the period than "Woman of Affairs"—a factor which might and again might not have prevented from topping the latter attraction in this compilation.

Below we list, in the order of their rating, the ten pictures which scored the highest box office averages based on the number of bookings they played at key city first runs during the period December 15 to January 15:

1. "A Woman of Affairs"
2. "Interference"
3. "On Trial"
4. "The Barker"
5. "In Old Arizona"
6. "Scarlet Seas"
7. "Submarine"
8. "My Man"
9. "Synthetic Sin"
10. "Three Week Ends."

What Does the Experienced Exhibitor Think About Sound Films?

Here Is a Summary of the Points Stressed by "Old Timers" Who Have Told All They Know About Talkies

AFTER the exhibitor has invested his money in sound reproducing apparatus, paid the costs of installation and increasted his overhead thereby, what then? What are the problems he will be called upon to face after he has introduced this new form of motion picture entertainment to his patrons?

Additional reports supplementing the survey of key cities conducted by Motion Picture News, and the results of which were published in the issues of December 22 and 29, stress the same points that survey indicated as the most important lessons experience has taught showmen who have been presenting sound pictures for periods ranging from six months up to a year and a half.

From the technical standpoint "sound" has been pretty well charted. Laboratory and studio experimentation revealed the weak spots in equipment design and the technic of using this new adjunct to the films before the general run of the picturegoers were acquainted with it. However, the mass of the public cannot be put into a test tube and thus made to divulge all the secrets of its mental and emotional reactions to a specific type of entertainment. Nor was anything short of actual experience over a period of several months capable of revealing to the whole industry the effects upon theatre operation and management of this revolutionary development in show business.

Now, when "sound" may be regarded as having passed well beyond the novelty phase of its development, an analysis of the recently collected material based on conclusions and experience of seasoned showmen in the booking, handling and presentation of sound programs, may be helpful in enabling us to form a true perspective of the conditions which exist in the average theatre.

An overwhelming exhibitor opinion makes certain one fact—and that is that sound equipment was indeed perfected to a high degree of commercial practicality before it was offered on the market. The installations have functioned with as much dependability, judged by all the opinions thus far expressed, as the standard makes of projectors, or automobiles, or any similar mechanism. Shows that are interrupted or delayed because of any difficulties arising in the sound mechanism have occurred in only rare instances.

The problems confronting the exhibitor who presents sound are not the problems of mechanical operation, but rest entirely on an economic base. Increased cost—investment in equipment, installation costs, added wages—is the one problem with which the exhibitor must grapple when he decides to install and operate a "sound show." However, the experience up to this time almost without exception reveals that increased income has more than justified the pro-rated cost of the equipment and the increased overhead for higher rentals, wages, etc.

THE costs of equipment—due to the number of different types of devices now on the market, and the expense entailed in the installation of them—due to the individual conditions in the theatre booth and the auditorium—vary so greatly that it is not possible to strike an average as to the amount of money the theatre man must spend in order to have an adequate reproducing system in his theatre. Many theatres require no physical changes in the booth or the auditorium. Many, due to the very common fault of theatre men and theatre architects in neglecting to provide sufficient space and proper design for projection booths, are forced to make alterations in the booth — enlargement mainly. The acoustics of the auditorium are another factor—when they are good, there is no extra expense, but when problems are met here it is often necessary to add drapes, sacrifice a row of seats, or make other alterations.

Volume control—a factor of the installation as well as its operation—is the most difficult problem to be overcome during the experimental stage of handling sound. Readjustment of the speaker horns, and practice and more practice by the operator in turning the "fader" with precision, are usually the keys to the solution of volume problems. In the very large auditoriums, of course, the difficulties are greater. In the present stage of the development the sound reproducers show weakness here, and improvements are looked for. Possibly the multiple station plan, advanced by Victor A. Rigaumont, Architect, in an article in The Showman of August 1928, ultimately will be used in these very large auditoriums to overcome the difficulties experienced with the single station system, which places the horns behind the screen. Mr. Rigaumont proposed setting a number of horns about the auditorium, all concealed in decoration of sidewalls and ceiling, as a means of obtaining equal distribution of sound.

The opinion of exhibitors who have installed sound systems is that based on their experience every theatre sooner or later must have such an equipment. "An installation must be regarded as nothing other than an ordinary improvement which is necessary in all theatres from time to time," one showman declared. Some of those who operate large houses hold the opinion that sound apparatus is too expensive and the overhead is too great for a small neighborhood house to carry. However, less expensive installations are available, and there are several cases in which these small houses have carried on with equipment which required a far heavier investment than is necessary now that even the big electrical companies are offering a smaller type system at about half the cost of the large devices required for the big theatres.

They Say:

That the chief problem of sound presentations are not within the projection booth or the theatre proper, but lie in the increased costs to the theatre for equipment, rentals and wages for extra help required.

That sound film rental average about 50% more than rentals on silent films.

That the average theatre requires the services of one extra in help in the projection booth.

That investments for equipment, installation costs and added overhead have been offset by greatly increased business obtained with sound presentation thus far.

The rental on sound film is about 50 per cent more than for the silent pictures. It is necessary to have two men in booths which without sound were operated by one projectionist. Considerable skill must be developed by the operators. However, according to Art Smith, chief projectionist at the Roxy, who has had extensive experience with sound, the average projectionist by means of a little practice and some study of the principles of sound amplification—which of course many are acquainted with due to their operation of radio receivers—can become proficient in operating a sound machine after a reasonably short course of instruction from the engineers or projectionists who install the apparatus.

ACCORDING to Al Rosenberg, head of the De Luxe Theatres, in Seattle, the suburban exhibitors whose houses are operating on a paying basis and who contemplate installation of talkie equipment must make this installation with the "realization that it is merely a matter of protection for the future, and will, in all probability, result in lower net profit for some seasons to come."

Thus far, there has been no considerable movement to increase admissions because of the added sound attraction. However, it is the opinion of many that increased admissions will solve a problem likely to arise through the added cost of giving the public sound.

THEY ALL AGREE ON THIS POINT

Honesty in advertising is doubly important in exploiting sound films. Above are two ads for Ray Grombacher's theatres in Spokane. On the left, the "Talking Picture" is tagged with the hall device which Grombacher has used as a signal that the characters in the film speak lines. On the right is an ad for "Two Lovers," a picture with synchronized music and effects, and it is so labeled by a prominent headline.

That the Sound pictures which have met with the greatest box office success are those having all dialog or several important sequences featuring dialog as a means of advancing the story.

That Mechanical or electrical difficulties other than those requiring only minor repairs or adjustments are rare.

That in very large auditoriums sound distribution providing proper volume and quality in all parts of the theatre offers many difficulties in the present stage of the development.

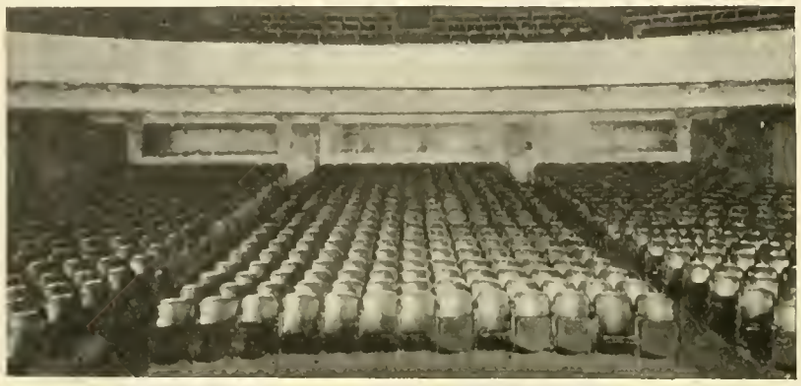
That where conditions warrant extra midnight shows the sound presentations greatly reduce overhead costs of such special performances.

Instances where admissions were increased to the benefit not only of the theatre which introduced sound pictures in the city but those who later obtained installations are at hand.

William A. Johnston, in his editorial in the MOTION PICTURE NEWS of January 19, pointed out the experience of Ray Grombacher, head of the Spokane Theatres, in this connection. Grombacher has been presenting sound pictures for two years. He raised his prices fifty per cent on the occasion of his first booking of a sound picture and has succeeded in maintaining the advance. The editorial continues:

"This, it seems to me is vital. Karl Hoblitzelle and many other experienced theatre men have talked to us on the same subject. Here is the picture they draw: Say a house is successful in getting an installation. It has, immediately, the jump upon its competitor. But, sooner or later, the competitive house will be wired. That is inevitable. At this juncture, if the first house did not raise its admission price on sound pictures, both houses will find themselves in the same old dilemma, of giving a more-and-more expensive bill for the same money."

Thus far the sound pictures which have attracted the greatest business are the all talkies, or pictures which feature a number of important sequences in dialog.



The Movietone newsreel has become a decided box office factor. Also, sound, according to all the indications available, is making a new place in the theatre for the short comedy. For years the two reel comedies have been doing their bit to round out the program, often making it a satisfactory entertainment where the feature alone would fail to achieve that end, but little fuss has been made over it in the advertising or for that matter by the patrons. Now we see short comedies with talking sequences and sound effects given an important place in the advertising of the theatres—which, of course, is a sign that the public is taking more notice of the comedies.

THE difference between the All-Talkie, Part-Talkie, Sound Effects and Synchronized Scores, from the audience standpoint is very great, and theatremen everywhere have learned that they must be very accurate in their advertising to tell the public exactly whether the attraction exploited is one thing or the other. The word talkie must be avoided if the picture advertised has no dialog. An interpolated song, or some howls from the crowd in mob scenes, are, so far as the audience is concerned, merely "effects." The sound accompaniments of music and effects have not been sensational box office attractions.

The patron of the theatre considers "talkie" only those pictures which have dialog, spoken by the characters in the play and concerned with the play itself. Even a prolog, with dialog tacked on front of a picture fails to make it a "talkie" in the opinion of the talking picture fans.

New and Improved Equipment

A Review of the Latest Developments in Theatre Engineering

Microphone Attachments for Junior Orchestraphone

NATIONAL THEATRE SUPPLY COMPANY announces three new improvements which make the Orchestraphone Junior Model more versatile in the presentataion of musical effects and incidental music.

Each Orchestraphone Junior Model is now wired for microphone attachment. This allows the ready installation of a microphone, which many exhibitors have found practical in making special announcements and in adding "talking" effects supplied by "singing organists, etc.

A second improvement is the adoption of an Effect Control. Through this control, both turntables may be operated at the same time, allowing the introduction of various sound effects (such as storms, horses' hoofs, bird calls, etc.,) without discontinuing the musical selection in progress at any time.

In addition to these new features, the library service has been extended to include a greatly increased selection of sound effect records. Numerous effects from a whistle or bird call to a thunder storm, are now recorded for Orchestraphone, and are stocked at all National branches.

3 Companies Merged in New Electrical Corporation

OFFICIAL announcement has been made of a change in the name of the Cutler-Hammer Mfg. Co., Milwaukee, Wisconsin, manufacturers of electric motor control, wiring devices and allied lines. In the change from a Wisconsin to a Delaware corporation, the Cutler-Hammer Mfg., Co., Milwaukee; The Cream City Foundry Co., Milwaukee, and Cutler-Hammer Manufacturing Company, New York, are united under the one of Cutler-Hammer, Inc.

The new company is organized as a Delaware corporation with the following officers:

Chairman of the Board, F. R. Bacon; President, B. L. Worden; Vice President, F. L. Pierce; Vice President, J. C. Wilson; Treasurer, H. F. Vogt; Secretary, W. C. Stevens.

The Board of Directors is composed of: F. R. Bacon, Milwaukee, Wis.; F. L. Pierce, Milwaukee, Wis., B. L. Worden, West Orange, N. J.; Carl A. Johnson, Madison, Wis.; T. Johnson Ward, New York, N. Y.; L. A. Lecher, Milwaukee, Wis.

SHOWMANSHIP IN THE EQUIPMENT FACTORY

Organ manufacturers are applying showmanship principles to exploit the equipment they instal in theatres. Above is shown the window display staged at the Philadelphia branch of the Wurlitzer company, where the console for the new Mastbaum theatrer is being decorated with special designs to match the ornamentation of the house in full view of the window shoppers and passerby

Extend Line of Artificial Floral Decorations

FLORAL decorations in the theatre look expensive and give the air of prosperity which reacts so favorably upon the American public under all circumstances, but particularly in the theatre, but do not require constant expenditures, now that the makers of artificial flowers and shrubs have succeeded so well in their imitations of the natural flora of this and other climes.

The varied styles of theatre architecture and decoration, calling for faithful detail in every article used in the decorative scheme, has created a demand for a greatly extended line of artificial flowers reproducing species found all over the world. The manner in which this demand has been met by makers and distributors of artificial flowers and shrubs is strikingly illustrated in the new catalogue recently issued by Frank Netschert, Inc., New York, a company which long has specialized in floral decorations for theatres.

More than two hundred different styles of floral decorations, faithfully simulating natural species, are illustrated in this new catalogue. The varieties of flowers and shrubs are made up in a great number of forms, from single stem cut flowers to potted trees and boxed shrubs suitable for parapets and windows in atmospheric theatres and stage decoration.

Offer New Type Film Reels Welded Into Single Unit

FILM reels built as a single unit by means of electrical welding recently were introduced to the market by the Universal Electric Welding Co., of Long Island City. The reels are offered in four sizes and are made of steel wire welded and finished with a galvanized finish.

The reels are designed especially for sound films, the edges of which are afforded special protection due to the rigidity of the units and the spacing of the spokes.

LET PHOTOTONE SAVE YOU $10,000

SOME DAY you are going to have to come to the sight-sound policy. You would be operating under it now if you didn't dread to spend that $11,000 which you have been given to understand such equipment costs.

Phototone—adopted by thousands of theaters as the best solution to the sight-sound problem, can be installed for as little as $500.

There's a clear saving of over $10,000. In addition, Phototone eliminates the heavy overhead of organs, pianos and orchestras.

For a minimum weekly cost we'll keep you supplied with new cue music, including original musical scores by Thematic Music Cue Service of New York.

Also the special sound records you need, such as growls, mob noises, hoof-beats, trains, airplanes, motors, marching feet, gun shots, etc.

Phototone has the fullest, purest tone of any sight-sound instrument.

ANNOUNCEMENT

We expect to have a practical and efficient synchronizing device to offer to our exhibitors at a reasonable price and announcement of this will be made in the near future.

It can be used in conjunction with Phototones already installed or on any instruments that may be purchased from this time on.

NEW PHOTOTONE IMPROVEMENTS

Improvements recently added to Phototone improve its already wonderful results. These new improvements are:

1. New fadaway switch volume control.
2. New dual turntable control.
3. New type improved amplifier with perfected audio transformer, increasing trutone quality.
4. Greater volume with less distortion.
5. More efficient scratch filter.
6. More effective control of the bass notes.

Here's How a Theatre Reduced the Coal Bill Nearly Forty Per Cent

Efficient Transportation Spells Economy in Heating as Well as Marketing

INFORMATION from a reliable source that the Branford theatre in Newark had reduced coal consumption from a total of 448¼ tons burned during the season of 1926-27 to 250 tons for the 1927-28 period, sent a representative of this department on a journey to the New Jersey city to investigate the whys and wherefores of an accomplishment in operation economy so remarkable, if true. The theatre records, courteously placed at the disposal of the representative, checked to a decimal point with the advance "tip," and the investigation affirmed what frequently has been urged by manufacturers of air conditioning systems, that these installations are year round implements of theatre operation. For the engineers at the Branford summed up their replies to the question, "How did you do it," with the answer: "This air conditioning installation, which was put into the theatre during the summer of 1927 is responsible."

The evidence adduced by the engineers and the atmospheric conditions in all parts of the Branford, in addition to observations on a visit to the boiler rooms deep down in the cellars of the theatre, combined to produce a result so convincing that it is deemed highly worthwhile to report the instance here.

Previous to the installation of this equipment at the Branford, the theatre was heated by direct radiation. Economies in coal consumption with the new heating system, the theatre engineers declared, was almost wholly due to the flexibility of control and distribution of heat. With direct radiation, they explained, the length of time required to deliver warmth to the middle portions of the auditorium —distant from the radiators along the sidewalls — was far in excess of that needed to warm that section of the house under a circulating system such as is used in this air conditioning installation. Excessive heat was developed in certain portions of the house while others, far removed from the radiators, were unheated.

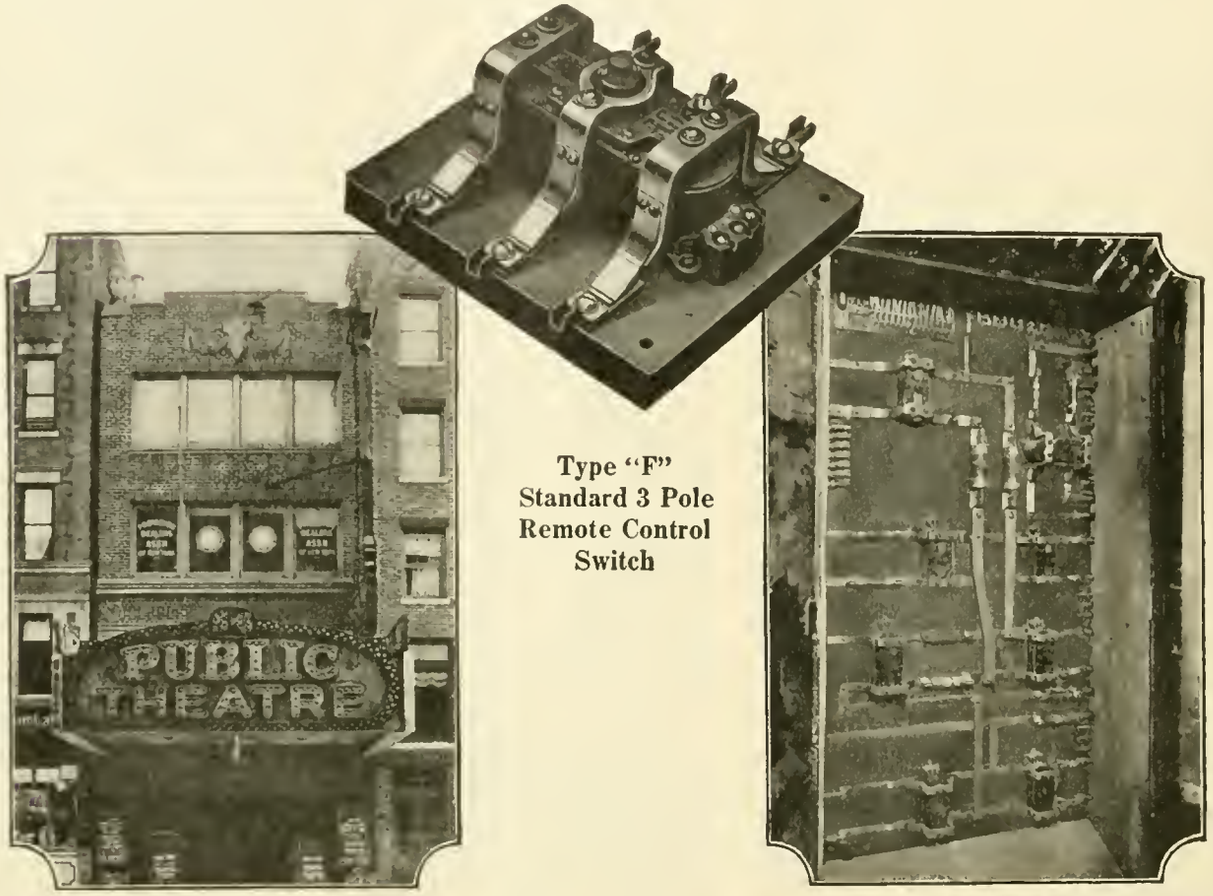
To this factor alone they ascribe much of the saving that has been effected. The recirculation of a certain small proportion of the heated air exhausted from the auditorium and sent back through the supply ducts accounts for the rest.

Recirculation of air from the auditorium is not recommended by engineers of the company which includes this feature in its system—the Carrier Engineering Corporation—as a means of economy in fuel consumption. The recirculation system, however, provides that air exhausted from the auditorium is brought through the washing chamber, and there the air is "washed," by passing through a spray of water, designed primarily to clean and humidify the air to the proper point for what is the accepted standard of "comfort conditions."

Due to the stress which has been placed upon "refrigeration," a summer-time slogan, many consider "ventilation" as a means of "cooling" the theatre during the summer months. As a matter of fact, "refrigeration" or "cooling" has little more to do with the air conditioning system as a whole than the boiler which supplies heat in winter. In the real sense, the air conditioning system provides the theatre with the means of maintaining ideally comfortable and healthful conditions every day in the year. In other words, the outside conditions are entirely offset by artificial means of creating within the theatre atmospheric conditions which have been established as the most comfortable and healthful for the human system.

THIS is accomplished by the supply from duct systems, with outlets located in various parts of the auditorium, which deliver fresh "conditioned" air to all parts of the auditorium. The air is circulated through the system after being brought from the outside, washed, cleansed, and humidified, and then heated or cooled to the ideal temperature. The system—reference here is made to installations similar to that at the Branford theatre—is a closed circuit, with a number of "switches" located at various points. These switches are automatically controlled—or more properly, thermostatically controlled—so as to deliver the proper amount of fresh, outside air, the proper amount of heat, or refrigeration. The air sent into the auditorium through the ducts, located at the top of the auditorium, is drawn out at the bottom—at the floor level. The system is adjusted to produce a certain atmospheric condition within the auditorium—properly determined by charts—and it works automatically in bringing in fresh outside air and returning through the intake a certain amount of the air which has been drawn from the auditorium. The recirculated air, of course, is mixed with the fresh air before passing again into the spray chamber.

Efforts to conserve fuel by means of recirculating great quantities of the air exhausted from the auditorium or other parts of the theatre, on the other hand, are frequently responsible for inside atmospheric conditions which are far below the standard the air conditioned theatre should supply to its patrons. This is a matter of operation, and the air conditioning experts are constantly urging managers and engineers to give first consideration to results in the atmospheric conditions.



ON this same subject of year round air conditioning, it often has been remarked by engineers and some individual showmen that a majority of the theatres with air conditioning plants fail to enjoy the box office advantages of this feature through neglect of selling on the part of the managers or the advertising men charged with exploiting the institutions.

People are learning by feeling for themselves the comfort which is offered in an air conditioned theatre, particularly in contrast to the majority of the legitimate houses, which are almost invariably stuffy and overheated even on the coldest winter day.

Regular check of the newspaper advertising of theatres in the key cities fail to produce any evidence that the theatres which are known to be equipped with excellent air conditioning plants are exploited from this angle except during the summer months. At that time the "cooling" is stressed, without benefit of qualifications, which might well be added, concerning the processes which make the air healthful and comfortable in summer as well as winter. Recently one of the chain operators conducted a campaign featuring the air conditioning with which its theatres is supplied—presumably as an indirect effort to allay fears concerning flu and other similar infections then prevalent. The fact that the flu condition this season cut theatre attendance less than a siege of similar proportions would have some seasons ago is no doubt largely traceable to the fact that the motion picture theatre is no longer regarded in the light of a place of assembly where crowds gather and unhealthful conditions prevail. This is a reward for the confidence which has been built up by the earnest efforts of the operators of the best theatres to provide healthful conditions as well as luxurious surroundings for the amusement seekers.

Special campaigns conducted through the winter months to sell "air conditioning" where such systems are installed are certain to become a set policy of the leading theatres in the future. Eventually the "healthier inside" slogan will find a place in the newspaper display and the lobby billing during winter months, just as the "cooler inside" is now a standard item of theatre exploitation in the summertime.

"Diamond H" Switches for Dependable Control of Theatre Lighting!

Type "F" Standard 3 Pole Remote Control Switch

Public Theatre in New York City. Remote Control Switches for Footlights, Spots, Orchestra, Etc.

Panel Board showing arrangement of 2 Pole Type "F" Switches

If the important lighting for your exits, stairways, lobbies and aisles are connected to an emergency circuit in addition to the main current supply, you should use a "Diamond H" Remote Control Switch which will automatically change over if anything happens to the main supply.

This is particularly important for theatres in case of fire, storms or other causes.

"Diamond H" Switches are absolutely dependable, and can also be used to simplify the control of stage, interior and effect lighting and for exterior signs.

THE BULLETIN BOARD

Notes, Reports and Ideas That Keep You Posted on the Trend of the Trade from Month to Month

THE trend of theatre business during the first month of the new year continued along the same lines which have been dominant since the introduction of the sound picture on a widespread scale, with attendance averages holding up remarkably well in the face of adverse conditions caused by the prevalence of respiratory diseases and the general business reaction which sets in immediately following the holidays.

The talking picture still dominates the situation while the public in the main is attracted by new developments but is even more interested in the program of entertainment which affords the greatest satisfaction, whether that means a picture with dialog or one totally silent. However, the bigger houses with the installations are capitalizing this added feature of appeal, with the result that the theatres of the suburban or neighborhood type are finding it increasingly difficult to keep the home trade at home.

Small House Mortality

DIFFICULTIES of the smaller theatres attributed to the competition of sound pictures at de luxe houses are reflected in a report from Iowa, where during one week of the month more than 15 of the suburban type theatres went dark, according to the Des Moines Film Board of Trade. Most of the operators of these houses declared that they could not succeed in the face of competition from sound equipped theatres in nearby cities.

A Different Viewpoint

ON the other hand there is the report quoting an executive of a large circuit to the effect that a survey of the New York neighborhood houses of this chain are now back to pre-sound levels after enjoying brisk business for several weeks when talkies were new. This, however, leaves one to wonder if these houses might not now be under their former averages were they without sound equipment.

Theatre Tax Figures

AMUSEMENT tax figures of the bureau of internal revenue for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1928, show Los Angeles ranking in third place, for the first time passing Philadelphia as an amusement center. Theatre taxes for the four chief cities are: New York, $5,743,177; Chicago, $1,033,000; Los Angeles, $686,000; Philadelphia, $586,000. Theatre taxes are combined with those on roof gardens and cabarets in these amusement taxes.

Broadway Holdovers

CURRENT programs at the regular weekly change Broadway picture theatres indicate the Hollywood studios have made an auspicious start with their product for 1929. At three of the four houses in this classification there are hold-over attractions. The fourth, the Paramount, is showing "Interference," which closed a long-run engagement last week at the Criterion. The Roxy repeats with "In Old Arizona," the Strand with "On Trial" and the Capitol is showing for a second week "A Woman of Affairs."

War—Good and Bad

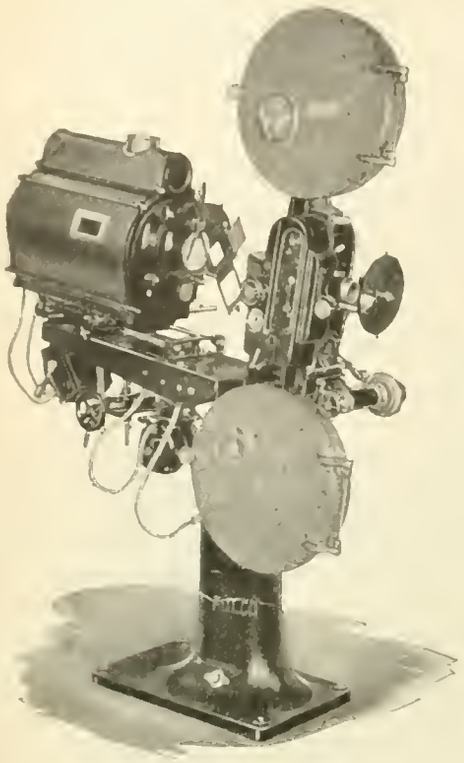
ONE of those "theatre wars" that make such good headlines is on in Los Angeles between the Publix and West Coast. Publix recently took back under its own management 11 theatres in the Coast cities which previously had been operated by West Coast under a percentage arrangement. Starting an aggressive policy in the Capital of the Films, Publix renamed the Metropolitan the Paramount. Competition is taking the form of increased advertising by both Publix and West Coast—a "good war" according to Joseph Pullitzer, for it is a war of advertising, which benefits the public and the business engaged in it. But the drive was continued further, with appearances of several prominent stars at the one and countering of special added attractions at the other. The latter type of war is the kind that might be "bad war," if it is carried on to the point of giving too much for the admission price, which is just another form of price cutting—and that, business leaders agree, is merely another form of cutting your own and the other fellow's throat.

EXPLOITATION

SOME of the most sensational exploitation stunts are those which are built up around a local situation or a chance event, and the theatre man who avails himself of opportunities thus presented usually lands in the headlines as well as making profit for his box office. An unusual opportunity to ballyhoo his presentation of "The Haunted House" was presented Harry Woodin, manager of the Rosemary Theatre, Ocean Park, Calif., and Woodin made the most of it. A local house owner decided to move the structure from one site to another. Permission to move the house to the site chosen was denied. Nevertheless the frame dwelling was trundled down the street. Police prevented its being moved onto the forbidden lot, and the house remained in the street, blocking traffic. The event became a headline story and Woodin moved in on the publicity by posting a banner across its front with the title "The Haunted House" spelled out in flaming letters.

Broadcasting Theme Songs

BROADCASTING theme songs played on phonographs at the theatre to loud speakers located outside music stores is one of the stunts now being extensively used in large cities. Leased direct wires from the theatres to the stores in the tie-up carry the tunes to the outside amplifiers. Between records an announcement is made by the theatre man, who informs hearers that the music is coming from the so-and-so theatre where such-and-such film is the attraction.



Laemmle's Show Boat

A REAL show boat company had its opportunity to display the dramatic wares with which residents of river towns are regaled when Norman F. Thom and his Princess troupe opened a four weeks' engagement at the Belmont Theatre, New York. The visit of the Princess company—the floating theatre was left docked at an Ohio river town—is a stunt of Universal as advance exploitation for the sound film production of Edna Ferber's story.

What's Wrong With This Window?

UNDER the auspices of its Chamber of Commerce, a novel advertising scheme was carried out last year in Zurich, Switzerland. 100 stores participated in the plan, which required some error to be shown in each window display featured. The public was invited to send in the results of their observations for the errors, a prize of 1,000 francs being the first award. Many of the errors were cleverly hidden. One of the tailoring establishments, for example, displayed a suit, one trouser leg of which had been manufactured with the material on the wrong side. Another store showed a typewriter on which one of the letters was duplicated. There was a prize for the best dressed window as an inducement for the merchants.

How to Plan Campaigns

A POORLY thought out campaign that is carried through is better than a brilliantly mapped drive that dies before it is given a chance to produce, Kenneth Collins, publicity director for R. H. Macy & Co., Inc., told a gathering at the New York Advertising Club recently. "One of the secrets of successful advertising as well as successful merchandising," he added, "is to concentrate on the best selling lines. Treatment should be standardized throughout the campaign in order to give a continuity of impression." While this advice applies specifically to retail store advertising, there is some good advice there for the exhibitor. Much of the theatre advertising would be more profitable because of cumulative value were more exhibitors to strive for standardization of some particular feature which the reading public would come to associate with a particular theatre.

How Many Parts Jazz?

IS the patron of the theatre different in his music tastes than radio listeners? If the same things appeal to the public while at the theatre as when listening to radio programs, then only 15 per cent of the music rendered should be of the jazz type to please the majority, according to the directors of the National Broadcasting Company stations. A check-up on the programs sent over that company's stations during one week showed that broadcast jazz music actually took up 15 per cent of program time, while classical music, or music of the type that has the approval of austere musical educators was given 28 per cent of program time. Old favorites, folk songs, etc., take up approximately 10 per cent of the time on the air, while military band music occupied about 4 per cent of the program time.

PRODUCTION

SOUND picture production has greatly increased consumption of positive film, according to a statement by the Eastman Kodak Company. On the Pacific Coast alone, more than 200,000,000 feet of positive film were distributed for the six months period ending December 31. These figures represent the largest increase for any corresponding period in the history of the company. The fact that most companies are now making both sound and silent versions of all pictures and the amount of studio experimentation which has been going on since the introduction of sound had added greatly to the film consumption by the industry.

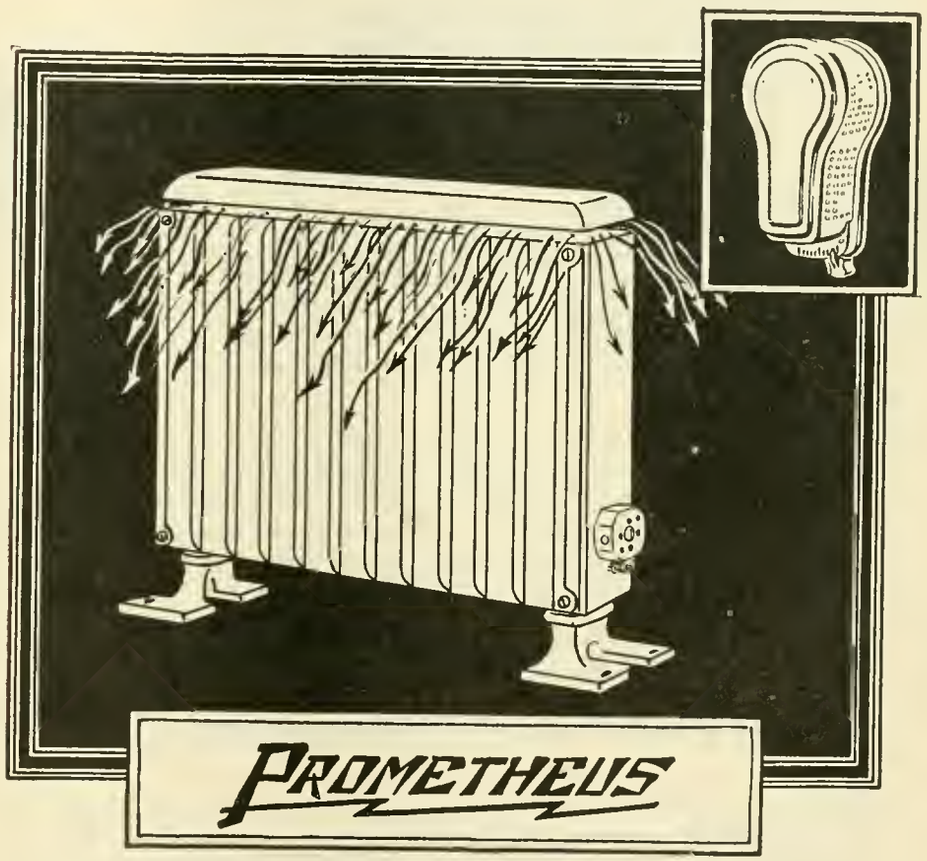
Extras Suffer

THOSE who thus far have not benefited from the production activities in the sound field are the movie extras. According to figures published by the Central Casting Corporation during the month, the earnings of Hollywood's extras dropped more than a third of a million dollars below those of 1928. Only two of the approximately 15,000 registered extras averaged five days' work a week throughout the year.

"Silent" Propaganda

THE existence of a deliberately planned propaganda against talking pictures, was charged in a statement made in Hollywood by Jack L. Warner, production chief at Warner Bros. studios. Warner declared that those who have been making statements that the talkie is a "flash in the pan" and will not survive are prejudiced and are protecting the propaganda because they have not been successful in making talkies.

Ziegfeld "Follies"



ACCORDING to an announcement from Florenz Ziegfeld from his vacation quarters in Florida, the famed glorifier of the American girl will produce his own Movietone edition of the "Follies." Apparently aroused by the news that a "Follies" was to be produced as a sound film by one of the big movie companies, Ziegfeld added: "I will spend $3,000,000 to make my Movietone of 'Follies' the perfect record of the perfect revue that has so many ineffective imitators."

SAVE ORGAN REPAIR BILLS

The Prometheus Organ Heater keeps the organ always "in tune" and free from damage due to excessive cold, dampness and sudden temperature changes. The heater requires no attention. It has automatic thermostatic control and is easily installed by "plugging in" in an ordinary electric outlet. There are no exposed heating parts. Heater is made of cast iron throughout, aluminum finished, and occupies only 14¼ in. x 4 in. of floor space. Send coupon for complete description.

The Prometheus Organ Heater is scientifically designed to deflect the warm air downward. The heat naturally rises, providing a constant, unvarying degree of temperature throughout the organ chamber.

Movietone Follies," with Bobby Clark and Paul McCullough as the chief comedians of an eye and ear entertainment that it is promised will do for the tired business men of the whole country everything the Broadway shows have been doing for the T.B.M. in New York.

Griffith as Prophet

THE sound picture of the future will surpass anything the theatre has ever produced, D. W. Griffith is quoted as predicting in an interview by a New York newspaper representative. "In ten years," he said, "you'll have sublime Movietones. Just like grand opera, only superior to grand opera. You can have everything from Jazz to Wagner and Bach in the same picture."

Business as Usual

THOUGH a fire caused by spontaneous combustion and resulting in a damage amounting to $450,000 swept two sound stages at the Paramount studios, the company's schedule will be carried through without any delay whatsoever. Announcement that facilities were adequate to a continuance of the production schedule as originally planned was made by Jesse L. Lasky. The property destroyed was fully covered by insurance.

Complete Lighting Systems Designed as Harmonious Units

THAT'S the big job that this company is doing for the enterprising motion picture theatre operators.

The rapidly growing vogue for stage presentations has brought many new lighting problems in its wake. No longer does the stage and auditorium remain uniformly dark throughout the entire program. Now several different lighting combinations are required in the course of a single program.

The installation of lighting systems and stage switchboards is no longer a mail order catalogue proposition. It is now a matter of scientific design and careful study by experience in stage and auditorium lighting.

That's the reason why Hub Systems are being installed in the newest and finest theatres! The up-to-the-minute theatre operators know that this company is the best equipped of all to design and build systems on the most scientific and highly artistic basis.

We can help you with your lighting. Write us just what you want to do and we will gladly help you.

"Show Boat" Dialog

LONG distance telephone conferences between Universal's Home Offices and Florenz Ziegfeld in Florida culminated in the announcement that Universal has acquired the right to use both dialog and music from the "Show Boat" stage production current in New York. According to report one of the conditions of the final agreement was that the film was not to be publicly presented until the Ziegfeld show had completed its New York run.

Briefs

Octavus Roy Cohen, whose darktown stories have attracted a large following, is in Hollywood to write the all-dialog story in which Paramount will star Moran and Mack, the "Two Black Crows." . . . Norma Talmadge will be "seen and heard" in her next picture for U. A., to be based on a stage play. . . . Ben Hecht and Charles Mac Arthur, playwrights and novelists, are writing original screen plays for RKO production. . . . Emil Jannings hereafter will do stories with "happy endings." . . . Mary Pickford is making two separate versions of "Coquette," one sound the other silent. . . . George Fitzmaurice is under contract to make 5 films for U. A. during the next two years, with $75,000 per production the reported figure he will receive. . . . Warners will re-make "The Narrow Street," first produced in 1925, as an all-dialogue picture. . . . Both Fox and Paramount plan sequels to former outstanding successes, "The Cock-Eyed World" (Fox) will be a follow-up to "What Price Glory" and "Ten Years After" will be Paramount's sequel to "Wings." . . . There will be no sound version of "Charlie's Aunt" as a result of the decision of Mrs. Bradon Thomas, widow of the author and owner of the play, to reject all offers from Hollywood, for the talkie rights to the famous stage farce. . . . Hands, and nothing else, except wrists, forearms and futuristic backgrounds are the actors and scenery in a picture which was produced in Germany and will open the unique "four screen" Film Guild Cinema on West 8th Street, New York.

CHAIN AND COMPANY ACTIVITIES

A CERTAIN film man was overheard to remark "it's a good thing only a negligible portion of the rumors of change, merger and dissolution in the film business come true. It's hard enough as things now go to keep up with the course of events." All rumors aside, it is certainly a season of great activity on the part of the companies and the chain operators. As a matter of fact the actual happenings, bona fide and official, are going at such a pace that there are signs that the Rumor Committee is looking for its second wind.

Denials of Rumor

NICHOLAS SCHENCK, head of Loew's, called in members of the trade press and issued a denial that there was any basis for the persistent rumor to the effect that negotiations were on to merge Loew's with Fox. His statement included the words that "it was an utterly false rumor." That statement has quieted the rumors about that particular deal. Talk then flew about that Paramount and R-C-A were getting together. The activity on the upward swing of Paramount stock on the New York Stock Exchange was one of the indications advanced. When the film industry is a little older it is quite possible that there will be found some theatre operating consolidations have taken place, but they will be "consolidations" aiming at more economical operation of chain houses.

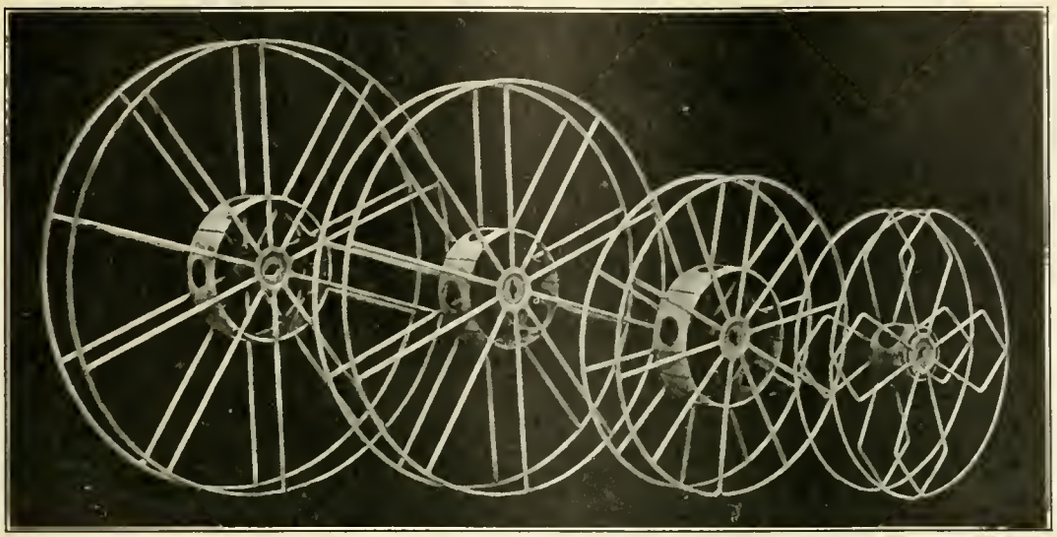
A New National Cham?

THE presence in Florida of J. J. Murdock, Pat Casey, Joseph P. Kennedy, and a number of theatre men who head chains has been interpreted in many quarters as signifying that there is in process of formation a new national theatre chain of vaudeville and picture houses. The report has it that theatres owned by J. J. Murdock, and which did not go to R-K-O in the purchase of the K-A-O circuit will form the nucleus of this circuit. Pat Casey, in vaudeville circles regarded one of the keenest showmen in the country, is to actively direct the operation of the theatres, which the rumors say will include the Hoblitzel Interstate circuit in Texas, the Butterfield houses in Michigan, the Keith-Proctor houses in New York, and others. The rumor at various times went further and said that the Pantages circuit would be included. That, of course, is all rumor.



Skouras at New Post

EARLY in the month Spyros Skouras, president of Skouras Brothers and the St. Louis Amusement Company, started active work on his duties as head of the Warner Bros. theatre operations. The salary is said to be $100,000 a year. It is said that an important factor influencing Warner to purchase the Skouras holdings in St. Louis was the desire to have Skouras and his brothers, Charley and George, as executives in charge of the greatly expanded Warner theatre operations. The home offices of the Stanley Company of America were moved from Philadelphia to New York. They are under the supervision of Skouras. S. H. Fabian continues as buyer for the circuit, with Ed Alperson, former Warner district manager as his aid. Reeves Espry, former advertising director of the Skouras chain, is in charge of the operation of the de luxe theatres of the chain.

More Theatres for Fox

THE Fox theatre operations continue to expand at a rapid rate. 184 houses in tthe Greater New York district were brought into the circuit through the completion early in the month of negotiations with a number of independent operators. The houses of 37 different operators went over to Fox in a deal said to involve $45,000,000. The two largest groups taken over were the Small-Strausberg and the Blinderman-Steiner-M&S circuits, comprising 51 houses between them. Fox opened the new 5,000 seat cinema palace in St. Louis last Friday. It is reported a theatre building program calling for a total of 30,000 new seats will be carried out by the company this year. This will include new houses in Chicago, Los Angeles, Pittsburgh, Baltimore, Boston and Cleveland. There is also talk that Fox may invade Texas.

Radio Pictures

AFTER selecting RKO as the new name for the former FBO company bought over by R.C.A., officials of the organization got together and chose "Radio Pictures" as the brand name for productions from the company's studios. A $250,000 building program has been started at these studios. All stages are to be sound-proofed. There will be 30 Radio Pictures released under the schedule on which the company is now working. Exploitation for these films will include weekly broadcasts to be known as "R-K-O Hours," the first of which went on the air over an NBC network on January 22. Vaudeville stars appearing at the R-K-O theatres and film stars will be the entertainers who appear on the programs.

DISTRIBUTION AND SALES

A NATIONAL survey of the public reaction to sound pictures generally and all-dialog pictures is being made by Felix Feist, general sales manager of M-G-M. In Atlanta he summarized his findings up to that point of his coast-to-coast trip, by declaring that good pictures effectively synchronized with music and effects are making a strong bid for permanent favor, that only a carefully selected and limited number of plays lend themselves to all-dialog treatment, and that records show good silent pictures have drawn bigger money despite competition of part-talkie or all-talkie films.

World Wide Organization

WORLD WIDE'S sales organization has been completed and the company expects to have in full swing early in February exchanges in the following cities: Buffalo, Chicago, Cleveland, Des Moines, Detroit, Indianapolis, Milwaukee, Minneapolis, New York City, Omaha, Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, St. Louis, Charlotte, Atlanta, Dallas, Washington, Salt Lake, Cincinnati, New Haven and Portland.

Completes Sales Plans

SIDNEY R. KENT, head of Paramount sales organization, left Hollywood on January 24 after spending two weeks at the company's studios there in connection with the sales and releasing campaign for next season.

In Brief

CHARLES ROSENZWEIG, general sales manager of RKO announced the following changes in the personnel of the branch managers: W. E. Matthews leaves San Francisco to manage the Seattle branch; E. A. Lam heads the Portland branch, and George Seach is acting manager in San Francisco. . . . William J. Morgan now occupies the post of a sales executive with Columbia. . . . Guy P. Morgan resigned from the Samuel Goldwyn sales organization to become a special traveling representative in the United Artists Foreign Department. . . . Carl J. Goe has been appointed assistant general manager of Tiffany-Stahl. . . . Harry I. Goldman has been made manager of the Boston exchange, and Henry Ellman is now supervisor of the central division of T-S.

FROM ALL ANGLES

IT is the little fellow in business that has the hard job, while the luck is with the big business man, according to Sam Katz as quoted in an interview published in the New York Sunday World Magazine.

"All big business men are lucky. It's the little fellow who has a hard time. Where the little fellow has all his eggs in one basket the big fellow can balance his failures against his successes to show profit in the end." After you get used to it, he says, thinking in millions is just as simple as thinking in terms of small groceries.

"Canned" Radio Shows

MUSIC and entertainment programs for radio broadcasting are to be "canned" on film records similar to the sound films and supplied to a series of stations throughout the country, according to a plan of Radio Production, Inc., of New York. The firm intends to develop into a radio chain

THE MERGING OF THESE FOUR COMPANIES will place at the services of its customers and the industries which it serves, one consolidated company with ample resources and complete facilities for the development and manufacture of a very complete line of automatic controls.

IT WILL BE THE AIM OF THIS NEW COMPANY to maintain the reputation of making the finest and most dependable products of its kind, to hold the good will of its customers through the fairness of its policies and the service it renders, to sell its products at the lowest price consistent with the quality of the product and the service it renders.

THE COMPANY WILL HAVE A COMPLETE LINE OF AUTOMATIC CONTROLS for both domestic and industrial types of refrigeration and for heating with either oil, gas or coal. Also a very diversified line of controls and thermostats for gas, oil, electricity, etc., for time, pressure, humidity and temperature, sign flashers, heaters and other specialties.

IT WILL OWN MANY PATENTS including those covering the manufacture of (light and heavy duty) mercury switches and corrugated bellows. Manufacturing these products in its own plant will put the company in a very favorable position to not only improve its present products, but also carry on the development of new devices embodying such units.

TO ENABLE IT TO BETTER SERVE YOU general sales and service offices have been opened in the Peoples Gas Building, Chicago, and eastern offices will be opened in New York City. The present sales and service organizations of the four companies will be consolidated and considerably increased.

BUILDING CONTRACTS WILL BE LET IMMEDIATELY to greatly enlarge the plant and offices at Elkhart, Indiana. A separate building will also be erected for laboratory, experimental and development work. As soon as these buildings have been completed, the businesses of the three Wisconsin companies will be moved to Elkhart.

A LARGE STAFF OF ENGINEERS AND TECHNICIANS, each a specialist, will have ample facilities in the new laboratory for carrying on their work of constantly endeavoring to improve its products, develop new controls, and do experimental work for our customers.

THE OFFICERS OF THE COMPANY WILL BE: President and Treasurer, Julius K. Luthe; Vice-Presidents, A. I. Wallace, Paul K. Cramblet, E. J. Leach and Roy W. Johnson.

[NOTE: Correspondence should be directed to each of the four companies, just as heretofore, until notice has been given that all the general offices have been consolidated and moved to Elkhart, Indiana.] which will utilize special recorded programs as a means of eliminating the cost of connecting land wires, one of the most expensive items in broadcasting. It is expected that this recorded method will enable the company to broadcast commercial programs at the same respective hour throughout the four-time zones of the nation, by shipping advance records to client stations. It is said that at least forty stations will be included in the network. Programs will be recorded in a studio to be located in New York. The recording process, it is said, will lift the programs out of the class of ordinary phonograph record broadcasting.

Builds Television Station

THE first broadcasting station to be erected strictly for sending television is now in construction near Washington, D. C. It is being built by C. Francis Jenkins, inventor. This station will be one of a series which Jenkins will build. "It is our purpose to set up television broadcasting stations of adequate power to cover the territory served," Jenkins is quoted. "To these stations motion picture stories will be distributed for broadcast over the territory served by each particular station," he declared.

200-Pound Amplifier Used to Broadcast Sound Film

George Gilliam, manager of the Cameo Theatre, Cleveland, increased his business on "My Man" every day during the run of the picture by placing a 200-pound amplifier on the roof of the theatre, which had been attached to the Vitaphone equipment so that Fanny Brice's songs were heard all up and down Euclid Ave. Crowds gathered whenever she started to sing, which was about every half hour, and the singing drew a lot of business. In spite of the fact that this was the second downtown run of "My Man," this exploitation did so much for it that it was held over a second week. Don Canady, projectionist, made the hook-up.

WURDACK
STAGE SWITCHBOARD

The Wurdack Pre-Set Remote Control Stage Switchboard is a GOOD switchboard. But Wurdack engineers are not content to merely build a good switchboard—they are constantly striving to build a BETTER switchboard—and succeeding! Their aim is to make each one built an improvement over the last—to anticipate future needs and incorporate in the Wurdack Stage Switchboard those features which will keep it constantly a step ahead.

This progressive policy of the Wurdack Company—this discontent with past accomplishments, satisfactory though they may be; this relentless march toward new achievements—has won for the Wurdack Switchboard a recognition of merit among the leading theatre architects, owners and managers of the country. A late instance of this is the selection of a Wurdack Stage Switchboard for the resplendent new Plaza Theatre in Kansas City; Boller Bros., Architects. This switchboard is pictured above.

Specify the name Wurdack to insure your getting the newest and most advanced developments in remote-control stage switchboard design. Our new descriptive bulletin is now in preparation—we will be glad to place your name on our mailing list for your copy. Write—

Camco Acquires Automat Ticket Register Corp.

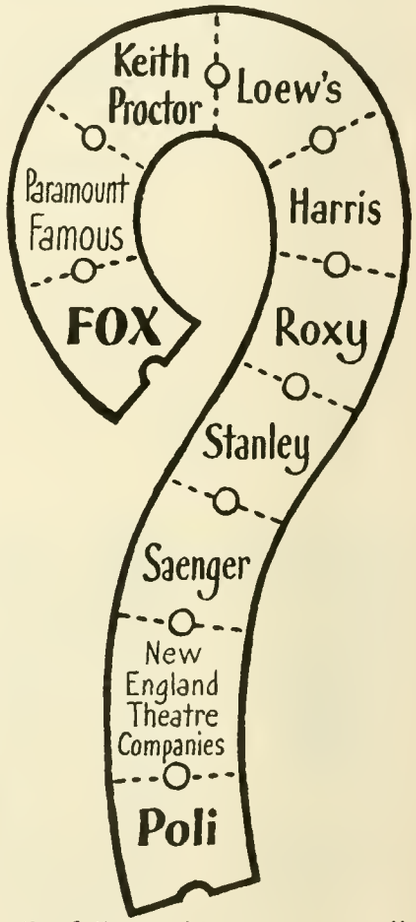
THE Consolidated Automatic Merchandising Corporation (Camco) has taken over the Automatic Ticket Register Corporation of New York, manufacturers of Gold Seal Ticket Registers and printers of checks and tickets for ticket-issuing machines. This is a further move in the program of expansion on the part of Camco, sponsors of all types of automatic merchandising machines.

The Automatic Ticket Register Corporation has now on the market three different classes of patented ticket or check-issuing machines—each serving a different market. The origin of the company is associated with its oldest machine—the early motion picture ticket register. The first conception of this was a foot-treadle machine used by the old-fashioned theatre including the store Nickelodeon, which was the forerunner of the modern motion picture theatre.

In addition to the production of these machines, the Automatic Ticket Register Corporation has also built up a large business in the production of printed tickets and checks—not only for its own registers, but to cover every need in strip folded or reserved seat tickets and checks.

Issue Special Service Book to Augment Press Sheet

A special exploitation service booklet, for use in connection with the regular pressbook, has been issued by the exploitation department of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer company as an aid to the promotion of "Alias Jimmy Valentine."



The service booklet is divided into seventeen sections, each of which has an idea for use by the exhibitor. Announcement is also made in this booklet of the newspaper serialization of the story, which was prepared by Donald Henderson Clarke, and is offered free to any newspaper. This serial can be secured in proof or mats, which ever way the local newspaper prefers to use it.

Outline of Broadway Campaign

The advertising campaign on "Alias Jimmy Valentine" which was used in New York City to advertise the showing of the picture at the Astor Theatre, is also attached to the new service booklet. These sample advertising proofs can be used as examples on which the exhibitor can base either his lay-out or his copy. The regular ads, which can be obtained in any form, are included in the press book on this feature.

Many other aids to the exhibitor, including several national tie-ups of importance, are also listed in the booklet, and wherever practical, samples or photographs have been attached.

A Complete Operating Manual for Effect Lighting in All Theatres

To the thousands of theatres who have successfully used Brenkert effect devices in the past; to the theatres who have never used Brenkert effects, to all of those theatres who, at some time, hope to make use of the hundreds of mystical, colorful atmospheric changes which can be so easily obtained, Brenkert now has ready for distribution a complete operating manual on the famous Brenkert F-7 Master Brenograph which contains explicit instructions for obtaining all of those wonderful lighting effects so necessary to a well balanced motion picture program.

Fifteen large pages of interesting and highly useful information, profusely illustrated, and handsomely bound, make this booklet an indispensable part of the library of any theatre manager or projectionist.

A New Brenkert Catalog

A NEW 1929 edition of the Brenkert catalog is also available for the asking. In this catalog are described and illustrated the complete line of those famous Brenkert projection devices which have come to be looked upon as the standard in leading theatres throughout the world. Spotlamps, effect projectors, special color projectors, and major equipments for the projection room are shown in detail.

Trackless Train Tours India on Last Lap Round World

Metro - Goldwyn - Mayer's Trackless Train is now touring India, having landed at Calcutta last week on the final lap of its tour around the world. The Train has ballyhooed through North and South America, England, Europe, Australia and will touch at the Portuguese peninsula on its way back to New York. Leo, the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Lion, now advertising his company's wares in the southern states will indubitably follow the Trackless Train around the world.

Eddie Carrier, Conductor of the Trackless Train, wires from Calcutta:

"After overcoming almost insurmountable difficulties, and securing wonderful newspaper publicity and tie-ups, the train started the India tour with a wonderful reception by the Governor of Bengal and many Calcutta officials. The Train is proving a sensational publicity medium and will greatly benefit American motion pictures in this country."

It has been said of the Trackless Train that it has done more to advertise American films abroad than any other medium of exploitation. Everywhere it has ballyhooed, the Train has created a sensation.

Skouras Bolsters Show to Meet Fox Competition

Charles Previn, former Missouri Theatre and Ambassador Theatre musical director and also at one time director of the St. Louis Municipal Theatre and more recently with the Roxy Theatre in New York was brought back to St. Louis to take charge of the Missouri Theatre orchestra.

Skouras Brothers have also announced a new form of entertainment, weekly "Grand Orchestral Productions," presenting a union of orchestral, vocal and ballet entertainment built around operatic hits, overture presentations and light opera and musical comedy selections.

In addition a chorus of 30 singers will be added to the stage show at the Missouri to supplement the work of the Missouri Rockets. With the musicians in the band show and the special acts this combination will about meet the plan announced for the new Fox Theatre now nearing completion at Grand and Washington boulevards for 100 persons on the stage.

Leonardi the present musical director for the Missouri will also be retained with Previn.

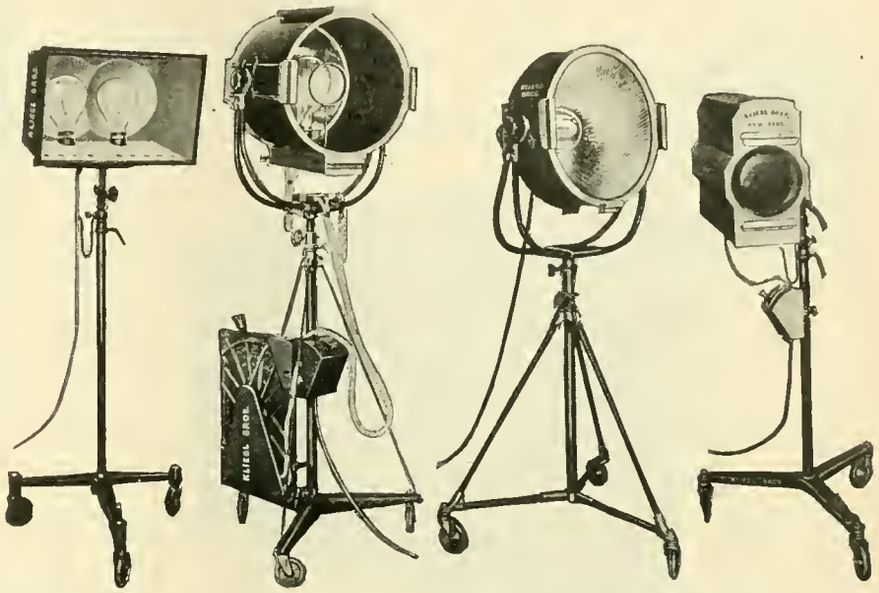
This is Skouras Brothers answer to the Fox threat. So it looks like the amusement world of St. Louis is in for some high class cinema entertainment at very reasonable prices.

Under the scale of prices box seats are sold at $2, with reserved chairs in the auditorium being available at 25 cents, 75 cents, $1 and $1.50. There are also 2,000 free seats at each performance.

The advance sale for the new season now totals $75,000.

Adds Extra Saturday Show To Avoid Price Raise

Instead of raising prices for the Pantages Theatre, Edmonton, Alberta, Manager W. P. Wilson tried another plan that served the purpose of increasing revenue —and also resulted in satisfying the public. He decided to stage two performances every Saturday evening in place of the one regular evening show as on other nights. The outcome was that the theatre was almost refilled for the second performance. No seats were reserved except boxes and loges.



Dancing After Show Proves Popular In Portland

So successful have been the Thursday night dances on the mezzanine at The Broadway Theatre, Portland, Ore., that Manager Maxwell has announced that both Monday evenings and Thursday evenings will be set aside for dancing after the last show, with music furnished by Georgie Stoll and his merry musical orchestra. This is but one of a number of plans to foster the community spirit there.

INCANDESCENT

"Klieglights"

for SOUND PHOTOGRAPHY

THE advent of "talking movies" with its sensitive sound-recording instruments, imposing a restriction for absolute silence in the studio; and the demand for greater economy in the lighting of studio sets—has resulted in the development of a new form of Klieglights for motion picture photography, in which high-candle-power incandescent lamps are used for the light source. These new Kliegs furnish brilliant evenly diffused light high in actinic qualities, permitting photography with clearness of detail, full color values, sharp definition, and freedom from sound interference. They are absolutely noiseless in operation and cause no disturbance in the recording of sound photography. They are efficient in light control and utilization; afford complete command over the direction, diffusion, and divergence of the light beam; are light in weight; can be easily and quickly handled; operate on the service line, whether A. C. or D. C.; and introduce economies in current consumption, production time, and labor requirements. They are modern in every respect, adapted to present-day studio conditions, and furnish the kind and quality of light required in this new era of motion picture photography.

Write for Bulletin No. 101, which fully describes and illustrates these new Kliegl studio lights—and explains how they are used in motion picture and sound photography.

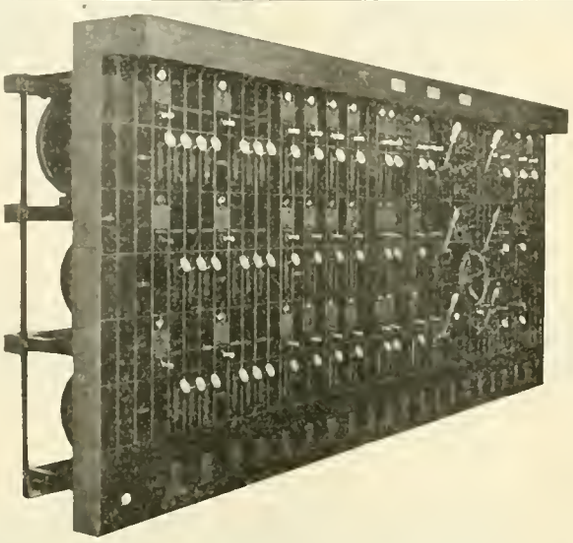
Sustains Power of Exploitation for Sound by Series of Drives

WHEN Frank J. Miller launched sound pictures in Augusta, Ga., last summer he introduced them with an institutional campaign of publicity and advertising that had no equal in that territory, and the box-office showed results that some of the shrewdest showmen thought he would never be able to repeat. But six weeks later he "repeated"—and how! And still he had not exhausted his resources.

A few weeks ago Miller booked "Interference" at the Imperial Theatre, and since "sound pictures" already had been sold to Augusta through his previous campaigns on behalf of the Modjeska, he took a new slant in exploiting this notable all-dialogue production. He simply went out to sell "Interference," and he succeeded in no uncertain terms.



The advance campaign started in the newspapers three weeks ahead of the opening, following with an extensive billing campaign, including twenty-fours, one-sheets, window snipes and window cards. Mr. Miller took advantage of the fact that the Imperial is the only local theatre with a colored balcony and made a strong play for colored patronage, advertising in the negro newspapers and sending a number of personal invitations. The colored patrons responded with large attendance.

Again he employed the merchants' tie-up, which on two previous occasions had netted excellent results. That tie-up not only brought out-of-town patrons, but boosted trade in the stores that co-operated with the Imperial, and created more of the goodwill that Mr. Miller has been careful to maintain for his enterprises.

The front which Miller designed for "Interference" would do credit to a Broadway theatre. Under the name "Imperial," which was spelled out in huge electric letters at the top of the marquee another electric sign proclaimed the current attractions: "See and hear 'Interference' also many specialties." Below is suspended a permanent electric sign, "Singing and Talking Pictures." This latter sign is attached to a flasher which spells out the words one at a time. It measures 3 by 26 feet.

On each side of the entrance, and above the marquee are two painted signs, each seven feet high, bordered with incandescent lights, and set in permanent frames. These signs advertise the specialties and are changed from show to show. They were used during the run of "Interference" to advertise Eddie Cantor in "That Party in Person," and Ruth Etting, Ziegfeld Follies Star, both of whom were featured along with "Interference" as a part of the Publix "Talking and singing unit show."

The proof of exploitation is found in box-office results, and by that standard Mr. Miller's campaign measures up to a high standard.

impossible to detect the vocal activities of persons on the stage for the simple reason that it was impossible to either hear or see the performers most of the time.

Architecturally, this theatre was perfect and if theatre patrons are so constituted that they are willing to pay for viewing a faithful reproduction of the decorative art of some bygone age then this theatre should be a howling success and the architects may well feel gratified.

Everything Perfect But the Booth

Luxurious seats, ravishing appointments and decorations, expensive organs, and perfection in a host of other details which go into the making of "A Perfect Theatre" are not sufficient to keep the same patrons coming back week after week if the ultimate object of all these fancy trappings is acquired at the expense of the one and only thing which makes the average individual willingly part with his money—the Show.

When architects, theatre owners and equipment manufacturers come to a full realization that the final object of all theatres is a skillful presentation of a good show then and then only may we expect to see "The World's Perfect Theatre."

Hence, the importance of this matter of the standardization of the projection room. Standardization in this respect will eliminate many of the hairbrained mistakes which now characterize the average projection room.

Scattered Letters of Title Used as Advance Teasers

A novel advertising idea has been introduced by the management of the Victoria theatre, Mahoney City, Pa., to exploit pictures in advance of their showing at that playhouse. Over a period of three days he prints, scattered through the amusement page of a local newspaper, inch-high black letters which, when assembled and properly arranged at the end of the three-day period, spell the name of some coming movie attraction. To the first ten persons each week who assemble the letters correctly and paste them on a cardboard, the management gives a pair of seats for the show.

British Representative to the "American Projectionist"

(Member Society of Motion Picture Engineers and Projection Advisory Council)

The opening of the "NEW EMPIRE" and the "REGAL" Theatres, London's latest and luxurious "Super Cinemas" marks the advent of a new era in projection installations in Great Britain and the Continent.

The projection rooms of each of these theatres hold a battery of FOUR "SIMPLEX" projectors equipped with high intensity lamps.

The "NEW EMPIRE" Theatre is controlled by Loew's, Inc., and will be their premier European house, since they have disposed of the "TIVOLI" to the P. C. T. Circuit. The "NEW EMPIRE" is modeled closely on the lines of Loew's State, New York City, and Metropolitan, Boston, and is lavishly decorated and luxurious in its appointments.

The "REGAL" is privately owned, but in comparison there is little to choose between the two theatres, both are magnificent theatres and have been built and equipped at a huge cost which will set a standard and form an example for other exhibitors who contemplate new supers to follow.

The erection of both houses commenced within a few weeks of each other and both have in turn set the pace. During the last three months of completion, work has been carried on in feverish haste in the race to be the first to open to the public. In spite of this rush nothing has been skimped and no expense spared in their efforts to out-do each other, especially with regard to the electrical, stage, and projection equipment. The choice of "Simplex" projectors was the "EMPIRES" from the commencement and it was this predominating factor which led the "REGAL" management to ultimately choose "Simplex" also, for they realized that if this projection equipment was the choice of the "NEW EMPIRE" then it must be the best for nothing but the best was good enough for the Loew house; and so, the "REGAL" became "Simplexised" in spite of the fact that a few months before it had been stated that all British equipment was to be installed and used in every section of the theatre.

To shorten an otherwise long story and deal with the projection end of it, suffice to state the "NEW EMPIRE" opened first featuring "Trelawny of the Wells," "Sandy" McPherson at the console of the gigantic "WURLITZER", Don Albert and his orchestra and "Movietone" items.

The "REGAL" opened two weeks later with the premier European presentation of "The Singing Fool" a la "Vitaphone" for which it is fully equipped. With regard to the projectors, whereas the "EMPIRE" houses Model "M" Simplex those installed at the "REGAL" are Model "A".

The "EMPIRE" is equipped for "Movietone" presentations and the "REGAL" fully equipped for both "Movietone" and "Vitaphone" presentations.

The accompanying photograph shows the excellently equipped projection room of the "REGAL." The battery of "Simplexes" are fitted with latest automatic high intensity lamps; two of the four—those in foreground of photo—are fitted with "Vitaphone" and "Movietone" apparatus. The photograph of the "REGAL'S" equipment should be of great interest to American projectionists in that it will give them an opportunity to compare high class British cinema installation work with their own.

The "NEW EMPIRE" and the "REGAL" projection room installations convincingly testify to the superiority of the "Simplex" projector in theatres where the demand is for perfect projection and a performance of outstanding merit.

In theatres where nothing but the best is good enough, for silent picture projection or for sound film presentations, "Simplex" are the choice of the discriminating exhibitor—in the U. S. A., in Canada and now in Great Britain.

And so two more "supers" are added to the long list of London's "Simplexised" super shows, which include the "Plaza," "Astoria," "Piccadilly," "Tussards," "Rialto" and "Broadway."

Publix-West Coast Advertising Duel Booms Attendance in All L. A. Houses

GROSSES SWEEP UPWARD

Battle for B. O. Supremacy Between Big Circuit Key Houses in Film Capital

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

HOLLYWOOD, January 31.—Los Angeles has found out what's the matter with the industry.

Put in one sentence it is: "Go after the business and you'll get it." What's happening in the film capital today is the biggest news story that has broken in months.

Theatre attendance throughout the city is on a big boom. All box office grosses for the past week have taken a big upward sweep. The direct cause is the tremendous amount of increased advertising in the dailies and on the billboards from Paramount and West Coast.

It is a fact that better box office pictures are a primary cause of the big jump in grosses. But no theatre has played to business so consistently in the past even with better pictures. So the big answer is in the advertising splurge.

The restored competition between Publix and West Coast Theatres, Inc., is likewise bringing about better business even to those theatres not increasing advertising. They are getting the overflow.

Under the first week of its new name, The Paramount Theatre (formerly the Metropolitan), almost reached the house record with $39,000 for "The Doctor's Secret."

West Coast's key run is Loew's State, and it is this house which is in the fight for supremacy against the Paramount, Publix key run. At the State "Alias Jimmy Valentine" went up to the tune of $32,000.

"The Divine Lady" opened Tuesday night at five dollar top at the Carthay Circle, playing to $4,900 for one performance, seven hundred dollars better than "The Barker" opening. For the second day at regular prices, it got $2,200 for the day.

The United Artists Theatre more than doubled the average former grosses with D. W. Griffith's "Lady of the Pavements," getting over $20,000 on the week. "In Old Arizona" continues to jam them in at the Criterion, with $22,000 in the fifth week.

"The Redeeming Sin," for three days at the Warner, got $7,000 for the first three days of the run. "Broadway Melody," M-G-M's first all-talkie, comes to Grauman's Chinese Friday night for a run.

Kent Holds Film Recording System Will Prevail in Future

S. R. KENT, just back from Hollywood after a month of viewing Paramount product, declares that the tendency in future production will lean more and more, to the film system of recording and reproducing. He says all signs point in that direction.

In discussing the production situation, Mr. Kent said: "The perfection attained by our experts in the talking pictures we are about to release, made me realize that in quality production, the film system will prevail in the future. Surface noises and scratches which creep into recording by the disc system are eliminated in the film recording method.

"Not all of our pictures have been made by the film method of sound recording, and it is possible some of our pictures in the future, will be handled with discs. However, such features will be released only when the sound reproduction reaches the excellence attained by the film system, and in any event they will be held to a minimum."

Fifty Houses Under Option in Cleveland Deal

International Germanic Co. and Stock Broker Said to Be Interested

The International Germanic Company, Ltd., New York, banking concern, and a national stock brokerage house, are said to have obtained an option of thirty days on about fifty theatres in and around Cleveland. The rumor, however, could not be verified, though coming from a reliable source.

At the New York offices of the International Germanic Company no statement was obtainable. They would neither deny nor affirm the story. The bank has a capitalization of $4,000,000, a surplus of $2,225,000 and deposits of $9,313,000. It was organized about a year ago by Julian M. Gerard, former chairman of the board of the Central Mercantile Bank, which now is a part of the Bank of the United States.

On the board of directors of the International Germanic are Harry G. Aron, C. E. Albright, Julian B. Beaty, James A. Beha, C. C. Boyce, George W. Carpenter, Marcus Daly, Louis Gold and Frank Hedley.

Conrad Veidt and U Reach the Parting of the Ways

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, Jan. 31.—Conrad Veidt and Universal are parting. Veidt's option is not being renewed at its current expiration, the report being that he was asked to take a salary cut and refused. Veidt is at present undecided whether to remain in Hollywood and free-lance or return to Germany.

1,700 Register First Three Days At Call Bureau

Free-lance Players Take Advantage of Service by Producers

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, Jan. 31.—Over 1,700 names have been registered during the first three days of operation of the call bureau opened by the Producers' Association Monday of this week. The bureau operates as a medium through which all studios can get into touch with any standard free-lance player direct.

The new bureau is under the supervision of Fred Beetson, with Mabel Johnstone in charge. It does not effect the status of agents, for it protects both them and the actors from unscrupulous representatives. When a call for an actor is received the bureau immediately notifies both agent and actor. It is expected that much trouble, of a controversial nature, will be done away with.

This system prevents others from saying a certain actor is out of town for the purpose of securing the role at the wanted actor's expense. Stars and players under long-term contracts to studios need not register with the bureau.

At present the arrangement concerns free-lance players only and emphasizes the fact that it does not operate as a casting office and does not make suggestions as to parts. No fees are collected from either the agent or players, but the bureau is maintained at the expense of the Producers' Association. In the 1,700 already registered are the biggest of the free-lance names.

Milwaukee Unit Remains Intact With Wisconsin

Votes Unanimously to Stick With State Body at Special Meeting

Milwaukee, Jan. 31.—At a special meeting of the Milwaukee Theatre Owners' Association held at the Randolph Hotel yesterday it was decided by a practically unanimous vote to remain intact as an affiliated unit of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Wisconsin. About thirty representatives of the fifty-five theatres in the city were present.

Every effort of the Milwaukee exhibitors will be made, it was decided, to maintain harmony within the city group and with the state and national organizations. Henry Goldenberg presided at the meeting, which developed into a protracted five-hour discussion.

A meeting of the theatre owners of the state is to be called at the diseretion of the board of directors and it is believed this will be held in the near future. A great deal of speculation has been aroused in this city as to the effect the decision of the city association will have on the state theatre owners' vote at their next meeting.

In addition to voting on the question of affiliation, the city organization appointed a committee to determine a definite zoning and protection plan which will settle all current dissatisfaction and dispute. The committee, headed by Fred S. Meyer, consists of the following members representing every type of motion picture theatre in the city; Ernest Langemack, Earl Rice, George Fiseher, Bert Fisher, William Jacobs, James Boden, A. C. Gutenberg, Steve Bauer, Frank Trottman and William Denbach.

Film Boards to Hold Convention Early in June

The Film Boards of Trade will hold their annual convention the first week in June, probably at French Lick Springs, though the place of meeting has not yet been definitely decided upon. Washington and Detroit are still being given some consideration.

The session, called by Charles C. Pettijohn, will, as usual, be devoted to the discussion of arbitration and other general questions. It will bring together film board secretaries from all parts of the United States.

Jack Oakie Lead in Paramount "Burlesque"

Hollywood, Jan. 31.—Jack Oakie will play the lead in "Burlesque" for Paramount, with production due to start within the next week. As a result of Oakie's selection for the part, he was replaced in the cast of "Studio Murder Mystery" by Neil Hamilton.

Critics Vote "10 Best" in Film Daily Poll

IN the ninth annual poll conducted by Film Daily for the ten best pictures of 1928, 295 critics, associated with 326 newspapers, 3 syndicates and 29 trade and fan publications, voted the following films leaders for the year: "The Patriot," "Sorrell and Son," "The Last Command," "Four Sons," "Street Angel," "The Circus," "Sunrise," "The Crowd," "King of Kings," and "Sadie Thompson."

The poll embraced 188 cities and towns in forty states and covered papers with a combined circulation of approximately 23,850,989. The time period of release in which the winning features were included was from Dec. 1, 1927 to Dec. 1, 1928, and the companies distributing them totaling seventy-seven. Pre-leases and roadshows were not included, the voting being confined to films that were given general release.

Columbia Buys Liberty Group Of Exchanges

Acquires Southern Branches In Plan to Nationalize Sales Organization

Columbia Pictures made an important step last week in its plan to nationalize its distributing organization. The company acquired the entire group of Liberty-Specialty exchanges and will act as agents for Liberty-Specialty in fulfilling contracts for film service, although the exchanges will be operated as Columbia exchanges.

The deal was consummated in New Orleans and is said to involve a purchase price of $450,000. Liberty - Specialty branches are located in Atlanta, Charlotte, Memphis, New Orleans, Dallas and Oklahoma City.

Liberty-Specialty was owned jointly by Oscar S. Oldknow of Atlanta, W. G. Underwood of Dallas and the Saenger interests of New Orleans. Negotiations for the purchase were started by Columbia several months ago. At the concluding conferences held Friday and Saturday of last week Columbia was represented by its president, Joe Brandt, and its newly appointed division sales manager, W. J. Morgan. Liberty was represented by its owner triumvirate.

No changes in branch office personnel are anticipated under the new ownership, it was stated. Columbia takes over a well organized group of exchanges on February 2 and one already identified with Columbia pictures through distribution of that product.

Butterfield to Honolulu

Hollywood, Jan. 30.—W. S. Butterfield, owner and operator of the Butterfield circuit of 85 theatres, is visiting Hollywood this week. He is en route to Honolulu on a vacation.

Woodhull Gets Good Response On Arbiter Classes

Suggestion for Training Competent Officials Is Commended

R. F. Woodhull, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, has suggested to the state and regional exhibitor organizations that they establish training classes for arbitrators and the idea is receiving favorable comment throughout the industry.

In discussing the matter, Mr. Woodhull says in part:

"An arbitrator is one who has the power to determine as he pleases. He is further defined as an authority, or one who is qualified to give an opinion. The latter requisite prompted my suggestion.

"The distributor-arbiter who can see no other side of a controversy except that of the distributor should never be permitted by his own people to sit in judgment on any case. By the same token a prejudiced exhibitor should be barred. Both are menaces to the fine principles involved.

"A regional exhibitor organization can find no more commendable endeavor than to perfect a training class for the making of arbitrators. These instructional periods can be made very interesting by the hearing of imaginary cases. Every zone today has experienced arbitrators who understand the provisions of the contract and who can qualify as instructors. True, it will involve an apparent sacrifice of time, but increased effieiency and division of the future work will result. We at national headquarters will welcome all information regarding progress of these training schools and will be glad to act as the clearing house of new ideas from the various zones."

Kentucky Unit Again Pledged To M. P. T. O. A.

At the meeting of the Kentucky exhibitor unit allegiance was pledged to the M. P. T. O. A. and with the resolution the allegiance fee of $100 was forwarded to the national organization in New York City.

The exhibitors in adopting the resolution expressed full confidenee in the ability and integrity of the national officials and commended them for the work they have accomplished in the past year.

Warners Appoint Harold Levey Musical Director

Replacing Norman Spencer, who has been recalled to the Coast to manage the popular music department there, Warner Bros. have appointed Harold Levey to take charge of the musieal department in the Warner Bros. studios in the east. He is a protege of Victor Herbert and for several years was associated with Henry W. Savage, both as composer and conductor.

Myers To Make First Address In Northwest

Minnesota Session to Hear Allied States Leader Outline Plans

The main topic for discussion at the convention of Northwest exhibitors to be held at Minneapolis next Tuesday and Wednesday will be that of interchangeability, and Abram F. Myers, president and general counsel for the Allied States Association, will be on hand to hear it.

The meeting promises to be one of the best attended of recent years and as one of its features Mr. Myers will make his first address to the exhibitors since entering the motion picture field. It is anticipated he will outline proposed activities of his organization and the action he has already taken in calling upon the Department of Justice of the United States to investigate alleged restrictive agreements on the question of interchangeability.

It is said that a number of exhibitors will be present at Minneapolis ready to tell of their experience in being unable to get sound films for showing over independent equipment.

Another discussion that will come up before the convention is that of affiliating with Allied States, but it is thought that will be little more than a formality.

Round Robins Aid Paramount Publicity Staff

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, Jan. 31.—To obtain new publicity slants and material on Paramount pictures and personalities, the entire publicity staff of Paramount studio holds a round robin meeting each week. At this time the group interviews an executive or director, with questions being asked by the publicity boys during a general discussion.

The first executive to go on the publicity grill was Jesse Lasky, producing vice president of Paramount. Last week, M. C. Cooper and E. B. Schoedsack, world-traveling directors who recently made "Four Feathers," answered the questions of the publicity boys.

Arch Reeve, publicity head of Paramount Studios, feels that the initial round-robins have accomplished results, and they will be continued weekly for an indefinite period.

Predicts Heavy Income Tax for Beverly Hills

Hollywood, Jan. 31.—Motion picture people living in Beverly Hills will pay a total income tax for the year 1928 amounting to over one million dollars, according to the prediction of Harry B. George, collector of internal revenue for Beverly Hills. A large number of high salaried executives, stars, directors and writers live in the latter town; while Hollywood contains the homes of many others.

Over $20,000,000 Figured As the Industry's Investment To Date in Sound Equipment

Theatres Bearing the Brunt Through Installations; Fox and Warners in Heaviest

MORE than $20,000,000 has been spent by the motion picture industry to date on sound recording and reproducing equipment. During the coming year with the installations of amplifying equipment for theatres speeded up and a number of new companies coming into the field there will be another $10,000,000 added to the amount already invested.

A survey to date shows that the producing organizations have spent around $7,850,000 on stages, experimental work and equipment, not including in this the cost of productions turned out, and the exhibitors have, it is believed, contracted for more than $13,000,000 in reproducing and amplifying apparatus and wiring of their theatres. Of the producers, Fox seems to have expended most heavily in this experimental work in the development of the Fox-Case Movietone, the stages both east and west. His investment in that respect representing, it is said, about $4,000,000. The Warners are next in line in the amount invested, but they have, to a great extent, recouped all that they have put in.

There is no telling the amount that the Western Electric Co. expended over a number of years in research work to bring about the perfection arrived at to date in sound pictures. It is a known fact, however, that whatever it was, the usual procedure on the part of that organization is to recoup all of its research costs in the first two years that they market the resultant product.

The producers, after they have installed their equipment for recording, will continue to pay to the electrical companies a royalty as they produce pictures for five years from the date that they are licensed to make sound productions. In the instance of feature productions they will pay a royalty of $500 for each thousand feet of negative or fraction thereof for each production turned out and likewise guarantee to the electrical companies that their annual royalties shall in no case fall under $100,000 per annum. In the case of news reels they will pay a royalty of $100 per thousand feet. That means, with the eleven companies that Western Electric have licensed to operate under their patents to produce pictures, they are guaranteed $5,500,000 over the five year period that

Penn Censor Budget Asks Increase

NO relaxation of motion picture censorship is looked for in the state of Pennsylvania for the two-year period beginning May 31, 1929, and extending to May 31, 1931, according to appropriation figures recommended by Governor John S. Fisher in the administration's bi-ennial budget submitted Jan. 21. Figures for the new period exceed the present appropriation by $2,000.

The budget figures point out that for the two years ended in 1923 the appropriation was $164,000; 1925, $110,000; 1927, $130,000 (a deficit of $1,014); 1929, $160,000. Of the $160,000 appropriated for 1929 a total of $115,368.86 has been expended, leaving a balance of $44,631-.14. Salaries, traveling expenses and office supplies make up the bulk of expenditures.

Commission's Block Booking Stand Unchanged

Indications Are for Delayed Action Until Decision by Federal Courts

When it was announced that the Federal Trade Commission has dropped the block booking application for complaint against Pathe, there was considerable speculation as to what the attitude of the body would be with regard to other similar actions, that of Paramount in particular.

Just what the decision will be regarding Paramount is problematical as no information would be given out as to whether the commissoners considered the Pathe case similar to that of Paramount. Such matters are always held confidential and are not given out publicly until finally determined upon.

It is said, however, that the Commission does not hold the Pathe and Paramount cases parallel. It is also said that the block booking cases may be held up temporarily until the Federal courts decide just how far the Commission can go with its desire to eliminate block booking.

Will Hays Departs for N. Y. After Several Weeks on Coast

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, Jan. 31.—Will Hays, head of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors Association, has departed Hollywood. He is on his way to New York today, accompanied by Maurice McKenzie. Mr. Hays has been here several weeks.

Stage Band Is Back In South Under New Policy

Atlanta, Birmingham Houses Commended by Patrons For Varied Program

Stage band shows are coming back in the south as the result of the demand of the picture house patrons for them. Empty orchestra pits are to be occupied again and the organ will come back to life. This policy is announced for the Howard Theatre in Atlanta and the Alabama Theatre in Birmingham, with others to follow.

The band show was resumed at the Alabama starting Monday of this week, with the initial offering "Hello Everybody," produced by Emmett R. Rogers, who recently was elevated by Publix to the post of district production manager. The feature picture is "The Shopworn Angel." Jack Bain is the stage band leader. He has won honors in many major theatres throughout the country.

The Howard Theatre inaugurates the policy February 4, presenting the same stage show, which will be brought intact from Birmingham. Lou Lowry goes to the Howard as stage bandmaster. He has served as master of ceremonies with more than ordinary success. The feature picture will be "Abie's Irish Rose."

According to word from Atlanta the novelty of synchronized and dialogue pictures has worn off and the public there wants to see something of the human element again on the stage in connection with pictures. First announcements in the newspapers of the change of policy are said to have brought hundreds of telephone calls to the Howard Theatre commending the house for its action.

The public of Atlanta and Birmingham are reported not to be opposed to the sound pictures. They still retain their interest in them, but they want something in the way of additional entertainment.

Consolidated Lands Banner Print Contract

Herbert J. Yates, president of Consolidated Films Laboratories, Inc., announces the signing this week of one of the largest film printing contracts that has been negotiated in the industry for many years. The name of the picture company was not divulged, but it is one of the largest and will turn over to Consolidated all of the film printing of its eastern units. In addition to its two plants in Hollywood, Consolidated has three plants in the east.

Ufa-Eastern Sales Head

P. Schramm has been appointed as manager of the contract and sales department of the Ufa Eastern Division Distribution, Inc. He has been connected with the film industry for about 14 years and has held similar posts with Fox and Tiffany-Stahl.

Fox Reported Buying Four Buffalo Houses

FOX is reported to have closed deals for four Buffalo suburban houses, the Genesee, Maxine, Seneca and Capitol, and to have been making overtures for others in the same territory.

The Genesee is owned by the Genesee Holding Corporation, which admits the signing of a preliminary contract with Fox for the 1,800 seat house. The sale of the other houses is neither affirmed nor denied.

$20,000 000 To Date on Sound Film Equipment

the contracts have to run. The producers can, after the five year period, cancel if they care to.

In looking over the exhibition end of the proposition to date and figuring that approximately 1,000 theatres in the country have been wired at an average cost of $13,000 per house, it shows that the exhibitors have invested $13,000,000 in talkers. This year will undoubtedly find another 1,000 theatres equipped with the most expensive of apparatus and with the possibility of the cost of installation cut to $10,000 average it will mean that the exhibitors will contribute another $10,000,000 to the talkers, without taking into consideration the number of cheaper devices that will go into the smaller houses, which may represent something like another $2,500,000.

Kinemas Ltd. Is After 70 Houses in South Africa

Seventy theatres are being sought by Kinemas, Ltd., Sydney Hayden, resident manager of the circuit in England, stated recently through AmerAnglo Corporation, New York.

Already the circuit has acquired its sixtieth theatre, the Astoria, Capetown, which opened recently, holding that position in its chain. A $500,000 house is now under construction at Capetown, and another theatre is planned for Johannesburg.

Kinemas, Ltd., is in opposition to the Schlesinger circuit, one of the dominating South African firms.

Pa. Town Boosts License Fees; Showmen Protest

The Council of the borough of Rochester, Pa., has passed an ordinance which will raise the license fee of theatres from $50.00 per year to a sliding scale varying from $150 to $500. Winograd Brothers, owners of the Majestic Theatre, has lodged a protest in Council through their attorney, P. A. Baldwin. The Majestic license has been raised from the former $50 to $300.

Pathe Launches Stock Company For Beginners

Youngsters With Little or No Stage Or Screen Training Eligible

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, Jan. 31.—Pathe is establishing a stock company of junior players with a purpose of putting them through an intensive course of training for talking pictures. It is planned that such players shall be, for the most part, those who have had little or no stage or screen experience. Pathe executives believe that best results can be accomplished with virgin material who do not have to be untaught habits which they have acquired through years of work on either stage or screen.

Six players already have been signed for this junior stock company, of whom two have a small amount of stage experience but not sufficient to make them too difficult to teach the new technique. These two are Stanley Smith and Dorothy Appleby. The other four are Marilyn Morgan, Dorothy Warde, Jimmie Aldine and Lew Ayres.

These youngsters will be given minor roles, mostly of the bit variety, for a period of six months before they are entrusted to parts of major importance. Frank Reicher, who was placed under contract to act and direct by Pathe last week, is aiding in educating them. Reicher has been a stage director for years and has also directed several motion pictures, as well as having acted in them. His experience, Pathe believes, makes him ideal for such supervision.

Edmund Goulding, well-known legitimate theatre playwright before he became a motion picture director and scenarist, will take care of another phase of the youngsters' training. Goulding, assisted by Nance O'Neil, will take charge of voice-building and enunciation. Benjamin Glazer, also a well known theatre playwright, who is in complete charge of all Pathe dialogue productions, will oversee the general training of the junior stock company.

"General Crack" to Be Barrymore Vitaphone Film

An elaborate screen version of the current novel, "General Crack," by George Preedy, will serve as John Barrymore's first Vitaphone talking picture for Warner Bros. It will not go into work until April. Ralph Forbes will support.

Columbia Selects Leads For "Donovan Affair"

Columbia Pictures has decided upon Jack Holt to play the leading male role and Dorothy Revier, the leading female role in the company's first 100 per cent talking picture, "The Donovan Affair," adapted from the successful stage play of the same name. Frank R. Capra has been assigned to direct.

Many Measures Are Submitted To Legislatures

Bills Affecting Industry From Various Angles Now Pending

Legislative measures are being fought in all sections of the country, with bills pending that have a marked bearing on the motion picture industry. They vary from admission taxes to admission of children and Sunday openings.

Maryland has a measure that would require the censors to pass upon suitability of pictures to be shown children between the ages of 10 and 14 years. Nebraska has a bill providing for the censorship of pictures and picture advertising.

Sunday School associations in Harrisburg, Pa., have passed a resolution to the Legislature opposing the proposed referendum on the Sunday closing law. North Carolina is fighting proposed new taxation measures. Colorado theatre owners are threatened with a state tax of 10 per cent on all admissions, according to a proposed bill now being considered in the House of Representatives.

A favorable bill to permit moving pictures in Baltimore on Sundays after 2 P. M. has been introduced in the house of delegates of the Legislature at Annapolis. Missouri exhibitors are prepared to fight a bill proposing a 10 per cent tax on all forms of amusement. The proceeds of this tax would provide a fund for public schools and state educational institutions.

A measure in Kansas would do away with real estate taxes and impose a general sales tax on every article sold, including theatre tickets. The joint tax committee of the Kansas Legislature also has prepared bills that would levy an indirect stamp tax on all amusements and near beer. Both measures are meeting with keen opposition.

Russian Films Plentiful For Coming Season

The Amkino Corporation, distributors in America representing all producing companies in Russia will have an abundance of product during the present season. The schedule calls for 115 features, of which Sovkino will make 53, Wufku 27 and Mejrabpomfilm 29.

In addition to the features, 176 educationals are planned. The production of children's films will also be intensified in 1929. Sound and talking pictures are included in the schedule. For the first time there will be pictures of joint production of U. S. S. R. and foreign countries, (Germany, France and the United States.)

Buys Price Series for Cuba

Oscar Price announces that M. Kleinerman, of Exhibitors Film exchange, has acquired Cuban rights for "The Bachelor's Club," first of a series of four action dramas starring Richard Talmadge.

Annual Wampas Frolic Off; Too Heavy Demands Made On Proceeds By Outside Bodies

West Coast Conspiracy Trial Date Set

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 31.—Trial of the "anti-trust" suit brought by the Government against West Coast Theatres, Inc., and nearly a score of film distributors, has been set for April 16.

The Federal suit charged a conspiracy on the part of the defendant theatre chain and exchanges whereby certain theatres were alleged to be favored with current releases; and theatres not entering into alleged agreements were put on a purported "blacklist."

"U" Will Start Production Here In Near Future

Sound Studios Are Now Being Equipped at Fort Lee For Early Action

After much consideration Universal has decided to equip its studio at Fort Lee, New Jersey, with a sound device for recording pictures and an active production schedule for these eastern studios is now said to be under way. The apparatus to be used will probably be Movietone, as Universal is a licensee of Western Electric Company.

For many months Universal has been preparing to resume production activities here and was anxious to do so but hesitated because many of the Broadway stars they wanted to do acts would not make the trip to Jersey in their off time.

A change of heart has come to many of these performers, however, since the opening of the Paramount and M-G-M studios in and about New York City and it is no longer difficult to secure all talent that is necessary.

Paramount with headquarters in Long Island City, M-G-M in uptown New York and Vitaphone with its studios located in Brooklyn have not found it difficult to stage acts. In fact all three studios have been working to capacity with the working hours running until three and four o'clock in the morning. The Fort Lee studios of Universal will probably be under way in the very near future.

Paramount Buys "Rose of Rancho" for Talkie

A well known stage play, "Rose of the Rancho," has recently been purchased by Paramount and will be produced as an all-talking picture. The play was written by Richard Tully and David Belasco and starred Frances Star in the title role.

Relief Fund and Publishers Ask Too Big Percentages For Own Charitable Activities

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 31.—As a result of what they deemed extortionate demands from outside sources on the proceeds from their scheduled annual frolic, the Wampas have called off the event entirely. The Wampas Frolic, a Los Angeles yearly institution for the past seven years, was slated to take place February 12 at the Shrine Auditorium. It is at the annual Frolics, that the thirteen "Baby Stars" are presented formally to the public for the first time.

The reason for the cancellation is requested guarantees and percentages on the profits by the Motion Picture Relief Fund and the Los Angeles Publishers' Association, who operate the local dailies. The Producers Association asked the Wampas to donate a minimum of $4,500 to the Motion Picture Relief Fund and $500 to the Community Chest. The publishers, who are also reported allied with the All-Year Club, asked a donation of $8,500. Both producers and publishers are reported to have threatened withdrawal of all cooperation unless the press agents organization agreed to cut them in.

Estimated Gross $25,000

Since the estimated gross of the Shrine Auditorium at the price scale held by the Wampas is about $25,000, the Wampas foresaw immediately that such percentages would compel every member to dig into his own pocket to make up a deficit. The overhead of a Wampas Frolic is about $12,000. Had they guaranteed the "cuts" of over $13,000 to the others, plus a percentage of any possible monies received over, it meant labor and effort wasted on the part of the Western publicity men. Their Frolic is run primarily for the purpose of securing funds with which to take care of ill and indigent members, also for the purpose of paying off a blanket insurance policy under which all Wampas members are protected for a minimum of $1,000 on a life policy.

The newspaper publishers' cooperation consisted of publicity for the affair. That of the producers, was to permit tickets to be sold in studios. With both these aids withdrawn, as reported threatened, the Wampas would find the sledding difficult.

The "cut" demanded by the publishers was to be donated to charity, many sources believing that the All-Year Club would receive most of it. The All-Year Club is a Southern California organization, comprising mostly publishers, which exploits Southern California for tourist trade.

Two years ago the All-Year Club declared themselves in on the Wampas Frolic to the Injunction Suit of Pathe Waits Venue Decision

Question of Jurisdiction Hinges Upon Decision of Judge Glennon

Pathe is going right ahead with its fight to prevent the New York censors from "Usurping power of censoring films." The film company persuaded Supreme Court Judge Glennon to hear arguments on the merits of the case last Friday. The action was taken through F. R. Coudert, Jr., Pathe counsel after the court had indicated inclination to agree with E. E. Cole, counsel for the Department of Education, that the case should be heard at Albany.

Pathe was instructed to file its brief Monday of this week and the censor board to file brief Friday, after which the court will decide the question of jurisdiction to either make permanent or vacate Pathe's injunction secured in the test action. Pending the filing of the briefs the court has the matter of jurisdiction under advisement.

Pathe counsel attacked efforts of censors to pass upon sound used in connection with the picture, "Sal of Singapore," while Cole upheld the censor stand in Friday's argument. Meantime Pathe's restraining order will be continued in force and the picture in question is being shown at the New York Colony Theatre.

The contention of the New York censors is that they not only have the right to censor sound records used in connection with pictures, but also have the right to approve or forbid any speech used in connection with films.

M-G-M Building Third Stage for Sound Features

M-G-M is now building a third sound stage at the Culver City studios of the company. The new addition is 454 feet long and 86 feet wide, and will have a floor space of 13,400 feet. This stage makes possible the production of three feature talking pictures simultaneously.

At the present time the following long feature talking films are being made at the M-G-M studios: 'The Trial of Mary Dugan," "Hallelujah," "H u n t e d," "White Collars" and "Dynamite."

Kalmus in N. Y. to Confer on New M-G-M Color Series

Dr. Herbert Kalmus, producer of the two-reel "Great Events" series and "The Viking" for M-G-M, is now in New York where he is conferring with M-G-M officials at the home office concerning future plans along the lines of color production. The newest M-G-M Technicolor film is "Manchu Love," now being directed by Elmer Clifton with Sojin, Etta Lee, Tetsu Komai, Al Chang, Gum Chun and James Leong in the cast.

Collier's Will Publish Story of Lasky's Life

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 31. — Jesse Lasky is the latest film executive to have his biography written for the edification of the public. Walter Davenport, associate editor of Collier's, accompanied Lasky on his recent trip west, and is now collecting and compiling data on the producer's life. The material will be published in Collier's as a series of articles, and the biography will later be published in book form.

Heavy Demands Cancel Annual Wampas Frolic

tune of forty per cent of the total proceeds. Last year the West Coast press agents anticipated such a demand by volunteering forty per cent of their affair to the Motion Picture Relief Fund. This move automatically barred All-Year Club from cutting in.

This year both newspaper publishers and the producers evidently decided that the Wampas Frolic should be run for their benefit as well as for the needy press agents. The decision to abandon a frolic entirely was made when the Wampas realized that it would cost each member money.

Press Agents Suffer Loss

The Wampas Baby Stars will be introduced at a testimonial banquet to be held privately instead. Public admission will not be permitted, tickets to be sold by Wampas members to their friends only.

Meanwhile, the revision of their plans will cost the press agents a large sum nevertheless. Many advertising contracts have been secured by solicitors for the Wampas Frolic program. These contracts must be returned, but a cash settlement made with solicitors in view of their labor stands just the same. Also, several thousand dollars worth of tickets must be refunded. In addition there are printing bills, the deposit on the Shrine Auditorium, office rentals, established for the Frolic and certain staff salaries to be paid.

That the change in plans will cost the Wampas a certain loss of prestige cannot be denied. However, the association feels that it would rather take the loss in prestige than the one it would have to suffer financially under the conditions made.

It has been reported that the Wampas may stage a Frolic in San Francisco by invitation of the dailies in that city. This will not take place this year under any circumstances, although the Wampas have expressed their gratitude to the Northern city for its recognition. Since producers are reported firm in their refusal to permit the association to transport stars up North for the ball, the main attractions of a Wampas Frolic would be missing.

Hence the private testimonial banquet will replace the Frolic. Meanwhile the Wampas are earnestly endeavoring to hit on a stunt for next year with which to recoup their standing and prestige.

Many Films On Newspaper Life Being Planned

Success of Broadway Stage Plays Prompts Production On Same Subject

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, Jan. 31.—Practically every producer in Hollywood has recently produced, or is preparing, a film production with a newspaper background. The cycle of newspaper melodramas hit the picture field as a result of the success of Broadway plays written on the same subject.

Universal's "Freedom of the Press" is now being released generally, as is "Telling the World," an M-G-M William Haines star production. Pathe's "Office Scandal" has just been shipped East for release, with reports that it is the most authentic film production of newspaper life so far produced.

No less than six other newspaper stories are slated to be produced immediately by as many companies. Paramount will make an all-talker adaptation of "Gentlemen of the Press," the stage success. Howard Hughes of Caddo Productions secured the rights to the other stage hit "Front Page" and is planning it for the talker class. The remaining four pictures are from original stories; First National is planning "Tabloid" by Fred Myton; Warner Brothers have "Headlines" by Jimmy Starr; Columbia will make "Power of the Press"; and Fox has a story by Will Gentz carrying the title "Stop the Press!" Fox recently made "Calamity," a newspaper melodrama directed by Fred Newmeyer, but latest reports have it that the picture has been shelved indefinitely.

Sound Proofing Of RKO Stages Now Under Way

William Le Baron, vice-president of RKO Productions, Inc., in charge of production, announces his company will spend $250,000 on the sound-proofing of all standing stages and the building of a new sound-proof stage for the filming of pictures. The name of the studios in Hollywood was recently changed from FBO to RKO Studios. Three new projection rooms likewise will be built. Construction was initiated this week.

Universal Announces Next Reginald Denny Picture

Universal has selected "Companionate Troubles," a comedy farce, as the next starring vehicle for Reginald Denny, announces Carl Laemmle.

William James Craft, who recently completed "The Cohens and Kellys in Atlantic City," will direct. The story is an original by Gladys Lehman and Earle Snell. No cast is announced as yet but production is expected to start in two weeks. There will be some sound and silent versions.

Drastic Comment Aimed at "Purist" School of Censors

Paper Warns of Further Attacks on Liberties If Free Speech Is Denied

Ann Arbor, Mich., January 31.—Vigorous comment appears in an editorial in "The Ann Arbor Daily News" concerning the efforts of the censors to take the talkies into their realm, and warning is expressed that the censors, if successful, will carry their endeavors to art in all its various lines. The paper says:

"Whether the talk of talking pictures is to be censored by official boards of censorship is the question involved in recent court proceedings in New York State. The New York State Board attempted to censor the spoken lines in a 'talkie' produced by Pathe, and the producing company has obtained a temporary injunction as a first step in defending the right of 'free speech.' The case is important, because the verdict is likely to be accepted as a precedent for future attempts to regulate the screen drama in its newest form. It may even determine whether the 'talkie' is to be confined within officially circumscribed sphere of growth, or be permitted to develop into a real art.

"Censorship easily could stunt the growth of the talkie and doom it to mediocrity at the beginning, closing the doors on boundless possibilities of evolution.

"Unquestionably the right of free speech is involved. If every film is required to conform to the opinion of a board of censorship a dangerous power will have been invested in a small group of individuals—a power that will have its undesirable effect on the general public. The danger will be apparent when it is seen that censorship would be expected, as a result of its foothold, to expand and consolidate its authority. For, it might be argued, why stop with the talkies when there are stage dramas, books, orations and newspapers offering a fertile field? Indeed, the talkie producers themselves would have the right to inquire as to the reason for discrimination. Why, for example, should it not be permissible to enact in a talking picture a story that might be taken from one of the classics of literature that are studied in public schools?

"And why permit an orator to talk as he sees fit from the platform, but not allow him to express the same view, in the same words, in a talkie news reel?"

$1,250,000 for Sound Research Work

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 31.—Over one and a quarter million dollars will be expended by the Bell Telephone Laboratories during 1929 for research work in improving the quality of mechanical voice and sound reproduction. This statement was made by J. J. Lyng, vice president of Electrical Research Products, a subsidiary of Western Electric and Bell Telephone Company.

He further declared that a good part of this money would be spent directly for research on eqnipment for sound pictures; and a good part of the revenue of Electrical Research Products from theatres and producers during the coming few years will be put into research for improving devices for talking and sound picture reproduction.

Fox Planning To Again Start Production East

Movietone Shorts Too Costly On Coast So They Will Be Made In New York

The William Fox organization will resume production activities in New York again within a short time. The 54th Street Studios, where the Movietone subjects were made prior to last July, are to be reopened for the production of short subjects. The reason for this is that the coast production was found to be too costly.

The first of the series of Clark and McCullough comedies were made in New York, as also were the Chic Sale subjects. Then Sale was sent to the coast where he made but one short. Clark and McCullough have made about five on the west coast. But generally when a director from the feature department was taken over into Movietone to do a short, the short developed into a feature in expense at least and had to be released as such. The shorts themselves assumed feature production costs before they were finished.

"In Old Arizona" started out as a short and finished a feature. The same was true of the all-colored cast film for which Charles Gilpin was imported from New York, although Gilpin didn't finish it. Paul Sloan who directed got started on the story and it developed to such an extent that it was decided to make it a feature.

Pathe Battle For Freedom Of Screen Speech Wins Nation-wide Support

NEWSPAPER publishers and editors throughout the country are watching with keen interest the fight Pathe is making for freedom of screen speech. As a result of the campaign being conducted by MOTION PICTURE NEWS, dailies commanding millions of circulation, are asking that they be kept advised of the progress of the case.

Editorials are being printed in a large number of influential newspapers. Additionally, the NEWS continues to receive expressions of opinion from publishers. These are thoroughly representative of the press of the country.

Clark Howell, in "The Atlanta Constitution," writes:

"The question of constitutional free speech is involved in the present organized movement to place a rigid and senseless censorship on talking pictures—Freedom of speech is one of the most sacred guarantees of the bill of rights, and the screen, in this respect, with every consideration for uplift, should be accorded the same principles as the individual.

"Censorship is un-American and obnoxious. It is subject to abuses. The law inhibits any public speech of a nature that does not comport to the ordinary rules of decency. Any picture that is indecent can be instantly stopped by law.

Hits Constitutional Liberties

"The censorship tendency is a dangerous one, in more ways than one. It not only strikes at constitutional liberties, but involves bureaucratic power that is reprehensible under our institutions of government."

The "Salt Lake Telegram" says:

"Censorship of the talkies is the latest goal of America's organized and professional fanatics.

"The right of free speech, guaranteed by the bill of rights of the United States constitution surely extends to the theatres. It would be un-American to extend the censors' obnoxious dictatorship over the talkies. Existing laws protect the public thoroughly against public indecency without putting a sharp-edged sword in the hands of would-be reformers. If a film contains vulgar dialogue the whole showing may be

Small Exhibitors' Chance in Towns With Opposition Looks Bad for Next Season

Majority of Companies Laying Off Westerns and Blood and Thunder Films Which Are Needed

THE outlook for the small exhibitor in a town where there are other houses with sound as his opposition is such that there is little chance of his getting any product next season at a price that will enable him to exist. He cannot afford sound installation cost and his competitors, at least the largest of them, will have it and with the producers looking toward nothing but sound pictures and big productions it would appear that his position is one of being up against it.

On the strength of a letter to the MOTION PICTURE NEWS from an exhibitor in Atlanta having a house that seats less than four hundred, an investigation of the production releasing plans of the bigger producers was made in New York with the result that some startling statements were made.

Producing for Bigger Towns

In the offices of one of the biggest producing and releasing companies the statement was made "We are producing pictures for the bigger towns. We get seventy per cent of our revenue from those towns so why shouldn't we produce for them?" It was a question that was unanswerable. The reason for putting the question up to them was the fact that they had within the last few weeks released a production in which the leading woman character was the mistress of a wealthy man and it was pointed out to them that that was not the type of picture that would be welcomed in the smaller communities where the exhibitor was getting neighborhood patronage. The answer is in itself evident.

At Universal when the question of westerns was put up to an executive, he stated that the company would continue to make some of them, but that they were cutting down thirty-three and a third per cent on what they turned out last year. There were 36 westerns released by U. last year. This year there will be eight Hoot Gibson and sixteen others making a total of twenty-four. They did, however, stress the fact that every production that Universal was making would have a silent and a sound version.

Pathe, F B O and Fox have discontinued the rough and ready type of westerns altogether. Fox started a series but after making one of them decided to throw the series into the scrap heap.

The southern territory has always been the greatest field for the western and the blood and thunder type of picture. One company conducted a survey of the exhibitors in that territory through the medium of its branch managers. The result was that they discovered that the demand for westerns even there had fallen off twenty-five per cent, and this convinced them that they should lay off western production.

suppressed through police action."

E. D. Lambright, editor of the "Tampa Tribune," writes:

"Censorship of dialogue in the talkies? I hope this attempt to force the submission of dialogue to censor board before it is presented in the theatre will fail.

"I would not like to see some of the current New York productions filmed with the dialogue used, for in many cases the lines are putrid and unfit for general consumption. However, we have laws enough to handle those responsible and I see no reason for censorship."

Don Seism, editor of the Evansville "Courier and Journal" of Evansville, Ind., takes the same view on the free speech injunction proposition as Arthur Brisbane is quoted as taking. He believes there is no difference in principle between talking actors on the stage and those who talk through the microphone; one should have the same rights as the other; they are entitled to freedom of speech and should be held responsible for any violation of the law or of common decency.

British-French Phototone Allied With German Co.

A five-year agreement has been entered into by the British and French Phototone Companies, Limited, of Dorland House, Regent Street, London, with Klangfilm Company of Germany, representing Siemens Halske and Allgemmeine Elektricitats Gesellschaft. The compact was signed in the face of spirited competition, Eustace Webb, representative of British and French Phototone, hears.

The Phototone Company has exclusive rights to all Klangfilm's reproducing machinery, in all their territories. The Klangfilm machinery is interchangeable with sound on disc and sound on film. The British firm obtains, by the terms of the agreement, special concessions to produce under the German company's process for sound on film. Klangfilm is supported with service, installation, patents and technical advice. According to the terms of the agreement, Klangfilm will produce pictures in Germany which will be distributed by the British company in the Phototone territories. The French Phototone Company and its territories are also included.

Two B'way Records Almost Smashed At the Roxy and Capitol Last Week

"Arizona" Gets $142,673; "Affairs" Pulls $87,705; Four New Ones Arrive

THE house records at both the Roxy and the Capitol were almost broken last week. "In Old Arizona" at the Roxy pulled $142,673.75 on the week as against the record figure of $143,900, which was hung up by "What Price Glory?" At the Capitol "A Woman of Affairs" drew $87,795.05, which was about $10,000 under the record of $98,200, which was done by the house on the first week that it changed its policy. There were four new arrivals on the street this week coming in for runs. They were George Bancroft in "The Wolf of Wall Street," which came to the Rialto; Emil Jannings in "Sins of the Fathers" at the Rivoli, both in for grinds; Richard Barthelmess in "Weary River" at the Central and "The Bellamy Trial" at the Embassy. The latter are in on a two-a-day policy.

Early last week it looked as though both the Roxy and the Capitol were surely going to break their records. Out of town "In Old Arizona" has succeeded in breaking records everywhere, but in face of that the New York presentation at the Roxy was given a campaign of daily newspaper advertising that run way over $20,000 and in addition to this considerable sniping of one, three and stands was indulged in. The Capitol on the other hand went along with about a $3,500 expenditure in the newspapers for "A Woman of Affairs." But both houses fell short of the mark that was set for them.

The Roxy started off with $54,000 for Saturday and Sunday and then followed with three days that were around $18,000 each. The Capitol got $19,000 on Saturday and $18,600 on Sunday, according to estimates, with the following three days bringing about $32,000. When the difference in the capacities of the two houses are considered and the fact that the Roxy show was cut to the bone to permit of a fast turnover the Capitol figures stand very well in comparison.

"Marquis Preferred," which was the attraction at the Paramount with the Duncan Sisters as an added attraction, got only $65,884, which was not as strong as it was expected that the Duncans would standoff the opposition of the strong screen attractions at the two other big houses, but this they failed to do.

The Strand with "On Trial" after its Broadway run for the first time at popular prices played to $41,276 and the picture held over. "The Rescue" in its second week dropped off almost $5,000 even with the star present to help things along and finished with $22,111, while at the Rivoli "The Awakening" after three weeks drew $20,800 for its final week. "The Little Wildcat" at the Colony stepped to the tune of $16,840 and "The U 9" at the little Cameo finished with $7,546.

Both the "Redskin" at the Criterion and "Weary River" at the Central opened late in the week. The former on Saturday night and the latter on Thursday night. The Barthelmess picture seemed to be doing some business but not a turn away. "The Bellamy Trial" which came in on Wednesday night managed to get $7,667 on the first five days.

Of the holdovers in the run houses "The Singing Fool" at the Winter Garden topped with $36,275, while "My Man" at the Warner got $21,825. "The River" at the Gaiety took a complete nosedive and finished the week with $9,135.75.

"Alias Jimmy Valentine" at the Astor is in its final week. Last week it played to $15,051.25. "Broadway Melody" is due at this house on Feb. 8.

Minnesota Leads All Minneapolis Houses With $23,000

FOR three days last week "Old Man Winter" waged a desperate battle with four Minneapolis houses but lacked sufficient punch to knock out the box-offices. The State showing "My Man" showed approximately $18,000. The Minnesota with "Sins of the Fathers" put $23,000 away for a rainy day. Pantages found "The Last Warning" brought in $7,000 and the Hennepin-Orpheum totalled $15,000 with "A Woman of Affairs." The smaller houses suffered. The Lyric and Strand with "Someone to Love" and "Captain Lash" listed $2,500 and $3,500 for the week.

"Abie's Irish Rose" Does $16,000 and Leads First Runs in Seattle

SEATTLE.—First-run film houses without exception enjoyed brisk business during the past seven days. There were no strikingly outstanding successes, the palm for high gross being divided about equally between the two de luxe competing houses, West Coast's Fifth Avenue Theatre and Publix' Seattle Theatre.

At the Fifth Avenue, "Abie's Irish Rose" stood on its title alone and pulled a very strong $16,000 to the box office, which is several thousand above average weeks. The Seattle countered with a tremendous bill that included "Sins of the Fathers," Ruth Etting's singing short for Paramount, and a wonderful Fanchon-Marco stage unit entitled "The Stairway of Dreams." With extra advertising and exploitation this bill did over $15,500, and put the house over to a profitable week, better than average also.

At the Blue Mouse Theatre, "Conquest" played to a very pleasing opening week of $10,000. It goes into a second week. "My Man," with $9,500, at the Music Box, continued to draw in the end of its third week and beginning of a fourth, playing to houses that were satisfactory, length of run considered.

"In Old Arizona," at the Coliseum, stacked up a very pleasing gross of $11,000 in its second week, after playing one record-breaking week originally at the Fifth Avenue Theatre. Taking the three-week total run into consideration, the picture did about $45,000 in its first run here, which sets a mark for following "big ones" to shoot at.

Winding up the first runs, the two vaudeville houses each played to pleasing grosses, with the palm for the best film going to Pantages again, as has been the case for many weeks recently. Here, "Gang War" was the screen attraction, and it drew $10,000. The Orpheum let the vaudeville portion of the bill do the work, with "Naughty Baby" used as something to run between vaudeville programs. The film was weak, but business came in on the stage portion, so all was serene. The gross was $12,000.

Sophie Tucker reaches Hollywood to spread the fame of her voice through Vitaphone. This footlight celebrity will be featured in "Honky Tonk," a Warner Bros.-Vitaphone picture.

Metropolitan Houston Leader Grossing $14,000

HOUSTON.—Though there is a general slump in business complained of in this section, Houston motion picture houses continue to play to good crowds and business on the whole can be called better than average, with Spring-like temperatures prevailing all week.

The Metropolitan, with "Abie's Irish Rose" and a Publix unit, enjoyed better business than the houses expected with $14,000 gross. Loew's State almost doubled its advertising space on "Trail of '98" and the excellent returns were $13,000.

The Majestic played "The Red Dance" and the usual vaudeville to the better than average business of $13,000. The Kirby, with "Sins of the Fathers," did $10,000.

"Old Arizona" Jams Baltimore New

House Up $6,000 With "Lions Roar" On Same Bill

BALTIMORE.—Despite the fact that the automobile show was going full blast during the entire week beginning January 21, and that there was snow on Tuesday and rain on Friday, business at the first run theatres did not seem to be hurt much.

"Shopworn Angel" was the feature film attraction offered as a part talking film at Loew's Century with the Loew Publix offering "The Perfect Girl," with Jack Stanley and Helen MacFadden. This proved a good drawing program and the gross for the week was $21,700. A Technicolor picture, Mme. DuBarry, was also on the bill.

The outstanding point in the week's business was the gross taken in by the outdoor all-talking picture "In Old Arizona," which had them jammed in every afternoon and evening at the New Theatre and brought in $12,000 with Mack Sennett's all-talker "The Lion's Roar" on the same bill. This made the New jump from $6,000 of the previous week.

"Broadway Fever" was the feature film attraction on the bill at the Hippodrome with the Bert Smith Players in "The Goldstein's and the Murphys" and vaudeville acts. The gross for this week was estimated at $10,500, which brings it $3,500 under the previous week, which was said to be too high for that theatre. The auto show hurt receipts there somewhat.

"Peter the Great," the Ufa attraction, played a return engagement at the Little Theatre with 267 seats, sponsored by the Motion Picture Guild, and the week's business was considered good with a gross of about $1,200.

"On Trial," the all-dialogue picture, was offered for its second week at Warner's Metropolitan and it proved an excellent pulling attraction with a gross for the week totaling $11,000. Vitaphone acts were on the bill.

"Silks and Saddles" was offered at the New Garden with four acts of RKO vaudeville and business was only fair, the gross being estimated at $9,500.

"Abie's Irish Rose," offered as a part talking picture at Loew's Stanley, proved a better pulling attraction there with its $19,200 gross for the week, than "Alias Jimmy Valentine," which was shown during the previous week.

"Gang War," the part-talking Photophone picture, was offered at the Rivoli and did a pretty good business, pulling in $8,500. Two Vitaphone acts and a technicolor subject, "Cleopatra," were offered also.

"Alias Jimmy Valentine" was taken from Loew's Stanley to Loew's Valencia and grossed $3,800.

"The Trail of '98" moved uptown to Loew's Parkway for its second run and pulled in $2,800 there.

Oklahoma City Business Picks Up At All Houses

OKLAHOMA CITY.—With the legislature in session, business picked up at all of the Oklahoma City theatres the past week. The Criterion presented "The Shopworn Angel" on the screen and "New Toys" in repertoire to pleased good business. The Capitol packed 'em in all week with "Abie's Irish Rose," Paramount's talking picture.

The Liberty had good business with "Red Wine," and the Empress did well with "The Collegians." The Orpheum's vaudeville and "Homesick" on the screen enjoyed very good business.

Wisconsin Grosses $14,000 Despite Milwaukee Auto Show

MILWAUKEE, Jan. 31.—Milwaukee theatres have just completed a successful week. The Auto Show, which many managers feared would cut into their business, had but little effect, though its presence down town was felt at the theatre box offices. The Auto Show drew 100,000 people in its week's stay.

The Alhambra offered its patrons "The Last Warning," and as usual the mystery picture drew exceptionally well with a gross of $12,000. "Manhattan Cocktail," combined with a six-act stage presentation, was the Wisconsin's program, and it got $14,000. "Submarine" played its second week at the Strand to $4,100.

"Interference," in its second week at the Merrill, kept up to its previous week's record with $5,500. "On Trial," also held over for a second week, playing at the Garden, drew only fair business. "The Trail of '98" opened at the Majestic and was accorded good patronage.

Buffalo Back To Good Times After Long Pull

BUFFALO.—Buffalo motion picture theatres last week had wonderful results. For the past few weeks this city has been way down in the box office reports. The Great Lakes had a very successful week with the Fox anniversary film "In Old Arizona" and will run it for another week. At the Lafayette "The Spieler" did a very fair amount of business both afternoons and evenings.

Shea's Buffalo ran off with the honors for Publix theatres, playing "The Case of Lena Smith," and Ted Lewis on the stage, which helped the box office a great deal. "The Flying Fleet" proved a success week at the Century.

"Outcast" at the Hippodrome was a fairly good business getter and gave a better average than the week before. The Victoria showed "Show People" to good business. "Masks of the Devil" was the screen feature at the Kenmore. It was a very successful week, reported the management. The Regent offered "The Woman Who Dared" and did a fairly good week's business.

"Honor First" did very well at the Granada Theatre.

Business Good But Two Houses Close in Canton

CANTON, O.—The week of Jan. 20 to 26 marked the passing of two Canton theatres, one a first-run photoplay house and the other a burlesque and second-run house, leaving but four first-run theatres and four neighborhood houses in the city, with the exception of the Grand, housing a resident stock company.

Completing a week's run of Dolores Costello (which, incidentally, played to a better-than-average audience) the Alhambra closed indefinitely. Although neither denial nor affirmation is obtainable, the reports persists that the theatre has been purchased by Warner Brothers to be remodeled, wired and opened in the fall. The Lyceum doors are close with no prospect of reopening.

Fannie Brice, in "My Man," turned out to be a bigger attraction than expected, and the film was held over at the Strand for this week. Despite the unfavorable weather conditions, "White Shadows in the South Seas" did exceptionally well for Loew's, coupled with "The Shopworn Angel," which played the last three days of the week.

"Prep and Pep" did much to hold up the average for the Palace, with "Ned McCobb's Daughter" the last half of the week playing to relatively small houses. At the Valentine, "Painted Post" and "Stocks and Blondes" did far better than any other program played since the theatre was taken over by Joe Calla, also manager of the Strand.

Wichita Palace With $5,000 Is Leader for Week

WICHITA.—The Palace, the smallest house in seating capacity of the first runs, after having set a record of $14,000 for one week with "The Singing Fool," continued to lead all houses from January 13 to 19, inclusive, in a fair week with a gross of $5,000. It is the only downtown house equipped for sound, which is proving a great attraction.

The Uptown is another house with sound playing a split week and averaging around $2,500. The film attractions for the past week were "Powder My Back" and "Power." They did $2,600. The Orpheum did $3,900 on the week "Three Ring Marriage" and "Chinatown Charlie," three vaudeville acts accompanying each picture.

At the Miller the two features run during the week were "Synthetic Sin" and "Case of Lena Smith." They had a good week with around $5,000.

Majestic Goes $5,680 to Lead Rex at Beloit

BELOIT.—With fair and cold weather prevailing the two leading houses here, the Rex and Majestic, enjoyed a better than average week from January 13 to 19, inclusive, each playing three features.

The Majestic topped the Rex by a considerable margin with a gross of $5,680, the features being "Street of Illusion," "In Old Kentucky" and "Wings." The Majestic, however, has 1,100 seats and the Rex but 600.

The Rex played to $2,340 with "Tropic Madness," "A Woman of Affairs" and "Temptation of a Shopgirl." Three vaudeville acts were used in connection with "Temptation of a Shopgirl."

$25,000 Tops Week in Cleveland

"Old Arizona" Breaks Record At Hippodrome

CLEVELAND, O.—"In Old Arizona," the first outdoor all-talking picture of the screen, shattered all records last week at the Hippodrome. Thousands were turned away on the opening day and police regulation was enlisted to maintain order among those waiting in the lobby, where, it is said, people fought to get into the theatre. Almost every performance was a sell-out, in spite of a week of terrible weather, which included a sleet storm that almost paralyzed traffic. The gross hung up was $25,000.

"The Flying Fleet" did very well at the Allen, where it drew consistently both afternoons and evenings to run up $18,000. It received favorable reviews.

"Lady of Chance," reviewed as a "genuinely fine bit of screen entertainment," played to large audiences at the State with $20,000. Singer's Midgets, headline attraction on the vaudeville bill, undoubtedly had much to do with the large attendance.

"Me Gangster" was fortunate enough to be the screen attraction on the same bill at Keith's Palace in which Paul Whiteman and his band were featured. Naturally the attendance piled up and the result was $20,000 for the week.

"The Trail of '98" held up fairly well during its second week at the Stillman with $10,000. Not strong enough, however, to be held a third week.

"Prep and Pep" and "Tropic Madness" divided the week at Keith's East 105th Street, with honors about even. Both pictures proved satisfactory program features.

"My Man" did exceptionally well at the Cameo, where it was playing its second downtown run. Its success was due to clever exploitation and it is being held another week.

The movies did not have heavy competition last week. "MacBeth," as played by Florence Reed, Lyn Harding and William Farnum, did capacity business at the Ohio and an extra Friday matinee had to be incorporated to take care of the crowds. "Luckee Girl," musical comedy, was at the Hanna. Hachmaninoff gave a piano recital at Masonic Hall and the usual burlesque attractions were offered.

Pantages With $14,600 Has Good Kansas City Week

KANSAS CITY.—Still another week of dismal, stormy weather with zero and sub-zero temperatures did not offer much cheer to Kansas City exhibitors, but the attendance at most houses held fairly close to the normal mark and, in one case, a healthy increase was experienced.

The increase was at the Pantages, where "Mother Machree" packed them in all week, doing $14,600, which represents a substantial increase over any other pictures of several weeks. At Loew's Midland it seemed the patrons had had enough of snowbound scenes locally and the icy hue of "The Trail of '98" drew only $20,300, which is about $3,000 less than the previous week. At the Newman "The Red Dance" played to a fair attendance, drawing $18,700, an increase of $500 over the previous week.

"Naughty Baby," although playing to a good attendance at the Mainstreet, did not measure up to the previous week, drawing $22,400 against $25,700. "Behind the German Lines," at the Royal, drew $4,700 against $5,800 on the previous week.

"My Man" Pulls $24,000 Second Week at Music Box in Portland

PORTLAND, ORE.—Though it was in its second week at the Music Box Theatre, "My Man," the Fanny Brice talking and singing picture, easily outdrew any feature on display in Portland for the week beginning January 17. In a house with nearly 1,100 seats less than the Portland Theatre and playing a seven-day run against a nine-day run at the Portland it grossed $24,000, whereas "Doctor's Secret," at the Portland, drew only $18,000.

A new policy went into effect at the Portland, which accounted for the nine days of "Doctor's Secret." The management has decided to open all features on Saturdays hereafter. Despite the fact that the bill appeared to be an attractive one with shorts, a newsreel and a Fanchon and Marco stage presentation, business at the Portland was hardly up to expectations. The $18,000 gross left room for big improvement.

The Broadway enjoyed a good average week with "The Wolf of Wall Street" as the feature picture attraction. It did $20,500 with an accompanying bill of Fox Movietone shorts and a Fox newsreel.

The cold weather and snow served to retard business at nearly every house, the smaller ones in particular faring none too well. The Blue Mouse, with only 657 seats, had a fair week with $3,500. They showed "Little Wildcat" as the feature

United Artists Theatre showed "The Rescue" for a second week, and played to a gross of $4,500, while Tebbett's Oriental, with "Dancing Vienna" as the feature attraction, did $5,000.

Good And Fair Business Meets S. F. First Runs

SAN FRANCISCO.—Some good and some bad business was reported beginning the third week of the New Year in San Francisco. The leading business of the week was reported by the Loew's Warfield Theatre which played "Dream of Love."

The Granada did well with "The Shopworn Angel," with Anita Stewart appearing in person on the stage. "Interference" did a fairly good business the second week of its showing at the St. Francis. At the California Theatre, "Sins of the Fathers" was shown a second week.

The chief Vitaphone theatre, the Embassy, reported good business with the picture "On Trial" and the Pantages, also a Vitaphone theatre, did well with "Beware of Bachelors" on the screen and vaudeville acts. The city's largest theatre, the El Capitan, also a Vitaphone theatre, had a good week with "Melody of Love" on the screen and a special presentation, "The Melody Shop," on the stage.

Syracuse Houses Roll Up Big Week

Lita Chaplin Big at Keiths; "Trail" $13,000 at Loew's

SYRACUSE.—Friends of the Senora Dolores Del Rio were given ample opportunity to view their favorite star who played two Syracuse houses for the week of Jan. 19-25. Other stars featured on the local Rialto were Milton Sills, Colleen Moore, Renee Adoree and Conrad Nagel and June Collyer. Lita Gray Chaplin, in a personal appearance at B. F. Keith's Palace, made a great hit, packing the house at all performances. The good bills shown, along with mild weather or what some of the movie managers call "typical movie weather" helped to roll up good profits for Syracuse houses.

Playing the split week with Lita Gray Chaplin and five other Radio-Keith-Orpheum vaudeville acts was "The Spieler," Pathe, featuring Renee Adoree. Rounding out the week was Conrad Nagel and June Collyer in "Red Wine," Fox picture. The $14,000 gross was due largely to the personal appearance of Lita Gray Chaplin.

"The Red Dance," Fox sound picture, had them standing up at the Empire Theatre. Also featured on the bill with Dolores Del Rio were the "Collegians" and a special novelty reel entitled "Round My Shoulder," featuring Al Jolson. All in all, Manager Al Kaufman reported a good week with an $11,000 gross.

Milton Sills and Dorothy Mackaill, showing in "The Barker" for the second week at the Eckel, drew in $8,000, just $4,000 less than the first week. Two Vitaphone acts were also on the program.

"The Trail of '98," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer sound picture, chalked up a good gross at Loew's State, bringing the recepits to $13,000, just $1,000 less than "Alias Jimmy Valentine" with William Haines, drew the previous week. Also featured on the program were two Metro Movietone acts, M-G-M news and Fox Movietone news. Maurice, organist, presented a clever organlogue, combining the playing of old song hits with the wearing of hats suggestive of the title of the song. Bruce Brummit and his orchestra delighted audiences with an overture, in which the trombone player was given a solo part.

Colleen Moore in "Oh Kay," First National picture, did the usual week's business of $7,000 gross. Strand Debutante orchestra played a classical number and Fox Movietone news and a comedy were shown.

"Outcast" Does $8,920 to Lead in Birmingham

BIRMINGHAM.—Cessation of the flu epidemic is making itself felt at the box office by a general improvement. All of the first run houses showed an increase during the week except the Alabama, where audiences did not seem to care for the feature picture.

The Ritz, a wired house with "Outcast" and five acts of vaudeville, was an easy leader with $8,920, and the Alabama, a considerably larger house, also wired, was second. "Conquest," with Vitaphone shorts and Movietone News, made up the program which drew $6,000.

"Alias Jimmy Valentine" drew $3,360 to the box office of the Empire, a small house of but 1,000 seats. The Strand, a wired house of 900 seats, did $1,910 with "The Spieler" and M-G-M Movietone shorts. The gross at the Trianon, with "The Crash," was $1,460.

Indianapolis Likes "Naughty Baby" to Tune of $21,000

INDIANAPOLIS.—Cold and rainy weather for the week ending January 25 put a crimp in some of the box-office receipts, but did no appreciable damage at the Indiana, where First National's "Naughty Baby" grabbed off $21,000.

The Circle with Universal's "The Last Warning" was next in line in the way of grosses with $14,000. The Apollo with its 1,100 seats did a nice business of $10,000 with "The Red Dance" as the feature attraction. Loew's Palace with "The Trail of '98" also did $10,000.

Good Patronage Marks Week In Salt Lake City

SALT LAKE.—First run picture houses have enjoyed highly satisfactory patronage as a whole here this past week. The second week of "Submarine" at the Pantages continued to draw capacity business in connection with the vaudeville bill presented.

The Capitol Theatre drew crowded houses with the picture and stage attractions, namely "The Case of Lena Smith" and the Fanchon and Marco stage presentation "Hats Idea."

"The Midnight Taxi" a Warner Brothers picture presented at the Victory with Vitaphone, was a very good drawing card. The Vitaphone acts and Movietone News is also shown here.

"Red Wine" did very well at the Paramount Empress. "Lingerie" is reported to have played to good sized houses at the Gem Theatre during the week's run. "The Red Dance," shown as a second run at the Rialto, went over well. "Easy Pickings" and also "Special Delivery" were the picture offerings at the State Theatre and good houses were the rule.

$6,590 for Des Moines Capitol in Record Cold

DES MOINES.—With more snow than has been seen here in fifteen years, and temperatures setting new records, business held up well here last week. The Capitol led the local houses in grosses with $6,590. The feature picture was "The Flying Fleet." The Des Moines, with $6,308, was a close second, with "The Awakening" the feature attraction.

The Strand, however, really made the best comparative showing of the week, with business above the average. This is a small house of 1,065 seats that recently installed sound. Two features split the week, "The River Pirate," doing $1,705, and "The Little Wildcat," $1,098.

Killing Made in Harrisburg on Jolson Film

HARRISBURG. One of the biggest box office killings for many weeks in Harrisburg was recorded at the Colonial where the Al. Jolson picture, "The Singing Fool," brought out the S. R. O. sign every day of the week, including the afternoon as well as all night performances.

The presence of 75,000 visitors to the annual State Farm Show in Harrisburg, during four days of the week, materially stimulated business of all the downtown first run houses. At Loew's Regent, where the main film attraction was "The Trail of '98," exceptional business was done even for this popular house.

"The Shopworn Angel," the chief attraction at the Victoria, drew good crowds.

At the State the first half of the week, the screen feature was "A Ship Comes In," and for the last three days "The Ware Case" was shown with success. At the Russell, Karl Dane and George K. Arthur, in "Baby Mine," gained plaudits, and the Broad Street showed Lila Lee in "Black Butterflies."

Pittsburgh Has Banner Week At Leading Houses

PITTSBURGH.—Loew's Penn had another great week's business. "The Trail of '98" being the screen attraction and the Publix Unit, "Just Kids," on the stage. An all-around good bill, which made a big hit with the patrons.

Fannie Brice in "My Man" scored at the Stanley, and a very good week's business was enjoyed. "The Man Who Laughs" did very well at the Regent. Gilbert-Garbo in "A Woman of Affairs" did better than average at the Cameraphone.

Colleen Moore in "Synthetic Sin" got surprisingly good business at the Enright.

Emil Jannings in "Sins of the Fathers" got good crowds for the Grand. "Captain Lash" did very well for the week at Loew's Aldine. "Riley the Cop" brought average business to the Olympic. "Man-Made Marriage" did but fair at the Alhambra.

"Trail of '98" Is Best Draw in Tampa Theatres

TAMPA.—"The Trail of '98" opened up Sunday like a house afire and pulled a big business for the Tampa that grossed pretty close to the $3,000 record of last Sunday. The picture had a world of big stuff and thrills, but the story didn't seem to click, with receipts dropping the following three days to a little below the average of the house. "The Doctor's Secret," an all-talkie, went over nicely for the last half, but it failed to develop the usual all-talkie draw.

The Victory changed programs in the middle of the week, using "The Last Warning" for the first half and "Gang War" for the last. Neither picture seemed to hit 'em and receipts for the week were just fair.

The Franklin had three second runs that pulled in the quarters; "While the City Sleeps," "The Fleet's In" and "Moran of the Marines."

St. Louis Ambassador Gets $30,948

"Last Warning" Clicks at Head Of Good Program

ST. LOUIS—Some good, some fair and some poor business was recorded last week at the local first-run houses, with the palm in the way of grosses going to the Ambassador with $30,948.

The Ambassador presented a strong bill with the feature picture "The Last Warning." Supporting attractions were Ed Lowry's stage show, "South Sea Breezes," and the usual shorts. Business at this house was well above the average with the regular amount of advertising.

The Missouri Theatre hung up a good week with a gross of $25,564. The feature picture was "Naughty Baby," accompanied by Eddie Peabody's "Dixieland" on the stage and also an orchestral production, a new feature introduced by Charles Previn.

At the Grand Central "The Barker," with Will Mahoney, Chick Sale and others in short subjects, the receipts were $13,779, which was only a fair week for this house.

At the Midtown "The Singing Fool" got $10,855, much below the record set for the house and the early stages of its extended run, which is now closing.

Loew's State had a good week with "The Trail of '98" and the Jan Garber band in a short sound subject. The estimated business was $21,900.

Blizzards Cut Into Receipts In Milwaukee

MILWAUKEE.—Fair business was reported by down town managers for the week ending Jan. 25. A few blizzards helped the zero weather in cutting down total receipts. Weather was far from being ideal for theatre going. Considerable opposition was encountered this week too, in "Good News" playing its first week at the Davidson. Before the show opened every seat in the house was sold for a week in advance. This cut into the motion picture business to an appreciable extent. On Wednesday the Izaak Walton League drew a large crowd to the Auditorium to a showing of "Under Northern Lights."

The Wisconsin theatre offered "Red Wine," with an unusually popular stage presentation, headed by Sammy Cohen. This combination proved only strong enough to draw $17,900. "The Great White North," at the Merrill, did not make a good bid for popularity with a gross of about $3,700. Then, too, it unfortunately was booked in the same week with the Izaak Walton program featuring "Under the Northern Lights."

"Marriage by Contract" drew only fair houses to the Alhambra, which grossed $8,000. "Conquest" opened a two-weeks' run at the Garden. Too much frozen adventure in one week for Milwaukee's snow-bound theatre goers. The picture was accorded just fair patronage. "Trail of '98," at the Majestic, was well received. Its drawing power was far greater than the two adjoining houses on that end of the street. "Blindfold" played to poor houses at the Strand. The Palace, after hammering on the "four big stars" on the program in its newspaper advertising, had a fairly successful week. Its photoplay feature was "The Spieler." The Riverside as usual stressed the picture as the "headliner" on its program, which this week was "Marked Money." Matinee business here was unusually good.

Mark Ritz in Albany Sets Pace During Good Week

ALBANY.—The Mark Ritz theatre, in Albany, set the pace for the first run houses last week with Lon Chaney in "West of Zanzibar." It gave the theatre one of the best weeks since December. The flu is abating somewhat in Albany and, as a result, business has been on the upgrade at both the downtown and the residential houses during the past week or ten days.

The Mark Strand played to what the management termed as "fair business" with John Gilbert in "Masks of the Devil." The house used two Vitaphone presentations as well as the usual newsreel in sound. "Fazil" ran to well filled houses throughout the week at the Leland. The Clinton Square theatre, in Albany, exploited "Fighting the White Slave Traffic" and reported a good week's business.

The neighborhood houses in Albany say that business is on the pick-up with one or two exceptions. Proctor's Grand has installed the Photophone and opened up heavily without any advance in prices in a combination of sound pictures and vaudeville.

In Troy, Norma Talmadge in "The Woman Disputed" ran to fine business for four days. Under its policy of split weeks, the house ran "Captain Lash" the remaining three days but to rather unsatisfactory business. The Lincoln drew well throughout the entire week with "West of Zanzibar." Proctor's used "Manhattan Cocktail" to advantage, while the Griswold used a girl amateur revue for a portion of the week along with its program of double features. Business is not up to normal, however, in Troy, at the present time.

"Alias Jimmy" Attracts $11,500 to Loew's Canton

CANTON.—Despite extremely unfavorable weather conditions, box office receipts in the five first run photoplay houses took a sharp turn upward. A heavy snowfall and the coldest weather of the season during the first four days of the week failed to keep film fans away from Loew's, where "Alias Jimmy Valentine" was the screen attraction. It was the best four days since "Our Dancing Daughters" was screened here, and the result was $11,500 gross for the week, with "Just Married" playing three days.

"On Trial" played a highly successful seven-day engagement at the Strand with $5,140. "The Michigan Kid and "Albany Night Boat" failed to do more than $8,350 at the Palace. "Marriage by Contract" attracted more than the usual number of fans to the Alhambra which has a gross of $3,330. The Valentine reported average business with "Singapore Mutiny" doing better than the double bill of "Brass Knuckles" and "Five and Ten Cent Sadie." The figures here for the week were $1,710.

Ottawa Enjoys Good Patronage At All Theatres

OTTAWA.—Despite excellent ski-ing weather during the week of January 21, Ottawa theatres enjoyed steady to excellent patronage all week. The Regent Theatre, for instance, had a big week with "The Jazz Singer."

The next best draw was at the Centre Theatre, where "The Red Dance" held the screen for the week. This was the most popular silent feature in Ottawa in some weeks and the gross was about $2,000 ahead of "Waterfront," the previous presentation.

B. F. Keith's Theatre suffered a drop with "The Woman From Moscow." "Obey the Law," known elsewhere as "Underworld," secured above-average business for the Imperial Theatre and patronage was further encouraged by the appearance of "Baby Eleanor" of "Our Gang" fame on the stage. There was no kick about box office results at the Imperial.

The Rex Theatre had a big time with a split week of "While the City Sleeps" and "The Magic Flame," the former particularly drawing a grand neighborhood crowd for its second run. The Columbia also played to capacity almost every night, first with a double bill comprising "Cameraman" and "South Sea Love," and for the last half, "Burning Daylight."

The Avalon showed some improvement with "Brotherly Love" for the first three days and "State Street Sadie" during the last half, but this house could do much better.

Legits Cramp Cincy Film Houses

But Managers Say Business OK in Spite of Opposition

CINCINNATI.—Although no grosses are available, Cincinnati exhibitors report that business for the past week was satisfactory, despite the heavy opposition of legitimate theatres, which did a land-office business owing to the nature of their attractions. The "flu" epidemic, although apparently affecting business to a more or less extent, is not making any appreciable inroads on the box-office exchequer.

"The Case of Lena Smith" was up before the public at the Albee, aided and abetted by a corking good vaudeville bill, the engagement getting good money for the week.

The Capitol, with "Mother Machree," with sound, and a good Vitaphone program in addition, maintained a rather steady flow, although business at this house was capable of being improved upon.

"Interference," at the Lyric, with dialogue, a holdover, although enjoying good patronage, did not equal the record of the first week.

The Strand, featuring the sound picture, "On Trial," did a fairly good business, especially considering the fact that the picture played a sister house, the Capitol, only a few weeks previous at the same admission. "Uncle Tom's Cabin," at Keith's, enjoyed unusually good patronage. "A Single Man," at the Palace, with a number of stage acts, attracted a good following. The smaller downtown houses, as also the neighborhoods reported business from fair to good.

"Interference" And "Abie" Lead In Chattanooga

CHATTANOOGA.—"Abie's Irish Rose," at the State, and Paramount's first all-talking unit, headed by "Interference," were given a warm reception by Chattanooga movie patrons the week of January 21.

"Abie's Irish Rose,' at the State, Chattanooga's newest all-talking house, threatened to break the record set by "The Singing Fool" and "Wings," which enjoyed capacity runs at the State the latter part of last year.

At the Tivoli, "Interference" found much favor with Chattanooga audiences the three days of its showing, and drew the largest house of 1929. The Tivoli, as well as the State and Rialto, having been hard hit by the flu epidemic, which only recently has showed signs of abating.

Eddie Cantor and Ruth Etting, the other part of the all-talking at the Tivoli, received a large share of the praise from the papers and patrons. "The Midnight Taxi," the last half of the week, coupled with four acts of Keith vaudeville attracted a slightly larger house for the three days aided by Saturday, which is always a big day for Chattanooga theatres.

At the Rialto theatre a mediocre bill drew slightly below the average attendance. Of the three feature pictures during the week "Man, Woman and Wife"; Spies" and "Clearing the Trail." "Spies" drew the larger crowd.

Buys Price Film Rights

Tony Luchese, of Liberty Film Corp., Philadelphia, last week aequired the rights to "The Bachelors' Club," the Oscar Priec feature film starring Richard Talmadge, and will distribute it in Eastern Pennsylvania, Southern New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland, Distriet of Columbia and Virginia.

Morton Downey and Barbara Bennett were married in St. Patrick's Cathedral Jan. 28. Mr. Downey is a brilliant young tenor and was recently signed by Pathe for a series of talking-singing pictures. Miss Bennett is daughter of Richard Bennett. Many prominent film folk attended the wedding

Ray Appearance Brings $14,500 To Akron House

AKRON.—Despite several nights of unfavorable weather, good business was reported in all houses, with the exception of the Strand, where "Marriage by Contract," suffered heavily.

With Charles Ray in a personal appearance, and "Mother Machree" on the screen, SRO cards appeared at Keith-Albee on Sunday and Tuesday. Capacity audiences at night were reported during his 4-day stay. Business was the best of the new year, passing the average by several thousand when it reached $14,500.

"Red Dance," did well in the Orpheum, gathering a net of $6,200. At the Colonial, "The Awakening," had a prosperous week, seeing $6,800 pass through the box office window. The little Allen, with 550 seats, reported $3,900 for a profitable week.

Loew's Richmond Does $9254 to Head First Runs

(Previous Week)

RICHMOND, VA.—The four leading houses in this city had a good week despite unfavorable weather and a concert by Beniamino Gigli, Metropolitan tenor, who appeared at the City Auditorium Tuesday night. Loew's, playing William Haines, a local boy, in "Alias Jimmy Valentine," beat the previous week when they showed Gilbert and Garbo in "A Woman of Affairs." The house grossed about $9,254, against the house record of $14,700.

The new Byrd Theatre, showing "Scarlet Seas," had a fair week, grossing $3,360. The mark of $5,553, made last week with "Lilac Time," is expected to be a house record.

"The Singing Fool" set a new city record with a run of three weeks, just ended at the Capitol, neighborhood theatre which seats only 600 persons. The first week was the biggest at this box-office, but the last week grossed almost $5,000.

The Colonial presented "Shopworn Angel" and grossed about $4,625; a good week.

Mercury At 15 Below But Fargo Goes to Pictures

FARGO.—"Give and Take," Universal's sound and talker, proved a good earner at the Fargo Theatre here despite a tendency of the mercury to hang in the vicinity of 15 below zero. It led the week in gross receipts per day. "A Lady of Chance" and five Western circuit vaudeville acts at the same theatre the last two days fell below average.

"Outcast" did fair business at the State the opening half of the week, but was beaten by "West of Zanzibar" the last three days. At the Garrick, first and second run house, "The Charge of the Gauchos," playing the opening two days, paid its way, but "Prep and Pep," Wednesday and Thursday, did the best of the week at this house. "The Man in Hobbles," the last two days, also was hit by the extreme cold.

The Princess and the Isis, second run houses, did fair business all week. The Princess had "Gypsy of the North," "Clearing the Trail," and "Fast and Furious." "Wedding Bills" and "The Great Gatsby" were at the Isis.

Memphis Back To Normal After Flu Epidemic

MEMPHIS.—Memphis theatres this week were for the first time reporting themselves as fully recovered from the disastrous box office effects of the flu epidemic that cut down revenues tremendously late in December and in the first two weeks of January.

"Alias Jimmy Valentine" came to Loew's State to approximate its house record for all time. The William Haines-Lionel Barrymore part-talker received an enthusiastic reception all week and played to an estimated total of more than 32,000 admissions.

The new Orpheum played to probably the biggest week since its opening, with the exception of Christmas week, with "Synthetic Sin" as the film.

Other houses did nothing extraordinary, but Loew's Palace and Pantages each were reporting the biggest Mondays and Tuesdays in many weeks, as this week got under way. The Palace had "Interference," Paramount all-talker, which got an early start with favorable reviews in all three newspapers after a Sunday preview.

Pantages had "The Man Who Laughs," Universal special, aided by a contest tie-up with The Evening Appeal that helped its publicity along.

Atlanta Only Fair As Rainy Season Starts

ATLANTA.—Business in Atlanta theatres last week on the whole did not reach expectations, which fact may be attributed partly to the rainy season which seems to have set in.

At the Howard Nancy Carroll and Gary Cooper in "The Shopworn Angel" brought good business, but not as good as this picture is capable of drawing. Keith's Georgia enjoyed a fair week with "The Case of Lena Smith." The Capitol showed "The Trail of '98," which did not prove a panic at the box office.

The Rialto had a losing week with "The Spieler," while the Metropolitan came out in black with "Scarlet Seas." A musical stock company is reigning at the Exchange.

News and Comment on All Phases of "Sound" Pictures

Syracuse Vote Shows 50-50 for Sound and Silents

Questionnaire Distributed Widely Voices Fans' Film Preference

Motion picture fandom of Syracuse is equally divided in its preference for sound and silent pictures. The Syracuse Herald last week circulated a questionnaire extensively to determine just what opinions were with regard to all phases of sound. Nine questions were propounded on the subject and they all required only a "yes" or "no" answer.

The first of the questions was: "Do you prefer talking pictures?" and the result was just a fifty-fifty split. On the other hand there was almost an unanimous response for the retention of the silent pictures if the sound films were retained.

Answering the question: "Do you want silent films eliminated?" only seven per cent voted "yes" and the other ninety-three per cent voted "no."

Orchestra music is slightly in more demand than the synchronized score, fifty-four per cent voting for the orchestra and forty-six per cent for the canned music. The synchronized score, however, won out over the organ accompaniment to the tune of twenty-three per cent to seventy-seven.

Herewith the nine questions presented to fandom at large and their answers:

	YES	NO
1. Do you prefer talking pictures?	50%	50%
2. Do you want silent films eliminated?	7%	93%

E. J. Smith Made Powers Cinephone V.-P.

E. J. SMITH this week began organizing an augumented sales force for Powers Cinephone, assuming for the first time his new duties as vice-president and general manager of the Powers organization. Mr. Smith resigned as general sales manager of Tiffany-Stahl not so long ago and spent the past few weeks vacationing at Palm Beach and Havana.

Previews Show Voices Can Be Doubled

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

"VOICE - DOUBLING" is no longer in the experimental stage and is being done successfully in studios daily. Two pictures shown at previews last week proved that voices can be doubled, and a series of one-reelers being made by James Cruze consists mostly of well known picture names whose voices are doubled with the resonant tones of unknowns.

In the method used by Cruze in his one-reelers, the dialogue is timed and recorded on a disc by the voice used. Then the actor rehearses pantomimically with the record. When the time comes to film the scene, the record is started and at a given signal, the actor moves his lips in synchronization with the record. The "mike" re-records the tones of the record while the camera registers the movements of the lips in correct rhythm.

Censorship Is Not Yet Menace In Canada Towns

"Street Angel" First Film To Suffer Slight Title Deletion

Censorship of talking pictures has not yet become a menace in Canadian cities. So far there has been only an occasional trace of censorship in sound track films of the Movietone type. Sound programs on a permanent basis were introduced at Montreal on September 1 and some cities have yet to hear them, so the newspapers have devoted little editorial space to the subject of dialogue film censorship.

"Street Angel" was the first to suffer a slight deletion. This picture was used as an introductory feature in a dozen different cities across the Dominion. In Ontario the censors deleted one sub-title and a silent title was inserted by the film distributor.

No definite mechanical arrangement in the way of sound projection equipment has yet been made by any of the Provincial censor boards in Canada but the censors have asked for manuscript copies of any dialogue which is not contained in the celluloid sub-titles as they appear on the screen. The script has been scrutinized but there has not yet been any real objection to the talk.

Periscope Aids Operator Using Latest Device

Theatre Manager Arranges Mirrors to Perfect Amplification

A periscope is the latest in the way of theatre equipment to make effective an amplifying device. Such a system was installed by M. J. Corson, manager of Leo Brecker's Olympia Theatre in upper Broadway, New York City.

Mr. Corson overcame a first difficulty in placing a Columbia Kolster disc amplifying system in his house by cutting a doorway in the mezzanine floor wall leading to a space underneath the balcony, where he placed the instrument.

This still left the obstacle of the operator not being able to follow the picture so he cut a sixteen-inch square hole through the ceiling and installed a periscope chute, at the base of which he hung a 24-inch mirror, which reflected the picture from the screen to the top of the periscope. There he also installed a 16-inch mirror directly in front of the operator. The results were highly satisfactory.

All of the pictures used in the Olympia are cued by the orchestra leader from records in his library and the instrument is operated alternately by some member of the orchestra during relief periods. The symphony orchestra of this theatre after playing the overture always plays the cued music of the main picture. The Columbia Kolster instrument is used for short subjects and the second feature.

Sees Sound Reproduced without Mechanics

DR. LEE DE FOREST, inventor of Phonofilm, in an address before the fifth annual motion picture conference of the National Board of Review, predicted that non-mechanical sound reproduction would eventually be accomplished. He said that a way would eventually be discovered to directly transform telephonic current into sound waves without the intervention of anything mechanical.

In the course of his address Dr. De Forest said:

"The ultimate reproducer which will give us the nearest approach to perfection, will involve nothing so clumsy, so inherently imperfect as a diaphragm of any description."

Laemmle Lauds Progress Made In Sound Films

Commends All Who Have Contributed to Work During Past Year

Carl Laemmle, president of Universal Pictures Corporation, is celebrating his twenty-third anniversary in the motion picture industry and he declares the past year has equalled if not exceeded, in picture developments, any other year. Laemmle enthusiastically commends all who have had to do with the injection of sound and dialogue into pictures.

In his statement Mr. Laemmle says in part:

"Marvelous strides have been made in the past few months by motion picture studio experts in grasping the fundamentals of a new production technique for the making of talking films. That these experts, groping in the dark, exploring beyond the frontiers into a new art, have been able to envision thte true contines of the medium and already have mastered its application, I regard as a great tribute to their energy and versatility. No other industry in the history of business has had to accomplish such a complete change over in such a short time. An industry that can do this is vigorous, elastic and unlimited in power and possibilities."

At Univerasl City, since the sound stages and sound recording equipment were installed late last Fall, eight dialogue pictures have been turned out, in addition to the musical synchronization of several pictures, the making of various sound short subjects and numerous voice and sound tests.

"The successive improvement from week to week," continues Mr. Laemmle, "has been an accurate gauge of the rapidity with which Universal's production experts have grasped the fundamentals of the new art and have formulated emergency rules and standards by which to work."

Roach Comedies For M-G-M Being Synchronized

Twenty of the forty Hal Roach comedies included in the short feature releases of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer will be synchronized with music and sound effects. Of these the synchronization has already been completed on sixteen, including Our Gang in "Fast Freight" and Charley Chase in "Thin Twins," the last to be finished. The twenty synchronized comedies will be released in both sound and silent versions.

Whiteman Picture Delayed

On account of personal appearances and concerts under contract production on "The King of Jazz," the sound picture Paul Whiteman and his orchestra is to appear in for Universal, will be delayed until June.

Britons Ban British Locales, U. S. Accent

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 31.—British audiences will not accept American-made talking pictures where stories are laid in England and the players talk with American accent, according to Victor Saville, producer affiliated with British International, and now studying sound picture production in Hollywood.

Saville declares that the British audiences will patronize a good picture with American setting, however, where the players speak with distinct American accent. He pointed out two instances of recent London showings—one with an American story which was very successful, while the other, laid in England, was criticised by both press and public on account of American accents in talking sequences.

Fox Will Try New Sales Plan For Movietone

Jimmie Grainger has worked out a new experiment in sales that will be tried in connection with the sales of Fox Movietone productions. The experiment will take the form of selling a short subject in conjunction with a feature. The idea will be that in the event of the feature being a drama a comedy will be linked with it in the sales scheme. In the event that the feature is a comedy then a short dramatic featurette will be sold with it.

The plan is said to have been evolved after the Eugene Walter written and directed talking short "Friendship" was shipped east to the New York offices. The featurette was found to have such dramatic strength that it was feared to send it out on its own, because it would have overshadowed any feature that it was placed on the bill with. Therefore under the new plan it will first be shown in New York in conjunction with their full length comedy talker, "The Ghost Talks" and the sales force will be instructed to sell the two together.

Tiffany-Stahl To Have 6 Ready During February

Tiffany-Stahl has three talking productions completed and three more will be ready for showing by the end of February. The finished product includes George Jessel's "Lucky Boy," "Molly and Me," starring Belle Bennett, supported by Joe Brown, and "My Lady's Past," starring Belle Bennett. The three nearing completion are "Whispering Winds," starring Eve Southern; "Life," a temporary title, with Ricardo Cortez and Claire Windsor, and a story of the foreign legion not yet named, with Buster Collier, Alma Bennett and Eddie Gribbon.

Six synchronized features and ten on the silent program are ready for showing. In production are the super-special dialogue film "Zeppelin" and "The Miracle," the latter a tentative title.

Wide Variety Of Installations In Iowa Theatres

Sound Interest Runs High With Many Home Made Devices in Use

Des Moines, Jan. 24.—Exhibitors throughout Iowa are showing a marked interest in sound picture installations and they are using a wide variety of apparatus for the amplification of their sound films. With installations hard to get on some of the equipment and beyond the price of many exhibitors at that, the smaller house owner is resorting to his own ingenuity and fixing up an apparatus that will reprodnce the sound or dialogue incidental to the picture.

There are a number of different types of home made apparatus and some of them have already been given the O. K. of local exchange managers. Others are in the process of manufacture and being rushed to the earliest possible completion. Just now there is every type of machine from the crude home made device to the equipment of the Western Electric Company and RCA Photophone. It seems to be the general impression that every house must eventually have some sort of device, so why not get it now.

George Schweneker, of the Garden Theatre of Guthrie Center is a sound enthusiast and has a set of his own which is pretty well perfected. He has not yet attempted to run talking pictures on it, but a number of experts have been impressed with the idea he has worked out.

Wes Mansfield of the Mills Opera House of Tama, is another who has a mechanism of his own and he has already had the invention protected. Mr. Mansfield is only waiting the approval of the device by W. E. Banford, manager of M-G-M before taking on synchronized pictures. He expects to have that shortly.

Steffes to Handle Talk-A-Phone in the Northwest

A deal was closed last week by W. A. Steffes, head of the Northwest T. O. Assoc., whereby he has obtained the exclusive distribution rights for the Talk-A-Phone sound device in Minnesota, N. and S. Dakota. Steffes recently held a demonstration of the equipment at his New Logan Theatre and a number of exhibitors attended.

Steffes also arranged a deal whereby the Northwest T. O. will distribute the No-Nik Safedge Glassware product in Minnesota, and N. and S. Dakota. The plan is to bolster business on poor nights by distributing glassware to lady patrons.

"Donovan Affair" Cast

In the cast of Columbia's all-talkie, "The Donovan Affair," are: William Collier, Jr., Fred Kelsey, Ethel Wales, John Roche. They are supporting leads, Jack Holt and Dorothy Revier.

Nothing Very Hot on Colony Program For Current Week

"Sal of Singapore" Does Not Pull as Expected and Stage Show Light

The second week of the Paul Specht band at the Colony does not measure up to his first week there in entertainment quality. In addition to the band there are three specialties, but one of them registering with the audience. It is possible that the house staff counted too much on the draw of "Sal of Singapore" the Pathe release which is current there this week, and did not build up their show as strongly as they might have. That is a mistake in a week to week change house, for no matter what releasing company's picture is shown the show should be as strong as possible for the money spent. Otherwise the business the following week will reflect the weakness.

The show runs exactly two hours and two minutes opening with "Close Figuring," a Grantland Rice Sportlight, which runs exactly eight minutes. There are three thrills in the little picture which show a casting act in work, following it with a high diver in action and closing with a loop-the-loop by automobile, all three attractions being fair ground sensations.

Specht and his band on next run through twenty-nine minutes of music and specialties opening in one with brass. Three trumpets, trombone and bass horn playing "Sonny Boy" seemingly clicked with the audience and showed that Paul could handle a trumpet as well as the fiddle. "Sweet Music" was the first selection by the full orchestra. Jean Gaynor was introduced as "The Girl with the Golden Voice" and offered two semi-classical numbers the last being "Kiss Me Again" and in both she fell short of the "golden" classification. Another number, "If I Had You" with a vocal chorus by the orchestra and then Jerry Bell in a stepping routine. A hot jazz by the band and then Mabel Albertson. She got some laughs with "Just a Home Girl" and followed this with an unannounced imitation of Gertrude Lawrence singing "I Don't Know." She got away nicely with it. The band finished with "Once in a Lifetime."

A straight International News under the title of the Colony News was next on the bill for eight minutes, with the Oswald Rabbit in "Hen Fruit," a cartoon comedy, finished out the show with seven minutes without any laughs. Feature followed.

Miller and Lyles and "Interference" Head Satisfactory Paramount Bill

An all around good show, topped by Paramount's first all-talker, which was moved from the Criterion where it just finished a long $2 top run right into the Paramount theatre at popular prices, made it look as though that house was in for a good week's business. In addition to the regular revue there was as an added attraction the team of Miller and Lyles, the colored comedians. The whole show running two hours and eleven minutes.

Dave Rubinoff and the men in the pit opened with a seven-minute overture devoted to American Composers, and did very nicely with it. This was followed by a brief news shot of a minute and then Jesse Crawford took the organ in hand. He had the next seven minutes of the bill and played "I'll Get By" and "Me and the Man in the Moon," the latter number getting over with the audience to the best result.

The revue was a Paul Oscard production entitled "Southern Belles," which opened with a levee scene in one with The Dictators, a quartet of singing boys running through a series of Southern melodies, after which in full stage the front of an old colonial mansion of the southland was shown with the orchestra in the foreground. The chorus on here for their first number worked on their toes.

Miller and Lyles contributed a comedy cross-fire talk that brought laugh after laugh and the colored entertainers were forced to encore. The quartet were back again with "Don't Keep Me in the Dark Bright Eyes," making way for a very pretty ensemble dance number with the girls as southern belles.

The Three Ormond Sisters really walked away with the hit of the show, first doing the March of the Wooden Soldiers with a lot of interpolated comedy and finally coming through with a harmony arrangement of "My Black Birds Are Blue Birds Now," which left the audience asking for more.

For a finish the entire company in a fast cakewalk formation pulled down a solid hit.

Earlier in the revue Eddie Mathews, as a Confederate vet, did a one man Zouave gun drill that got him a hand, but it was in the cakewalk with his stepping and cane twirling that he really shone.

First Showings of Texas Guinan Film in March

Sam E. Morris, vice-president and general manager of production for Warner Bros. announces March 16 as the pre-release date of Texas Guinan's "Queen of the Night Clubs." It will be available on that date for houses with Vitaphone equipment. Bryan Foy directed and in the supporting cast are, Lila Lee, Jack Norworth, Eddie Foy, Jr., John Miljan and Arthur Housman.

Bancroft Pulls Capacity Business In Rialto Talkie

George Bancroft in his first all-talking picture, "The Wolf of Wall Street," hit Broadway at the Rialto last Saturday and has been doing the biggest business of the street as far as the newly arrived films are concerned. It looks as though he will register between $40,000 and $50,000 for his first week and means that he will outdraw Jannings at the Rivoli at almost a two to one ratio.

There is enough show around the Bancroft picture that even were it not as strong as it is it should do business. The program as laid out runs a little over two hours. There is a brief overture that runs into a Tiffany-Stahl color symphony of Hawaii, the two combined running ten minutes.

A Kinogram Newsreel furnished the news events that ran exactly five minutes, and this was followed by a Paramount short of Ruth Etting doing two popular songs. These were a little flat in recording and ran about five minutes.

"The Melancholy Dame," a Christie talking comedy with an all-colored cast, seemed just a little lengthy. It runs twenty minutes but it could have been snapped up a little. The typical colored dialogue clicked for laughs with the Broadway audience. Evelyn Preer, who heads the cast, looks like a real find for the talkers.

Bancroft, in "The Wolf of Wall Street," finished the bill with a running time of about an hour and twenty minutes, bringing the show right under the dot for a two-hour program.

M-G-M Talkie Opens at Astor On February 8

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's first all-talking picture, "The Broadway Melody," is scheduled to open at the Astor Theatre in New York City Friday evening, February 8. Bessie Love and Charles King were signed to long-term contracts largely because of their work in this feature.

The story was written for the picture especially by Edmund Goulding. Harry Beaumont directed and Sarah Y. Mason wrote the continuity. The music is by Nacio Herb Brown and the lyrics by Arthur Freed. Norman Houston and James Gleason wrote the dialogue.

Lauste Developing New Type Reproducer

EUGENE A. LAUSTE who has been responsible for a number of sound-on-film inventions, says he will shortly have a reproducing device which will transform electrical impulses into sound waves without the use of a diaphragm or other mechanical means.

Mr. Lauste has his laboratory at Bloomfield, N. J., and he says the new amplifying system is the result of research and experiments begun more than fifteen years ago.

Mr. and Mrs. George Quigley are photographed just before they left for a short vacation to sunny Bermuda. Mr. Quigley is vice-president of the Vitaphone Corp.

Installations Of Phonofilm In Three Houses

General Talking Pictures Corporation reports several installations of De Forest Phonofilm. The Forum Theatre of the Consolidated Amusements Company chain at 138th Street and Brook Avenue in New York City opened with the equipment on January 28.

The Majestic at Eldorado, Arkansas, also opened with Phonofilm on the 28th, as did the Thurston at Rochester, New York. The first showings at Rochester were attended by a number of exhibitors from the surrounding territory as this is the first of the Phonofilms to be installed in up-state New York.

Producers of Talkies Need Originals, Says Montagne

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

Hollywood, Jan. 24.—Producers will have to look to original story writers for material for talking pictures, according to Edward J. Montagne, Universal scenario head who just returned from New York. Montagne was accompanied by Curtis Benton, who went with him to testify for Universal in their defense of Anne Nichols' suit.

"The current successful stage plays are almost nil," said Montagne. "Moreover, those embodying a semblance of an idea that would lend itself to the screen are being held for exorbitant prices."

Deserts Exhibiting Field For the Insurance Business

Sol Raives, president of the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce in New York, has turned his back on the motion picture business and gone into insurance. He has opened an agency for the Equitable Life Assurance Society. He has spent about ten years in the exhibiting field in New York, at one time having three neighborhood houses.

During his motion picture activities he was one of the foremost advocates of the Arbitration Board and as such won many honors.

Jannings Bill At the Rivoli Holds Interest

Emil Jannings in "The Sins of the Fathers" is the headline feature of the new Rivoli show which opened Saturday. Surrounding him is a very entertaining bill that has a vocalist, a talking short, overture and news with a color fashion review.

The overture is brief, lasts but a minute, and leading directly into the newsreel which opens with three minutes of M-G-M newsreel subjects and then switches to the Fashion News in color for two minutes, after which another M-G-M shot and one from the Paramount News follow, the whole running seven minutes.

Miss Stella Power, a coloratura soprano, makes her appearance in the orchestra pit for two numbers of four minutes duration. The singing in the pit is a mistake for she is too close to the audience to permit of them getting the full value of her voice and, in addition, the orchestra so close to her makes it difficult for her to sing over them.

"A Bird in the Hand," a Christie talking comedy, follows for the next nineteen minutes and got a lot of laughs from the house. It had a cast that was worthy of a feature and, although shot in one set, it held the audience.

"The Sins of the Fathers" ran an hour and twenty-nine minutes, which finished the program in two hours and twenty minutes.

Stars Will Attend Ball of the Paramount Pep Club

Richard Dix, Nancy Carroll and other screen stars will attend the annual motion picture ball of the Paramount Pep Club to be held at the Hotel Astor on Saturday, February 9. The affair will be the eighth annual event of the Club, composed of employees of the Paramount Famous Lasky Corp. and Publix Theatres. James R. Cowan, Astor studio production manager, and Jack Parkington, a Publix production head, are arranging the program. Paul Ash will be master of ceremonies; dance music will be furnished by Roger Wolfe Kahn and his Society Serenaders.

New Sono-Art Title

"Sleepy Valley" is the title of the first feature-length Sono-Art talking production formerly called "Broadway Bound." The change is deemed more suitable because of changes in the script of the original written by Eddie Dowling, who is starring.

Powers Cinephone Recorder is Heard

THE Powers Cinephone Sound Recorder played a part in the presentation of the new play, "The Street Scene," at the Playhouse, New York, this week, where the machine contributed the noises and every varying hum of a big city which is the background of this play dealing with city life. The actual noises were recorded for the play on the Powers Cinephone Recording system by the Earl W. Jones Research Laboratories.

Talkies Cause More Temperament

Stars Get Bad Case of Nerves Between Sequences

(Hollywood Bureou, Motion Picture News)

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 31.—Talking pictures have increased temperament in screen players on sets. This is contrary to a common belief that dialogue pictures have succeeded in abolishing to a great extent temperamental displays from actors. The belief is based on the thought that screen actors, no longer certain of their status with the invasion of legitimate players, would tone down their behavior, when under stress of emotion.

Curiously enough, the major cause for increased temperament is not wilfulness on the part of most screen players, but purely a psychological one. Prior to the beginning of a dialogue sequence, the actors, plus everyone else on the set, must go through one of the most nerve-wrecking processes known. This is the brief period between the time the words "Silence!" and "Interlock!" are yelled.

"Silence!" is the cue for everyone present to stop all action and speaking. A minute or so elapses before "Interlock," which is the cue for acting and dialogue to start. Every person, particularly the players, is at extreme nervous tension. Every muscle and nerve is taught. Hence, oftimes a player will anticipate the cue of "Interlock" and start action before. Some female players have been known to break down completely in this brief period.

Aside from the psychological angles, of which there are many, there are new tricks of temperament brought to studios by people from the legitimate theatres. Since no definite manner of clocking laughs or for timing lines has been found as yet, legitimate players are constantly worried lest the value of their lines be lost in projection. Hence accusations of "stepping on laughs," "not waiting for the cue" and not allowing proper time between lines, are becoming more frequent. Such remarks, at first meaningless to those players with only screen experience, have since been adopted by them. The fact that they occasionally use them wrongly, means nothing. It sounds effective.

"Shanghai Rose" Completed

Irene Rich has completed her independent for Trem Carr, called "Shanghai Rose." She goes to Fox for one, title not set yet.

Wampas Refuses Raise; Back at Old Stand

(Hollywood Bureou, Motion Picture News)

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 31.—The Wampas have left the Roosevelt Hotel as their meeting place and are now in the Breakfast Club. The new management jacked up the price of their dinners from $1.50 to $3.00 per head, and the press agents refused to take the raise.

The odd part of it is that originally the Wampas refused to come to the Roosevelt, although invited, because the hotel had a non-Wampas press agent. When Ham Beall took over the publicity, the organization moved into the Roosevelt. Now, with the price doubled, they've gone back to their former meeting place.

Sound "Mixers" Rate Credits

Film title credits for "sound mixers" on Movietone shorts and features are being given on all Fox sound pictures. This company is the first to give title rating to the man who is responsible for the "shooting" of the sound for a picture.

Takes New Moniker

Pathe has decided to change the screen name of Violet Adams, recently placed under term contract by that company, to Marilyn Morgan.

Baldwin Titling "Broadway Melody"

Earl Baldwin is writing the titles for silent version of "Broadway Melody," M-G-M's musical comedy Movietone production.

Must Have Their Snow

Needing a railroad location with plenty of snow for sequences in "High Voltage," Pathe is forced to send the William Boyd-Howard Higgin company to the state of Washington.

Judel Leaves Fox

Charles Judel, who put on Shubert shows in the East for nearly ten years, and recently under contract to Fox for Movietone work, left the latter organization when option on his contract was not renewed after six months' period.

Nigh, Chaney and Rail' Meller

William Nigh will direct Lon Chaney in a railroad melodrama for M-G-M. Original story has just been completed by Byron Morgan.

"Woman Who Needed Killing"

Among the players assigned roles in Baclanova's starring vehicle for Paramount, "The Woman Who Needed Killing," are Leslie Fenton, Snitz Edwards, Clyde Cook. Rowland V. Lee is now directing. She figures in the fortunes of several white men on duty in a village in the depths of Africa.

"The Wild Party"

In the cast of Paramount's new Clara Bow film, "The Wild Party," are Adrienne Dore, Kay Bryant, both newcomers; Jean Lorraine, Renee Whitney. All of them are flapper starlets and they will be seen, with four other young ladies, in the role of Clara's eight jazz friends.

Signed to Paramount Contracts

Lawford Davidson, English stage actor on the screen for several years, Warner Oland, one of the screen's veterans, Adrienne Dore, a newcomer, and David Newell, a new juvenile leading man, have all been signed to new Paramount contracts.

"The Man I Love"

The title of a popular song of the day will decorate an all-talking drama of the prize ring in which Paramount is co-starring Richard Arlen and Mary Brian. The story is adapted from a play by Herman Mankiewicz and will be directed by William Wellman. Pat O'Malley and Roscoe Karns are recent additions to the cast.

Emil Jannings

Emil Jannings' new Paramount picture, a story laid in the Alps, will have the title of "The Betrayal." Bodil Rosing is a recent addition to the cast. The Swiss Alps scenes were made at Lake Tahoe. The Teuton star's next film will be "The Concert," the play by Hermann Bahr. Florence Vidor will be featured. Ludwig Berger will direct the new picture.

Change in Cast

Esther Ralston will be co-starred with Gary Cooper in "Black Eagles," instead of Fay Wray. The story is adapted from Jacob Wasserman's "Golowin," a tale of the Red Revolt. William Powell and Wallace Beery have roles.

Columbia's Talkie Program

With "The Lone Wolf's Daughter" and "The Younger Generation" completed, except for a bit of editing and titling, Columbia has launched "The Donovan Affair." All of these vehicles are talkies.

Dotty Jottings

By Jerry Hoffman

HOLLYWOOD has been compared to an over-sized family in many ways . . . but there is one in which it resembles a group of blood-relatives than any other phase. . . . that it bands together firmly against outside attacks or kidding . . . but will say the most cutting or witty things of itself . . . however no laughs are forthcoming unless a genuine Hollywoodite is responsible for the wise-crack . . . for instance the fire at the Paramount studio brought forth a series of gags . . . which would cause hissing to be directed at any outsider had he dared pull them. . . .

IT was Harrison Carroll in The Evening Herald who stated naively that the fire "was the greatest piece of entertainment turned out by Paramount in five years" . . . another local gagster, on reading that Paramount intends to rebuild its sound stages immediately, sighed audibly with "Can you imagine getting a heaven-sent break like that and not taking advantage of it?" . . . and as the cracks passed about Jack Warner and Harry Rapf rushing over to the scene of the fire . . . those can be best left to the imagination. . . .

SOMETHING that should mean something . . . is that Paul Fejos is using a stop-watch in filming scenes of "Broadway" in order to determine the running time of the scene when projected. . . . this should aid in eliminating the photographing of superfluous footage. . . . it should also do lots of other things . . . mainly wear out one good stop-watch. . . .

GUINN WILLIAMS, who would answer to the name of "Big Boy" when he rode a horse in pictures for a living . . . now wants it known that his name is spelt Guinn and not "Gwynn" . . . and one with a penchant for terrible puns might want to say, "Aw G'wan" . . . but what's the use? . . .

EDMUND BREESE is appearing in a Hollywood theatre in "So This Is London" and jumping to the Warner Studio for scenes in "The Hottentot" . . . in the same cast Edward Everett Horton leaps from the studio to his own theatre for "The Swan" . . . J. Boyce-Smith has been elected president of the Columbia University Alumni of Los Angeles . . . rah! rah! rah! . . . Scott Darling has received his third offer from the Trafalgar Film Co., Ltd., to come over and write . . . they'll get 'im yet. . . . Raymond Schrock returned from New York.

TOP this blurb from Paramount . . . I dare you . . . the color of a girl's wig makes a difference in the sound of her voice as recorded . . . the "ga-ga" states unblushingly that some one tried it with a blonde, brunette and red wig . . . and that the red wig gave her the best voice . . . pity a bald-headed actor . . . and another one says that the cracking of a dancer's joints were recorded . . . which should be why copy-readers on newspapers wind up in the bug-house. . . .

The Canary Murder Case

Sound Version

(Reviewed by Jerry Hoffman)

THE dialogue adaptation of S. S. Van Dine's famous mystery story is not a critic's picture. Its chances for good notices are about two in ten. This percentage is given following a conversation with as many reviewers in the lobby of the theatre where previewed. The fact remains that it provides good entertainment, holds up interest and will please audiences.

Paramount has made several changes in its adaptation of the Van Dine story, but evidently these were made with Van Dine's sanction or by him, since he is credited with the dialogue. It is rather a difficult treatment for screen fan appeal, since the customary romance and youth angles are neglected in favor of the mystery and the manner in which Philo Vance solves it. William Powell plays Vance and gives him just the sort of characterization readers of the book would imagine. Jimmy Hall plays the role of Spottswoode's son, this juvenile character being injected into the screen treatment. Also his sweetheart, with Jean Arthur in this role, is an additional part.

One wishes there was more of Ned Sparks as Tony Skeel, for Sparks gets what few laughs the picture offers, aside from those in which Oscar Smith, Paramount's colored bootblack, who acts between shines, figures. Louise Brooks, Charles Lande, Lawrence Grant, Louis John Bartels, Gustav Von Seyffertitz, Capt. E. H. Calvert and Eugene Pallette round out the remainder of principals, all very well cast.

Personally, I think the picture is weak. In fairness to Paramount, however, I do believe the audience liked it. The dialogue is clear and well written.

Drawing Power: On the strength of the sales of the book, the title is the valuable part of the picture. William Powell, since "Interference" is worth something. For exploitation play up the mystery.

THEME: A gold-digger is killed for blackmailing the son of a wealthy aristocrat to save the family name. She has made a business of blackmail and anyone of five may have committed the crime. How Philo Vance, master psychologist solves the mystery made and interesting story in book form. Some of this interest is maintained in the picture.

Weary River

Barthelmess Talks and Sings

(Reviewed by Freddie Schader)

THERE once was a piano player by the name of Snodgrass in a western jail who made a hit over the radio and on his release went into vaudeville. That is the theme of the latest Richard Barthelmess picture "Weary River." It is an underworld story, but one that is certain to appeal to the women and pull heavily at the box office. It isn't a great picture but it is built for money and it will get that. It is a talker and in addition carries a synchronized score and sound effects. The star not only talks but sings, and the "Weary River" song which gives the picture its title is a natural for a hit.

Barthelmess plays a gang leader in the bootlegging racket. A rival gang invades his territory and there is a shooting and although he was not on the scene Barthelmess is identified as one of the shooters, arrested, tried, convicted and sent to the big house. Here he enters as a "tough" prisoner but he is soon cleared of this and finally, through the kind hearted warden finds his vocation and organizes a prisoners' orchestra. The band finally gets "on the air" and the leader is given an opportunity to sing his own composition. It's a hit with the listeners of radioland and as the tune goes over the country the demand for the pardon of the musician becomes so insistent that the Governor finally turns him loose.

He is immediately booked for vaudeville but he flops as an act, his succeeding attempts to go straight all end in his being identified as an ex-convict, so that he finally returns to his old gang, and his old girl. The latter is genuinely in love with him and when she learns that he is returning to the racket, she appeals to the warden who arrives on the scene just in time to prevent the boy from being mixed in another shooting affray.

Betty Compson has the role of the girl and handles it very well indeed, but Barthelmess carries the picture. William Holden as the warden also contributes a fine talking performance.

Drawing Power: Play it for the women, tell them they'll go wild about Dick in his first talking picture and stress the fact that he sings and very well too.

Produced and distributed by First National. A Vitaphone picture. Length: Synchronized, 7,916 feet; Silent, 7,565 feet. Running time sound version an hour and 26 minutes. Released Feb. 10, 1929. Story by Courteney Ryley Cooper, adapted by Bradley King. Directed by Frank Lloyd.

The Wolf of Wall Street

Great B. O. Film With Bancroft Corking

(Reviewed by Freddie Schader)

GEORGE BANCROFT stands revealed in this picture as one of the really outstanding dynamic personalities of the screen either silent or talking. As a matter of fact, in this picture he uncovered a voice that is one of the best that has been heard in screen recording. Those who knew Bancroft prior to his screen debut never had a doubt but that he would come through with colors flying when he got his chance at a talking production and he more than justifies their faith in him.

With it all "The Wolf of Wall Street" is a whale of a picture, one that will outdraw Jannings at the box office for the length of time that it plays in opposition to "The Sins of the Fathers" on Broadway.

Story value is not very high in "The Wolf of Wall Street." A far better tale could have been written with just a little research in the newspaper files on the real wolf. But with Bancroft on the screen the story goes along like wildfire. Baclanova, who plays the wolf's wife, struts a brand of sex that will get the boys and girls everywhere. She has a playful little habit of biting the lobe of one's ear when she wants to express her affection. Paul Lukas as the heavy manages to turn out a brand of performance that is going to find him a place on the screen for a long, long time.

To get a real idea of the force of the Bancroft personality one has only to watch his scenes and then see the change of pace that there is when Nancy Carroll and Arthur Rankin plays a scene, and they both are experienced stage players.

The handling of Baclanova in this picture is clever. She is a Russian, therefore she has an accent, so they simply make her a Russian who came to America within the last five years as an acrobat and was wooed and wed by the wolf. She displays in addition to that wellknown S. A. a really charming voice in two numbers that are part of the picture.

Drawing Power: With the whole country stock market crazy this one is a leadpipe cinch. Bancroft will live up to all the billing you want to do, and you might just as well bill the rest of the cast for as a talkie it is as good as anything that has come along. Paramount also has a silent version that is said to be good.

Produced and distributed by Paramount Famous Lasky. Length: Sound version, 6,810 feet; Silent 6,396. Running time, sound version, an hour and eighteen minutes. Released February 16, 1929. Story and adaptation by Doris Anderson. Directed by Rowland V. Lee.

Lady of the Pavements

Exceptionally Fine B. O. Value

(Reviewed by Jerry Hoffman)

LUPE VALEZ emerges from a composite of several personalities to just Lupe Valez, a star and trouper in her own right, as a result of "Lady of the Pavements." The well-known "odions comparisons," heretofore made with Lupe and Dolores Del Rio, Racquel Torres, Norma Talmadge and others, can't be used any more. She is Lupe Valez—actress. And a fine one.

However, that isn't the only equation D. W. Griffith has to boast about with his "Lady of the Pavements," most recently made by him for United Artists. In addition he has the best box-office production he has turned out in many years, and not only that, but the best one United Artists have had to offer without any "sooper-sooper" star in an equally long time.

At the United Artists' Theatre, Los Angeles, where it was reviewed, and where people used to go to avoid crowds, it is packing 'em in. For the first time in months, there's a line formed at the box-office

"Lady of the Pavements" has many flaws technically. The sound equipment at the house didn't help it any too much. And the picture itself, with costumes supposedly of a Napoleonic period permitting William Boyd to wear a nifty 1930 model yachting outfit, can be criticized. The fact still remains, that in point of flawless story and dramatic direction, D. W. may not be the old "Mawster," but he's mastered S.R.O. What else matters?

Jetta Goudal, George Fawcett and Albert Conti are the other principals. Goudal gives a splendid performance and is thoroughly beautiful in an unsympathetic character. Fawcett and Conti uphold the standard set by the others, and its a tough standard of acting to live up to.

"Lady of the Pavements," is a girl brought into court from a Parisian dive by a Countess, to humiliate a former lover who has washed up his affair with her. He has told her, with sufficient provocation, that he would rather marry a woman of the streets than her. The Countess sets about making him live up to the statement. The girl is given a convent background, taught to act like a lady and framed to make the man fall in love. In so doing, she falls in love with him.

There's no need of going into plot detail. "Lady of the Pavements" happens to be one picture which is excellently told and beautifully acted. And Lupe Valez cuts loose with comedy as well as dramatic emotion which makes audiences sit up.

Drawing Power: Anywhere. Not only Griffith's name, but the fact that he makes good. It'll send them out talking and sending in more.

THEME: The woman who determines to avenge herself on the man, by making him fall in love and marry, a "lady of the pavements."

Produced by D. W. Griffith and distributed by United Artists. Directed by D. W. Griffith. Story by Karl Voelmeeller. Scenario by Sam Taylor. Footage, sound version, about 8,100. Released, Jan. 23, 1929.

The Bellamy Trial

Guilty of Making a Fair Talkie

(Reviewed by Freddie Schader)

NOW don't get this confused and think that Madge Bellamy is on trial. She isn't because she has left Fox. This is another Bellamy trial altogether. It was made by M-G-M and it's a talkie. And what a talkie. Just talk, talk, talk and then some more talk. The net result is a talkie that is fair, but has too much talk and not enough action. Monta Bell is responsible for that and the reason is that he took for his form in making it the one that was devised by Edmund Goulding a long, long time ago. Maybe "The Bellamy Trial" was made long ago, that is ahead of "Alias Jimmy Valentine," for the latter picture which was released before the "Trial" has much better form. But the chances are that with the craze on the part of audiences to go to see and hear talkers regardless, this one will do fairly well at the box office.

The management makes the request of the audiences not to divulge the solution of this murder mystery. We won't. Go and see it for yourself and suffer.

At any rate, Mimi Bellamy, played by Margaret Livingston, was murdered. Her husband, together with Sue Ives (Leatrice Joy) are suspected of the crime and are on trial for the deed. The whole action takes place in the court room, except when those on the stand are relating their movements on the night the crime was committed. Then while the voice of the witness continues the action is shown, but those sitting in the audience are not following the picture, they are listening to the words being uttered and are still sitting in the court room. That at least seemed to be the general audience reaction. Finally the jury brings in the verdict of "Not Guilty" and the audience is relieved, but there still remains the little item of solving the mystery. In the book it was accomplished through the medium of a letter to the Judge trying the case. In the picture one sees who committed the crime making a confession to the Judge, with His Honor at the end pretending that he was asleep and didn't hear a word of it. Then you sitting in front feeling all the while that the dead woman got what was coming to her get up and walk out of the theatre saying, "Well, what of it?"

Leatrice Joy gives a good performance, but little Betty Bronson and Edward Nugent sitting in the newspaper section at the trial take the honors away. Everyone was hoping that here was really something that was going to develop between these two as the picture went along. The more the pity that it didn't.

Drawing Power: Just tell 'em it's a talker, that seems to be enough these days.

Spite Marriage

Keaton's Best in Several Years

(Reviewed by Walter R. Greene)

METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER used wise judgment in teaming up Buster Keaton with Edward Sedgwick. The latter is one of the most consistent "money directors" on the coast, and has a keen sense of what comedy values the public will buy. "Spite Marriage" is perhaps the best comedy that Keaton has turned out since he graduated from the two reel ranks. The film, unlike most comedies, has more than a semblance of story background; and is believable, even though it roams around considerably.

The picture is packed with laughs, with one sequence particularly that creates a continual roar for over half a reel. By the way, it is one of the best pieces of comedy business ever developed in a picture, and will be ranked with Chaplin's "overhanging house" stunt in "The Gold Rush." In this sequence, Keaton attempts to put his inebriated wife to bed. Explanation is impossible, except to say that the entire sequence is one continuous roar.

In starting, the picture plants Keaton as a pants presser who falls in love with the star of a legitimate show. He attends every performance of the drama—in a front row seat. Finally Keaton gets back stage, and takes the place of a super. It looks as though the picture will develop into one of those grand old Sennett two reelers, but it quickly veers when the star is spurned by her leading man. For spite, she turns to Keaton and says she will marry him. After the ceremony she imbibes too freely of champagne at a cafe with Buster and Keaton finally carries her out. Then the roar sequence of the newlywed putting his wife to bed. Later, finding that his wife only married him for spite, Keaton leaves, turning up as a sailor on a rum-runner's boat. From there he transfers to a yacht, and finds his wife and the stage troupe aboard. A fire breaks out, and all hands abandon the boat, with the exception of Keaton and his wife. The rum-runners come along and take charge—Keaton saves his wife from attack; succeeds in capturing the outlaw crew, and takes them back to port. Then the final clinch with the wife realizing her love for her "spite" husband.

Dorothy Sebastian is outstanding as the stage star. She is entitled to great credit for her work in the bedroom sequence, for she surely had to act even though Buster was pushing her all over the plac

Drawing Power: If Keaton has been slipping as a draw, this will help re-establish him in any house. There is an abundance of audience comedy, and the picture should not fail to go over most satisfactorily anywhere.

THEME: Stage star marries "sap" admirer for spite, finally falling in love with him.

Sins of the Fathers

You Can Visit Them on Your Audiences

(Reviewed by Freddie Schader)

FROM waiter to saloon keeper, to bootlegger, then a Federal convict and back to waiter again is the story of Emil Jannings in his latest. But it is a picture that both you and your audiences will like, for even though the German star goes through the usual series of grief stricken moments a la "The Way of All Flesh" he does manage to come under the wire at the finish for a happy ending. At least as happy as any ending can be that brings about the blindness of an only son. But it is grippingly told in picture form due to the masterful performance of the star and the admirable direction of Ludwig Berger.

In addition to Jannings there are two really remarkable performanees in the picture. Ruth Chatterton and Barry Norton are responsible for them. Miss Chatterton is going to be a surprise to a great many of her friends.

Jannings has the role of a German emigrant who is a waiter and later develops into a beer stube proprietor in a German seetion of the town. He is making a good living up to the time prohibition comes along and then on the adviee of his bartender they start bootlegging, running stuff in from the boats and finally opening a bottling plant of their own. His first wife has died, he has married a vamp who in reality is the bartender's sweetie, and she is the cause of his turning his daughter out of doors. His son, who is his pride and joy is away at college, while the father is amassing wealth by selling booze, and as the Government tightens the ring on alky, the partner starts using wood alcohol whieh results in poisoning hundreds all over the eity, the boot's own boy on his first night home after graduating, also falling a victim to the stuff and going blind.

At that stage of the game the eops break into the plant and the souree of the poison is discovered with the result that the old man is sent to the Federal pen, while the wife and the ex-bartender sweetie flee with the bankroll. The blind boy is taken in hand by his sister and her husband who has developed into a successful business man. When the old man is released from jail he returns to waiting tables and gets a job in a summer amusement park where his family walk in on him and a reconeiliation is effected.

There is lots of aetion, sex and a moral in the picture. It's a great argument against drinking the bottled poison that is being sold these days.

Drawing Power: Jannings' by all means and the faet that he is in a picture with a happy ending. Don't forget Ruth Chatterton because of her stage record and Barry Norton who was "Mother's Boy" in "What Price Glory," and the lead in "Mother Knows Best."

Produced and distributed by Paramount-Famous-Lasky. Length, 7,761 feet. Running time, an hour and twenty-eight minutes. Released, Dec. 29, 1928. Story by Norman Burnstine. Adapted by E. Lloyd Sheldon. Directed by Ludwig Berger.

Redskin

Bang! And Another Redskin Bit the Dust

(Reviewed by Freddie Schader)

ON the same battlefield at the corner of 44th Street and Broadway where he met defeat as an Indian in "The Vanishing American" a couple of years ago, Richard Dix again comes a cropper in "Redskin." He hasn't had a real picture since he made "Knockout Reilly" in the Eastern studios, and now after almost two years of duds to top it by this one, is almost too much. If it wasn't for the faet that they have some great Technicolor shots in "Redskin" they could leave it on the shelf for all the good that it is going to do at the box offiee. It opened last week at the Criterion for a run at $2 top. If it manages to stay four weeks it will be a wonder.

As far as story goes, it is just the same old tale all over again. An Indian youth, son of a chief, is torn from his people and compelled to go to the white man's school. Then after he has finished school he is neither white nor an Indian. But in the school he has met an Indian maid. They grow up together and although she is of a tribe that is opposed to his own he loves her, and in the end he manages to marry her for the happy ending, but not before he manages to discover oil, in the kind of soil where there never was any oil before. Then he turns out to be the champ of champs as a marathon runner for he beats a Ford in a cross country race to file his claim in the land offiee. The writer evidently forgot that whites cannot prospect on reservations. But a little thing like that is overlooked in pictures.

Drawing Power: The scenic beauties of Utah in natural colors is about all that there is that you can offer your public.

Produced and distributed by Paramount-Famous-Lasky. Silent length, 7,402 feet; Sound, 7,643 feet. Released, Feb. 9, 1929. Story and adaptation by Elizabeth Pickett. Directed by Victor Schertzinger.

Watch It Click

THE other day, at the RCA projection room, Educational showed two dialogue comedies — "The Eligible Mr. Bangs" and "The Bride's Relations."

The first is a smart society comedy with excellent lines, giving Edward Everett Horton, in particular, a chance to shine. It should go well.

The other, "The Bride's Relations," produced by Mack Sennett, is a knockout. The best talking short we have seen. Shown in a cold projection room, it "got" the reviewers, and brought plenty of laughs. Watch it click in the theatres. A "natural," if there ever was one.

The Pagan

A Keystone with a South Sea Setting

(Reviewed by Jerry Hoffman)

N reply to adverse eritieism on this latest Ramon Novarro vehicle, M-G-M undoubtedly point to the number of laughs they clocked at the preview where it was revised. In this instance, it was the Westlake Theatre, Los Angeles. All of whieh is well and good if they intend to make a combined Longdon-Chaplin-Laurel-Hardy out of the screen's most romantic figures.

With "Searamouche" and "Ben Hur," M-G-M had an opportunity to build one of the best box-office attractions in the industry in Ramon Novarro. They had exploited Novarro as what he is off the sereen. A dreamer, with lofty thoughts, beautiful ideals, and at the same time one of the few individuals in his end of the profession with an unusual amount of common sense. Readers of sueh publicity don't want to see their dreamer of beautiful things playing slapstick.

There was an opportunity for an exceptionally fine story worthy of Novarro in "The Pagan." Evidently W. S. Van Dyke, who gave us "White Shadows of the South Seas," couldn't repeat, and seemed to be at a loss in handling this story.

Undoubtedly "The Pagan" will be greatly enhanced by sound, as this preview was in silent form. There are certain sequences whieh call for singing by Novarro, who is reputed to have a beautiful voiee. In fairness to Novarro, it must be said that he gives a splendid performance as the half-caste Polynesian who wants neither money nor land, nor anything material, but just to be let alone and be happy. Little Dorothy Janis shows great possibility for future dramatie roles despite the evidently poor direction she has been given and the oeeasional spots of poor photography. The girl is sweet to look at and displays more than average ability. Donald Crisp and Renee Adoree almost suceeed in running off with all acting honors, mainly because their roles have more meat than the juvenile and ingenue eharaeters.

Drawing Power: The equation of Novarro's name will undoubtedly pull people in. There is also plenty of entertainment even if it is slapstick eomedy.

Produced and distributed by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Silent footage, 7,000 feet, approximately. Directed by W. S. Van Dyke. Story by John Russell. Scenario by Dorothy Farnum.

"Wooden Money"

(Pathe—One Reel)

THIS is a very humorous Aesop Film Fable comic, that has been cleverly animated. The cartoonist pens Milt Mouse and his sweetie riding through one part of Fableville, while old man Alfalfa in another section of town is having considerable trouble with his household.

Al's abode is overrun with mischievous mice, and a gang of cats just about make life unbearable for him. He decides to sell the place, and two brothers buy it. Al runs away with the bag they have given him supposed to contain money. Opening the bag miles away, the farmer discovers it full of mice. He jumps into the lake, comes through the faucet in his own kitchen, and with the endless string of mice still trailing him, chases the two brothers over the hill.—GEORGE J. REDDY.

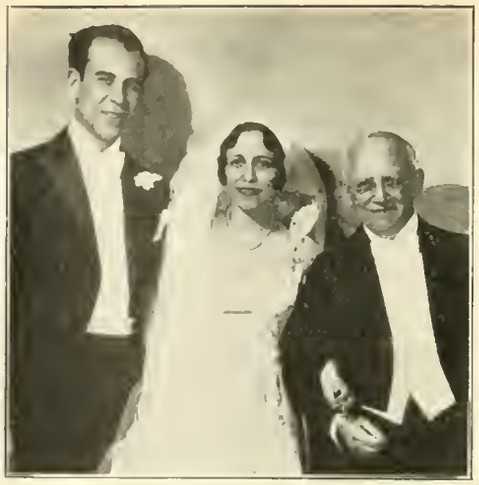
"Circus Time"
(Pathe—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by George J. Reddy)

ON reviewing the latest release of Amadee J. Van Buren's "Smitty and His Pals" series, the writer is sorry to say that it does not perch on the same level as its predecessors. This film will unquestionably set the kids into an uproar, but it lacks the appeal that others in the series have carried for both juvenile and adult audiences. Mention is made in particular of the titles in this number, which in most cases, are too sophisticated for the surrounding kid atmosphere.

"Circus Time," takes Smitty and his pals to the "big top" grounds. Smitty's girl friend, Vera, wants to see the show, but Smitty and money are distant friends, so Vera leaves him flat and enters with his rival. All aboil, Smitty decides to stage his own show in the backyard and draws a big audience. Then in the midst of the performance, a real lion, escaped from the circus, runs into Smitty's "lion cage." Unknowingly he puts Leo through trick paces, while all the kids scurry from the scene. When the circus manager finds the lion safe in Smitty's cage, he rewards him with a couple of banknotes, and then Vera decides that there is only one real boy friend after all. Billy Bevan, is guest star in this comic, and gets across some fun in the role of a cop. Donald Heines is Smitty, Jackie Coombs is Herbie and Betty Jane Graham is Vera.

"Players at Play"
(Pathe—One Reel)

"PLAYERS AT PLAY," is a Grantland Rice "Sportlight" subject, showing that leading players of the motion picture screen find it necessary to indulge in athletic sports between scenes at the studios, in order to keep in the pink of condition and form.



Among the prominent picture folk appearing in this reel produced by the Van Buren Corporation are: Louise Fazenda, Junior Coghlan, Phyllis Haver, Marie Prevost, Noah Beery, Jackie Coogan, Robert Armstrong and Neil Hamilton. All of these Rice Sportlights seen in the past have proven good entertainment, but this latest release carries an especial appeal, because of the big screen lights it contains. Should be welcome on any program.—GEORGE J. REDDY.

Wyler to Direct "Evidence"

Universal has given the task of filming "Evidence," an original play by Edward Montagne, to Director William Wyler. The adaptation has been prepared by Charles Kenyon and John Clymer.

Some idea of the love affair between Magnolia, showboat actress, and Ravenal, the gambler, characters portrayed by Laura La Plante and Joseph Schildkraut in Universal's film version of "Showboat." Harry Pollard directed

"Question Marks"
(Hodge-Podge-Educational—One Reel)

A ONE-REEL novelty scenic subject, this Hodge-Podge offers a number of entertaining topics gathered 'round the world. Animated cartoon effects are used in the release, as fade-ins to the real pictorial sequences, and add to the interest. An animated title is also used to ask a group of questions, the film scenes setting forth the explanations or answers to the "Do You Know" questions.

The first question is "Do you know that Dutch children remove their wooden shoes before entering a home in Holland?" Six Dutch kids are pictured walking down the street, and removing their footwear, just before going into a house. In a similar manner, the audience is asked if it knows that the Viga Canal of Mexico is a fishing place of scenic charm? Pictures in answer are shown. Other items of interest are Church day in Hungary; a trick film study depicting the intense heat, that virtually melts a person in some parts of the U. S.; the lack of footwear worn by working girls in Poland; Laplanders and their goats; crude schools in Serbia; fine scroll work done by natives in Morocco; clock in Sweden that daily portrays legend of St. George and the Dragon, and a cartoon showing the elephant as a beast of burden in India.—GEORGE J. REDDY.

"A Bird In The Hand"
(Christie Talking Comedy)
(Reviewed by Freddie Schader)

THIS is a fairly snappy comedy talking short. It was written by Percy Heath and has a cast of real names. Those in it are Lois Wilson, Jason Robard, Dot Farley and Roy D'Arcy. Wilson and Robard are man and wife, he working for a giddy widow, Dot Farley. She is in love with him and calls on the young wife to persuade her to divorce her husband for an income of $10,000 a year.

At that point the widow's brother steps in for no reason at all and immediately starts to make the wife, at which the chauffeur husband gets sore and the result is that giddy widow and brother are chased from the house. Then the young wife discloses she has saved $1,200 and they are going to buy a taxicab which the husband can run. The dialog is snappy and the picture full of laughs and exceedingly well played.

Olive Borden Signs with R-K-O

Olive Borden has signed a long term contract with RKO. Her first picture, undetermined now, will be started in March.

"Her Big Ben"
(Educational—One Reel)

A NEW screen comedian has pushed his way up to recognition in the Cameo Comedy series for Educational. His name is Gene Stone, and in this film is cast a happy-go-lucky gob, who plays the part of a girl, to prevent the marriage of his sweetheart to a rival. It is rather early to really judge the work of Stone, for this number does not show him up to any good advantage. The real fun of piece is supplied by a trained monkey.

Ruth loves Gene, but her mother insists she wed a wealthy suitor. Gene comes to the rescue, and the two decide on a plan of action. Gene wears the attire of a woman, and dresses his pet monkey as a baby. When Ruth is about to be married to the rich rival, Gene steps in on the ceremony and claims the rival as the husband who has deserted. Ruth's mother promptly ejects the rival, and tries to comfort Gene, still in feminine garb. The monkey irritated by being "dolled up," starts to raise cain in general. Gene, in chasing the "monk," loses his skirt, and he, in turn, is given the rush-act by the girl's pugilistic Ma. This film presents a fair amount of humor, and should please the average and "not-too-particular" audience. The cast includes in addition to Stone, Ruth Eddings and Eva Thatcher. Jules White directed.—GEORGE J. REDDY.

"Lincoln"
(Pathe-RCA—One Reel)

PATHE has ready for release, a special sound, talker and synchronized reel, produced and edited by Terry Ramsaye. The reel has been splendidly put together, and is a timely subject for presentation in conjunction with the coming of Lincoln's Birthday.

The picture offers a pictorially effective review of the landmarks of Lincoln's career, and the photography is excellent. George Billings, probably the screen's most capable interpreter of the Abraham Lincoln characterization, appears in an impressive recital of the famous Gettysburg address. A male quartette registers well singing a popular soldier song of Civil War times.

The synchronized score of the film has been handled to advantage by Josiah Zuro, and the recording by RCA Photophone system. The production in all occupies but 10 minutes of screen time. This subject will make an ideal special attraction for any theatre program.—GEORGE J. REDDY.

"Trial Marriage"

Jason Robards and Thelma Todd complete the quartette of starring players in Columbia's drama of companionate marriage, "Trial Marriage." Erle C. Kenton is directing.

Lina Basquette and George Duryea in a scene from Cecil DeMille's personally directed "The Godless Girl," a forthcoming release from Pathe. Jeannie McPherson wrote the story

"Highlowbrow"

(Paramount Talking Short)

(Reviewed by Freddie Schader)

THIS novelty by S. J. Kaufman proved to be fairly interesting. It has Leo Donnelly as one of the two men in the telephonic conversation that leads into the showing of three short stories of spice and snap from famous authors. Leo is the lowbrow who is trying to lure the highbrow from his books for an evening of stepping, but the highbrow says nothing doing, he preferring to remain at home with his books. Then he bets the lowbrow that he can tell him three stories over the phone that will hold his interest and proceeds with them. It's a good gag, well worked out, with the voice of the highbrow continuing while the story itself is shown in the action. It runs sixteen minutes.

"Farewell"

(Universal—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by George J. Reddy)

ANOTHER issue in the third "Collegians" series has been turned out by Universal. This offering presents a story with the usual college atmosphere, a light vein of comedy, and maintains steady enough action to hold the interest. A fair added attraction.

Commencement week at old Calford, was an exciting one, but also sad, for it is the time when many friends part ways. Don Trent, a graduate, loved pretty June Maxwell and wanted to tell her so before he left school. In order to do so, he had to get his rival Ed Benson out of the way, so he bribes the tailor to rip up Ed's evening clothes and baste them together again. At the dance Ed bends down to pick up a lady's handkerchief, with the result that his suit falls apart. A good deal of fun is applied as he tries to make his way from the hall. Out in the garden Ed commandeers an old grad's clothes. On his way back to the ball room he comes across Don and June. The latter has just told Don that friendship was all she could give him, as her heart belonged to Ed. Don takes the blow like a man, and the three part friends. Nat Ross directed.

"The False Alarm Fire Company"

(Paramount Talking Short)

(Reviewed by Freddie Schader)

A TYPCICAL hoke vaudeville comedy skit, built just for laughs and getting them. Smith and Dale are of the old Avon Comedy Four and they manage to handle the characters of the two firemen, who are too engrossed in their checker game to attend any fires, in a manner that will get to any audience. Rus eight minutes.

"Pathe Review No. 7"

(Pathe—One Reel)

A DIVERSIFIED line-up of subjects are included in issue No. 7 of Pathe Review reel. They are: "Extra! First Smell Picture," a novelty sequence dealing with perfumes; "Slowpoke," shots of the giant Florida turtle; "Rolling Down to Riga," some rather unusual scenes of lumber camp activities in Latvia; and "Bends and Twists," showing how English chorines maintain that show-girl perfection. Good entertainment.—GEORGE J. REDDY.

"Two Little Chinese Maids"

(Paramount Talking Short)

(Reviewed by Freddie Schader)

THIS subject runs about six minutes. Anna Chang and Hatsu Kuma are the Chinese maids who are responsible for it. There are a couple of numbers, the girls doing a typical sister act. Little or nothing to it except to fill out a bill with. The recording is particularly flat and little or no tonal quality to the singing.

An illustrious Battalion Chief. Harold Lloyd, Paramount star, was recently given that title by the Los Angeles Fire Dept. He is shown with Fire Chief Scott of that city

"The Melancholy Dame"

(Paramount-Christie—2 Reels, Sound)

(Reviewed by Jerry Hoffman)

THIS is the first of the all-colored shorts being produced by Christie from the Octavus Roy Cohen stories. Arvid Gilstrom, one of the only two directors in Hollywood who went East to school for the purpose of studying sound, directed it.

This is the first subject of any type I've seen which shows a definite use of sound. In this one, sound isn't novelty, it is entertainment and the short is crammed full of that quality. The players are from the Los Angeles Lincoln Theatre, and are all colored artists.

The story concerns a jealous wife, the object of her jealousy being the entertainer in her husband's cafe. The piano player is the entertainer's husband. The story ran in the Saturday Evening Post. There are laughs, hot dance bits and singing. A novelty in the title is having a colored singer warble the "Melancholy Momma" while the credits are being flashed.

You can't go wrong with this one. Christie's have set a tough pace for themselves with "The Melancholy Dame" as their initial release. If the others live up to this standard, the entire group are worth buying.

Footage—talking, 1,909 feet; silent, 1,551.

Directed by Arvid Gilstrom, screen arrangement by Alfred A. Cohn. Cast: Edward Thompson, Spencer Williams, Evelyn Preer, Roberta Hyson, Charles Olden.

"The Bride's Relations"

(Sennett-Educational—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

WHEN a comedy causes genuine laughter—hearty masculine gurgles and penetrating feminine merriment—it is a highly successful affair. And this is what this new Sennett-Educational talkie comedy does. There's one sequence wherein the delicious snoring of two sleepy mountaineers is convulsively funny. There are other gags, but this one tops them.

Sound in used throughout. The characters keep up a continual line of conversation and as it all has to do with a bridegroom's visit to his wife's relations and their goofy hospitality there are many opportunities for wisecracking. The sound recording is well done; even the talk of a trio in an automobile rushing along the road at a helter-skelter speed is caught by the recorder

Johnny Burke and Thelma Hill are the newlyweds. Harry Gribbon, Andy Clyde, Louise Carver, Ruth Kane and Sunshine Hart are "the bride's relations," all assorted nuts. The story in dialogue is by John A. Waldron, Earle Rodney, Hampton Del Ruth, Harry McCoy. The technical photographers were John W. Boyle, Arthur W. Blinn, Ernie Crockett and Homer Ackerman. William Hornbeck was the film editor. The RCA Photophone system is used.

"Pep Up"

(Educational—One Reel)

AFTER about a year's absence from the Educational fold, the young comedian, Cliff Bowes is now being featured on his own in a series of Cameo single-reel comedies. Although this release "Pep Up," offers an average amount of fun, the reviewer hopes that it is not being chalked up as a high-water mark of Bowes' talent. He is aided in this number by a cast of players including, Marshall Ruth, Adrienne Dore, Billy Dale and Emily Gerdes. Francis directed.

Cliff is on his way to his sweetheart Adrienne's party, and is dragging along a French poodle as her gift. After many narrow escapes for the stubborn pooch, Cliff finally delivers it intact. At the party he finds Marshall, his rival, making love to Adrienne, but she puts him aside for Cliff.

Marshall, peeved, gets hold of some African bugs and slides them down Cliff's back. The latter goes through all sorts of contortions trying to evade them. The butler arrives on the scene with some bug killing fluid, and not knowing that it will eat away clothing, squirts it over Cliff. As Cliff walks down the street with Adrienne, his clothes gradually drop from him, and not to embarrass her, he covers himself with a coat. His troubles are climaxed, however, when he becomes mixed up in the rope of a balloon advertisement and is carried skyward. The film offers some good laughs in spots, and should register on most any type of program.—GEORGE J. REDDY.

"Lewis-Sonnenberg Wrestling Match"

(Educational—Special Reel)

SPORT enthusiasts among motion picture fans are in for a treat, if they are fortunate enough in having their local exhibitor book the special Educational reel, containing official films of the "Strangler" Lewis-"Dynamite" Sonnenberg wrestling bout for world's champion.

Having witnessed this film at a private preview, the writer received many thrills, through the rough-and-tumble tactics of the two giants of the mat. Excellent close-ups, and slow motion scenes, have faithfully recorded all details of the big scrap.

Sonnenberg, former star on Dartmouth's football team, won the first fall from "Strangler" Lewis during the match, and later came back to butt the champ out of the ring seven times, with powerful driving methods. Sonnenberg is shown clinching the match, when Lewis folds up, under the former's last terrific assault, and fails to return to the mat. Lewis is disqualified by the referee, and Sonnenberg acclaimed as the new heavyweight wrestling title holder. This is a corking good subject to be exploited with the men and boys in mind, and has an unlimited amount of places in which it may be shown in addition to the theatre. These including Athletic Associations, etc.—GEORGE J. REDDY.

Clara Bow, Paramount's flaming star, shows how her sex gets the last word—even on the radio. However, the joke was on Neil Hamilton, her leading man in "Three Week Ends."

MANAGERS ROUND TABLE CLUB

CLEARING HOUSE FOR BOX OFFICE PROBLEMS and THEATRE OPERATION

By Charles E. Lewis

of the Alfred Gottesman Theatrical Enterprises, New England

Wakoff Is "Old" in Experience

Arthur Wakoff

This picture will serve to introduce to the members of the MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB, Arthur Wakoff, recently promoted to the post of Managing Director of the Roger Sherman Theatre in New Haven, Conn. The Roger Sherman, by the way, is one of the pioneer "Sound" theatres.

Mr. Wakoff's experience in the show business dates back quite a few years during which time he has been connected with the Famous Players-Paramount Corp. and later with the Arthur Friend Circuit in New England. When that organization passed out, Wakoff joined the Gottesman Circuit and has been with them ever since, working his way up from Assistant Manager to the present important post he now occupies.

Arthur has, from my own personal observations, a keen sense of showmanship and is made of that kind of "stuff" that real managers are made of. It's true Arthur has his weaknesses, but then we all have (but don't like to admit it) so weighing it all in the balance, he tips the scales in the right direction. However, in order to prove that he is all I claim for him, he should tell the members of the CLUB how HE puts over "sound" pictures in the Roger Sherman. What do you say, Arthur?

Some News of "Ducky" Meyers

Some time ago we asked for information about "Ducky" Meyers, an exhibitor from Chillicothe, Ohio, and better known as the "mayor" of that fair city.

We were beginning to despair that the earth had swallowed him up (and he's some mouthful) when lo—we received two letters on the same day tipping us off that "Ducky" was very much alive and active, as all good managers should be, BUT he was laying low and trying to live down that "awful" boat ride from Sandusky, Ohio, to Canada. The other letter was to the effect that "Ducky" was having slightly tough sailing but would be on deck for the next Gus Sun convention in 1929. Here's hoping I will also be on the same deck.

Now we must ask—"What happened to "Tim" Roberts, of Mansfield, who piloted the Good Ship "News" from Mansfield into Cedar Point, where the convention was held, insisting all the way that we were on the wrong road and we should have taken the "other" road a ways back? Maybe the same Sherlocks who sent us word of "Ducky" will dig up some information about "Tim."

Does Public Prefer Sound or Silent?

UP to the time of going to press we have received 54 answers to our letter asking members whether their patrons prefer a good silent picture to a fair synchronized picture. Here is the score:

For good silent pictures.... 52

For synchronized pictures.. 2

Does this survey mean anything to you? Do you really know what your patrons want? Do you believe in the future of "Sound" pictures?

Publication of some of the interesting letters received will start in a short time and if you are really anxious to know how our question reacted upon exhibitors in different parts of the country, then you will want to read them.

A certain exchange manager pulled a funny one in our presence a short time ago when he admitted that a picture he was selling was worth about $60 silent, but with a plain musical synchronization he must get $300. Now, boys, there's a great comparison for you to figure out in place of a cross-word puzzle. I tried but could not see how it worked out in figures. So then I asked this exchange manager how he arrived at such prices and his answer was still funnier. He told me that because of the very few wired houses that he could possibly sell the synchronized print to, he would have to get the high price to make up for it. On this basis we really have a bright future to look forward to because as soon as the majority of the towns are wired we ought to be able to buy our synchronized pictures for a song and dance. Hey-hey, who dares to say that there are no new selling angles under the sun? (P. S.—Yes, there is a post script to this one—the picture was NOT so good anyway.)

Lawrence Sells Sound for Schine's Ohio

Our old friend and aequaintance from last summer's trip through the Middle West, C. F. Lawrence, manager of Schine's Ohio Theatre, in Lima, Ohio, sent us as neat a piece of advertising matter as we have ever had submitted. It is in the form of a Summons, but done so well that it compels further reading at first sight. I am showing the folded Summons here so you can see it for yourself and I heartily recommend that you write Lawrence for a copy of the complete form as soon as possible. I am sure he will gladly forward one to any member interested. Get a copy, look it over, and then see if you don't want to use it yourself. It is our idea of 100 Per Cent "sound" exploitation for any house, anywhere.

"Sound" Exploitation Division of the Round Table Club

(NOTE—Under this department we invite members of the Club and readers of the NEWS to send us descriptions of how pictures and exploitation they put over "sound"—Editor.)

John J. Scanlon, a new member of the CLUB from Torrington, Conn., makes an excellent suggestion to all managers whose houses are wired for "sound." His contention is that you should encourage your projectionists to make suggestions for the improvement of your "sound" projection and how they believe they can improve such conditions in the theatre. He submits an interesting chart we are reproducing here. The purpose of this chart is to catch all defects at rehearsals of the show (which we know is important) and correct them before the regular performances are given. You will note that the "chart" immediately gives the projectionists in the booth a complete summary of what they should know, and not just memorize, and enables them to run the show as near perfect as possible. It is well worth a close study and if it appeals to you then you should put it into effect.

Thank you Scanlon for your well wishes and we hope to hear more, and often, from you and Torrington.

Ed Heihle and Newark Ohio

Ed—why didn't I hear about the opening of your new Midland Theatre? How about all the news you were going to send me telling about the grand opening? There is still time to redeem yourself, so just take the time to send me the story and how things are going up Newark way. Thanks in advance and if there is no letter, then I'll skip Newark on the next trip (which may be a blessing to you at that) but I won't let up pestering you just the same. No cheatin'. We want to know about Heihle and Newark

And by the way, Ed, how's chances of seeing you at Cedar Point next summer? This time I will bring a camera and get the pictures that I was promised before the gang broke up.

But I'm glad I met you and the other boys, just the same. And next time we meet it will be a reunion and convention combined.

Greetings Mr. Hall

The CLUB welcoming committee being on their usual vacation compels me to act in their place, so I take this means of welcoming Mr. W. H. Hall into the CLUB. Mr. Hall hails from the Columbia Theatre, in Baton Rouge, La., and his notation that he runs a wired house makes him doubly welcome as we want "live" managers of wired houses to tell us how they are selling "sound" to their patrons. Let's hear from you real soon, Hall, and "dish us all the dirt from down your way."

Two Theatre Robberies Occur in Missouri

IN one of the boldest holdups in Kansas City, recently a lone bandit escaped with more than $5,000 from the Newman Theatre, first run downtown house of Kansas City. The bandit, apparently familiar with the theatre and general offices, stood near a mirror by the general offices, adjusting his necktie, as Mrs. Beulah Hall, cashier, entered the offices with the night's receipts—$1,400. The bandit, forced his way into the offices, in which were Garland B. Lohr, treasurer, and H. E. McManus, doorman, forced the employees to open the theatre's safe and escaped with more than $5,000 down two flights of steps.

Two bandits held up Joseph Renn, manager of the Jefferson Theatre, Jefferson City, Mo., and escaped with $164, the night's receipts of the theatre, Saturday night. Renn had just taken the money from the box office to his private office when the bandit entered the theatre.

Supported by merchants of the town, O. W. Williams and E. R. Haynes, exhibitors of Monette, Mo., a town of 6,000 population, have started a campaign against blue laws in that town. Each of the exhibitors was arrested and fined $5 for operating on Sunday and they plan to carry the fight to the Missouri Supreme court, contending the ordinance, which was passed by the city council about twelve years ago, is unreasonable and unjust.

Among the out-of-town exhibitors in the Kansas City market last week were: R. L. Helvering, Isis, Marysville, Kas.; L. J. Lenhart, Lee Theatre, Clinton, Mo.; C. M. Pattee, Pattee Theatre, Lawrence, Kas.; H. Bowman, Arbo Theatre, Nevada, Mo.; Col. H. A. Cole, president of the M.P.T.O. Texas.

The Baker Theatre, Overbrook, Kas., will close on February 1 for an indefinite period. The Strand Theatre, Callac, Mo., also has closed for an indefinite period because of the impassible condition of the roads and poor attendance. Plans for the remodeling of the Ropfogle building, Fifth and Commercial streets, Emporia, Kas., into a theatre which will cost about $40,000 have been announced by Harry Ropfogle, owner of the building.

Indiana Towns Might Get Sunday Shows

A SPECIAL election will be held at Kendallville, Ind., April 1 to vote on Sunday motion picture shows. This was agreed on at a special session of a committee of the Business Men's Association. So far as can be learned, this is the first time any city in Indiana has held an election to determine whether any of the Sunday blue laws should be annulled.

Announcement has been made in Warsaw, Ind., that this city will have Sunday shows beginning immediately at the Strand Theatre, of which L. J. Dunning is owner and manager. No statement has been made as to the stand the Warsaw-Winona Ministerial Association and the Warsaw chapter of the Women's Christian Temperance Union, both of which opposed the operation of Sunday shows at Milword, in this county, some time ago.

A large number of affidavits were filed in the circuit court here against Frank Parrish, owner of the Milford Theatre, and he was brought to trial three times during the term of the last prosecuting attorney, whose term of office ceased the first of the year. He was acquitted of the charge of violating the Sabbath once and convicted twice, being assessed light fines. A number of affidavits charging the same offense, which had been filed in the circuit court finally were dismissed by the judge. Warsaw never has had Sunday shows but a large number of citizens are said to be in favor of Sunday operation.

The Mars at Lafayette opened Jan. 19 with Movietone and Vitaphone installed.

Hold-Up Takes Ritz, Dallas for $200

GEORGE DUNCAN, assistant manager of the Ritz Theatre, Dallas, was held up and robbed of over $200 shortly after ten o'clock last Thursday evening. Mr. Duncan had just come up from the box office with the cash and he was unlocking the office door, which is located on the second floor, he noticed two young men coming toward him from the balcony. He paid no special attention to them, for they seemed to be carrying on friendly conversation in a usual way. Just as Mr. Duncan unlocked the door they pushed him into the office and closed the door. While one of the bandits kept him covered with a gun, the other secured the cash, and then by using strips of a towel they tied Duncan in a chair and gagged him with a handkerchief. Mr. McHenry, manager of the theatre, was standing in the lobby during the robbery and noticed the two men come down the stairs and leave the theatre, their actions causing no suspicion. Mr. Duncan was very poorly tied and freed himself in a very few moments and called Mr. McHenry on the house phone to stop the two bandits. Mr. McHenry and Mr. Duncan both ran out of the theatre but could see nothing of the two men although they had just left the theatre.

W. E. (Chick) Shytles, manager of the Majestic Theatre at Fort Worth, was instantly killed in an airplane crash at San Angelo, Texas, this week. Mr. Shytles and Donald Frazee, former T. C. U. football players, were passengers in a cabin monoplane piloted by Al Henley, noted pilot, who was one of the entrants in the Dole air race to Honolulu in 1927, and in which race he was the favorite until forced back by engine trouble. The three were to attend the opening of San Angelo's new municipal airport and Pilot Henley was attempting to land the plane when it seemed that a sudden gust of wind struck the ship, causing it to go into a nose dive at an altitude of 100 feet. Mr. Henley was unable to right the plane and it crashed on the new airport which Henley helped lay out. Mr. Shytles and Mr. Henley were dead when the spectators reached the wrecked plane and Mr. Frazee lived only a few moments. Mr. Shytles is survived by his wife and 3-year-old daughter.

Frank Starz, director of publicity for the Interstate Circuit, will leave the first of the week for Tulsa, Oklahoma City and other points to look over new shows for the circuit.

Mr. Karl Hoblitzelle, president of the Interstate Circuit, has just returned from a business trip to San Antonio, where he inspected the progress being made on the new theatre there.

Charles J. Freeman, of New York, booker for the Interstate Circuit, is expected in Dallas soon. Mr. R. J. O'Donnell, general manager of the Interstate Circuit, who has just returned from a business trip to Birmingham, will accompany Mr. Freeman on a trip around the circuit.
